France is in danger. But where does this danger come from?

From the outside or the inside? €

From within; that's where the plots are hatched.
to cause a massacre, in order to be able to start again
My cannibal feast of 1870, which doubled the wealth of the wealthy and created, among them, a state-Major of kings!

The German threat is purely artificial.
Of all the peoples surrounding us, the German is one of those who, in the very name of their interests
The bourgeoisie have the least need for war.

THE FRENCH PEOPLE MUST KNOW THAT, IF WAR BREAKS OUT BETWEEN FRANCE AND GERMANY
MAGNE, THESE WILL BE ITS OWN LEADERS CAPITA-LISTS OF THOSE WHO WOULD HAVE WANTED AND PREPARED THIS WAR |

I don't just make claims; I prove them.

Any nation that lives under the capitalist system (and (All of Europe is like this), has no external appetites that insofar as a strong disproportion between its human growth and its tax increases.

However, this disproportion can be further defined.

For example, when the tax increase is depletion of reserves! ; therefore, for

To restore the balance, we need: either a reduction in consumers, or an increase in products.

'On the theory of reserves, see The Kings of the Republicblique, t. II, p. 388 et following.

292 BITTERNESS

Either of these results can be achieved through an internal revolution or through a war exterior.

But, almost always, the peoples subjected to the yoke of capital are launched, by it, into the foreign war, because the profit is more certainly. Indeed, capital finds there, in all the
In this case, a removal of consumers; but, thanks
In addition to a victory, he can obtain an increase management of its reserves or production, either through cash compensation, or... conquered lands.

Do I need to add that the budget sums everything up?
revenues and all exchanges, thanks to his rap-mathematical port with capitals and with the currencies.

And that, for its part, human growth resume all the forces of production and consumption
information. |

Well, by measuring, by periods of eighteen or twenty years, the relationship between the two species of acc-growths, in each of the nations of the Europe, we can clearly specify which one is the who, in order not to WANT OR not be able to de-through the royalty of its capitalists, will be conducted to a throat-slitting.

I measured the antagonisms in 1870! And I have denounced the reciprocal attitudes in Prussia and in France.

I am now going to train a complete Fee appetites, that is to say, deficient needs,

UNDER THE THIRD REPUBLIC 293

caused by the disproportionate march of consumers mations and productions, and this for the principals-pale European nations.

I will place, alongside the appetites of 1870, those from 1887 and we will see that the changes that occurred for eighteen years have absolutely changed the causes of possible war between nations that we push them even more against each other.

Here, first, is the table of increases human and fiscal resources of each nation, taken from two periods, 1870 and 1887:

1870-1887

Increase Increase

human tax human tax

iiémanne ones 13.46 0/0! 87.28 0/0! 127.53 0/0 se e

France.....,.... 499 0/0] 37.59 0/0! 2.81 0/0! 7 0/0

Austria-Hungary.. i 82 0/0! 1101, 80 0/0! 3,45 0/0 . 09 0/0

Russia..... St 16, 42 0/0! 77 "50 0/0! 130,77 0/0! 78, :32 0/0

England..... 13 "66 0/0! 47, 33 0/0 17, 64 0/0! 37 87 0/0

Hal6.s.ss 5:12, 43 0/0 _ » 16.66 07/0 15.66 0/0

If we study these paintings carefully, we will see... will see that from 1870 to 1887, Germany, England and Zialia saw their forces grow faster production (human growth), that their strengths consumption [tax increase].

On the contrary, France and Austria have seen growth much faster their consumption forces {ac-fiscal growth) than their production forces (human growth). Now, these two nations are

1 I must point out that human growth are established on one hundred hectares or one square kilometer, and that in Consequently, territorial variations are included in ivs calculated proportions.

specifically dedicated to war by their kings capitalists.

I will refine my comparisons further by condensing this warlike appetite into a single figure of the capital ogre, that is to say by reducing it to unity the relationship between tax increases and human-hands; the operation performed, we obtain the following table, where I place side by side the two periods 1870 and 1887:

NATIONAL APPETITES OR UNDEMPIONED NEEDS
(Reported per unit).

1870-1887

Germany	6.48	4.74
Francoise	7.52	27.46
Austria-Hungary	21.10	13.94
RUSSIA... suursste re	4.72	2.54
England	3.46	2.15
ae, ns diese. »	0.91

What these figures reveal is very clear:

Four nations: Germany, Russia, England land and Italy have lower appetites than pro-a fivefold portion which signals the need for war; Germany, however, is the one that comes closest to it. I'm more.

But France and Austria are in their formative years. of an external explosion which, nevertheless, for-would avert a national revolution.

The same table allows us to realize the changes brought about in Europe by the events from 1870.

It is certain, for example, that Germany has seen its appetites diminish; that Russia, in Asia,

UNDER THE THIRD REPUBLIC 295

England, pretty much everywhere, obtained satisfactions factions; not even Austria-Hungary which compensation for her losses of 1859 and 1866; but she is so consumed by Jewry, so torn apart by the Romanian and Bulgarian intrigues, eternal causes Anglo-Russian discord targeting Constantinople that war is, for her, a permanent threat

nente. |

Alone among all these nations, France only had setbacks; devoured by its capitalists who, being cosmopolitans have relentlessly thrown her to the wolves.

to the needs of all of Europe, it dies, to the times, of wealth and of misery.

To accurately measure the international situation occupied by France in light of the threats In the context of war, it is necessary to summarize the appetites of the five leading nations of continental policy and bring them back to the same unit.

This is the aim of the following table.
in which European appetites are represented per 100, each nation occupies a proportion per-ticulière.

PRE
HAS
:

Here is the table:

4870. 1887

Germany.....	14.97	9.32
FRANCO sisi css isssanssus	17.38	54.02
Austria: .ssshesatocsous	48.75	27.43
RUSSIO sr ce comes	40.91	5.00
England.....,.....	7.99	4.23
us same nennd

Totals. 0.0. 100.00 | 100.00 E: |

9296 Speculation

As we can see: between Europe in 1870 and that of 1888, the difference is great.

Whereas, 18 years ago, four nations out five had the most considerable appetites, currently only two nations concentrate the biggest figures of these appetites.

Will these two nations, through alliances, a general melee?

Let's examine:

What predisposes people to alliances is, at the same time, the physical distance of borders and inequality of appetites:

In 1888 (?): France, Russia.

What determines the shocks is, on the contrary, the proximity to borders:

In 1870: France, Germany.

In 1888 (?): Russia, Austria.

But, in 1870, Germany had just crushed the Austro-Hungarian empire, already wounded by the French empire (war of Italy) and this was in exchange for its neutrality in 1870 that she favored Austrian policy in the Balkans: Congress of Berlin, 1878!

But if, in 1888, Germany had to take action, this will be further to complete the Austro-Balkan work and further reduce austro-Hungarian needs. That is why the Russian antagonism; that is why the Italian alliance, the latter not having no other purpose than to occupy the French "fever". Of course, Trieste, the Arlberg and the Gotthard are the triple base: commercial, industrial and financial. Compensation to come!

In summary, France, Austria-Hungary, that's it.

UNDER THE THIRD REPUBLIC 297

two peoples that the kings of capital need bound by a Malthusian hecatomb!

What! Because she was devoured by a stranger?
For eighteen years, France has had no other
The alternative to rushing at him in turn?

What? Is there no other remedy for devouring?
What about devouring?

Social science affirms to humanity the con-
"Milk!" and she said to him:

It was not the people who acted, it was the Kings of capital !

WITH THEIR KINGDOM OVERCOME, PEACE WOULD BE UNITED VERSELLE!!!

{At the time I was writing these lines, it was not yet question of the TiszA incident:(May 28).

However, I am convinced that this minister spoke with a heavy hand.
lying in form, without any idea of provocation to fundamentally, while rightly fearing that the welfare state is very troubled in France in 1889; but what is evident, that is, the Austrian newspapers whose vena- I have marked lité (volume I, page 120), all, moreover, in the hands of Jews have unduly exacerbated an incident without any serious implications.

What's even sadder is that the so-called "Bou-" newspapers
"Langists" eagerly echoed the Jewish community which radiating from Laffitte Street to Buda-Pesth!

In any case, we need to realize this: the anti-French and anti-republican reaction rallies its forces in the Balkans.

The Serbian and Bulgarian studies contained in the book de Bontoux (which I mentioned earlier), the recent inauguration of the Salonika line (see the newspapers of the 20th and 21st)
May), and, most importantly, the names of those attending this ceremony, are three sets of facts which, when seriously analyzed, per-put in place to count in advance the elements of the future coalitions for future battles.

17,

8. – Conclusion.

CONTENTS. – Men and things. – Use. – Utility. – Work.

What needs to be done?

We must paralyze those who organize and foment wars and, before they succeeded, change immediately the social organization.

We must no longer govern men.

Things need to be managed.

Therefore, we no longer need a government;

But a national administration is needed.

We need no more monopolistic capitalism
the individual, collective production;

But the resources must be socialized nationally.
to produce, so that consumption absorbs the full production.

We must finally remove from the laws everything that is capital- – talization and interests, everything that falsifies values monetary, anything that authorizes the sale of land, and leaving standing only the measured use on the utility and
justified BY WORK |

SAGGLING UNDER THE THIRD REPUBLIC 299

All of this is merely the work of science and in no way party-sponsored work.

Because that is the entire teaching contained in this last link in the chain of age-old solidarities which has was called:

The Third Republic.

OBSERVATION. – I feel I must remind you that I have codified, in detail, all the scientific reforms which are here question; I am not reproducing this work, so as not to overload the present work; but the reader can refer to-ter, that is, to my work, High Banking and Revolutions blique (page 419); or, finally, to my little book entitled: The next Revolution. In these three works, he will find the Statements of reasons and laws all prepared.

For the same reason, I did not think it necessary to elaborate further. develop here the technical concordance of the given formulas above (p. 287), with that: $\{ 1 + 7 \} = n (1 + +)$ " 9

explained in particular in The Kings of the Republic (volume IT, pages 404, 420).

'I will say, however, that it is this last formula which led to the predictions mentioned in my letter to the president tooth of the Chamber of Deputies (pages 290, above, in note). |

This statement and the careful study of plate XIV These are enough to highlight the similarity of the methods. To go further would be engaging in algebraic discussion which, unnecessary here, will better suited to its place in a special treatise on sociometry.

POSTSCRIPTUM

THE FIRST MONTHS OF 1888

SUMMARY. – Months are like weeks. – Your cheeky tone. – Espionage. – Wilson's acquittal. – Reel of Rumkorff. – The general is threatening. – Panic, – Cham-poisonous pinion. – Jewry. – Science. – The gone. – To Épinal. – At the Café Riche. – All barons Louis. – The German invasion. – They're lying. – One night of August 4th.

I had stopped writing my stories in the last days of 1887. but by the time these two volumes are published, the year 1888 will have completed approximately half of its journey.

But, as things are going, the months are For weeks, I must, in a few words, note the most current state of events.

Naturally, I will no longer bother to detail the petty infamies. These, moreover, are condensed in some large ones whose excess has struck the masses.

*
*k *

In the first week of January, the official world savored his bourgeois jubilation.

What? Wasn't there a new president at the Élysée Palace? sée, recruiting new staff, receiving new-assurances of devotion and new praises decorated with traditional sweets?

Soon, however, it became necessary to deal with the gossip. parliamentarians.

The newspapers of January 10th indicated the return of the Senate and House.

However, the disabled members of the national representation an- They proclaimed a fine zeal; they demonstrated it appropriately of the eternal question of sugars and the eternal hypo-crisis of some agricultural or financial credit which, presumably, he was supposed to save the people!

Some attacked the functioning of the The Bank of France threatened a kind of revocation the rotten institution that has been fueling, for years, bourgeois and capitalist gluttony to the detriment of the mass.

The financial federation was largely unmoved by this and, on the contrary, You should see the brazen tone Paul Leroy-Beaulieu uses. He rebuked the State, promising it a feudal reprisal!

Meanwhile, it seemed that, on all sides, thanks to a mysterious influence, they sought to irritate all the causes of conflict that could arise on the Italian side and on the Prussian side.

With regard to Italy, there was much speculation about the treaties of trade and the slightest consular incident, they wanted to see the war break out.

The Lebel rifle, espionage, and to top it all off

LS
ù

302 Speculation 4888

through the noisy publication of the Austro-Prussian treaty (February 5), which I previously dealt with.

Focusing on Europe, there were also the complications-Balkan traditions: Bulgaria and its Ferdinand, the Romania and its Jewish moneylenders.

Naturally, to all of this was added the Russian threat.

These various disturbances were slowly taking effect, but they were burdened by the concern of to see the trials and investigations into the actions stifled comments of the son-in-law to whom President Carnot owed his advent.

When the newspapers of March 3rd announced the con-Wilson's condemnation by judges of first instance There was a huge sigh of relief.

It was truly believed that justice was emerging from its long sleep. oo

It was still an illusion, because the judges of the second to a certain extent, after having delayed, they believed they could acquit the one whom public opinion had condemned.

Where had they found such audacity?

However complacent one may be, one still needs to dare a challenge to fairness, hoping that another noise will drown this out A challenge, like silence itself!

That was it!

Eight days after the acquittal in the first instance, Indeed, serious news had shaken Europe (10 March): William I, King of Prussia and Emperor of Germany Magne, beneficiary of the Sadowa and Sadowa butcher shops Sedan had just been forced, by death, to return to the nature the nitrogenous substances which, after some time through cerebral electricity, had made the world tremble,

His successor, Frederick II, was a sick man who awareness of his impending death, a circumstance which alone, could temporarily neutralize the "Rum- coil" korff," which William had abused, and which, vulgar-

UNDER THE THIRD REPUBLIC 303

ment, is known as the Prince of Bis-Mark. |

This death and this accession set in motion the ex-plowmen of public misery and everywhere cries of patriotic awakening of France.

The one who beat the reveille at that dawn was a gallonné: General Boulanger.

The noise became infernal, so much so that it was believed to be definitively-The Wilson question was effectively buried.

However, the people from the ministry and the lyricist from Epinal suddenly realized that the general was becoming a threat, especially since the former defenders of Wilson (whom they were now abandoning), rallied around the general, drawing to them all those who, deep down in their hearts, had preserved the cult of a panache December 2nd.

On March 17, the newspapers announced the revocation of the General Boulanger.

Fair, from the point of view of military discipline; foolish, from the point of view of the actual motives, disproportionate, In any case, given the circumstances, this revocation This outraged everyone.

Also on March 25th, almost at both ends of the In France, the name Boulanger became a cry of anger. While the conservative minds of the Aisne annexed the title of deputy; those more far-sighted from the south they pronounced it: Félix Pyat (Bouches-du-Rhône).

Please note: this double mani-The celebration sets the true tone: it shows, on the horizon, Perhaps too soon, the bloody glare of war civil!

An inquiry board had been established, chosen, they say
Some... it doesn't matter! It was made up of generals;

304 Speculation 1888

before this council, the general, who had committed a fault serious breach of discipline, had appeared.

Meanwhile, the judiciary had prepared a new judgment concerning Wilson.

But then this happened; on the same day (March 27th) the public
He was stunned to learn that Wilson's works were not not reprehensible, but Boulanger's indiscipline deserved to lose his rank.

I give up on depicting the popular bewilderment.

Three days later, the honorable gentlemen, Tirard, Fallières, Flourens, Sarrien, Logerot, de Mahy, Faye, Loubet, Dautresme and Viette were forced to surrender their wallets.

For what ?

For Wilson's acquittal; for the conviction
Baker, certainly | but, in appearance, for having refused to accept the revision of the Constitution.

From that moment on, the revision which, since several-for several years, it served as a platform for Clemenceau and for his party will become that of Boulanger and the Bculan-gisme, a poisonous fungus, that grows spontaneously on the parliamentary garbage, is definitively created as political party.

The new ministry, which was taking power in these Given the circumstances, it will inevitably be riddled with incidents.
embarrassing.

Here is its composition:

President of the council and interior..... Mr. Floquet, Member of Parliament.

Foreign Affairs. . _ Goblet, Member of Parliament.

GUERTE, SOS from Freycinet, senator.
Navy..... Krantz, vice-admiral.
Justice and religions..., Ferrouillat, senator.
Finances,..... Peytral, Member of Parliament.

Public education and fine arts... Lockroy, Member of Parliament.

UNDER THE THIRD REPUBLIC 305

Public works..... Deluns-Montaud, Member of Parliament.
Agriculture..... 7 Viette, Member of Parliament.
Commerce....., _-. Legrand (Pierre), Member of Parliament.

Despite a recent rapprochement between the ambassador of Russia and the author of the famous cry: "Long live Poland!" "Sir!", the head of this ministry and his companions were well designed to frighten the old landowners.

It is true, they generally satisfied the a rabble of newly wealthy people, but they did not do any of the the whole affair of the future Bonaparte-Boulanger property owners gites.

A prompt holiday put them, first of all, at shelter from premeditated attacks.

As for the general who was stripped of his rank and whom I will call
From now on: Georges Boulanger, he had started again, openly this time, his electoral machinations.

He was very well advised by politicians and he had ambitions to be elected by a very populous, very worker; having noticed the strong majority that the good-Partyist Brame had obtained in the department of North, the seat of this deputy being vacant, he resolved to do so
. to seek votes.

He obtained them easily.

But, clearly, there's too much money involved.
Georges Boulanger; it is now clear that he is the object of a sponsorship, that it is the instrument of a speculation.

Little by little, the Jewish community openly surrounded him!

'In 1883, in explaining how Wilson would cause the the fall of his stepfather (see The Kings of the Republic, (Volume I), I added: (page 372). "After which, he (Wilson) will earn France a Jewish reaction. – One can de-ask at this time whether this reaction will be Boulangist or Ferryman?

306 Speculation 1888

is required to declare the remedy he intends to apply, so that, not the man, but the remedy, is the object discussions; so that, if the prevailing ignorance does not does not understand the remedy, this one only has to be attributed to she herself will have wished to suffer the very ills she herself desired.

Man is nothing, the remedy is everything.

So, what remedy do bakers offer?

A request for a revision of the constitution,

In what direction? Nobody knows.

Yes, there is talk of abolishing the Senate and even the presidency.

What does this mean?

One less man and a few senatorial conflicts
Excluded? Big deal! If the single chamber deliberates– Rante reproduces the crimes of the National Assembly of 1872 or those of all the Chambers of Deputies which have succeeded one another since then. What would have changed?

However, the future single chamber will present the same dangers than all the previous ones; it will be composed almost exclusively property owners because the Elections are expensive; however, as long as property owners... They will, by and large, liberate and legislate, believe me. You powerless people! It will always be to devour you!

Therefore, dissolution and revision simply mean that one wants to devour you in the Bonapartist–Boulangist style or in the Ferryste sauce, or else Orleanist sauce in which, However, you're still seething.

Believe me! Those who are currently in Luxembourg–

all of them, moreover, are similar to those you name—Merais for a single room, you've got them.

It is to these people that you must impose a night of & August! shouting these two words at them: No more capital—Ethicalism! No more wage labor!

If they don't listen to you, well, mind your own business.

UNDER THE THIRD REPUBLIC 307

. even and don't enlist behind any man, whatever that it may be.

A man always embodies appetites, and that is Why do you see so-called opinions grouping together?
in the form of political parties.

Even those who are closest to the scientific truth—
social fact, those who are the most representative authorized members of the non-possessing class believed themselves forced to engage in politics, instead of acting alone?
The science of lies!

Instead of simply calling themselves "workers",
They adopted the name "Workers' Party"; however, a party does not
She lives only through politics, and politics poisons.
It poisoned all the ruling classes! How Wouldn't it poison the ruling classes?

Social truth will not be any more triumphant than triumph of the workers' party than triumph of the panri Boulanger, what a triumph for the Ferry family, because this triumph will always imply predominance and by next, the parasitism of one class over all the others.

However, with parasitism restored, even under a in another form, the whole lamentable epic that I have just narrating will have to be done again!

It is deeply humiliating for France to have
It should be noted that currently, three men dominate its destinies:

One is called Philippe (d'Orléans); the other Jules (from Épinal); the other one is Georges (from Clermont).

The first one is well known for its worthlessness;
puppet, he exists only through the appetites he embodies;

eighteen years old.

In response to Boulanger on June 4th, Clemenceau had the unconsciousness of "to use Gambetta's words: one does not "Govern only with one party!" GOVERN!!! What rage! Why should a bourgeois woman always play at being royalty? Instead of doing... Simply, administration!

308 Speculation 1888

The second one, his story is in this book. To all the nonsense he spouted, which I recorded, he has just added one last one, which is as follows:

On April 16th, in Épinal, he said, with feigned naiveté which, moreover, revealed his profound ignorance, following sentences:

".....]] there would be no point in hiding it: the
"The Republican government is going through a serious crisis,"
"all the more serious as it seems more UNEXPECTED (!)."
"We are suddenly seeing the symptoms reappear
"that one might have thought would be forever stifled in the "Shames of the past. Good citizens attend with "surprise, with anguish, at a violent return of the es-
It was a Caesarean and plebiscitary victory. All the disappointments, all the discontent that the House has provoked for the past two years have been turning into accusations against the parliamentary system. It is not only to Members of Parliament, it is the institutions themselves that we "attacks him."

Now, after having spoken thus, the same man, without realizing-seeing the bellows he was applying, he added:

"Is past experience therefore only useful for..."
"those who directly suffered the bloody consequences"
"Lesson 1?"

Really! Are the lessons, bloody or not, which are called Tonkin, Tunisia, the strikes, the riots, capitalist takeovers, ruins and
The Kracks do not exist in the past and are mute.
For Jules?

And when he complains about seeing the "institutions" attacked
tions, » how can he not notice that they alone have not changed, but on the contrary, that for a hundred different aspects?

How, finally, does he declare himself with a light heart?

RARRA£ARA

1 Speech reproduced by the Justice of April 16, 1888.

UNDER THE THIRD REPUBLIC 309

blind, and above all shortsighted, since the crisis... seems UNEXPECTED to him, when all that was needed was a study serious, done in good faith, in order to be able to, several years in advance, specifying down to the exact date.

The last of the three characters I have designated is the noisy banqueter from the Café Riche.

He, like Jules Ferry, is ignorant of social history.

In his speeches, when he is confronted with What does he say about this social ill, which he asks to be cured?

In Anzin, he said the following:

"As long as I am in the House, I take the commitment-
"formal agreement to work energetically towards the solution-
"action of social problems, on which the improvement depends"
"improvement of the lot of all the working classes, and "which is, in short, only the solution to the problems
"Politicians!"

To dare to say that the solution to social problems is that the solution to political problems is genuine-worthy of Ferry.

Ferry and Boulanger therefore have the same system and,
like the dreadful Baron Louis, so often plagiarized by Léon Say, they all repeat this nonsense in unison:

"Give me good politics and I'll give you good politics."
"Good finances."

Now, Abbot Baron Louis was addressing his good friends the capitalists, and to them, he was quite right to say :

Let's care for the popular hen together without making her squeal.

4: Speech reproduced by L'Intransigeant on May 15, 1888.

That, in fact, is his entire concept, but it's also that of Ferry and Clemenceau; party politics. For these ignorant people, everything is right there. However, all one needs to do is study this bizarre speech, read by Boulanger, on June 4th, in the Chamber, to realize that he, like everyone around him, is unaware. What exactly are the real causes of "material evil"? and moral "from which France suffers.

.310 Speculation 1888

Abbot Baron Louis! Abbot Baron Say! Abbot Baron Ferry!
Abbot Baron Boulanger, they are all the same pawns of the same capitalist chessboard.

And their cries, in times of popular misery, their "flour-covered" complaints skillfully showing "this harm to one that could well benefit the other as the neighboring bourgeois benefits from the sale by car-justice for his neighbor's furniture, these complaints I say, are a faithful echo of this ferocity of the beast human beings, to whom this street vendor on the boulevard is addressing himself who, in the evening, bellows to the echoes:

"All books at twenty cents! Ask for the mas—" "The sanctity of books! The ruin of booksellers!"

Not content with the ambiguous speeches he makes, Georges Boulanger sought the laurels of the historian.

He signed a book, which he reportedly bought.

I won't waste my time criticizing the previews. childish things with which this book begins.

I will simply note that the mere act of choosing V'HEURE ACTUELLE to popularize these words: "The Invasion GERMAN, » denounces the system of battle-destruction the use on which he is counting to impose himself on this country.

This comes after the chauvinistic provocations in Tunis, after the noisy phrase repeated a hundred times:

"If I were seeking war, I would be a madman, but if I
"If I hadn't prepared myself for it, I would have been a wretch;" that the Schœnebelé incident; after the particular discussions—particularly acrimonious remarks against Italy!, developed especially through the newspapers, his friends, all of that, I say, creates me this deep conviction that the only system of pretense—dant consists of reducing, through death, the proletariat that the Capital no longer wants to feed the population.

So far, the provocations have not succeeded in creating the state of war, solely because, as I have

(And against Austria (Tisza incident)).

UNDER THE THIRD REPUBLIC 311

As demonstrated, Germany does not have the same appetite for it. only in 1870; proof of this is that in 1870, it was necessary, to unleash hostilities, far fewer incidents serious, in fact, than those of Pagny and Raon-sur-Plain.

But it will not always be this way: like France, Germany will reach a point of popular misery which creates psychological training; however, I have de—As shown above, France could not suffer at—a massacre, even a victorious one, without further ruining oneself.

Let the reader, therefore, not be mistaken: it is false that the French people want war.

What is called his patriotic awakening is simply the cry of his suffering, which is not called awakening warrior than by capitalist coalitions speaking to through their newspapers.

Whatever they are, these newspapers, they lie like were lying, those of 1870: L'Univers, L'Opinion nationale, Le Gaulois, Le Figaro, Le Journal de Paris, Le Correspondant, la Liberté, la Presse, l'Union, le National, la Gasette of France, Le Siècle, Le Soir, Le Monde, Le Journal des Debates, the Revue des Deux Mondes, all cited by Jules Delafosse in a recent article, if they still attribute, in 1888, a warlike appetite among the masses which emanates only from a handful of leaders in Paris lists!

The people give their suffering all the names of which one impresses his brain and that one imposes on his ignorance France, but he never seeks destruction inter—to be able to control one's own destiny.

No more words! No more trickery!

People! Those who are conscripting you for the lion and deceptions, whatever they may be?!

'Le Matin, Tuesday, May 13, 1888,
2 In fact, those on Rue de Sèze, like those on Rue

312 Speculation | 1888

Once again, remember the night of August 4, 1789.

Here is a summary of the events of that night, as told by a historian.
who was certainly not a socialist:

"The National Assembly," he wrote, "met during the night"
"of August 1789, a session forever famous. There, by "a training spirit of which there was no
"An example in history: the deputies of the nobility,"
"those of the clergy, and, after them, those of the communes,
"They took turns, and to the sound of acclamations, abandoning"
"The donation of all their rights and privileges. It was decreed
"with enthusiasm the abolition of the title of serf and those of the "seigneurial jurisdictions of the privileges of the nobility,
"of the provinces and cities, the redemption of the tithe, the equal-
"tax equality, the admission of all French people to "civilian and military jobs and the destruction of all this"
"which could remind, directly or indirectly,
"The feudal system or the absolute monarchy!"

Well, if you stand up, people, this training can to renew.

But listen to this: the Constituent Assembly was dominated by the Jewish community. Under the bourgeois and commoner names of capital and of salaried employment, it reinstated all the abolished privileges.

Cadets are cliques of Harlequins wishing to replace themselves to that other coterie of Harlequins who govern us (!), here everything. But, being made of ambiguities and promiscuity, they could not deserve public trust; the only role to which they are dedicated is that of revolutionary agents, a role that will be all the more effective if he has an accomplice popular ignorance.

They stand out from the rest, fulfilling a natural function.
analogous to that of maggots in corpses; all this will end in a peasant revolt, as I predicted a while ago four years; and unfortunately it will perhaps only be after having gone through this peasant revolt and a reaction already France, which is threatening, will be ripe for reforms.
scientists who make up socialism.

History of France, by Amédée Gabourd,

UNDER THE THIRD REPUBLIC 313

AND INDEED: THERE ARE STILL NOBILITY TITLES WHICH THEY BUY THEMSELVES; THERE ARE RICHLY ENDOWED BISHOPS; THE SERF IS EMPLOYEES UNDER THE SIGNORY JURISDICTION? IT IS THE JURISDICTION
CAPITALIST; THE PRIVILEGES OF THE NOBILITY | THESE ARE THE PRIVI-LEGES OF CAPITAL; THE PRIVILEGES OF PROVINCES AND CITIES?
THESE ARE THE DEPARTMENTAL AND MUNICIPAL BUDGETS, AND THE TOLL CHARGES; LOANS; THE TITHE? IT'S THE CAPITALIST LIABILITY,
As for equal taxation, where is it? And as for THE ADMISSION OF ALL FRENCH CITIZENS TO CIVILIAN AND MILITARY JOBS
SILENCE? THIS ADMISSION HAS BECOME A BURDEN FOR EVERYONE WORLD, A PRIVILEGE FOR A FEW.

This is where we are after a hundred years!

People, may the history of the past serve you!

Be generous first!

Order your rulers to imitate their fathers
of 89;

If they refuse? Demand, impose, take |

And above all, having obtained it, whether willingly or by force, be vigilant!

WATCH OUT FOR TOMORROW'S HYPOCRITES, SO THAT, LIKE
THE JEWISH COMPLEX OF YESTERYEAR, THAT OF AUSOURD? HUI DOES NOT DESTROY IT VICTORY | |

...

END OF VOLUME TWO Ji

At the time this work was published; the death of Frederick II

His successor, Guillaume If, is considered to be entirely devoted to the ideas of the Chancellor.

But this circumstance alone would not be sufficient to change the economic antagonisms that I have pointed out in Europe.

Therefore, and contrary to some opinions, there is neither no more or less uncertainty than before Frédéric's death.

18

TABLE OF CONTENTS

FROM VOLUME TWO

II. – ANARCHIC PROGRESSIONS (continued).

Pages.

ÿ. – Trumpets of Jericho:

A0 D dd dun : . A

RS SRE EE DR TT LR LS ETS 52

1884. of re NS NS A of Sn Dur 105

6. – The Tarpeiah Rock:

1080 5 8 die re Bart RU GAS: 441

1000 SR sn Rae Len es A 182

10 ai Se Mai ESS dite ends ts 218

Summary of the period... 269

III. – THE RESULTS

1. – Scientific control. 275

2. – Forecasts. 289

Conclusions. su 5 de LL aus dre se 298

Postscript:

The first months of 1888.....,.....,..... .e.. SOU

END OF THE TABLE OF CONTENTS FOR VOLUME TWO.

ANALYTICAL TABLE

| Pages

A word to those ignorant of the official world..... TL I

To Benoit. Malon sisi us des Sos ae V

I. – CENTURIES-OLD SOLIDARITIES.

Speculation. – A thesis. – The scientific spirit. –
Conservation. – What is governance? –
The finger of God. – A hero. – Art! – Life normal. – Brutal and cruel.....,... 3

2. – The characteristics.

Parasitism. – War. – Salic banditry. – Feudal. – Mercantile. – Agiotage. – Shares.
– Jewish science. – Proudhon. – Oscar de Vallée.
– An unknown island. – The chalets. – The ma-China. – They're devouring each other! – The archaeologist, the | monkey and parrot |

316: ANALYTICAL TABLE

3. – Incubation of the Third Republic.

Clearing. – Fruit seller. – 1869. – Re-Greeds of the propertied class! – Imperial system. – Ter-
A fascinating discovery! – 1870. – Results. – One Tour of Europe. – Between the Black Sea and the Cas-Prussia. – Other nations. – Measure appetites. – England! – The Vacoufs. – Hirsch.
– International auction.....,..... T. 1.

IT, – ANARCHIC PROGRESSIONS.

Third Republic.....,..... soperisoitte ..

1.– Wrestling over corpses.

PERIOD 1870–1871–1872

1870. – The Plebiscite. – Eternal Parasitism. – The France gutted. – Peace. – The Speculation of 1871. – Assembly of Bordeaux. – Gambetta. – Thiers. – Paris burned. – All is saved! – The Maggots. – Devotion of capital. – Paths of

The) 0.00.0 vo. 000 00000000

7

75

ANALYTICAL TABLE 317

1872. – Repairs are being made. – Exaggeration of the massacres. –
The Liberator! – Newspaper bonuses. – The gold of whole world. – Colonial prologue. – The Orléans.
– The Judiciary. – The wealthy are growing.
– Summary of the period.....e...sssc.se.e 85

2. – Multicolored Vultures.

PERIOD 1873–1874–1875

1878. – How many property owners? – The vultures.
– Bad luck! – Financial groups. – Chambord.
– Guarantees! – Two names. – The Seven-Year Term.
Another colonial preface. – Seillière the fraudster. – The Banker Huguet. – The wealthy are growing.
Beulé-the-Cynic TI 9

1874. – We are thinking of the proletariat. – Let's abolish
The voters! – Spies and bribes. – Chas-
Gras sepot and rifle. – The crows at Rothschild. – Spain. – Egypt. – Turkish roads.
– France, a vassal of Prussia. – Venality. – Honduras. – Dreyfus and guano. – Erlanger. –Connew concentration..... rays nie cs. 111

18756. – The Jewish party. – Spirit of the Constitution.
– Fears of war. – The capitulations. – Crash Turkish. – Disraeli buys Suez shares. – Role de Rothschild. – Jules Simon, matchmaker. – Role

de Decazes. – The horrible amnesty! – Loan from Haiti. – Philippart. – The owners concentrate

SUMMARY OF THE PERIOD: Life and death. – The ri-Chesse. – Misery. – Republic!?. «. 147

18.

3148 ANALYTICAL TABLE

8. – Evohé! Jehovanh!
PERIOD 1876–1877–1878.

1876. – The elections. – What was being said in The salons. – Electoral corruption! – The Socialist "DEBATES." – Republican votes. – Panics. – The Jubilee and the Academy of Sciences morals. – The Indies. – Order reigns "in the Bal"kans!" – Almost fooled! – Mortgage loan. – Middle Parliamentarian. – In Egypt. – Auroretunisienne.
– Song from the "Gazette". – The notary's office. – Fi-finances for New Caledonia. – Philippart and the che-Iron mins. – Wilson's good ideas. – Congress worker. – Flood of wealth. – Foreigners. T I. 151

1877. – Revolutionary Comparison. – The Christians
From the East. – We're fighting. – Moscow and Rome.
– The Egyptian portfolio. – A Rothschild fiefdom.
– Sad fate of Pereire. – The Philippart plan. –
The Guanos and Grévy. – Coup d'état! – Epic Mac-Mahonienne. – Le Petit Journal. – We're taking care the workers. – Broglie. – Saviors of Israel, – The forced mill. – Widowhood of France. – The scru-tins. – Submission. nee Sesseocsvescssse 108

1878. – The tough Ismail. – Soubeyran held hostage. – The Calmed by the fire! – Rothschild victorious.
The Congress of Berlin. – Hirsch's Tariffs. –
The people of Nuremberg. – Cyprus. – Waddington
King of the Jews. – The London grocer. – Outpouring-Gambetta's comments. – The Man with Curves. –
Pope Say. – Northern Company. – Everything has increased Mentioned. – Strikes and Congress. – Blessed Circular. –
The Kanaks. – A slap in the face. – An orgy of billions. 215

ANALYTICAL TABLE 319

4. – Delilah's Scissors

PERIOD 1879–1880–1881

1879. – Grévy, president. – Things from Tunis. – From Bône to Guelma.– Troubles in Algeria. –How Egypt prevented the conversion of the 5%. Rothschild is no longer paying. – A dismissal of the case, – The Why? – Article 7. – The displaced. – Pali-Judicial issues. – Dying Russia. – The 246 Greece. – Beneficial trestle! – The a of Grévy. – Misery is rising...,... be sedeosess, 240

1880, – Voter factory – The congregations. – Senatorial bargaining. – The pursuit of functions. – Poland was drunk! – First Grévy scandal. – Blind and deaf. – The spy-Swimming and Lady Kaulla. – Preface by d'Andlau. – Accusations against Waddington. – The Austro-German. – Disasters in Russia. – Nihilism and Socialism. – Lunch, decoration, and borrowing Greeks. – Rogue theories. – The colonies. – The Rothschild option. – Soubeyran and Italy. – Erlanger is agitated. – The strikes. – Prostitution "brushed." – The ambassadors..... Tl 276

1881. – Awakening of Catholic property owners. – Anti-Semitism in Prussia. – What the Jews say of France. – Stock market crash. – Merchant ferry. of powder. – Torrent of cushioning. – Mo- crisis nétaire. – Soubeyran saves Christophle! – The . elections. – Egypt again! – The Krumirs of 1863 – Tunisian Cañcans. – The General Union. – 315

320 ANALYTICAL TABLE

Hirsch and the diplomats. – Absorption or destruction- tion. – The major ministry. – The broadcasts of 1881. – The strikes. – Capital Jubilee. – The magistrates. – Marriage of Wilson.....,.....,..... 315

lation. – Individual wealth. – The destitute. – Disorganizationsoosssessocoosce 309

4. – Trumpets of Jericho.

PERIOD 1882–1883–1884

1882. – Occult dictatorship. – The little Catos. –
A flood of financiers. – The pickpocket. –
The jackpot. –The crash. –Bismarck's boots.
– Where are the naive ones? – Austrian plan. – Bourgeois Modest. – Touch His Lordship?! – Again
Léon Say, Minister. – Poor stockbrokers! –
The headquarters of Le Petit Journal. – Moralistic Peace! –
The Palinodes of the French Republic. – Comedy
Egyptian. – Where is civilization? – Intrigue Tunisian. – Malagasy foresight. – Trade unions professionals. – Horrible class war. –
The lawyer from Amiens. – The strikers sold out to English. – The police. – Poverty is rising. – Ideas anti-Jewish. – Wimpffen's indictment.. T. II 1

1883. – The suitors. – The Gambetta mystery.
– Social antagonisms. – The expulsion of Rothschild. – Léon Say's belated confessions. – Anar-Schistes in Lyon. – The Esplanade des Invalides. – Revolutionary rectangle. – Multi-combinations 52

_ ANALYTICAL TABLE 321

Triples. – The blows of conversion. – The hotel Wilson. – Incurable misery. – Chatter at Parliament. – Humble prayers to the Companies!

– Who pays? – Strange revenues. – General Staff financial. – Stages of capitulation. – The king

Uhlan, – Elysian chauvinism. – The markets
Military. – Shameless propaganda. – Boland. – Biedermann suicide. – Aggravated misery..... ... 52

1884. – Sated and deaf. – Deathly silence. –

No crisis! – He also said: there is no profit illegitimate. – Two and two make four. – Success Tirard's! – The millions of the companies. – In-Raynal core. – Grévy audience. – Charbon allemand.– Foville's testimony.–The ragpickers. – Sugars. – A way of colonizing. – Debt Tunisian. – Lang-Son's lie. – Scapin. – The Saint-Elme affair. – Lalou and Vieil-Picard. – Military suppliers. – Matches. – A the example of Hirsch. – Choleric agiotage. – Divorce speculation. – Egyptian speculation. – Influences at the courthouse. – We are talking about the gu-Ours. – A lawyer executed. – War of races. Vol. II. 105

6. – The Tarpela Rock

PERIOD 1885 – 1886 – 1887

1885. – Royal villainy. – Factory of silence. – Wilson's revenge. – The fake telegrams. – Ferry succumbs. – The two cables. – Lan-secret pledge. – An English Wilson. – The station of: Beijing. – The stock market crash. – People are dying of ple- 141

322 ANALYTICAL TABLE

Thore. – Prussian imitation. – Military unemployment. silence. – Universal peace. – Decorating agencies Rations. – Justice in the South. – Barraia and Wilson. – Contrasts. – Baker in Tunis. – The Gaudissarism. – Lighting? By gas. – Coal of Tonkin. – The bearing of a nobleman. – The end of a class. – The Jews. – In Saône-et-Loire. – Victor Hugo. – Strikes. – Elections. – A threatening error. – Grévy extended..... 141

1886. – The two austere ones. – Candidates cleaned up. – Tragedy in Decazeville. – The fund has been hit. – Dufaure, broker. – Swindles. – Rivers nuggets. – The mine belongs to the miners. – Separatism. – General crisis. – Bonus for foreigners. – A Vierzon. – We borrow. – Funeral displays. – Marriages. – Guano in the Court of Appeal. – Lotteries. – Savings protection. – The morality of the state. – Bank rags. –

Seillière: . – A bunch of traffic. – The ju-Verie overflows. – Partial Jubilee. – Erlanger's friend. 182

1887. – The periodic stock market crash. – Insurance against an accident. – Havas Agency. – Massacres glorious! – To disgrace, not to punish. – First ac-Erlanger's departure. – The coincidences. – A
The racecourse. – The Order of the Savior. – Second Erlanger's acquittal. – The spoliations. – Pa-Parliamentary soups. – Financial insurance and Dauphin. – Two hypotheses. – Boulanger excluded.
– Bulgarian combinations. – Free suffrage! – False documents. – Milestones of facts. – Hirsch makes his accounts. – Financial battalion. – France tra-_ valiant and worthy. – Cobourg, Orléans and Co.

Mixed-race people. – Census. – Agrarian Europe. – Peaceful invasion. – Workers' Congress. – The cin- 218

ANALYTICAL TABLE

quaternary. – An unswallowed bribe. – The engineer-Mr. Chevallier, optician. – The cables. – The acc-Copper cladding. – A flurry of scandals. –
Words from Épinal. – A grain of sand. – Seques-Seillière tration. – Benign speculation. – The decorations-

Rations. – Collusion. – Very clear dates. – Serious crisis, – Sadi-Carnot. – Antagonisms following-first..... Sierre Sirius sine PR in | 2

SUMMARY OF THE PERIOD: Life threatened. – Depopulation-tion. – Very rich. – Very poor. – Guillotine threatening. – Let them beware!

III. – THE RESULTS

14. – Scientific control.

A massacre is a fact. – Psychology and mentality. – Armored. – Palpable, shouted, observed. – A picture.
– Violet valleys, – Parallels? – Unity of Measures. – Capital. – Products. – Formulas. –

2. – Forecasts. |

Danger of death. – Kings' general staff. – Increase-Human condition. – Tax increase. – Appetites nationals. – German Peace..... T. II.

323

218

269

275

289

324 ANALYTICAL TABLE

3. – Conclusion.

Men and things. – Use. – Utility. – Work. .. 298

POSTSCRIPT

The first months of 1888. – The months are weeks. “– Your cheeky tone. – The espionage. – Wilson's acquittal. – Rumkorff's reel. – The General threat. – Panic. – Mushrooms poisonous. – Jewry. – Science. – The gone. – To Epinal. – At the Café Riche. – All Barons Louis. – The German invasion. – They men-tent. – One night on August 4th... Sons ele

TABLE OF CONTENTS. Huet itisassosees Le
TABLE OF CONTENTS see ceececececeemeereuocce Te IL 314
ALPHABETICAL TABLE AND INDEX OF NAMES CITED....., 925
B FLOOR. ao underlay LV: 958

French

English

Full text of " The Church and the Synagogue "

See other formats

This is a reproduction of a library book that was digitized by Google as part of an ongoing effort to preserve the information in books and make it universally accessible.

Google Books

<https://books.google.com>

Google

About this book

This is a digital copy of a work that has been preserved for generations on library shelves with the utmost precaution by Google as part of a project aimed at allowing internet users to discover the world's hidden treasure.

This book being relatively old, it is no longer protected by copyright law and now belongs to the public domain. "Belonging to the public domain" means that the book in question has never been subject to copyright. Expiration. The conditions required for a book to enter the public domain can vary from country to country. These are all links to the past. They bear witness to the richness of our history, our culture, and our knowledge, too often difficult for the public to access.

The footnotes and other marginal annotations present in the original volume are reproduced in this digital edition. The long journey the book has taken from the publishing house through the library to the internet is a testament to the power of the written word.

Instructions for use

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize works in the public domain and make them thus accessible to all. These books are indeed the property of everyone and we are simply making them available. However, this is a costly project. Therefore, and in order to continue disseminating these works, we have taken necessary measures to prevent potential abuses by third-party merchant sites, in particular by implementing technical constraints related to automated queries.

We also ask you to:

+ Do not use the files for commercial purposes. We designed the Google Books Search program for personal use. We therefore ask that you use these files for personal purposes only. They may not be used for any commercial purpose.

+ Do not perform automated requests. Do not send any automated requests whatsoever to the Google Books Search program.

For large amounts of text, please do not hesitate to contact us. We encourage the use of works and documents belonging to the public domain and we would be happy to be of service

+ Do not remove the attribution. The Google watermark contained in each file is essential and allow them to access more documents through the Google Books Search Program. Do not do No cases.

+ Stay within the law. Whatever use you intend to make of the files, remember that it is your Be sure to respect the law. If a work is in the American public domain, do not assume that other countries. The legal duration of copyright for a book varies from country to country. The works whose use is authorized and those whose use is not. Don't assume that simply posting Book search means that it can be used in any way anywhere in the world. The sentence to which The penalties you would face in the event of copyright infringement could be severe.

About the Google Books Search service

By facilitating searches and access to a growing number of books available in many languages contribute to promoting cultural diversity through Google Books Search. Indeed, the Google allows internet users to discover the world's literary heritage, while helping authors and online searches in the full text of this work can be found at <http://books.google.com>

Digitized by Google

DA
_ù ©

++
Cr pa FPE
born
D.

; 3 he 7 5th
41 bought back Ke A w ee 4 (u – su
hs" EN J'eLR es EE
+ 3" rr =
< Lé t. à 4 –

RC A to

THE

L OF" ,

By L. Rupert.

M 'Digiized by

27
_ 1Æn Va
Ste. +,

born.
no. 18
| #* to 4 2 4

THE CHURCH

AND

THE SYNAGOGUE

PROPERTY,

pe = »
.
(1 14 's
The "CL A"
L. >.
62% "6th
;
RN7 2) 2
A2 u TO
cpl
(= y , sv)
. e F+
THERE

is

Consziz, typography and stereotyping by CrEté.

DS

THE CHURCH

AND

THE SYNAGOGUE

LC

BY EL RUPERT

4@E

&

PARIS ge TOURNAI

P. Lethielleux Bookstore | H. Casterman Bookstore

RONAPARTE BUS, $6 RUE AUX RATS, ff.

H. CASTERMAN

EDITOR.

1859

Translation rights reserved.

Digitized by Google

WARNING

The work we are publishing is not the result of a circumstance, and he does not borrow his op-
The significance of an event that may have seemed isolated. Well that appearing under our name, it is not of we; we do not claim the honor; we we only translated it from the manuscript of a foreign scholar, who, preferring to be published in France entrusting us with a job and abandoning us to it, where he to put a philological science and a scholarly tion that we would have been completely lacking for such a task (1). The work was written

(1) Apart from the inevitable typographical errors in any a kind of publication, if we had sometimes failed to cite the names of certain authors or the titles of certain works in the most common form, we will remember that we We have only translated, and that these names or titles may have, even according to the unanimously adopted practice, take another form in a foreign language. Besides, we don't think that the Jewish cause finds some advantage in what one would like to discuss the accuracy or authenticity of this or that detail for several years, because of the claims of Jews, even in these latter times, do not date not the Mortara affair; we will see that they had had, Previously, several renowned apologists who had taken it upon themselves to plead their case with a a certain brilliance, and one can also see that it has not was without any success.

HAS.

YI | WARNING.

We gladly agreed to cooperate in . this publication and to take it even under our responsibility, because we found there a a new opportunity to avenge the Church for these repro- signs of intolerance and excessive severity which we we have had to exonerate her several times through the periodical press. This is just a new de- development brought to our task, so to speak daily: to show that the Church is still as- guided by the Holy Spirit, spirit of charity and of wisdom as well as a spirit of truth, and that she is no less irreproachable in his past than ad- admirable in the present, and worthy of serving as a mo- faithful and guiding to any society for the future.

But today the Jews seem to have become in particular; the more difficulties of this kind one would like to raise in his favor in this cause, the more your investigations would be called

Since we began this work, all research Conscientious attention to past events can only multiply the testimonies against the Jews.

WARNING. VII

less hostile to our faith and our worship, today from today that skepticism, indifference and doubt serious individuals entered the Synagogue and had shaken his temple enough to make him fear
Was it worth seeing it soon fall into ruin?
It's better to let silence finally settle over all of this.
new attacks, as has happened on so many others very who preceded them? Isn't that stopping the a movement taking place among the Jews that distances them from the Synagogue, to bring back to the Church all Those who don't want atheism? That's the a question that is quite natural to ask when we are only considering a certain order of events, and we would not have helped to rescue the documents from oblivion that we are publishing today, if we had truly—there is no reason to believe that Judaism will die out gradually, within the indifferentism of this century, without doing anything that would remind people of his activity. and his pretensions of the past. But when we notice what Its industrial and financial power allowed it to conquer at a time when the fate of empires depends more than never to questions of money, when you know with what care he seeks to take hold of journalism and to what extent he has succeeded in several states Eastern and central Europe; when, on the other
On the other hand, we see Christians who are prominent by virtue of their rank.
and their reputation, much more than by their es—

seen WARNING.

religious, to become advocates for Judaism in the midst of today's society and demand for him other means of influence than those he already knew turn to his advantage; when finally we hear some rumors suggesting new attempts to put an end to the dispersion of Israel, to restore to it a homeland and to give some rebuttal to the famous Regarding the Savior's prophecy, it is quite permissible to think that Judaism will not die out without trying to react against the elements of dissolution which mined and took some away from him every day in the face of this reaction which is preparing and which has already began, to show that the Church has always had reasons to be wary of the designs and the machinations of the Synagogue, and that she never could not allow the Christian society to entrust indifferently its direction, its defense and its security either to those who worship or to those who blaspheme Christ.

Moreover, we will discuss the Jews here... same observation that we had to make on the garlic—their comments on heretics, or rather here—siarchs and heretics. The measures of severity and repression have never been, from the part of the Church, that because of the aggressive nature of the error, of the peril of subversion that it constitutes killed in the midst of society, and the degree of evil—true faith and willful obstinacy that it was necessary to recognize in the enemies of the doctrine and of the peace of the Church. By justifying it therefore in all this that she did to defend and protect her faith as well that the freedom of his children, we do not ask not at all what his wisdom does not inspire in him everything, the application of the same measures to the external forum laughing and the same appeal to the secular arm either against the heretics, that is, against the Jews of today. We say it loud and clear, because the spirit of lying shows us every day that no protest at This regard cannot be made explicit or clear enough. aunt. The greatest enemies of the Church, those which are most deserving of repression, do not are more the heretics and the Jews: they are the men who belong indifferently to all religion and whose language cannot be approved by none. It is against these men that one must to warn any society that wants to live.

WARNING. IX

L. RUPERT.

PREFACE

For some years now, among the new—calamities of all kinds and political revolutions and religious issues that have so often stirred Europe, we enthusiasm in favor of the Synagogue, more than ever nothing like it had ever been encountered in the space of eighteen previous centuries. Not only all of this which was practiced by this people abandoned by God, but also all the actual or alleged conduct

The attitude of Christians towards Jews has become difficult-Various occasions, the favorite theme of philosophy, politics and journalism. Everyone is talking about this nation, everyone's eyes are turned towards it, and seeks to awaken feelings in people's minds of pity towards him. We went so far.
on this path of humanity and sympathy, that we have come to deplore and blame without reservation the wise regulations of the Church regarding the Jews, and to consider these regulations as unfair, bar-bare and unworthy of the Christian name.

PREFACE.

This enthusiasm is very strong among some men, as much as it is incomprehensible for a spirit elevated and nurtured within the ancients and healthy traditions. While, on the one hand, we book of so many declamations against discipline an-
On the other hand, there is a perfect agreement of feelings and language in everything that touches on the civil and religious status of Jews.
It would seem that this is no longer the decide people and The people with their hard understanding are condemned; it is not plus the nation obstinate in its blindness; this it is no longer the Synagogue of Satan; it is no longer this which, in common parlance, is known as the name of Hebrews, Jews, traitors, enemies of the cross, as the Savior and his Church after him; a new one has now been adopted.
what a list of honorable and pompous titles,
such as the Israelite congregation, the people of Israel, na-illustrious tion, privileged race, worthy of praise and of praise, without any distinction of era or of circumstances; and everywhere it is recognized as perfect-worthy of all the prerogatives enjoyed by the Christian society, up to the point where it can sit in the councils of loyal princes and take part of the management of public interests (1).

(1) St. Justin, martyr, at the end of his Dialogue with the Jew Try-

Phon demonstrates that the true people of Israel are the Christians.

PREFACE. XHI

Also, realizing how much effort and of care that is being provided today in favor of
From the synagogue, I could only feel saddened and troubled at the sight of this zeal and ardor for the Jews, among men who only show in-A stark difference and a coldness that was more than glacial.
for the religion of Christ, for the unity of his Church and for its adorable mysteries. I have I asked myself this question: Why these have these same men so consistently pursued a goal that seems dear to them, that of destroying so many prejudices which, according to them, have dominated in past ages, under the influence of fanaticism, of intolerance and superstition? And what they ap-Thus they are called, these are the published canon laws in the different ages of the Church and wisely por-statements made by her regarding the condition of the Jews in the mid-Christian place.

It is unfortunately undeniable that the authors of such an undertaking have done so far great progress among the Christian nations yours, by parading feelings of humanity and philanthropy to win over supporters people who are still inexperienced and encourage them to shout with them, or against the barbarity of past centuries with regard to the Jews, that is, against any distinction which still strikes them today and prevents them from

B

XIV PREFACE.

to enjoy all the same advantages as others citizens.

It didn't take me long to think about it. to be led to say to me: If that is the case, our ancestors are therefore deceived; therefore the Church has erred in the me-sure that she took against the maxims and the acts of the old Synagogue; therefore the Church and the ma-Christian gistrat who acted in accordance with the laws canonical authorities have committed tangible injustices.
by suppressing and punishing the tendencies of the

my mind wandered, I clung to the feelings of the Catholic faith and I say to myself: No, no, the Church did not fall into error; no, never did she has not been invaded by prejudice, selfishness and hatred. Thus, I added, let us reduce the accusations to nothing. and the unjust invectives that one dares to formulate against The ecclesiastical constitutions. Let us show the world the whole that reason was on the side of the Church and no, it was not from the Synagogue that all the wrongs came of the perfidy of the Jews, and that if they had to suffer They should not have suffered many humiliations in times past. wind to blame only themselves and not the Christianity.

In this century, which we call the century of progress, of civilization and tolerance, we are only doing declaim, in public papers and in the parliamentary assemblies, on freedom of thought and on the respect due to all opinions. Arguing from this freedom granted to all, I present myself before the public with the acquired certainty of not meeting no other obstacle than public opinion. But I don't tell myself- Don't pretend that I'm going to run into many and powerful opponents. I will have to fight and against the Jews and against the modern spirit of reform and progress. Moreover, that Europe phi- The anthropomorphic raises a cry of disapproval against me And my words, it doesn't matter; that's not what must stop me.

PREFACE. XV

The main goal of my work is therefore the defense of the Church, its canons, its conduct in the protection of the Jews, conduct motivated by their maxims and by the events that followed. Wouldn't there be a subject of reproach and blame against the Church, a fatal stain on his authority, on his character divine, and to the honor of our ancestors, if their party-participation in unjust acts against the Jewish nation was it once accepted without contradiction? The Church would therefore have, both by herself and by her children, supported subjected to his laws, caused serious harm to the Jews in the eras that preceded us; it would have persecuted this nation against all rights and justice-tice! Such, however, are the consequences which clearly emerge from the continuous declamations nuisances that we hear in favor of the Jews and against Christianity, especially in the Middle Ages.

XVI PREFACE.

Prejudices and prejudices, with all their consequences, may well be the result of a few individual Christians; but the Church does not could not be tainted by it. Guardian and dispenser—chief of the repository of truth, incorruptible judge to—As a wise person, she is not subject to illusion or passion. of no kind. I will be less attached to what is of today's Jews as well as those of the past; it is these that I wish to concern myself with. especially; it is about them that I will have most to fight my opponents, since it is in the times past, when we thought we had found reasons for justification in favor of the Jews, and accusation against Christians.

By leaving to the judgment of posterity the appraisal of new paths in which seem—It is possible today to walk to the Synagogue, I am absent—I will hold, all the more so, any investigation on its future destinies.

However, I also do not want to deny what the Jews suffered at the hands of Christians in the centuries past; I will confess it sincerely, as I also want to tell the story with equal sincerity. evils, injustices and outrages that the Church of Jesus Christ and his children had to endure some part of the Synagogue, and that is what they denied or The defenders and protectors of the Jews were poorly explained. I will study it specifically, as is my duty. From a historian's perspective, the origin and cause of disasters that the Jewish nation has had to endure in various places, or To put it more precisely, I will strive to demonstrate which were, either in the Church or in the Synagogue, the main perpetrators of the evils that one or the other They made each other suffer.

PREFACE. XVI

Before getting into the details, I have a few things to do. preliminary observations necessary for development sectioning of my arguments. I repeat that my des—The aim is to speak of the Jews, not as they are in the past. today, but as they were in other times;

show of our time, I should put what-these restrictions on the judgments I make. I I believe, in fact, that many of the prejudices that prevailed
The Synagogue no longer exists to this day.
the time it is among the Jews, or at least among those who live in the midst of European nations-nes. And that's also why I have to protest.
from that moment on against my opponents and against their false assumptions, since they want to judge the ancient Synagogue, as it was in the com-beginning of the vulgar era and later, according to The Synagogue of today. It cannot be denied,

B.

XVII PREFACE.

Indeed, if we want to refer to what we sees, that the monstrous prejudices of the Jews of the however, they were not modified by the philosophy of the Mo-last. But if the Jews of today have something title in more respect for their more mo-derelict, for their more peaceful and more Being tolerant of Christians does not authorize any-to say that the same was true of the Jews of other three times.

Secondly, I would urge you to, above-everything as far as the historical framework that I prefer is concerned
I will send you from the ancient Synagogue in its rapports with Christianity, let it be well observed and understood as a point of the highest importance tance, that the acts of hostility and intolerance of Jews towards Christians, individual acts or common to a certain number, must be imputies to the Synagogue in general since the first down to the last of the circumcised, not as an effect of a particular passion, of a flawed judgment, of revenge or violent outburst, what that it may be, but rather as a result of prejudices rooted in the spirit of the entire Synagogue, or to put it more precisely as a natural consequence and rigorous application of the maxims contained in the Talmud, commented on by the Rabbis and disseminated by them in the minds of their fellow believers. Madly accepted as emanating from the Holy Spirit, these maxims distorted the Jew's conscience and led him—knew how to act with the conviction that he was only doing o—to be behold the highest authority, and that he was no—reprehensible act, while committing the acts more reprehensible in the eyes of Christians. The

The Synagogue thus assumed responsibility for the ac—individual actions of her followers, since it is she,
as we shall see, who put these things into their minds maxims opposed to and hostile to Christian principles to all nations.

Christianity is a completely different matter, and it is necessary to judge in a completely different way when sometimes the fi—
The deles, giving in to passion, went to some excesses against the Jews. These are then only the indi—men who are criminals and responsible, and the Church universality is not at all in question, since the maxims of the Gospel and canon law, as applied in accordance with its spirit, they disapproved of these disorders They condemned all violence. Adding the temporal punishments to threats of revenge divine, of which it was the interpreter, the pro— Church tested, as much as he was able, against those of his children who, driven by anger and revenge or for any other irregular reason, engaged in violence against Jews to condemnable acts with regard to all another individual. Moreover, she cut herself off from her breast

XX PREFACE.

by spiritual means those who did not hold Heeding his warnings, they did not submit.
not to the penalties they had incurred. Finally, she requested the assistance of secular power to pu—to control the crime in the offender, and thus the State and the Church, animated by the same spirit, devoted themselves to to maintain intact in the midst of Christian nations the evangelical principle, which is the true basis of the social and universal order.

Thirdly, as it is very difficult to to gather here and there, in public papers and in the other press publications, all the criticisms articulated by the defenders of the Jews against what they call for the prejudices and biases of Christians
Well, I simply brought to the public's attention—that the speech delivered in the British Parliament—that by Mr. Robert Peel, the pamphlet by Mr. Maxime

wise men from the works of Abbot Vincent Gioberti. They are there finds a summary of everything that has been said and is being said in-core in favor of the Synagogue and to the shame of the name Christian, and one can see there, which I have not be-care to discuss, the question of the rights to be granted to Jewish people in our modern societies, according to these writers.

What matters to me and what I believe is necessary, it is to raise the accusations in order to reduce them to nothing.

PREFACE. XXI

statements made by the men I'm talking about. to justify their claims in favor of the Jews, they invoked the annals of times past, and ar-tipped off the lie by attributing it to Christianity and to the Catholic episcopate of unworthy wrongs which-come a disgrace in the eyes of the nations; as if the Holy Spirit, who perpetually assists the Church, in the laws it enacted, had sometimes abandoned to the passions and whims of men slaves to self-interest, and forgetting the truth and justice goes so far as to persecute innocent people. These accusations, which I call calumnies, the Church She wants to be avenged by her children, and she waits of themselves that they expose to the eyes of the whole world reasons for his conduct with regard to Jewish perfidy daemonic. That's what I see for myself as a religious duty, and I accept it wholeheartedly. Finally, to bring order and clarity to In this work, I will limit myself to two things: to give first, an accurate and concise exposition of the maxims scattered here and there in the books of the Synagogue and adopted by her since the time of Our Lord gneur; to then present a brief account of the events which are the consequence of these maxims. I hope that this plan, if I'm not mistaken, will have the a-the advantage of offering a summary of the issue under its true aspect and the development that it must na-

XXII PREFACE.

naturally have; I especially hope that we will see to dispel all doubt about so many facts that Many men of good faith still hesitated to admit, not having sufficient reasons for singing nothing of the prejudices she held in the blind spirit of a people unfortunately abandoned God's gift for his infidelity.

This is the plan I have followed; I desire that it falls before the eyes of some of these Jews modern ones that seem to me to have other feelings and other religious ideas than the Jews of times gone by. Animated by far less hostility-kindness, or rather a genuine tolerance towards those who hold doctrines other than their own, they have become almost entirely foreign to all these pre-deemed barbarians who once dominated the Synagogue. If, with these provisions, they happen to read this writing, and if, in reading it, they experience something a feeling of horror at the account of so many crimes which The truth is too well established to be contested. I urge them to please stop and give serious consideration to this point, that if Christianity has sometimes, in the past ages, he brought severity towards the Jews further than justice required, he had nevertheless, on the other hand, the strongest reasons for to warn against this nation, and to repress by weapons and revolts incited here and there in various States. Moreover, they will have to persuade and conquer to overcome that, in most of these struggles constantly renewed, the initiative came from the Jews, whose Treason provoked the Christians. Finally, they will take what sound reason demands of them: that they seriously wonder if indifference is to them permitted, and if they can continue to live in the Synagogue, when the rest of its history shows the Jewish nation obviously abandoned by God, who had once blessed, protected, and loved her-wheat from the brands of his favorites.

PREFACE. XXII

9 JY61

THE CHURCH

AND

CHAPTER ONE

General overview of accepted religious and moral maxims in the Synagogue since his disapproval.

When we consider from what point the most protective figures of the Jewish cause, and what the steps they took to overcome their challenge... to seize and awaken public sympathies, it does not extend plus the means taken by them to captivate the ears and hearts in favor of the Synagogue, and next to bring shame upon the Church's past. They imagined themselves conceived that with Mosaic law in theory, and with the history—the argument invoked in support of their assertions, they could—would have brought this undertaking to a successful conclusion. The plan was not actually quite well designed, if they had proceeded with sagacity and loyalty. But, it must be said to them, they are shown to be inaccurate in the use of these two methods

1

2 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

They have strayed too far from the truth. The very foundations of their demonstration rests only on a mass of errors and inaccuracies, either from the point of view doctrinal, or from a historical point of view: that is, they have especially neglected to show, as it was just to do so, Judaism, since the vulgar era, alongside the Christianity, and to indicate how much it differs from Christianity and ancient Mosaic law.

Indeed, one cannot overstate the importance of—It is necessary, in the examination of a question, to resort to the sources, to examine its different parts, the different sides and everything that paves the way for a defensible and true development. It is by forgetting these rules in the very subject at hand, that we have arrived to the most erroneous consequences, and which we believed we see the false where the truth lay, and vice versa. we therefore have the right to accuse in whole or in part the writers named above for their negligence on this point, when it was mainly a question which, over the course of nearly eighteen centuries, has received a solution completely contrary to the one they want

Sir Robert Peel, among others, believed he was presenting the question in its true light, when he asserted without hesitation in the English parliament that he had examined in the broadest and most comprehensive way. That Was he doing one, though? Knowing all the others, he was resorting to the Gospel to find support and sanction in favor of his opinion, which he sought to support with the very maxims taught by Jesus Christ to his disciples ciples. That is how these men believed they had triumphed of all opposition, by covering themselves with the sacred veil of Christian charity. Their opponents, in turn, have also placed themselves in the shadow of the Gospel and have built a bulwark for their defense. We will like them. May, however, the doctrine of Jesus-Christ will serve us so well as a guide in our journey grip, so to speak, when we We will have brought it to its conclusion, only if Christ erred, We made a mistake too!

CHAPTER 1. | 3

But, first and foremost, we need to protest. against the very false supposition of Sir Robert Peel (4) and of the other apologists of the Synagogue, namely, what di-wines, teachings, and the revelations contained in the An-Old Testament. are received by the Israelites as well than by Christians; for he should have added that the Jews also have a host of institutions that are dedicated to them. their own, that they regard them as so many monuments items collected through the tradition of their ancestors that they see so many oracles in these monuments commented on a thousand times by the Pharisaic sect and pu-forgotten among them, and that they grant them obedience a higher value than that which they attribute to precepts the books of Moses. This is the most serious error. of our adversaries, as it is the most dangerous an illusion that makes Jews unaware of the truths

(1) Speech taken from The Times, February 12, 1848.

TO THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

evangelicals, and makes them persist in their disastrous practices prejudices, as we shall see later. If one had distinguishes itself from the sect in several key ways Pharisee, and which still retains a small number of partisans in the East, we would gladly have been Okay. Indeed, the Karaites reject the entire system-traditional theme of the Pharisees, to which always summer and is still closely attached to the almost total-the identity of the Jewish nation, dispersed throughout the world, and that is why the Karaites, like the Sama-

The Jews are hated by other Jews with equal fervor.
violence perpetrated by Christians themselves." Therefore, we do not need to concern ourselves with these which-dissidents, and we can move on to the de-demonstration of our thesis, which is this: The Synagogue, as it is constituted today, is the proper daughter of the Pharisaic school, and the legitimate heiress-time of all the doctrines that it propagated doctrines among the Jews at the time of Our Lord who gradually invaded all the Jews scattered in the world. There are no historians, there are no writers who, after having seriously studied the maxims of ju-Daism since the vulgar era, not having found them in all
I completely agree with the Pharisaic institutions.
Serrarius reported to us the Jews' own admission, which
In his presence, they declared themselves disciples of the Pha- sect
The Jew Benjamin of Tudela found, in his travels to the Orient in the Middle Ages, which the Jews of these regions called themselves Pharisees, and they followed the lessons from the sect, just as they had adopted them the name (1).

CHAPTER L. 5

Antoine Hulsius, in the preface to his Theology Jewish, after having reviewed the various sects who divided the Jews at the time of Jesus Christ, adds: "Such was the situation of the Jewish religion"
"until the second devastation of the temple. From then on"
"At that time, the entire family of Israel was scattered"
"Here and there, and the various sects that composed it..."
"finding themselves separated and dissolved, a new catastrophe-
"The stanza was undoubtedly imminent, if the remedy
"had it not been brought in time by Rabbi Judah Hakka-
"Desch, or the Saint, who lived around the year 130 AD"
"vulgar," This one, to prevent that tantet from so various national traditions, which so many "constitu-
"Ceremonial and judicial actions relating to the observation"
"advance of Mosaic law, and recommended by-
"above all and with the greatest care by the Pha-

"his compatriots in the vicissitudes of exile, re"searched and collected manuscripts from all sides"
"scattered, and he copied a volume of them which was called
"Mischna or Sepher Mischnajot. »

The text of this book was enriched over the centuries
following, from various comments provided by the aca-Jewish dems of Palestine and Babylon; these

(1) Nicolai Serarii, lib. 11; cap. xvr. Trihæres.

CHAPTER I. 7

pond: Von venit regnum Dei cum observatione; It is-that is to say, the kingdom of God will not be manifested by extraordinary pomp and by the brilliance of the victoires, which would be an obvious sign for the Jews of their political restoration and their preeminence on other nations. Jesus said the opposite: Ecce enim regnum Dei intra vos est. And, reproaching to these same Pharisees for failing to recognize his coming in the name of his Father, he added, as did Saint John he reports: ¶'yo vent in nomine Patris mei, et non accipitis me; si alius venerit in nomine suo, tllum accipietis (1). It was as if he had said to them: "I have come in the name of my Father, using the authority he has given me given as being the true Messiah, and you don't tell me Don't believe it. But if another one comes along on his own name, who declares himself the Messiah, although he is not
"No, you will receive it." The Savior wanted to show as they were expecting a Messiah other than him, A Messiah who would satisfy their desires for a temporal kingdom, and which would restore their ancient preeminence over other nations. The attacks of Several fanatical Jews came all too often in the following to confirm the truth of the prophecy of Savior.

We see in the same Evangelist (2) how much this false idea of a temporal kingdom captivated the Jewish imaginations. At the sight of the miracles of the Nazarene-

(1) Cap. v, 48.

(2) Chapter vi, 15.

Reen, the crowds are moved and proclaim him king, in the persuasion that it will bring about the triumph of Israel over the Roman Empire and other nations. It was also the opinion of the two disciples whom Jesus accompanied on their trip to Emmaus. He asks them what they talk, and why they are sad. They answer that they talk about Jesus, through whom they had been predicted that Israel would be delivered from the yoke of the Romans (1). A multitude of passages from the Gospels and writings apostolic texts show the existence of similar illustrations deions. Many disciples of Jesus Christ do not des- gradually bore away these dreams, to recon- to be born in the Messiah, the founder of a whole kingdom spiritual, as he himself openly declared before Pilate: Regnum meum non est hinc (2).

But it was in vain that Jesus Christ fought under winds the Synagogue's opinion on the character of the Messiah she awaited; it was in vain that he taught and protested before the Pharisees and before the governor the Roman nero that his kingdom was entirely celestial, and that the Jews should in no way expect to be freed liberated by him from foreign domination: the Jews, fer- listening to the words of the Savior, they did nothing but confirm in the idea that the kingdom of Christ should to be earthly and eternal, and to extend from one end of the world to the other. They therefore had to refuse to believe in the the coming of the Messiah in the person of Jesus; they became the most bitter enemies of his doctrine and his works, and cursed him in his person and in that of his disciples. Indeed, according to the testimony of Saint Matthew (1), Jesus warning his disciples about what is to come. what was going to happen to them, he pointed out to them that the Pharisees gave him the ignominious name of Beelzebub, and thus warned them of what they would have to suffer- To be angry about the stubbornness of the Jews: "If they gave the name "From Beelzebub to the father of the family, how much more the "Will they do it for the people of the house!" Saint Jeanrap-. door (2) that the Pharisees, not knowing how to answer - the man born blind, whose obviousness they could not dispute Because of the miracle performed on him, they called Jesus a sight: Maledixerunt ergo and and dixerunt: You discipulus illius sis, nos autem Moysi discipuli sumus. We knows that they still called the Savior a seducer, of a madman, a Samaritan, and a demon-possessed person, in order to to debase his divine character. Finally, after having employed against him all kinds of slander, they condemned him- They were born to the torture of the cross.

(1) Luke, chapter xxv, 21.

(2) Joan., chap. xvii, 36.

CHAPTER I. 9

Thus, they remained obstinate in their expectation of such a different Messiah. of the one that Our Lord came to manifest to world, the Pharisees could not be satisfied with the condemnation of the Savior. They needed to go further. in their opposition: their antipathy towards Jesus of- would extend to his disciples, and inspire them against them

- (1) Cap. x, 25.
- (2) Cap. 1x, 28.

10 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

the same hatred, the same slander, and the same persecutions with which they had pursued the divine Master. The Gospel narrative reveals in this regard the actions of the Pharisaic sect. Saint John (1), recounts- so great was the enthusiasm of the people above at the sight of his miracles, reports that the Pharisees were astonished and amazed. they said that the crowd thus applauded the Savior, while that none of them believed in him: Numquid ex principibus aliquis credidit in eum, aut ex Pharisæis? Sed turba hæcquænon novit legem maledicti sunt. Mau- said, that is to say, worthy of anathema and punishment Forbidden by law, worthy of universal execration. That is what that the Evangelist clearly explains in chapter 1x in expressing the enthusiasm that was aroused in the few- ple the miracle performed on the man born blind: Jam enim conspiraverant Judæi, ut si quiseum confiteretur esse Christum, extra synagogam fieret (2). So the Jews drove out their society those who recognized Christ in the Jesus' person: this is the situation in which they were the only thing preventing them from going any further in the condemnation of their brothers, as they tempted- They also intend to do it later. Jesus Christ, who saw into their hearts, and who knew what they were doing? would later oppose his Church, he warned his disciples with these words (3): Absque synagogis facient your ; sed venit hora, utomnis which interferes with your, arbi-

- (2) Cap. 1x, 22.
- (3) Joan., chap. xvi, 2.

CHAPTER I. A1

tretur obsequium se proestare Deo. The disbelief of the Synagogue was therefore announced, along with her obstinacy in hatred against Jesus and his disciples. Kill those who would worship Jesus as the redeemer of Israel, would be regarded as an act pleasing to God; that would be fighting in defense of the laws of Moses and national traditions. Saint Stephen was the first—The first victim of this hatred. The condemnation of The holy martyr encouraged the Jews, who began to permit to follow the apostles and their disciples, whoever they were—Saint Paul, educated in the Pharisaic school, continued—followed, as we shall see in its proper place, the goal It was impious to abolish the Christian name. The letters he had received from the Sanhedrin of Jerusalem, whose authority was extended to the most distant cities where were found—had Hebrews and proselytes, contained the C'herem or anathema of extermination against whoever invoked the name of Jesus. The Apostle, disillusioned with his He made a mistake, he ingenuously confessed before the world. We We will return to this subject later.

Jesus Christ did not only accuse the Synagogue of infidelity and hatred towards him; he still reproached to the Pharisees for having adopted an unjust morality, and for having abandoned the law of Moses to follow the corrupt editions of their fathers. Saint Matthew tells us offers a summary of what the Pharisees, in the time of Our Lord, with respect to these traditions. In agreement with the Scribes, they addressed this question to the Savior: "Why do your disciples

12 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

"Do they violate the tradition of the ancients? Why not?"
"Do they not spread their hands when they sit down to eat (1)?"
"And Jesus Christ, answering them, said: 'And you, for—'
"What, are you violating God's Commandment by your "traditions? God said: Honore your father and your mother;
"and whoever curses his father and mother will incur the "dead. And you say, 'Whoever says to his "Father and his mother: What could sustain your life"
— "is consecrated to God, and will not give them the ne—

"Not to the law." I'm telling you that this one, by omitting "to honor his father and mother, will abandon the Com-
"God's commandment to follow your traditions: /n
"vanum autem," repeats Saint Mark, "me colunt, docentes
"doctrines et præcepta hominum. Enim Relinquents
"mandate Det tenetis traditiones hominum, baptism-« mata urceorum et calicum, et alia similia his facitis
"Mulla."

Elsewhere, in Saint Matthew (2), Jesus addresses again
these reproaches to the Pharisees: "Woe to you, Scrib-
"those hypocritical Pharisees who take tithes of "mint, dill, and cumin, and despise the "other more important precepts, justice, the de-
"the ideals of humanity and loyalty to others"
"Very!" In Saint Luke, Jesus rebukes in these terms.
To the Pharisees their avarice: "No one can serve two "Masters at the same time. That is why he will either hate one and

- (1) Matthew, chapter 15, 2, and Mark, chapter 3, 2.
(2) Cap. xxur, 28.

CHAPTER I. 43

"will love the other, or he will become attached to the one and neglect"
"The other. You cannot serve God and money. In-"Tending this, the Pharisees, who were greedy,
"They mocked, and the Lord added: You are considered to be "righteous in the eyes of men, but God knows your "hearts, and what is esteemed by men is in abo-
"Preaching before God." The doctrine of the Pharisees is condemned in general by these words from Jesus to his disciples (1): Visit abundaverit justitia vestra plus quam Scribarum et Phariseorum, non in-trabitis in regnum coelorum. Which amounts to saying:
"If your moral virtues are not superior to that-
"You will not have any of the Scribes and Pharisees."
"He enters the kingdom of God." That's what we read in... core in other words in Saint Luke (2): "The Pha-
"The Romans purify everything that is outside the chalice, that is-
"that is to say, outside of themselves, and what is inside"
"is full of plunder and iniquity."

Jesus added to these accusations against the Pharisees the reproach of pride and hypocrisy, particular characteristics members of their sect. Note also the opinion that he gives to his disciples: Audistis quia dictum est: Dili-ges proximum tuum, et odio habebis inimicum tuum.

Pharisees in relation to those who had offended them, as with regard to men foreign to their religion: they refused them any good service, and did not

(1) Matthew, chapter 5, 20.

(2) Cap. x1, 39.

414 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

they even believed they were obligated to them to none of the de-common interests of humanity. We must remember, Finally, the name given to them is that of snakes and viper race (1), as being the most worst of all, superior even to their ancestors in wickedness, and constantly driven by the desire to harm and to kill. Saint Paul, raised in the Pharisaic sect, comes to confirm all that precedes, by confessing
He frankly explained how attached he was to traditions ancestors: Abundantius æmulator existentens paternarum meorum traditionum. It develops and fights these traditions in his epistle to the Colossians (2); he shows the vanity and futility, although the sect attaches to it-che a sovereign importance: Ve tetigeritis, neque gustaveritis, neque contraclaveritis, quæ sunt omnia in interitum ipsorum <ecundum præcepta et doctrinas hominum; quæ sunt rationem quidem habentia sapientiæ in superstitione et humilitate, and not ad parcendum corpori, non in honore aliquo ad saturitatem carnis.

These are the main features, taken here and there from the apostolic writings, which recount the maxims re-religious and moral principles of the Pharisaic sect, a sect which included in the following all Jews who rebelled against the calling of the Savior. The Pharisees continued to amplify these doctrines; they were commented on, they were arranged on-everything related to Christianity, if abhorred by the sect; they were written down, and the result was Island

(1) Matthew, chapter 23, 33.

(2) Cap. n, 20.

CHAPTER I. 45

This book, which came to be known as the Talmud, was present by the great Sanhedrin to the entire Israelite nation, enthusiasm and a respect perhaps superior to that which had received the book of the law written by Moses. The Egyptian rabbi Moses Maimonides, nicknamed the Egyptian-tien, in reporting on the compilation of the Talmud, in fact, wrote: "What brought our holy Master "The reason for writing it was that he saw the number decreasing to those who studied the traditions, and to increase has the labors and the adversities, and that a kingdom making (the Christian Church) rise and dominate the "world; and Israel was transported to the ends of "The earth."

The authors of the Mishnah, a fundamental part of the Talmud, in order to confirm the authority of the traditions which we have just discussed, teach at the beginning From the treatise Pirkei Avot: "Moses received the law on Sinai, "(that is, the oral tradition), and he transmitted it to Joshua; Joshua passed it on to the elders, who in turn passed it on to the prophets, and the prophets to the members of the great Synagogue. They communicated it to their "disciples, who had to persevere in meditation" of this doctrine, to make many disciples and "to set the limits of tradition, so that no one "They must not cross them." It was subsequently decreed that anyone who does not believe in the heavenly origin of the oral law, He can have a part in the afterlife, and, consequently, Christians, who deny this origin, will not be able to enjoy of the blessed life. Moreover, the Talmudists, in their commentaries on the book of the Mishnah (1), Bava metzia, affirm that the study of the Talmud takes focuses on the study of the Bible, and that there is more mis-a ritual to be performed in the first as in the second. It's from There remains a vulgar proverb in the Synagogue: "My "Son, pay attention to the words of the Scribes (doctors)" "of the law) rather than to the very words of the law. The "The wise have surpassed the prophets in excellence." Rabbi Isaac Abuab, in the book entitled Zamida Golah (from the year 1556) teaches that the foundation of The Jewish religion is the oral law, or the tradition of Fathers, and not the law written by Moses: "It is in consideration- "degradation of the oral law that God made a covenant with the "Israelites, as it is written: Quia juxta verba "pango tecum foedus, etc.; and these words are the very "Come forth from the holy and blessed God." Abrabanel and the mai- The most esteemed members of the Synagogue supported the same opinion; they argue that the oral law contained secular and filled in the gaps. In the book inti-Tule Æorcoim, it is established that all those who mock the masters of the Synagogue, or say something anything contrary to their teachings will be thrown to the bottom of hell to be tormented there. The rabbis taught-They even say, regarding the Talmud, that if it is found something in this book that deviates from the natural order-

16 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

(1) Surenhusius, Mischna, part. 1v., and Slow. De moderna theo-logia Hebræorum.

CHAPTER I. 17

something that surpasses our intelligence, we must learn from it.
to take advantage of the weakness of human understanding, because Upon deep reflection, one notices that the
The Talmud contains only the pure truth.

Following these general observations on the authority of the.
Talmudic doctrine, we ask the reader to be careful what she teaches about the condition of the Jews in the midst of other peoples, and especially of the little-Christian people. In accordance with what we have said earlier, based on the text of Gospels, and to the idea we have given of the e-Pharisaical school in its conduct towards Jesus-Christ, whom she refuses to see as the true Messiah, Jews firmly believe that another per-ringing with the name of Messiah, and under appearances very different: this Messiah will be a conqueror who will sit on the throne with supreme authority, which will exterminate the enemy nations, and destroy all the dominant religions, especially Christianity, in employing coercion and violence when necessary. That's it.
the main article of their belief. They renew each day this act of faith in their prayers, and redouble their wishes to Heaven by asking God to send the expected liberator. Here is an example of these prayers: "Blessed be you, O Lord, who must build-
"Proud Jerusalem. Make the seed sprout again-
"The beginning of David your servant, and it will grow
"to give us the salvation that comes from you; for this
"Hi, we've been waiting for him every day." Every

From their death, they repeat the following words: "I believe
"firmly that the Messiah must come, and although he may delay,
"I am waiting for him." The prophets of the Old Testament which they regard as heralding this event, always give the Israelites hope that they will be able to day to take revenge on enemy nations. And indeed, that one of them who read the ancient Scriptures without pe-to understand the spiritual and holy meaning, can indulge in the es-proud hope of a great destiny, when he meets there-against in so many places the allegories and figures sublime ones used by the Prophets. Also the Do the wise men and masters of the Synagogue finish or-dinner even today, through the thought of this future triumph, the speeches they give in their assemblies; they incite their coreligionists to ob-faithful service to the law, giving them hope that they will see the coming of the Messiah, and will enjoy all the goods promised to Israel. Now, one of these goods is the mothe desired massacre of Christians and the extinction-complete exposition of the sect of the Nazarenes. Saint Jerome, who was thoroughly familiar with Jewish doctrines, inter-quoting Daniel's words about the little stone which falls from the mountain and breaks the statue that Na-Buchodonosor had seen in a dream, wrote: "The Jews,
"Turning this passage to their advantage, they refuse to
"to recognize Christ in this stone, and they are "convinced that it refers to the people of Israel who, at "The end of the centuries will be strong enough to overthrow all"

CHAPTER I. 19

the kingdoms of the earth and build upon their ruins
"His eternal empire." The learned Rabbi Abrabanel, in his Commentary on chapter xxx of Jeremiah,
It is seen as foretold the reign of the Messiah whom the Hebrews await, reign during which the external will be accomplished
The union of Christians and Gentiles. This is, moreover, in this expectation that the rabbis, and among others this Even Abrabnel decreed that one should not fix at the time of this advent, and pronounced the anathema against anyone among the Jews who would dare to determine a limit to the arrival of the Messiah. They have also de-clarified that miracles would not be necessary for
To make him recognized: according to them, it will be enough to see him to arrive like a great conqueror, happy in his enterprises, destined by God to restore Israel in its ancient grandeur and to give it the empire of world. |

the Kabbalistic Hebrews of the Talmudists, of whom we are
"Let's focus here," he said, speaking of the latter, "on what they..."
they are just waiting for the sound of the arsenals, the wars, the ra-the decline of the provinces, the ruin of the kingdoms and their triumph over all nations, as in the past Moses' victories over the Canaanites, to open thus the path of their glorious return to Jerusalem, and bring about the restoration of their former splendor.
These ideas fill all the rabbi- comments these are the stories told about the prophets; they have been tradition-naturally transmitted and instilled in the minds of

20 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

this nation; all the Israelites are thus prepared to this happy event for the Jewish nation and terrible for all other nations (1).

While the Jews live in this waiting period...
In their language, they have before their eyes a sect of men composed of their brothers and of pagans who followed Jesus, the son of Mary, and have detached from the Synagogue to form a new church. Is it any wonder they continue to be against these men and against their leader the irreconcilable hatred liable that they showed from the appearance of Christia-nism? Their intolerance extends even to the last-
They have very limited resources. They don't do anything without cursing.
and insult the holy name of Jesus; they detest his disciples
They are oppressed and persecute them everywhere, damaging their reputation.
in their fortune and in their person. As for-surrounds Jesus Christ himself, the Jews, incited by the doctrines that we have made known above and which we have gathered from the apostolic writings, have composed, based on the Talmud, a work entitled Toledoth Jeschu, in which the divine character of the Savior-
The lord is so odiously outraged that we would have horreur of explicitly repeating the ignominies spewed by the Synagogue on the mysteries of the Incarnation and of the cross, and on the other sacred dogmas of our religion gion. Our silence will suffice here, we hope, to

(1) Buxtorf, Synagoga jud., chap. xxxv. Maimonides in Su-Renhusius, Mishnah, part 1v, p. 164. Abrabanel, in the book initi-tule (Praeco salulis).

less for Christians, to bring these horrors to justice blasphemous ribs. We will simply say that among so many outrageous words lavished against our adorable Savior by the Synagogue, the most
The common form is the monogram /eschu instead of Jeschua which is equivalent to saying for the Jews: Deleatur nomen ejus et memoria ejus, or otherwise: Jesus mendacium and abominatio.

The calumnies with which the Jews heaped the apostles and the martyrs are merely the consequence of these senses perverse thoughts on the fundamental points of Christ-Tianism. They called the holy women profane, Pecharistie, a defiled body; for them the cross was an abominable object, the Christian Church a heretic, the preaching the Gospel, the revelation of iniquity.
To show their contempt for the priests of Christ, they called them aeondus and cumarim (priests) idols); Good Friday was a profane day; the
The most insulting terms are always those they use.
bend to our side; Christians are Galileans Epicureans, Idumeans, Minims, uncircumcised men abominable men, etc. This vocabulary of outrages is reproduced in the Talmud treatise entitled Avodah Zara and in the rabbi's poem Lipmann (1). Furthermore, Jews are permitted to recite the following words as they pass near a Christian church and some place of prayer: "That

(1) Jerome of Holy Faith, book 11, chapter v. Contra jud, De Rossi, Bibliotheca rabbinica, cod. 120-122.

292 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

the Lord destroys the houses of the sewers;" and they must say, as they pass by the tombs of faithful: "May your mother be covered in shame, that
"the one who gave birth to you should be repudiated, since
"The end of Christians is nothing but worms and rot."
Rabbi Eliezer says, in Pirkei Abiyomi, chapter 29, that who-
A conch shell eaten with an uncircumcised person must be watched as if he were eating with a dog; that he who touching an uncircumcised person is defiled as if he were touching a dead man; that he who washes with him is as if he was with a leper. Indeed, the uncircumcised (Christians) are, during their lives, as if they were dead, and after their death, like corpses thrown into the street.

Prayers for use in the Synagogue, printed in 1534. One of the pages in this volume had a blank space; When the Hebrews arrive at this place, they recite from memory and make their children repeat, a mis- a saying against all those who worship Christ, and, in At the same time, they spit on the ground, following the example of their fathers who spat in their faces three times Saint of Jesus. The same author also notes (4) that the Synagogue includes, under the old name- tion of miniim, all those who do not practice his worship, and especially Christians. Three times a day, The Jews pronounce curses against these last- curses; these curses are written in the Temona

(1} Chaldean and Talmudic Lexicon.

CHAPTER I. 93

Hesreh, which is part of their daily prayers. Among other words, it reads Zamalsinim velamesuma- dim, the first of which forms a kind of mono- gram against the faithful, which can be translated as follows: a Let him uproot them, let him trample them underfoot feet, let him destroy them, let him cut them down." Saint Jerome indicates this formula of imprecation as being in use even in his time; a century before Buxtorf, the Jews, out of fear of the Christian magistrates, they cut off their books these words, and substituted others which offered them the same meaning, by means of an inter- agreed-upon service. At the festival of Purim, which commemorates The elevation of Haman, their enemy, and his defeat, they substitute- kill the name of Jesus and his worshippers with words which express the curse of Haman. Thus, From the time of Theodosius to the present day, they express their curses against Christians by using the symbolic names of Haman and his partisans. There are even old manuscripts of the Jeflah which explicitly show that Haman and his supporters represent Jesus and his disciples, by asking God to bring about the extermination of the latter, as he procured that of the first ones by the hand of the Jews (1).

Pfefferkorn, a newcomer well-versed in local customs superstitious people from the Synagogue speak of a kind of the worship rendered by the Jews to the stars, on which They direct their gaze as they jump. And after having,

"Q4 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

practically confident that they cannot reach them,
They say, "May our enemies never harm us."
"Not to reach either!" Then they earnestly prayed the Lord, to avenge them against the Christians, and they conjure him to send all the plagues upon the worshippers of Christ and all the plagues with which he once struck the Egyptians.

Victor de Cobden, in a work on prejudices of The Synagogue describes the rites followed by Jews for preparing for the festival of Tishri, on September 7th:
Each man takes a rooster, the women a hen;
They spin the animal around their head while reciting a few prayers and they kill him; and after putting him in pieces, they throw him out of their house. On September 9th In September, they get up early, and, leaving in their own country, they curse the first Christian they they meet by reciting these words together: "May "God, may you become like my rooster!" The women-my friends do the same for the first Christian woman that they meet. They sometimes wait for more-several hours to meet a person against the-that they might pronounce their curse. When The deed is done, they return full of joy in their home.

The same novice claims that when they hear the sound of the bells calling the faithful to church,
The Jews pronounce curses against the one who he calls them, wishing him to die suddenly and to eto be thrown into the depths of hell. Finally, when a Christian He meets a Jew and is the first to offer him the greeting of peace.

1 CHAPTER LIL. 25

_with a feeling of true charity, he replies
On the contrary: "May God destroy you!" Such is the tolerance-the Synagogue's attitude towards Jesus Christ and his Church; 'such are the sentiments of the followers of the Talmud.

If we turn to civil relations between Christians-hold on and the Jews, we shall see that they follow in-core the same doctrines and the same methods towards the first: these are the same fatal prejudices and Religion. A scholar highly versed in knowledge. Talmudic doctrines, the Emperor, wrote in his Illustration from the Mishnah book entitled Bava Kama, Chapter 1v, paragraph 3: "The Gemara says that God has proscribed "the property of the Gentiles, who do not observe the principles "given to the sons of Noah, and gave them the right to do so" "to the first occupant. Let us therefore examine the reasons on "on which this allegation is based. We read in the "Deuteronomy, chap. xxxu1: /Uluxit Deus mount "Pharan, from which it is concluded in the Gemara that God, "From the top of Mount Pharan, he confiscated the property of the Gen- "They were in favor of the Israelites, for he showed them for "thus speaking of the possessions of the Ishmaelites, for their "To give ownership of it. But we must take this back from "higher up. The Jews say that the Lord, before "to give the law to the people of Israel, he offered to a- "border to other peoples, that is to say to the Ishmaelites" "and to the Edomites. This is what Solomon reports."

"Isaac's son, regarding the beginning of chapter 31
2

e La

26 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

"From Deuteronomy. According to him, God first proposed "the law to the sons of Esau, but they rejected it. "Then he came to Mount Pharan and showed it to the sons" "Ishmael's daughter, who also rejected her, and he- "finally addressed the Israelites. Solomon returns more am- he added to this subject in his commentary on the "Bava, liv. 1, chap. 1v: Circuit and circumduxit "legem ad omnes populos, qui eam non susceperunt. "The Jewish doctors therefore add that God appeared "to all nations on Mount Pharan, and from there "11 proscribed all the property of those who refused his "law. However, the Jews felt that this reason "was not sufficient, and they resorted to the paro- "The words of the prophet Habakkuk: Constitut and mensus is € terram, vidit et disturbavit gentes. According to the Ge- "Mara, these words show that God, considering "that the sons of Noah have not observed for a long time "plus his law, confiscated their property and awarded it to the sons" "of Israel." Without dwelling here on highlighting the op- formal position of this assertion with the law of Moses established in Deuteronomy, chapter 1, verses 5-6, we will draw the reader's attention to the observa- Buxtorf's statement on this subject (1): "The Jews of-"the mountain of Esau, understanding under this name

"Christians and their empire. The reason for this des-

(1) Of synagog. judaica, cap. v, and Abrabanel in his Commentary on Daniel, chapter VI, 8.— Antoine Hulpus, De Messiæ
adventu, p. 125. |

CHAPTER I. 97

"The terminology applied to Christians derives from their secret books, which it is difficult to have entered "hands when one is not one of them, and in which "It is taught that the soul of Esau passed to Jesus-"Christ. It follows that Jesus was an ungodly man like "Esau, and that Christians are no better than "The Idumeans." This writer notes, in the same book, with what authorities do the Jews ask
It is up to God to place all riches in their power.
of the Goyim (Christians), by ruining them, and to incite among them a war of extermination from the East
all the way to the West.

Going even further on these maxims, they established in the book entitled Sanedrim, "that a Hebrew who "will have killed a man with the intention of killing a
"animal, or a Hebrew, a brother, believing he is killing a
"A Christian will be absolved." Maimonides, whom the Hebrews they nicknamed it the Eagle of the Synagogue, and proclaimed the most beautiful genius to have appeared since Moses, shares These feelings are expressed without restriction. Indeed, this is what he said in advice addressed to his coreligionists on their way of behaving towards Christians:
a Quandles Israëlites ont une contention avec un goi (chré-
"Well), she must be judged according to Christian law, because
"This one is to the Israelite's advantage: it invokes us-
"We will then have the constitutions of the goë. But if we "Let us see some benefit in being judged according to our law,
"We will claim our rights, and we will say that in this way
"That's what our customs demand. And let no one be surprised."

28 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

"No. That shouldn't seem any more extraordinary."
"that it may not seem hard and cruel to kill an animal, although
"that he has not sinned, for whoever does not have perfection"
"The union of human virtues should not truly

"Purpose is to serve the needs of others."
 authors of the notes made to interpret the treaty of the Mishna entitled Avodah Zara also established that "followers of the doctrine of Jesus must be "treated in such a way that if they are seen near mou-
 "We only shoot them if we find one near a "Well, we throw it in and cover it with a stone,
 "and if there is a ladder in the well, it should be removed,"
 "so that he cannot climb back up." We read further in another place: "1} cannot be permitted to
 "to make alliances with idolaters, nor to deal with the "Peace with them; we must only try to
 "To disabuse them of their errors, or to kill them, etc. That "must be understood as referring to idolaters in general. As for
 "to those who are destroying Israel and leading it to its ruin,
 "like heretics and blasphemers, it's "a good deed to destroy them, and to carry them with "their mother in the depths of the abyss, since they hold
 "Israel in anguish, and they distance the people from the "God's way. Such are Jesus of Nazareth and his disciples"
 "_ciples, whose names are cursed; hence it is necessary to con-
 "to conclude that it is forbidden to treat as a doctor the "worshippers of Jesus, even for a fee-
 "tion, unless there is a grave danger in the

CHAPTER I. 929

"Refusal (4)." As a natural consequence of these Following the same principles, the rabbis decided that it is allowed a Jew to make a mistake in his calculations profit from dealing with a Christian, and that in general,
 It is an honest act to remove from a Christian what-whatever the amount of money, whatever the means, logs.

Maimonides, in his commentary on the chaptertre xc of the Mishnah (2), writes: "It is an obvious thing-
 "tooth by itself than when a foreign traveler-
 "A convert to Judaism dies without leaving children"
 "A proselytes, he must be considered to have no inheritance-
 "third party; whoever first takes possession of "His property will be deemed his rightful owner." The fata-the consequences of such a doctrine are easy to to sense. The Emperor, after noting this strange legislation, compare it thus with Roman law:
 "Quod politicam hujus Misnæ constitutionem spectat, legem parallelam non investigabo in lege Romanorum, ut tantam injustitiam stabiliverint; quam tamen Judæi Scripturæ paragrapho male accepto, sanciverunt. »

Rabbi Bechai said, speaking of usury: "It is "Permission to lend at usury to an apostate Jew. He is "permitted to take his life; how could it not be
"it is not permissible, let alone to deprive him of his "Good?" This same consideration led him to write to Maimonides, in the Æilchat rozeah, chap. xu: "He

(1) See in the Arbak Thurim and in the Choschen Hamisphat.

(2) Surenhusius in AMisna, tract. Bava Kama.

2.

30 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

"It is forbidden to give good advice to the go (Christian-
"Here), or to Pimpie. Moreover, it is forbidden to him
"to give advice so that he can accomplish all of this"
"which is prescribed by law, so that it may persist in to his impiety. This was indeed because Daniel had "advised Nebuchadnezzar to give alms, € that he was punished, as is written in his Li-"Vre, etc."

Error upon error! The sanctity of the Holy Scriptures thus becomes the support for the paradoxes of Syna-Gogue? Let us also mention this decision of the Talmudists in the Bava Batra: "The possessions of the goim
"(Christians) are, or should be considered as a "desert, or like the sand of the sea; the first
"The occupant will be its true owner (1)." The rabbi Salomon Jarchi, in his commentary on the Bava
Kama responds in the same way to two goem who, studying Jewish institutions could not understand why the harm done to a Jew by a Gentile must be repaired, whereas the damage is a different matter
Made by a Jew at a go. He reports to them on the docrabbinical court, saying that justice does not allow it.
their documents should have been understood by them, because their documents
the authors had not informed them of the reason;
This means that the property of the goim is free and considered legitimate.
without a master, and that they be awarded to the first Israelite who occupies them.

(1) Pfefferkorn, Dissert, philolog., p. 11.

Rabbi Isaiah, son of Elijah, who lived in the thirteenth century, also wrote in his Commentary on the Avoda Zara: "The Israelite who devoted himself to a foreign cult-ger, must be considered as the min goi, Christian, and thrown into the pit. If he falls into a well, and that we can skillfully ensure that it does not re-Don't go up, let's do it." He adds a little more far away: "If an Israelite circumcises the penis under the name of He can be a proselytizer or a proselytizer, but he is not permitted to do it as a medical operation, then-"that it is forbidden to practice medicine with regard to the Goy, as if to pull him out of the well into which he fell, or to deliver him from any danger whatsoever (1)." This the feelings are always the same: everything must be done the possible harm to the goi. There is even a very re-prayer pandue among the Jews, by which they ask God not to grant forgiveness to the one among Who will give back to the go? Or who will pay him what the go? will have lost (2).

The Synagogue thus demonstrates in its principles, for as regards his religious and civil interests, a shameless and barbaric selfishness. Moreover, in order to inspire to their proselytes a greater attachment to Judaism Daïsm and its maxims, the rabbis promised in at the same time to those who listen to them all sorts temporal advantages that must be provided to them to the detriment of others. Maimonides, whom we have already often cited, gives the following teaching to Chapter X of Pavoda Zara: "When the Israelites prevail over the goem, they are forbidden to let-To be free, none of them among us, even he would only live among us by chance, or that he would have simply been moving from one place to another in a commercial interest. We must therefore not per-to put the passage through our country, that when they will first be subject to the seven precepts given To Noah." This is how the hope of overcoming a The goyim maintain the pride of this nation, which The members, scattered throughout the universe, are exiles without a government or leader. The Jews are the descendants of these heroes who ruled their ceremonies in the time of the Maccabees, and before the conquest of Judea by the Romans. In the treatise Sabbathot of According to the Talmud, they boast of all being sons of kings, so say that the goem, as well as all other nations, are filthy and abominable. Rabbi Samuel does not hesitate no doubt, speaking of the abject state in which he is currently plunged the Jewish people: "We are "Abhorred by everyone, but in our hearts "pride reigns, which makes us place ourselves at- "Above others." They add: "Just as "God is the supreme God, and so is the people of Israel" "is the supreme nation, because God declared it "Superior to all nations on earth." In these thoughts, far from viewing themselves as exiled and like the slaves of the nations in whose midst They live there, they consider themselves soldiers in expedition, encamped in the middle of enemy territory, and at- giving the signal for combat or assault. We find this rabbinical formula in their signatures: "I, Rabbi NN, who am currently based in Hamburg, etc." a formula very naturally derived from this belief that they are the rulers of the world, because of their faith in the Messiah who must subdue all nations.

(1) Cod. vatic. Hebrew. No. 184, p. 63.

(2) Alfonso Spina, lib. III. De bello Judæorum.

J2 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

CHAPTER 33

Rabbi Salomon Gen Sevet himself notes frankly, that the Jew complacently caresses his ideas of pride, and nurtured in his heart a burning desire for domination; forgetting his present condition He no longer thinks he is suffering from the ills of the servitude, and that he is wandering throughout the earth. The day of the Sabbath, these same men, as observed ver Buxtorf (1), take pleasure, while they give themselves up to rest, to be served by the poor and simple Christians whom they make their servants and their servants. And then they boast of having them as slaves and to be served by them. Good conduct in accordance with the doctrine of the Pharisees, their teachers, to whom Our Lord reproaches their pride and their vain hope in a Messiah who will be neither poor nor humble, but proud and independent (2): f'go vent in nomine Patris met, and non accipitis me: si alius venerit in nomine

(1) Jewish Synagogue, chapter 1x.

suo, tllum accipietis. Quomodo vos potestis credere, which gloriam ab invicem accipitis, and gloriam que à solo Deo is not quaeritis? To make this more unshakeable the idea of domination over Christians, they use these prophetic words of Zechariah: Percutiam pastorem, et dispersegentur oves gregis, and claim, as Rabbi Manasseh ben-Israel noted, that This passage should be understood as referring to the Sovereign Pontiff, not... Father and Vicar of Jesus Christ, who must be exterminated with his flock to make way for the Messiah dominator of the universe. The same rabbi (Quest. 1x in Ezekiel), makes every effort to demonstrate that Rome is referred to by the name Edom, and that the Idumeans include the Romans and the Christians. All what the prophets say about the ruin of the Edomites must be understood by the Christians themselves. The Jews do not conceive of no doubt in this regard; for them, the God-terronome says nothing different through the following words: advantages: Fœnerabis gentibus multis, et ipse a nullo accipies mutuum; dominaberis nationibus plurimis, and tibi nemo dominabitur.

There is one point that particularly deserves our attention-tension in the subject at hand. It is a passage from the Talmud which, in its brevity, produced and this product still has very serious consequences for the peoples, or, to put it better, for Christians. We find numerous documents in this regard in a small work by Solomon ben Sevet, which contains the history of the Jews, and especially of those who inhabit-milked Spain before being driven out. We could- One might believe, at first glance, that this work provides rather than giving our opponents arguments to fight the ancient discipline of the Church towards the Jews; But, if we examine these documents carefully, we recognizes that they provide sincere Christians with the most accurate portrayal of Jewish perfidy. The author, The Jew, in fact, wanted to defend his nation against the Christianity, and he only showed its debasement-ment, by making known its prejudices and the perversion- The novel seems to us to be a manifest example of its morality.

CHAPTER 1. 35

in what we read there of the conference of the year 1353, taken before the Sovereign Pontiff, and in which of learned rabbis argued with the neophyte of Holy Faith, whose Hebrew name was Joshua, and whom the Jews called him a blasphemer, since his conversion, by making an anagram of his middle name. The history-Ecclesiastical tradition establishes the period of this controversy. In the year 1412, the eighteenth of the antipope Benedict XII, who resided in Avignon. The specific object of the discussion-Zion was the coming of the Messiah and the Talmud. In not us occupying only the second point, that is to say, the Talmud, we will acquire new evidence of enthusiasm extraordinary for the Jews for this book, in which they place their full trust in him. The novice reproduces the accusations leveled against the Synagogue; he speaks barbaric maxims contained in the Talmud, and he he cites one conceived in few words, but pregnant with serious consequences. Solomon ben Sevet then to speak of the Pontiff as if he were questioning the rabbis Samuel Abrabanel and Solomon Levite. We translate-SOUNDS:

36 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

"Is it true that one reads in your Talmud these parables: Tov shebago'im hergh, that is to say, it is a good deed to kill the seaweed?" - They replied - "rent: That's true, O Supreme Pontiff. We hold from our ancestors believed that everything that belongs to the law and to the exposition of the sacred letters was written by our matrons, among whom is Rabbi Aschav; that the rest was written by commentators to consolidate the thoughts of the first and inserted later in the text of the Talmud. For us, who have received the Talmud in its first redaction, we do little attention was paid to these words." - The Pontiff added: "In any case, they are written in your Talmud, and to prove what you admit, namely, that they were later inserted into the text, he eyewitness accounts or the Demonstrate with obvious reasons. You have, Moreover, to make me understand the true meaning of these words, because, on closer examination, they contain a cruel and bloodthirsty sense, so that the Jews those who inhabit my states, make themselves worthy of a righteous man's punishment."

"The famous Solomon the Levite replied thus: O Pontiffand as they did, from the severe administration of the

CHAPTER 1. 37

"justice as practiced by other nations in the punishment-
"tion of the homicide, and they asserted that it is sim-
"Completely opposed to the overly lenient justice of the Hebrews,
"which often ensured impunity for murderers."
"In effect, before anyone among us is taken to
"For torture, there must be witnesses who had to
"trying to stop the hand of homicide through me-
"naces; moreover, these witnesses must have ob-
"Serving the most minute circumstances, the vestments"
"items, weapons, etc.; otherwise, homicide cannot
"To be punished. The elders assured that the passage which
"This is specifically opposed to this sentiment ma-
"affirmed by some illustrious men, that if we "had we lived in the era of our judges, no one would have
"could have been sentenced to death for homicide, in the "fear that, by chance, the victim had preceded-
"sometimes some illness or received some injury"
It was certainly fatal; it should not have been considered a as if like a dead man; which was to make con-
"to stun the aggressor in turn as if he had not killed" a healthy man, that is to say, truly a man, but "Only a dead bond. Now, among us, whoever "Killing a dying person cannot legally be punished"
"to the ultimate torture."

"The other nations rightly judged that the homici-
"They would gradually multiply if we left it to "This ease and impunity are a crime. If, indeed, he
"it was necessary to subject the crimes to such rigorous examination"

"manifests and the actions of the guilty, these for-8

38 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

"would almost always indulge with impunity in their
"rage and accomplish their sinister designs. It suffices
"Therefore, among other peoples, to have suspicions"
"founded to condemn homicide to death, and to
"To intunate others through his torment. Therefore, one can..."
"to say that there is nothing better among the nations
"that the severe administration of justice and the punishment

"Moreover, the words that are the subject of this discussion"
"cussion should not be taken in an im-
"imperative, as Pierre (the neophyte) heard them,"
"but in an indeterminate sense, that is to say that they "mean that killing is an excellent thing among "The nations or the Christians. There is no com-
"The order to kill, there is only one general formula-
"Rare saying that for the nations it's an excellent
"a thing to kill; so that by examining with at-
"Attention, the passage determined, one will find neither the or-
"The right to kill Christians, nor the harshness and barbarity"
"that one thinks one sees there. On the contrary, one will recognize that "These words are glorious and honorable for the "Christians, since they praise their con"duct; for they say it is an excellent seam-
"It is forbidden among the nations that those who indulge in "the study of virtue and justice should be done on Fridays"
"severe punishments for the scoundrels and condemn them to the last-
"To deny torture."

"The Pontiff replied: If the masters in the doc-
"The doctrines of the Talmud agree in not wanting to be '

CHAPTER I. 39

"To classify as homicide that which the victim could have
"To die beforehand from illness, without a doubt,"
"They all erred and made themselves unworthy of the name of "wise men. Who doesn't understand that there is an ab- opinion here"
"sour and pernicious, which ensures, for the most Is impunity for homicide frivolous?

"Here is the answer of Solomon the Levite: The prophet
"Amos, chap. ut, pronounced this oracle: Tantum vos « cognovi ex omnibus gentibus terræ, idcirco visitabo
"great your iniquitates vestras. The one who escapes
"in the earthly court, and is not punished in this
"The world will certainly not escape the tribunal"
"Heavenly. Our fathers taught us that those who are "Those punished in this world fully atone for their sins,"
"and that those who avoid earthly justice cannot
"avoid that of heaven, and only fall into "Greater evils after this life." DS

"The Pontiff replied again: This reasoning has "some value. However, it is necessary that the "Human justice may be exercised in this life, so that "The fear of punishment keeps men from-

What trick and what deceit are you talking about?
Jews! They boldly substitute falsehood for truth.
Moreover, the following lyrics: The best among "The butchers are the companions of Amalek, they cannot"
"to be repeated by them in our praise, but rather to to our shame; as well as the DAR0ISS indicated:
"Tov shebayoim herogh, etc. »

40 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

We don't need to follow this any further.
long dispute between the good novice Pierre and the rabbis. Who does not see, in the studied responses of Jews, subtle evasions with which they seek-try to escape the accusation that is being leveled against them
The passage that was just mentioned? It is not difficult for a man of good sense and some knowledge in the way Jews explain the ancients writings, to find in this passage a completely different
The meaning that they attached to it with their sophisms
the above-named doctors of the Synagogue, obli-to resort to another paradox to exonerate the Text from the Talmud.

The words of the novice Peter are significant and conclusive. He only entered the Church of Christ a-after having convinced himself of the falsity of the Synagogue and its injustices towards Christian society;
Having entered this Church, where everything is truth and sincerity, would he have wanted, as would the other Jews who converted to Christianity, accusing one's brothers of such a blatant prejudice-bare, if in reality the words of the Talmud had not Did this interpretation deserve it? We will, moreover, confirm the truth of the accusation by examining, at the light of Hebrew grammar, the meaning of the words Tov shebagoim herogh.

The word haragh, meaning to kill, to devastate, is constructed with the absolute noun; and, when speaking of a person, it re-most often, the lamed or the beth is added to the name.
It is with this last prefix, the beth, that, in the second book of Paralipomena, chap. xxxv, v. 6, and In Psalm 78, according to the Hebrew, he offers complete-the meaning of devastating, of causing carnage among the

CHAPTER I. | A1

The rigorous interpretation of the Talmudic sentence is: It is a good thing to slaughter the goyim (Christians). How can one not see in this sentence a conform-perfect friendship with the prophetic words of Jesus-Christ in the Gospel: Venit hora, ut omnis qui interficit vos arbitrator obsequium se præstare Deo (1)? How can one not see in these words the cherem and Fanatical calls for extermination pronounced by the Synagogue against the Christian Church? How could it not be? to see these vows made every day by the Jews for The arrival of the day of their glory, which will see the fulfillment of To perpetuate this extermination of Christians? We quote- We will look further at examples of the execution of this sentence, either by reporting what was decided by the Sanhedrin of Jerusalem against the followers of the Savior, a decision that Saint Paul zealously carried out during- that it still belonged to the Synagogue, either in reporting what Barcochébas recommended to Jews to do about Christians who would not deny not Christ, etc.; and these examples will confirm am- simply the accuracy of the interpretation we have just to give.

Rabbi Solomon Jarchi, in his Commentaries

(1) Joan., cap. xvr, 2.

49 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

on the book of Exodus, gives us an explanation in accordance with what we have said, although in a In a less broad sense: "The best among the Nazarenes" "homicides," he said. In another edition, it reads Miniim instead of Vazaréens. The Miniim or Minée, as I have noted elsewhere, according to the authority of this Even Jarchi and Maimonides agree on the Christians. hold on or disciples of Jesus who have perverted the words of the living God. Let us say here, once and for all, that notwithstanding the denials of some modern Jews and their apparent sincerity, the Jews apply to Christians, the contemptuous terms miniim, goim, of epicureans, idolaters, donkeys, and other words of the same kind types of devices designed to cleverly take shelter attacks from their opponents (1). The expression goi, used throughout history to distinguish the people from breu of other nations, applies more specifically among their Christian people, who could not and cannot to be a chosen people for the Synagogue.

Abbot Chiarini, in his studies on the Talmud of Babylon (2), found that the name miniim indicated, in the mouths of the Jews, the Manicheans or the heretics, the Sadducees, and the Christians. The latter, Although of Jewish origin, they denied it, according to the Taliban. the unity of God and the divinity of the oral law. Speaking tosephoth, additions made to the Talmud, in which-

(1) Bartolucci, Library. rabbi., part 1, p. 308; leave III, p.319, 365, 367. Salomon ben Scvet, translated by Genti, p. 226,327.
(2) Chiarini, part. 1, p. 304.

CHAPTER I. 43

We read: "Although the Minim (Christians) and the Trat-
"Those (baptized Jews) must be thrown into a well,"
"and that it is not permitted to derive them from it, that is to say-
"extends with the hand of man, and not with the hand of "God, because we are not used to asking God"
"to punish and destroy them;" Abbot Chiarini re-
This suggests that it's as if the Hebrew author were saying:
We cannot ask God to exterminate the miniim (Christians), but it is permitted for Jews to become the instruments of this extermination. It is said, in the Babylonian Talmud (Tractate Berachoth), qw'Elie Passing by a synagogue one day, he saw an Arab who prayed without turning his face towards her. Elijah said to him:
a Do you really believe there are two gods, to dare to res-
"Do you want to stand before your Lord like this?" And saying this, he He killed him. It is for a similar reason that the authors from the other Talmud, the Jerusalem Talmud, applaud to the homicide committed by Moses, and they conclude that we must follow his example every time it comes to of an idolater or of a man who is not a Jew (1).
All of this increasingly confirms intolerance and barbaric prejudice which dominates the Synagogue, persuading telling the Jews that it is permitted and even meritorious, as Our Lord foretold, to condemn to death and the massacre of Christians, as forming a people opposed to them by doctrines, and who constitutes the biggest obstacle to their claims.

(1) Chiarini, the Babylonian Talmud translated, vol. I, leaves. I, p. 297.

Christians, according to them, must always be... derelict like beasts of burden and not like men; also, we read in the Babylonian Talmud:
"The Lord," said Simon Ben-Jochai, "the Lord"
"Ezekiel has designated you: You are
"my flock and the flock of my people, that is to say-
"to say, you are men, while the others
"The peoples of the world are not men, but "animals (1)."

There is a dialogue between the Jew Versorius and Alphonsus, king of Spain, which has been transmitted to us by Solomon ben Sevet, already mentioned, and who still makes more evident the Jewish perfidy, by clearly showing-The barbarity of prejudice is a tragedy for a Christian.
of the Hebrew people (2). In this dialogue, the king Alphonse questions the Jew Versorius about these words spoken by the Jews in their prayers solemn: May God destroy the kingdom as soon as possible proud, and by which they alluded to the destruction of the Christian empire by their hands. The
The meaning of these words could not be otherwise, Alphonse
They reproach them for this ill will towards Christians
Well, even since he tolerated them in his kingdom.

Versorius naturally looks for an excuse; he ef-
the power to give a different meaning to the alleged words,
And he replies: "O king, by these words: may God destroy The sooner the proud kingdom, we must hear the

(1) Bartolceci, part. JIE, p. 555.

(2) Historia judaica, a Gentio edita, p. 845.

CHAPTER I. 43

kingdom of the Amalekites, which was occupied by the Hebreux according to the Lord's command. All this nation must be exterminated, as it is written in Deuteronome, chap. xxv: Delebis memoriam Amalech sub caelo; cave ne obliviscaris, etc. »

We ask this of every person of good faith:
Is Versorius's answer acceptable? Isn't it rather one of those rabbinical evasions, of which we Have we already set such a remarkable example? Who might not see, in such a childish response, further proof of this Jewish perfidy which,

Victorious Christianity, tries to make people believe in Christians, and claims that his prayers are intended to demand the ruin of a kingdom destroyed long ago—time, and whose memory is completely switched off? Would you believe that the Hebrews are foolish enough to asking God for the downfall of a nation like that of Amalekites, whose total ruin dates back nearly Three thousand years? What! The Jews of Spain and of other countries, in the Middle Ages, begged God to overthrow the proud kingdom of Amalek, which did not exist was it no longer? In truth, Versorius's answer is not that a new act of perfidy to escape the accusation, made by King Alfonso and by the all of Christendom against the Synagogue, to dear—to bring about the ruin of Christians by sending vows of continuels to heaven so that he might deign to hasten their downfall by the very hands of the Jews.

46 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

Hypocrisy is another vice. Pharisaical against the—Our Lord particularly exalted himself. Saint Matthew, in chapter 23 of his Gospel, explains the numerous reasons that the divine Master had for their re—to bring this vice closer to their relationships with men, and the kind of zeal with which they cultivated it. The re—The account of the facts, which we will present shortly, will show to what extent to the point they were given to hypocrisy, a vice so prejudiced decimable to society, and how true is this word of the Gospel: Dicunt enim et non faciunt. Waiting for, we will present some passages from the Talmudists who approve of hypocrisy, which is perfect—in accordance with Pharisaic doctrine, in the cases where some advantage can be found, or when subject to fearing some damage, some weakness whatever the reason for this fear, that is to say that the Talmudists do not hesitate to allow, for a slight motive for gain, which they consider criminal in other circumstances. Rabbi Ascher, folio 81, speaking of the the way of life of the Jews among the Gentiles, called open—the fact that one can, in view of some gain, neglect the defenses put forward by the rabbis. Hypocrisy is on—every employee in the obligatory relationships that the Jews have with the Christians: thinking only of deceiving them and to harm them, they do not hesitate to resort even to flattery to achieve their goal. Therefore, they do not hesitate to Don't they appreciate the protestations of loyalty, friendship, and kindness and sympathy, and they are so convinced that they will thus inspire confidence in Christian righteousness hold on and will make her fall into their nets, which they have recommended this diabolical art in their books. the Marginal Additions to the Talmud, the rabbis they object and say, "We can still "we will try our hand at the passage from the Jerusalem Talmud" "relating to the words of the Mishnah which prohibit the "Commerce. Indeed, it asks: To whom are they addressing themselves?" "These words from the Mishnah? And the answer is that they re- "They keep the goy, which the Jew does not know. From which one "concludes that it is permissible to trade with a "pagan that we know, because the Jew can the-flat- "ter. There is yet another tradition. If a He- "Breu enters a city and finds there goim in "Joy, he will share in their joy, because in them" "Feeling this way, he will gain their favor." The Rabbi Ascher, quoted above, gives a reason for reject the precept of the rabbis in order that the le- gistes call lucrum cessans. "One can still say, "He writes, that our existence depends on the goëm, "and that, having to trade with them during "All year round, we would expose ourselves to their hatred, if "We parted from them on their holidays." Davity, for his part, in his general description of Asia provides clear evidence of this hypocrisy. which relies on the authority of the rabbis. According to him, it is a maxim received among the rabbis that it is permitted for the Jews to feign the profession of Christianity or of Islam, or of some other religion, when their interests demand it, provided, however, that their inner will is to die in the bosom of the Synagogue.

48 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

Among the other doctrines taught in the Syna- Gogue, one must still admire the belief in magic and the practice of this occult science. This belief and these practices, like all others, go back in time. to the sect of the Pharisees, as Saint [name] remarks Epiphanius, who makes known, by examining the maxi- - the members of this sect, how they taught and how they- where they professed the belief in the influence of stars. That's why they had imposed on the stars of Hebrew names corresponding to the different say that all the members of the great Sanhedrin of Jerusalem had been instructed in the art of magic. According to them, moreover, the patriarch Abraham was a necromancer who taught his art to the sons of his concubines. David, like Abraham, was an astrologer and magician. Abraham Zacut writes about culture of this art in the Synagogue: "I have been in the kingdom of Spain and other Christian kingdoms of-

 "Then my works on astrology were published. And Everyone applauded Abraham Zacut, originally from "Salamanca. And I am permitted to boast about it," "as our scholars of happy memory have said.
 "What then is the science by which men of-"
 "Do they become famous in the eyes of the people?" they said "That it is the skill to discern the course of the stars. And"
 "I, before the Lord, testify that they praised

CHAPTER 1. 49

"Many thanks to Israel for this study. And all my attention-"
 "tion was heading to hear the words of the scholars and
 "The comments they wrote on this subject."
 Rabbi Akiba says, in the tractate Sabbath:
 "The angel of death (who is Azrael) taught again has some traditions to Moses, as it is written in "the Torah: Dedit spiritum, etc. – The rabbis in-
 "They bleed during Passover so that no one should "drinking water on the night of the fourth day, nor
 "in that of the Sabbath; if anyone drinks of it, let his "Blood be upon his head." And this, because of the danger that there is in this action. What is this danger? They re-
 They believe it comes from the devil, etc. Here is another one of their prescriptions: "No one shall drink the water of the "rivers or ponds. If anyone drinks from them, let his "Blood be upon his head." The Talmudists say, in the Bava kama: K When plague reigns in a
 "In the city, no one should enter the Synagogue alone-
 "gue, in fear of the angel of death who de"lays down his arms." They also claim that the
 The plaintive howls of dogs announce the arrival of the angel of death; that the laughter of these animals announces-one hundred the arrival of Elijah provided, however, that there is no not a female among them. Rabbi Simeon ben Jochai said: "When the woman's head is cut off-
 In the green area, evil spirits arrive and take up residence.
 "and they ruin everything in their hands"
 "Its sound." We read in the Tractate Chelech: "It is permitted to consult the spirits of the oil and the spirits of:

50 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

"eggs (1); however, one should not consult the de-"Mons on the Sabbath day." Then comes this gloss from Rabbi Solomon, that they act in this way when they have
They have lost something, and they should consult the authorities about it.
demons by means of certain artifices: these re-
They lay the eggs by indicating where the lost item is.
Demons were given different names on this occasion.

Rabbi Elias Tesbita (2) asserts that women Jewish women once asked the elders of the Synagogue-
It was a joke that their little children were dying.
before the eighth day since their circumcision. The an-
The people replied that they had been killed by the witch.
Lilit. It is to avoid this misfortune that women Jewish women trace names and cabalistic characters in the corners of their houses and rooms.
Let us note, regarding these names and characters of Hebrew origin, which, since the time of Origen and From Saint Augustine to the present day, we see in use among the Jews certain inscriptions containing similar characters, expressing the different names of the Divinity and the angels, and interspersed with signs of the divine.
trological; which agrees with what we have as mentioned above, of the Pharisees devoted to this study.
They believed that the stars had a certain influence on the course of nature, and that all this what happens, good or bad, to human society must to be attributed to their movements. All the books

(1) Raimondo Martini, in the book Pugio fidei.

(2) Del Rio, lib. HT, quæst. [.

CHAPTER 1. 51

Kabbalistic texts compiled by the Jews at various periods of their existence contain more or less traces of these superstitions.

But what should inspire the most astonishment and of horror, among all these magical operations con-to deviate from the pure doctrine of the Gospel, that is the in-the calling of infernal spirits. And the Jews did not a means of honest acts and innocent sacrifices, this which would have been a lesser evil; they implemented barbaric acts, impure, insulting ceremonies his to God and to reason, and most of the time for immoral, unjust, and execrable ends (1). This will established by the monuments that history has bequeathed to us served, to convince those who might doubt that We are moving forward.

For the moment, it suffices for us to note that these invocations also originated from the school the Pharisees. The accusation they brought against Jesus The Lord Christ makes this very clear. As they could not-would deny the obvious miracle that had taken place before their very eyes. They said it was through the invocation of Beelzebub, prince of demons, whom Jesus drove out evil spirits taken from the bodies of the possessed, thus indicating the power-the knowledge they attributed to the conspiracies made in the name of the prince of darkness: Hic non ejicit dæmones nisi in Beelzebub_ principle dæmoniorum (2). These practices

(1) Martin Del Rio, lib. II, quæst. in.

(2) Matthew, chapter x11, 24.

52 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

were in use among the Pharisees, despite the prohibition repeated by God, who had repeated, through the mouth of Moses, that no kind of evil should be tolerated among the Hebrews: Maleficos non patieris vivere (1).

We won't go any further, so as not to offend the The reader's chaste ears. Impurities must be silenced. the filth and obscenities stirred up among the masters of the Synagogue and scattered here and there in the Talmud. More often than not, they dare to rely on the divine Scriptures, by supporting their filthy documents trines of words or examples of the venerable patriarchs and prophets. Thus opens a wide field to their own corruption and that of the persons-those who have the misfortune to associate with them. In order, moreover-their, to attract more surely to these disorders, they formaintain as much as they can this false idea that the the most perverse thoughts, when they are only in the will, without acting on it, do not constitute not a crime before God. Jesus Christ reproached them. already holds this disastrous opinion: Quia omnis who empties rit mulierem ad concupiscendam eam, jam mæchatus est said among their descendants by means of the Talmud.

The same must be said of hatred. Our Lord introduced us to the strange idea that the Synagogue love and hate were exchanged, putting their disciples warn against this false maxim of the pha-

"(1) Exod., cap. xxn, 18.

(2) Math., chap. v, 28.

CHAPTER I. D3

risiens: Diliges primum tuum, et odio habebis inimicum tuum (1). Despite the very just condemnation of this Maxime, the Pharisaic school continued to hate without distinguishes his enemies. And this is so true, as the Facts demonstrate that Rabbi Johanan said, in The Talmud, in the name of Rabbi Simeon ben Josedesh: "Any learned disciple who does not seek and do not practice- "does not seek revenge, and does not keep his "hatred, like the serpent, cannot be considered a "Excellent rabbi (2)."

We must also point out, among the injustices reproached by Our Lord to the Pharisees, their doctrine on oath. The people, educated in their school, Jesus had to swear an oath without any qualms of conscience. warned his disciples against this ease and this habit of swearing: "Do not swear at all, he told them (3), not by heaven, because it is the "the throne of God, nor by the earth, because it is his "footstool, nor through Jerusalem, because it is the "city of the sovereign king, etc." He adds in another Place: "Woe to you, blind drivers who "Say: Whoever swears by the Temple, it is not "nothing (that is, will have no effect); but whoever "will swear by the gold of the Temple, will be bound to fulfill "His oath." Jesus strongly disapproves of these interruptions. the pronouncements of the Pharisees, who thus sought to cover up to cover their iniquities with a cloak, considering these oaths as worthless; that is why he recommends to his disciples not to perform sworn ly, and to reject this doctrine of the Pharisees, if contrary to justice. The masters of the Synagogue persisted in these opinions, which were harmful to society. Maimonides writes, in chapter 1v of the Shabaoth: "If "Someone swears by heaven, by the sun, etc., when "even if his mind could hear beneath these objects "He who created them did not take an oath." In the Talmudic book entitled Nedarim, the Jews They claim that it is permissible to pay by promises. and oaths from those who collect taxes.

(1) Matthew, chapter 5, 43.

(?) Bartolucci, Biblioth. rabbi., part. 1], p. TTA
6 Matt., cap. v, 34; and Cap. XXHI.

Without dwelling on these vague and subtle interpretations, it is important to note their firm belief that God cancels on the day of X?ppur or their expiation, the oath sworn in favor of someone, Even so, we wouldn't have accomplished everything we have I swear. This is proven by the prayer they offer on this day. there in the presence of the Divinity, and which begins thus: Omnia vote, pacta, juramenta, etc. You hear that all vows are nullified by this prayer all the agreements, all the oaths of loyalty that they may have violated or failed to accomplish during the year previous; that they can no longer be attributed to them to sin, but that they are entirely forgiven without that there is no compensation to be established for the dom- the magic that can result. In this belief, at instead of seeing each other as criminals and par-

CHAPTER I. 55

They swear, they are convinced of their innocence and their sincerity. Add to that the fact that the Jew has a formula particular, accompanied by various external acts to pronounce an oath: the Christian who is not Aware of these details, he believes in the oath, while The Jew swore an unscrupulous oath contrary to the truth. Maimonides and Rabbi Moses Cozzen propose a large number of these detours and sub- uses to deliver their coreligionists from the obligation- to uphold their oaths. Thus, in the night preceding the festival of Aeippur, they declare that all the times that in the following year they will be obliged to If you make a vow or an oath, it will have to be looked at as worthless and will not be attributable to pe- He came to the Synagogue in the presence of their Rabbis, they hold in their hands the book of the law

"etc., I declare before God and before you that all "the oaths I will make to someone during the year-
"born soon, and which I will have promised to observe,
"while my will will not consent to them"
"Server, I want them to be null and void, and of no value and
"not attributable to sin, if I do not perform them."
That is why the learned neophyte Pfefferkorn, examining the doctrine of the Synagogue, within the-
which he was born in, he wrote: "It sometimes happens that a A debate arises between a Christian and a Jew regarding
"of a pledge, a loan, a fixed period or of has something else important, so that, in

56 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

"In the absence of evidence, the Jew is forced to swear ser-
"He lies according to the rites of his religion. He does not..."
"no difficulty, and he swears, although intimately con-
"defeated, he swears a false oath, and he does not fear
"No God avenges perjury. If by chance he re-
"The urge to take the oath, that does not come from his "love for justice or for truth, but of the "fear of being severely punished if one were to do it"
"To convict of false oath. Therefore, the Jews have not..."
"Neither religion nor faith in their oaths."

We don't need to extend this chapter, speaking of divorce, a point on which the Jews have so misinterpreting the precepts of the Law of Moses, in order to to accommodate them to their passions, as well as Jesus-Christ reproached them for it (1); we will not speak more of the many customs introduced to them more for superstitious reasons than for good reasons. We have said enough to conclude that the the current doctrine of the Synagogue is not that of Pentateuch, but that it is a reform made by the Pharisaical sect, and arranged to satisfy the pas-
We were doing this, to the great detriment of the people. Our Lord Jesus Christ, as we have noticed, multiplied the reproaches in this regard. Buxtorf, whom we have pleased-cited several times, thus concludes his examination of the system of Jewish legislation (2): "The Christian reader "will understand, according to what we have said so far-

(1) Matthew, chapter 5.

(2) Synagog. judaic., cap. xxxvI.

It was here that the Jews laid the foundations of their "belief and their entire religion, not on the the books of Moses, but on false traditions, "false and frivolous tales of the rabbis and on the fables of rab- "Told by these seducers. Christians must not "so not to say that the Jews are firmly attached to "The Law of Moses." Rabbi Elias Levita confesses to engineering- nument that the current system of judicial legislation Daigue is based on the doctrine of the Pharisees. Pfefferkorn, Victor de Cobden, Jerome de Sainte-Foi, etc., who, raised up by divine grace, left the Synagogue to embrace Christianity, and which were well acquainted with Talmudic doctrines, have con- it has been statistically affirmed and demonstrated that modern Jews not only abandoned the law of Moses by their oral doctrines and their capricious inter- benefits, but which they have further introduced within the Synagogue of maxims entirely opposed to Mosaicism and natural reason. Adrien Fini counts twelve dogmas of the Pharisees refuted by Our Lady Lord in the Gospel as contrary to the spirit the laws of Moses and the law of nations, and he adds that This doctrine has persisted to this day among all the Jews scattered throughout the world (1).

Lightfoot writes in the preface to his Zorae hebraicae and Talmudicae: "It is by studying the traditional laws- "news of the Jews, that we learn to what extent they have "They distorted the law of Moses; how much they added to it!"

(1) Lib. 1X, cap. nr.

58 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

"purely human traditions, as well as their re- "so vividly close to Jesus Christ in several ways" "Rights of the Gospels." Schickard, Bubl , The Emperor, and other learned legal scholars, who have seriously studied the doctrine of the Mishnah and the Talmud, organs of the Jewish tradition, rejected this doctrine as opposed to the law of Moses and to natural law (4).

However, to avoid the objections that one might to do this, we must insist on one point of the law- legislation of modern Judaism, that is to say on the way of accomplishing what it prescribes, especially Talmudic and Pharisaic morality as practiced by the Jews among themselves, it is different when it is practiced. between a Jew and a person not belonging to the Synagogue—Modern philosophers refuse to recognize—this difference in morality within the doctrine of the Synagogue, as they refuse to believe that the got for the Talmudists the same as for the Christians, and want this word to apply only to idolaters. And yet, if one pays attention to the con—such a striking tradition between Christian institutions and Jewish, to the complete opposition that is found between the maxims and tendencies of doctrines, fau—Will he do so many studies to understand the hatred im—A placeable vow made by the Jew to the Christian? Isn't that it? the antagonism that exists between Jesus Christ and the pha—Risian? Could the Jew be more of an enemy of the idolater?

(1) Surenhus., t. IV in Misna, of the Muslim, or any other member of another: Religion, that he is not a Christian? We have already noted; the facts we will cite make the de—Complete demonstration. To return to the moral of the story practiced by Jews towards foreigners, it is It is certain that the Talmudists do not consider it to be the same way as morality among Jews. What is condemned as a fault among Jews, is no longer that a permissible act, an act of virtue, when it comes to of a Christian or a man of another religion. The In this regard, there is no doubt for anyone who recalls the reproaches addressed to the Pharisees by Jesus Christ, and these words of Tacitus on the Jews: “frga suos misericordia in promptu, adversus alios hostile odium.

CHAPTER I. 59

The Mishnah tractate that we have often cited, Avoda Zara or De cultu peregrino, composed around the end of the second century of the Christian era, com—commented on by other rabbis during the course of the qua—The third and fifth, published in the Talmud with other similar treaties, and discussed, subsequently, by the doctors of the Synagogue, ranked among the goim all nations whose religion is opposed to Jewish worship, and he specifically mentions the reli—Christian church as being the most widespread of all among these goyim. Maimonides, who lived in the com—in his commentary on the Avoda Zara, at the cha-Chapter 1: "This is the basis of the law relating to

60 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

"This leads to idolatry. None of us should worship the "created things, neither angels, nor planets, nor the "stars, nor any of the four elements, nor anything
"something else composed of it. And, although that "Whoever honors these things knows that they are not
"God, and worships them only in the manner of Enos and of "his contemporaries, however, it must be called
"Idolatry." We know the period in which Maimonide; we know what the situation of the Church was at that time Christian, and the ardent animosity of Judaism against Christianity, in this century and in the centuries before, cedents: that would therefore be a ridiculous assumption and contrary to common sense, to suppose that the famous the rabbi did not want to talk about Christianity in his discussions about the goyim, and in comments silences that so clearly demonstrate his intolerance to regarding our religion. Will it even remain the there is no doubt, if one observes, with Georges Edgard, in his discussions on the Avoda Zara, that Maimonides, in other places, formally applied they referred to the Christians as goyim, saying that they _they are no less idolatrous than other goim, what-
That they might have different opinions? That was the common thought of the members of the Synagogue an-technical and modern.

Those who argued that the morality of the Jews is the same with regard to others as with regard to each other, they have based on the word gherim which, according to them, designates the goyim, Christians, pagans or others; for the gherim,

CHAPTER 1. 61

According to the doctrine of the Synagogue, they must be con-_stunned and treated exactly like the Jews themselves-same. We reply that the Tslmudists do not understand-neither Christians nor followers of the other religions, but certainly the proselytizers of Judaism, that is, those who embraced the worship of Israel in renouncing idolatry, those who must to be regarded and treated as brothers, according to the prescriptions of the Law of Moses. The author of the book

"In words, to the foreigner. The foreigner is "A pagan who, having become a proselyte, adopted our laws."
Maimonides, in his book De venditione, confirms the accuracy of this definition. The objection that we
The opposite falls by itself.

Let us listen, moreover, to a dialogue reported in the book entitled Fortalitium fidei, and attributed to Alphonsus Spina. We find there the confirmation of everything that We have said so far. In this dialogue, a Jew ex.
He thus lays out the dogmas of his religion: "I believe that he
"There is only one God in heaven, whom I worship, from whom I await..."
"the good of my soul, and the reward of those who They belong to the same law and the same faith. I believe "also that I am permitted to take life, to take away his "property, his friend, his wife and his parents, to anyone
"has a different faith. I believe, moreover, that I am
"a cursed man if I keep my word to him, if I help him"
"in something, or if I use compassion for his

"In this regard." These principles are so deeply rooted in 4

62 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

the spirit of the Jews and instilled from the earliest age fn, that they renounced Christ because they persuaded that the intolerance they practiced to with regard to other peoples, concerning the religion, would be practiced towards them by these people.
That is why they instituted rules of preclairvoyance applicable to the reports they could to have with the goyim among whom they live. He We will simply need to take a few examples from the Mishna, to the book, Avoda Zara. Here is a prescription Synagogue teachers: "It is not permitted to "a Jewish woman to breastfeed the children of idolaters," a because it would be feeding them for the worship of "idols, and that it would be better, in this case, to leave them-
"To die. But it is permitted for a pagan woman
"to breastfeed the children of Jews, provided that it
"do it in the family home, under the watchful eyes of the "Mother, in order to prevent the wet nurse (pagan) from
"to kill children. We must not allow the "idolaters of being the doctors of the Jews; it is not necessary, in "Under no circumstances should you use barbers or hairdressers."
"Goyim. However, it could be done in a place
" audience. "

After all these reflections on the legislative system of the condemned Synagogue, Baronet Sir Robert Peel and Will those who share his opinion still be able to to argue that the dactylus of the Israelites did not evaporate the memory of its first and divine institution since Peach- the era of Our Lord Jesus Christ? Will they say that she is none other than that which is contained in the writings of Moses? And if this doctrine is received and adopted among Jews with a respect, if not superior, to less than or equal to that which they have for ancient mosaic art, what impression must it not make on the mind of all Jews, raised with these ideas, nourished by these Maxims taught from their earliest childhood? by fathers to their children with all the strength of Religious prestige, do these ideas not form, They have, so to speak, a second nature? They have all the more more strength, that they flatter self-esteem, that they favor the desires of corrupt human nature by original sin, and especially greed and... gueil: avarice, because the Jews believe they can to deceive Christians with impunity; pride, because that they believe themselves to be God's chosen people and superior to other nations. Add to that an in- vindictive and a blind hatred against Jesus and those who they adore, because it is in the Christians that they see the biggest obstacle to their ambitious projects tieux. It is in view of this strange aberration of the The Synagogue and the Pharisees, the cause of ruin future of the entire Jewish nation, -may Our Lord He reproached them for having abandoned the faith of Abraham, and pronounced against them this terrible sentence, cha- Their incredulity: Your ex patre diabolo estis, and desideria patris vestri vultis facere. Ille homicide erat ab initio, et in veritate non stetit, quia non est veritas in eo; cum loquitur mendacium,

CHAPTER I. 63

Gi THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

ex propriis loquitur, quia mendax est et pater ejus (1). Finally, the most serious of all prejudices of the Synagogue, and what makes it so under all the rap- ports so dangerous for Christian society, it is the general opinion held by the rabbis and that they instill in the minds of their followers beliefs about hell,

Talmudic traditions about paradise, purga-Regarding the concept of hell and hell, the Jews do not hesitate to say what are those who will be punished with eternal fire (2). They-
 They are mentioned in the Rosh Hashanah book of the Talmud:
 "The miniim, that is to say the Christian pagans, the he-"Retics, traitors, apostates, and Epicureans,"
 "who denied the law and the resurrection of the dead, and have "abandoned the precepts of the Synagogue, those who "have sown terror in the land of the living"
 "in the midst of Israel, those who have sinned and incited the "others to sin, like Jeroboam, son of Nebat, and "His idolatrous companions, all of them will descend
 "in hell and will be condemned by all the ge-
 "nations, as Isaiah says: f'ë egredientur et
 "videbunt cadavera eorum, etc. (3)." Apart from pe-Jews do not recognize the aforementioned [religious authorities].
 which deprive them of God's grace and deserve to be punished by eternal fire. All other sins, whatever-However serious they may be, they must, according to them, be

L

- (1) Joan., cap. vin, #4.
- (2) Bartolucci, Biblioth. rabbin., t. 11, p. 143, 157, 158.
- (3) Cap. cxvr, 24.

CHAPTER I. 65

expiated in purgatory, and still the time of Vexpiation must not last more than twelve months.

In the book Sanedrim, the rabbis proclaim that All Jews will be saved in the afterlife. That's it.
 for them an article of faith, a dogma generally accepted, that the rabbis never cease to preach to their brothers, and to present to them as a special favor of God towards them. Resch Lachis supports this with his own...
 To the truth of what we say, in the book Chaghiga:
 "Hellfire," he said, "does not affect children."
 a of Israel who have transgressed, this results from what is said of the golden altar. Just as the golden altar, what-that the blades of this metal were no more than one a gold coin, withstood the fire for so many years,
 "Likewise, and all the more so, the children of Israel who They are full of precepts like the pomegranate of "The grains will be preserved from the fire." Such is the privilege.
 the law which these fools believe they should enjoy, in their quality of being God's chosen people, while the others nations, and especially Christians, will be condemned these crazy thoughts that rabbis flatter their brothers and that they strengthen them more and more in their prejudices. They thus leave, as a consequence legitimate, the widest field open to all companies that can harm Christians; nothing can no longer hold the Jews back: the moral order and Civil life is in turmoil. The ancient synagogue is no more. recognizable, the legislation of Moses is annihilated, and

&.

66 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

Our Lord's well-justified sentence: "After and having closed the kingdom of heaven to men, they They do not enter themselves, and they do not allow "Let others enter."

We have briefly outlined the main features from the Pharisaic and Talmudic school; we have showed this school in its true light. Who wouldn't will see, in this scattered nation in accordance with ancient prophecies, a people gripped by delirium pride, abandoned by God, blinded by an am- a slur that can only be satisfied through ruin of others? Who would not recognize in this obvious proof? the tooth of evangelical truth and the vanity of Jewish doctrines? That's what Isaiah had predicted: Excave- cavit oculos eorum et induravit cor eorum, ut non vi- deant oculis, and not intelligent chord, and convertantur and sanem eos (1). We say it openly: That for- good things would be expected from such a people, and the Christian cause yours, and a society of men reputed to be abominable by the Jews, as much as Jesus Christ and the Apostles in the eyes of the Pharisees, including the Jews of today are the legitimate descendants, as they have he- sharing the same ideas, the same opinions and Same trends?

But let's get to the facts: they will show, up to the evidence, the truth of what we say.

(1) Joan., cap. xu, 40; Isa., cap. vi, 10.

CHAPTER II

Theft, sacrilege, bad faith and crimes of all kinds including the
The synagogue is guilty of following the doctrines Talmudic or traditional, as we have done to emerge in the previous chapter, and considered under the dual relationship between religion and politics.

It would be insufficient to have presented the documents so far Jewish customs as recorded in the books of the Synagogue, and regarded by it as sacred and divine, therefore worthy of belief and respect; it would be insufficient for us to have seen the Jews could explain these doctrines, if the acts had not re-laid eggs and did not respond to the words. It is here that, in accordance with the plan we have set for ourselves-Having settled in, we will, pen in hand, explore the splendors of history throughout the centuries since Jesus-Christ down to us, to ascertain the agreement that has existed
the tension between religious and civic ideas and conduct Jews in the midst of Christian societies.

But before undertaking this examination, we pray our readers should remember what our opponents said res, and in particular, MM. Maxime d'Azeglio and Sir Ro-

63 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

Bert Peel. The first, in his pamphlet (1), begins Thus: "The emancipation of the Israelites, the end of this
"a long and painful series of sufferings, of ou-
"tragedies, insults, injustices they had to suffer"
"for so many centuries, not according to inspiration,
"but on the contrary in clear violation of the principle
"Christian, and as a result of blindness, prejudices,
"of ignorance, too often even by virtue of "causes even harder to excuse, the emancipation-
"tion, I say, etc." Further on, the same writer (p. 36), admitting only with some doubt the guilt of Jews in certain acts of violence, does not make it difficult-
It is important to add that the blame for these crimes is attributed to vulnerable to Christians and the persecutions they inflicted to suffer the Jews.

Sir Robert Peel is even more frank about it and less reserve. Speaking before a nominal assembly
He concludes his speech here (2): "I want here
"to perform an act which is not, however, imposed on me-
"Yes, like that of forgiving anyone who..."
"They were offended, but it was an equally sacred act in fact of o-

"Hand, that of forgiving those we have "Offended."

Let us make one more brief observation; namely, that the sentiments expressed by the two statesmen that We have just mentioned those that we also find

- (1) Civil emancipation of Israel. Florence, 1848.
- (2) See the Times of February 12, 1848.

CHAPTER II. 69

we will see in the book devoted by Gioberti to the apology of his Modern Jesuit, and of so many other regenerators members of human society, sentiments that a multitude of people seduced to the point of fanaticism welcomed with Unspeakable applause. We will not, however—and no less calm in our response.

After Judea had heard Jesus' message —
Christ, the fullness of time, when was to appear world, the messenger of God for the salvation of humankind, after the prophecies that pointed to him had been accomplished on Calvary, then began a new era, a messenger of peace for Israel and for all the nations of the globe. A prodigious re—
This evolution was taking place in the minds of men through this event; simultaneously giving rise to this Church which today exerts its power over the world whole and will exercise it until the end of time, she will re—was born in a single body and in the same feeling religious the Jew and the Gentile, the Greek and the Barbarian; a The same hope animated all these peoples and led them to the conquest of eternal salvation.

Unfortunately, an unworthy fanaticism had taken hold.
adorned with a large part of Israel, and had stirred up a furious opposition against a Restaurateur whose characters did not correspond to the idea that many People had made their feelings about it. This opposition, led by the nation's own leaders, once it had risen up against He contested and denied his heavenly mission, despite the most obvious signs brought by himself to with fervor he and all those who invoked and confessed his holy name; and the rigors extended everywhere, as far away as could be felt moral and material strength of the opponents.

That's when the perfi-Pharisaical death; this is the starting point of these crimes and of those abominations with which the Synagogue has defiled itself bound to the face of the world, obeying a false zeal, to a cruel spirit of intolerance against anyone who renounced to Judaism or idolatry to take refuge under the e-standard of the cross.

Indeed, only a few days had passed since-then the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ, which the fire of persecution lit in Jerusalem by the Syna-unfaithful gogue, spread with the speed of the e-clear throughout the world; unjust rumors, the ca-Holies, torments and death, everything was put in work, but in vain, to stop the progress of Christianity. To better understand what happened In the past, let us remember that the trends of the Synagogue, as we noted when speaking elsewhere, his fundamental maxims were directed geared towards the restoration of his reign under the con-she was expecting a king at that same time, and that she still has the madness to wait, to make triumph-pher religious and political Judaism in all the countries of the globe. This hope dominated all the Jews indiscriminately, that is, those who lived in the

æ

CHAPTER 11. 71

Palestine, that is, those who were scattered throughout the embassy worst Roman and even beyond its limits; to their eyes, it was tantamount to giving it up to not denying the mission of Jesus Christ, the true Redeemer of Israel.

Filled with this false hope, all the Jews infi-delinquents of Jesus Christ took part in his condemnation by their words and their actions, and not only to his condemnation, but also to the persecution of his disciples. The death penalty inflicted on the Savior at the following a seemingly regular and sanctioned trial by the Sanhedrin of the metropolis, in the presence of a immense multitude of flabrants and proselytes who came

Passover was accepted and approved by all the Jews scattered throughout the world. Even today, They renew its memory from father to son, by rattachant to this event the principal cause of their despace in the eyes of nations and especially peoples Christians. Saint Justin Martyr, in his dialogue with the Tryphon the Jew (1), knowing full well that the constant goal of the The Synagogue's role is to spread everywhere and to preserve vivace among the nations and his own the hatred against the in the name of Christ, slandering him in a thousand ways, Jews and his disciples, expressed themselves thus: "It is certain that a other nation is not as animated as "You harbor unfair feelings towards us, and that is
"They owe their misfortunes rather to you"
"prejudices against the Righteous One and against us who teach him"

(1) Cap. x and xvii.

72 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

"Let us go. After having crucified in him the only man
"just, the only innocent one, whose wounds have become the a remedy for those who, through him, draw near to the Father,
"when you learned that he had risen from the tomb"
"and ascended into heaven as the prophecies had foretold"
"He said, not only have you not repented of "your crime, but choosing a few men by-"
"You sent them from Jerusalem by
"the whole world, charging them with saying that a sect
"the impious one had appeared in the world under the name of Christian"
"look, and spread all these accusations against us"
"actions that are constantly repeated by those who do not tell us-
"They are not born. So that you become responsible-
"not only for your iniquities, but also for "those that everyone else commits everywhere against
" WE. "

Elsewhere (1) the same saint renews to the Jews the same reproach, and adds: "You sent some "people all over the world to let it be known that a
"This impious and perverse sect had been formed by a certain-
"Jesus of Galilee; that he was an imposter who..."
"I was crucified by you... And you add for us"
"to harm that he taught us criminal things and
"impious people, which you tell to all sorts of individuals"
"due against those who confess that Jesus Christ is "The master of men and the Son of God."

that it was not only the Jews of Jerusalem-

(1) Leather cap. v

CHAPTER 13

those who were guilty, but that the Synagogue in-faithful had his followers everywhere, that, by the sanction given to the condemnation of the Savior, it associated itself to the crime of deicide and all its consequences had for the Christian Church.

Let us now return to the story of Perseus itself.
cution. We know by whom and why it was raised-cited. Let's take a look at Judea, where it was inau-
For the first time, Christianity; we there will see the banner of the per-security. The conduct of Saint Paul and the frankness of His confessions are enough to explain the true character-re of the Synagogue from these early days of the era Christian, when, carried away by immoderate zeal, breathing only threats and carnage, he goes off to find the prince of priests and asks him for letters for the synagogues in Damascus, in order to search for Christians there and to bring them in chains to Jerusalem after having expressed elsewhere how much he had shown ardetermined to uphold his nation's traditions, he adds:
"For my part, I had convinced myself that I owed everything
"to do contrary to the name of Jesus of Nazareth; and That's what I did. I threw a big
"a number of saints, by virtue of the powers that the "High priests had given me, and when he..."
"I acted to have them killed, I participated in their condemnation-"
"nation. Often, while visiting the various synagogues, a I used torture to force blasphemy

"the name of Jesus, and my fury ever increasing" 6

74 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

against them, I pursued them even into the cities
"the most distant (1)."

If there were any need to confirm this testimony, one one would see on every page how much the Christian Church has He had to suffer from the cradle. Woe to Christianity if the Synagogue had been free everywhere in the exercise of his political power over his coreligionists, over those who, having been born Jewish or of Gentile origin, would have dared to preach that Jesus is Dicu's messenger for the redemption of mankind! But thanks to the divine Pro-evidently, the Synagogue was then deprived of u-wise man of the sword, as the saint so aptly noted Justin; otherwise she would soon have scattered the disciples of Christ.

Nevertheless, this lack of power did not leave her in indifference; ever more ardent in its hatred against Christians, and having no other means to harm them, especially outside of Judea and in the middle She began to slander the pagan nations.
he focused primarily on portraying them as rebels, like people who conspired against Caesar and against empire, accusations that could have come at a good time better on the Jews than on the Christians, as the con-the senseless conduct of the Synagogue did not delay in doing so to see in the most obvious way. Let us remember-Saint Paul preaching the Gospel in the synagogues

(3) Justin. Dial, cum Tryph., chap. 108.

CHAPTER 11. 75

the cities of Thessaloniki and Berea (1). Immediately the
The Jews rose up against him; joining forces with some men taken from the populace and among the most unfortunate,
They incite a sedition in the city, attack the mai-Jason's house where Paul and Silas had found the hospital-- and seek them out to take them with them to amidst the tumult. Not having found them, they became... relative of Jason and some of the brothers they they dragged themselves before the city magistrates, shouting:
"These are the men who trouble the world"
"stirring up sedition everywhere. Upon their arrival here, they "were received by Jason; they speak and act against
"Caesar's decrees proclaiming another king!"
It is through the same accusations, and through the same intrigues the most odious, which the Jews were trying to do in Caesarea, to stop the preaching of the great apostle and to perdre; the words of Tertullus, spoken before the Roman prefect on behalf of Ananias and other elders of people, obviously show it (2): "Thanks to you,

"have been reformed by your wise and vigilant administration"
"re-
"knowledge that we receive these benefits from to your kindness, O Felix. But so as not to impor-
"To avoid lengthy speeches, I ask you to please..."
"Well, in your clemency, listen to us for a moment."
"We found this man who brings with him

(1) Acts, chapter XVIII, 13.

(2) Acts of the Apostles, chapter xx1v.

76 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

"the plague, which stirs up sedition among all the Jews"
"of the world, and who is the leader of the Naza- sect
"Reens. He even went so far as to want to desecrate the Temple.
"Having seized this man, we wanted to..."
"to judge according to our law; but the tribune Lysias, being
"occurred, violently snatched it from our hands, and has "ordered the accusers to appear before"
"You. You will therefore be able to inform yourself."
"Legally, he is responsible for everything we accuse him of."
At this point, all the Jews present affirmed and con-to confirm what had just been said, although there was nothing to true in the accusations made against Saint Paul, as the Roman prefect was soon persuaded by The apostle's response.

These testimonies, which abound in favor of Christ-tianism and at the same time make manifest the ca-Jewish treachery and perfidy are strengthened by the words of Gallio, proconsul of Achaea (1), when the
The Jews brought Saint Paul to his tribunal to do so.
condemn them as rebels against their law. Gallion them replied: "If it was a matter of some injustice, or of "some truly evil action, surely, O
"Jews, I would support you. But if you come drunk-"
"to address questions of doctrine, names, and per-
"sounds or things that concern your religion,
"That's your business, and see if you can come to an agreement." And he
He dismissed them.

(1) Acts, Chapter XVII.

It is certain that the hope which the Syna-faithless fool to see the scepter of Judah rise again has not yet materialized; on the other hand, the operational split-created within the Synagogue by the disciples of Christ, regarded by them as the true restorer, in which the prophecies have definitively been fulfilled of the patriarchs, greatly weakened this vain expectation Jews; therefore, they saw in Jesus Christ a prince-a source of ruin for them, and that is why, the more they have seen Christianity making progress in the midst of the Synagogue and kindness, more has increased in them
the spirit of intolerance, pharisaism, and persecution with regard to Christian doctrine and its disciples. It was this spirit of intolerance that seemed wanting to arrest Emperor Claudius, when, in a decree dated from the second year of his consulate, and relating to the Jews scattered throughout the provinces, it com-begin by reminding them of the benefits they have obtained from his predecessors, especially with regard to the practice of their religion, then he adds (4): "We
"We also believe it appropriate that the Jews, dispersed
"throughout the entire extent of our empire, preserve
"their institutions without being hindered in any way;
"but at the same time we want to be satisfied"
"They show signs of our goodwill."
"more friends of peace, and that by keeping their laws they "do not despise the worship of other nations." In

(1) Flavius Josephus, lib. XIX, Judiciary Antiquities, chap. v.

HAS

78 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

Finally, he orders that his decree be transcribed by the prefects of the cities, colonies, and municipalities of Italy and other countries, in order to give everyone the ease of learning about it and observing it.

Now, after recalling all these facts related to the history of slander, insults, vexations, and tortures that Christians had to endure under the direct or indirect influence of the phar- principle secularism, which then dominated the Synagogue, we ask-We will determine who the authors of all these vialences? Who stirred up public opinion against the Christians. What were the persecutions at that time?
Who were they? Were they Christians or Jews? We pray
The advocates for the Jewish cause tell us.

If they feel it, they will surely answer us: which side?
Where were the wrongs? Was it on the side of the Christians or of the
On the side of the Jews?

Without waiting for that answer, let's continue.
our historical examination, and let us note this, that despite the Jew's fierce hatred of the Christian name here, despite the obstacles raised to the preaching of apostles, Christianity was making progress everywhere increasing, everywhere showing the Jews that his institution did not originate from man, but was the work of God, therefore an indestructible work, as Gamaliel reasoned very well before the senate of Jerusalem Salem (4). The sight of this fact, however, does not discourage

(1) Act. of the apostles, chap. v, 38.

PS ae me

THERE
CHAPTER HI. 19

and does not destroy the Synagogue; far from it, it redoubles its efforts.
of effort to overcome it. Too convinced of the ineffectiveness of the means it has employed so far,
In her perversity, she invents new ones for to achieve its goal: it strives to inspire nations in good faith, and little aware of his perfidy, a extreme horror and a profound contempt for the practitioners sacred questions of Christianity and for the morals of those who follow him: to make the life of Christians odious
"Hey" is a way to shorten the course. They are accused therefore of immorality and infamous acts in their rites and in their private conduct. Tacitus, repeated by Sue-tone, has preserved the memory of these accusations in his Annals (1), and he lists them before we to speak of the murder of Christians tortured in Rome under the emperor Nero; he tells us about all the vices to which The people believed them to be devoted, and who had made them so hated by everyone that Nero did not believe to be able to do better than to blame this sect infamous for the crime of burning Rome. Who else but the Jews, could have spread such calumnies to the
The burden on Christians? One of the wisest philosophers, Saint Justin, who, after having allowed himself to be led astray by the opinion-universal union, had recognized the innocence of the Christians hold on and had become attached to them, searching for the origin of and he reproached Trypho the Jew himself for it,

(1) Annal., book. XV, chap. xLi.

80 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

who dared not deny the fact (1). And when we see the Christians thus vilified in the public mind, the odious and infamous Nero taking the advice of a Jew admitted to the- near him, to submit to the domination of the empress Poppaea, a woman devoted to Judaism and protector of the Jews, as Josephus testifies (2), shameless woman, According to Tacitus, she was an adulteress, cruel, proud, and perfidious, are we not allowed to say that the The loss of the Christians of Rome was prepared by the Synagogue, conducted according to his advice, and accomplished se- to his desires?

In the civil condition established at the Synagogue, after We see her revolt against the emperors chas- the ruins of his destroyed city, deprived of its Temple, without au- such, without priesthood; she lives miserably, sadly and un- prized among nations, but it retains its stubborn illusions, and still expects to see rise within it a leader and a Messiah, who will give it the victory over the peoples who oppress him. In the narrative that he tells us about the history of Trajan, Dio Cassius cites the horrific massacres carried out in Egypt, at Cy- Cyrene, in Cyprus. "In Cyrene," he said, "the Jews, having "raised up, under the leadership of a fanatic named "of Andrew, slaughtered without distinction Greeks and Ro- "hands. And, not content with killing them, they de-" "devour their flesh; some make themselves a belt of "Their bloody entrails, others cover themselves

(1) Dialogue, chap. x, xvis, cv,

(2) Book XX, chapter 7, 1x, On Antiquities. - See also his Life.

IT RS RS to Em is let get Pt M

CHAPTER II. 81

"of their skins. Many of these unfortunate vanquished "are torn to shreds from the middle of the body up-

"Roces; those who remain are forced to fight" "against each other, and that's how more of "Two hundred thousand men perished by the sword and by to the fury of the Jews. In Egypt, they engage in a pa-
"A real carnage. The same murders were repeated."
"on the inhabitants of Cyprus, while the Jews..."
"raised up under the leadership of Artemion, and slaughtered-
"They rented approximately two hundred and forty thousand Greeks. That's "following these appalling scenes which a law se-
"It is strictly forbidden for any Jew to touch the soil of Pile."

Eusebius and Nicephorus (1) add to these facts what-remarkable circumstances, in which he is
It is easy to see the seditious and hostile dispositions of the Synagogue against foreign nations, provisions produced by the mad and vain expectation of the Messiah. None the writers we have spoken of do not indicate others causes that could have provided a motive or pretext for all these atrocities. The three imposters, André, Ar-Témion and Lucua took the name of Chiefs and Kings, when they wanted to push their fellow believers to these massacres, because they were convinced in advance that the time had come when they were going to doto mine on all nations. But of all that we we have said so far, as with everything we

#

(1) Hist. eccl., book. AV, chap. 11.

82 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

We will still have more to say, we can already conclude, while expressing our astonishment bearing so much perfidy, that the Jews accused the Christians of the crimes that they themselves were ready to to commit on every occasion, against the nations
The environment in which they lived. Also, the author of the Con-the so-called apostolic constitutions, makes this observation Very true, that the spirit of darkness began by to use the unfaithful Synagogue to stir up in the world of afflictions, persecutions, and movements seditious acts, blasphemies, schisms and heresies (1). It could not be otherwise; the spirit
The prophetic one having completely withdrawn from Israel, it was necessary-milk supplemented his assistance through inventions mendaydreams, to which the spirit of darkness, invoked by the Synagogue in support of its

Such cruelties, how could one not see the signs of this sentence of the cherem, anathema or extermination, that the Synagogue intended to accomplish on all the nations that would stand in the way of his triumph, then that one of her children would rise up in her midst with the characteristics of his Messiah, in order to reconstruct it as in the past, and give it precedence over all the kingdoms of the earth? And what we say Isn't this further confirmed by the fact of this war? of extermination that Emperor Hadrian carried out against the Jews? Were not those who had provoked it themselves?

(1) Constit, apost., book. XI, chap. v, vi ct seen.

CHAPTER II. | 83

even irrefutable evidence of this hatred persistent and deadly that Judaism had sworn to The Christian Church?

We will not delve into the political question here. to know to what extent the Jews had the right to to free themselves and their country from the domination of Romans. Without dwelling on it, we will examine everything immediately certain circumstances which recur our main goal, which have been recorded by the Jewish writers as well as historians... clesiastics, and who present us with the head of this great insurrection movement—under the name of a new Messiah awaited by the Synagogue. Barcochebas, thus that which was called it, means, according to the Chaldean etymology—that son of the star. The famous Rabbi Akiba recognized—within this imposter grazed the Messiah, the object of his vows of Israel, intended to deliver the Jews from the bondage of Romans and to destroy the religion of Christ. It is by This last reason is why Barcochébas published an edict by which he ordered the killing of all Christians without: No distinction or regard for any of them. A fine subject for reflections for those who have undertaken to defend the because of the innocence of the Jews in the eyes of society Christian. How can one not see it again in the edict of this impostor, the cherem, or the anathema of extermination—tion contained in Leviticus (1) and that the Synagogue pre—tended to apply all kinds of rights to Christians

(1) Last chapter.

hold on and to every other people as it had been other-times to the Canaanites? And what were the wrongs of the Christians towards Jews at a time when the Church of Christ was still so weak, subject to scorn, to unrest and a wide range of accusations? In his At pologte (1) Saint Justin, after having reproached the Jews, their ignorance of the ancient Scriptures, he said of them speaking to the good people: "That's why they re-
_ "keep them as their enemies and adversaries
"Just as well as you; they show it in us"
"slaughtering and oppressing us every time they "can, as you can easily verify."
"That's how, very recently in the war of "Jews, Barcochebas, leader of the insurrection, had or-"given the power to inflict death through the most cruel tortures"
"all Christians who would not want to deny the "Christ." We know that this imposter, as well as the, said Saint Jerome (2) put tow in his mouth set ablaze, to appear as if they were vomiting fire, as a sign of the mission he had set for himself. If we bring them closer Barcochebas's actions against the empire and against the Christians, of what Andrew had done shortly before, Artemion and Lucuaquis had also pledged to the redeemers of Israel and who had done such a hora terrible carnage among the populations of the provinces imperial, foreign to Judea, it must be said with Baronius that in these various circumstances the Jews

(1) No. 31.

(2) Ji Rufin., lib. XI.

-

CHAPTER II. 85

had been enveloped in the same massacres and the pagans and Christians who were already widespread in large numbers in these regions.

Following such excesses committed in the provinces of the empire, it had been easy for the emperors to a-to perceive that the spirit of sedition among the Jews held to their desire to dominate, a desire produced by the unfortunate and constant idea that they were called all nations and to exercise power over them unlimited or rather a kind of moral violence and re-religious, as Tacitus and Suetonius tell us speaking of their revolt under Vespasian. Discerning soon the particular characteristics that distinguished this people of all the others and who became for him a motive for conspiracy and a means of recognition such as circumcision, Sabbath observance and the reading of holy books, the emperors carried various decrees to prevent or at least hinder the use of these practices. The rabbis themselves admitted that Titus and Hadrian only tolerated with These observances were barely observed, and several times it was not possible-able to escape convictions and sentences veres than by paying large sums as compensation sation. According to Modestinus (1), Antoninus Pius did not allowed the use of circumcision only among the Jews; any individual of another religion who would have practiced it.

(1) Lib. VI Regularum ad legem Corneliam de sicariis.

86 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

Tickled was punished. We see in Julius Paulus that the death penalty was imposed on doctors, and Exile with the confiscation of assets against all Roman citizens who would allow circumcision to be practiced sion on themselves or on their slaves. And if it happened to the Jews to circumcise one of their slaves, they were exiles, or even sometimes beheaded (1). Such had to The harshness of the laws against this "stubborn people" is a factor.

Returning to the Synagogue's hatred of Christ-Tianism, we see that Eusebius, in a narrative of the martyrdom of Saint Polycarp, records the part that it pri-They eagerly welcomed the Jews. They spread throughout the middle From the crowd of pagans, they loudly demanded the death of the saint, and when he was condemned to torture From the fire, they were seen, true to form, competing to the consumption of the sacrifice. When afterwards they were observed that the Christians honored with rest-Respecting the sacred remains of the holy martyr, they acted with an appeal to the prefect, so that his body would not be handed over to none of the faithful (2).

It was especially during this period that so many cre-these calumnies invented by the empire were spread throughout the empire. Synagogue, which we have already discussed; finding credulous people, the Pharisaic deceit spread everywhere these calumnies successfully. Saint Justin, whom we have cited several times: Milito, Athenagoras, Theophilus

(1) Lib. V. Tit. Of seditiosis.

(2) Euseb., Hist. eccl., book. IV, chap. xlv.

nee re The SR É

CHAPTER II. 87

Apollinaire, Miltiaque, Apollonion, the author of the letter written by the Christians of Lyon and Vienne to their brothers from Asia (1), and others have made known to us what unfortunate precautions had been taken by the calumnies of the Jews, and how few were willing to believe in the divine nature of the mission of Jesus Christ and the moral integrity of his disciples. The Epicurean Celsus (that impious man against whom Origene), also an ardent enemy of Jesus Christ and of Christians hold that faithful interpreter of the Synagogue, recorded in his writings not only the blasphemies already rehearsed for so long by the Jews for de- to recount the birth and life of the Redeemer, but include the accusations made against the practices followed in the religious assemblies of Christians. As for the person of the Savior himself, a letter was then circulating among the public infamous spread by the Synagogue to stop the to advance Christianity and make it odious. It is at amidst all this, Saint Justin, exhorting the Jews (under the name Tryphon) to convert, their discourse: "Here is what I ask of you: Do not blaspheme "not the Son of God; do not listen so meekly to your "Pharisees, even to the point of mocking you with irreverent laughter" "fucks of the king of Israel, as you do every "day after the communal prayers, and as you "The leaders of your Synagogue have learned of this (2)."

(1) Eusebius, Hist. eccl., book. V, chap. 2.

(2) Dialog. cum Tryphone, cap. cxvi.

nagogue, prejudices passed into a traditional state and which have took their place among the doctrines of the Talmud where they have always fought against the true spirit of the laws of Moses, it will not be useless to quote here a passage from a letter attributed to Saint Justin. The saint repro- He taught the Jews of his time the custom that had prevailed among them to have several wives; he told them that in this respect, "they had greatly degenerated from the pre- interpretations of Mosaic law, choosing at their own discretion women and sending back the first ones, when it suits them was suitable." The holy martyr explains elsewhere that the patriarchs, who had had several wives, and whose They claim to be following the example, but could not be accused. of fornication or adultery, and he adds "that he was not Not permitted in ancient times, nor now, to take whichever woman one wanted, as one would- milk, and to have as much as one wanted, as well as the The Jews of his time were doing this in some region of the world, whether they were found there or not, or whether they were found there. voyât (4).

Let's move on to the time of Severus. Elius Spartianus, who gave us a history of this emperor, in which he made men- tion of the Jews. Still animated by their wild hopes- political restoration campaigns, they conspired in Sy- laughter with the Samaritans against Roman domination. They only worsened their yoke. Severus, who saw

(1) Epist. ad Diognet., cap. 1v.

CHAPTER II. 89

circumcision was a sign of rebellion and insubordination. dinner, imposed very severe penalties against anyone would become Jewish. Tertullian, witness to the wretched con- edition where the Synagogue had fallen in its time, he wrote in his Apology: "But how much the The Jews have gone astray through their pride, through their vain "trust, through the lay interpretation they have "given to their doctrines! They will not admit it, but "What is happening today is all too evident." "Scattered, wandering, far from the earth and the sky of their "Homeland, they wander here and there throughout the world, without a leader," "Only God, without a king; they are not even granted "the right to salute once while passing the land of "Their ancestors and to cross it as travelers." One A little later, Origen, comparing the state in which he saw The Jewish nation with what it had once been in

"Now look at the humiliation they have fallen into,
"without temple and without altar, without prophet and without-
"a communication from heaven, scattered throughout the "earth, leading a wandering life steeped in opprobrium"
"bres." Is it therefore possible today for Christians to keep free from all prejudice, seeing what was the Synagogue, according to Tertullian and Origen, and what she really was, to assign to this wretch state another cause than worry and discontent-inspired everywhere the Jews appeared with their religious pride, and their restless spirit, and their dreams of universal domination? Will we be able to reason-

90 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

likely to blame the intolerance of Christians, who they themselves had so much to suffer at the hands of the kind, who encountered so much opposition and hostility, outside state, therefore, to exert the slightest influence contrary to the Synagogue, with which they wore the yoke of oppression?

During the year 256, Valerian and Gallienus came to power. Eusebius and Nicephorus remarked-according to the testimony of Dionysius (1), what li-Permission was then granted to Christian worship; they admire also how full of gentleness the Church showed itself to be and of condescension towards those who were attached to her;
so that his followers publicly frequented the imperial palace, which seemed to have become a meeting of Christians rather than courtiers. This lasted until what a false prophet, that is to say an imposter, the head of the synagogue of Alexandria, had succeeded, by force of intrigues and artifices of all kinds, to seize Valerian's spirit, and to change his disposition so much positions regarding Christians, which made him one of the most furious enemies and most ardent persecutors of The Church. If you wish, look for another cause.
to the suffering that Christians then had to endure?
Let them tell us what their faults were, or more-
They were brought to justice for their crimes, only to be subjected to torture?

The beginning of the fourth century seemed to promise the Church an era of peace and tranquility

(1) Euseb., Hist. eccl., book. VII, chap. 1x. - Niceph., book. VI, Chapter X.

much more durable. Men exhausted by their Their holiness, their knowledge, and their zeal consecrated all their efforts to spread the Gospel, when
 The enemy of all good threw on one side the brand of the discord among the believers, and regaining on the other the favors of power soon led the emperors to renew the old decrees to have the churches and crack down through exile, confiscations, and torture ments and death against those who confessed the name of Christ. Although Eusebius does not mention the fugitives as having contributed to the new proscription measures against Christians, however, there are all sorts of reasons to think that they contributed to it through their ordinary means, that is to say, by publishing libels subjecting to contempt and infamy the birth and the life of the Savior, as well as religious practices gious of his disciples. One of those books, of which we
 We have already spoken of it as a work of the Synagogue, was spread throughout all provinces by virtue of a imperial order, and the same order stipulated that one would do introducing this book to children would allow them to understand it.
 well their minds, in order to inspire them early a deep aversion to the Gospel (4). Moreover,
 How could the good guys have even thought of it?
 as false and as abject as the one they had of the life of the Redeemer, if the Jews had not given their hateful deceitfulness took place there, too faithful in this

(1) Surius, Acta SS., die I Februarii.

92 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

to the traditions of the Pharisees, their fathers, who had learned to loathe the name and doctrine of Na-Zarean? In the middle of this century, Saint Pioricus, martyr, speaking of the Jews in their presence, he attested that from his
 In his early youth he had known what they were saying about the the person of Jesus Christ to the Gentiles, to distance them of the truth and incite them to persecute those who practice it were (1). All this must naturally have had some-that weight in the minds of Maximin and the other empersecutors, who were only looking for pretexts for oppress the Church.

Finally, after three centuries of hardship, the Church something other than hatred and hostility; she saw in him a disciple, a protector, an ardent defender of his eternal truth. The Jews, seeing clearly in which path Constantine was determined to walk, they addressed his mother; They persuaded her to write to her son to praise him for the decision he had made to abandon idolatry, but in at the same time to express his regret that he had... ended up embracing the religion of the Nazarene, religion completely new in the world. This did not stop Constantine, henceforth firmly convinced that Christianity is the only true religion, seeing a multi-countless Christians subjected to terrible suffering accomplices and nonetheless confessing the name of Christ with admirable and invincible consistency.

(1) Euseb., Hist. eccl., book. IX, chap. mid.

CHAPTER II. 93

Deceived in their hopes and believing they would find A more favorable opportunity arose, and the Jews revolted again; which forced Constantine to resort to weapons to bring them back into submission. As he had reason to convince themselves that they had not given up To their spirit of revolt against authority, he made them cut off part of the ear so that, scattered in the empire, they carried everywhere with them the a sign of their rebellion, and would have had less ease to evade obedience and disturb the order public (4). In his zeal for the honor of the name As a Christian, he forbade Jews to own a slave. disciple of Christ, because he could not allow, he said, that those who had slaughtered the prophets and put to death the Savior himself preserved in Humiliation and the rigors of servitude are those whom the Savior has redeemed with his blood. What if a Christian if he were to be reduced to this condition, he would have to be put immediately freed, and the Jew severely punished (2).

The emperor, having also become aware of the persecutions the implacable measures they took against those among them who took on the livery of Christ, which can be seen an example in Saint Epiphanius (3), published a new-decree in which it was stated: "We want that "that the Jews and their magistrates be informed that "if, from the moment this law has been given,

(2) Euseb., lib. IV, From Vita Constantini.

(3) Epiph., Hæres., xxx, xli et seq.

94 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

"One of them allowed himself (as he is "having come to our knowledge that they do so), to
"to incite attacks that endanger lives,
"either by throwing stones or through other forms of violence"
"any, against those who abandon this
"perverse sect and convert to the worship of God,"
"He will be condemned to the flames along with his accomplices."
"If anyone from the common people were to become attached to this "criminal sect and takes part in its secret meetings, he "will incur the same penalties." Circumcision was considered at that time by the Roman magistrates, as it had been for a long time already, no more as a religious symbol, but rather as a commitment movement towards revolt against legitimate authority.

But all these measures taken by Constantine did not could have had their effect as far away as Persia. There, at report of Sozomen (1), the Jews, in concert with the
The magicians were so adept at deceiving the king and making him hostile to the Christian religion, they managed to to destroy all the churches and to incite against the disciples of the Redeemer a long and violent pera sect that killed sixteen thousand. And what could they do?
to be the grievances of the Jews against the Christians in this infidel country, if not the profession of the Gospel which al-milk spreading rapidly throughout all provinces?
Evod Assemani and Cassiodorus (2) reporting, according to

(1) Hist. eccl., book. IE, chap. 1x.

(2) Menolog. Græcorum, t. 1, part 1, p. 52. — (Cassiod., Hist. tripart., lib. III,

CHAPTER II. 95

Greek monuments, the acts of the martyrdom of Saint Simeon, bishop of this country, speaks of complicity and from the Synagogue's ceaseless activity in spreading calumnies against the holy bishop, calumnies which the Jews supported this with unworthy oaths in order to hasten

He was accused of having conspired with the emperor of Romans to overthrow the throne and the dynasty of kings of Persia. And, not content with the success of these criminals machinations, the Jews plotted yet another plot against the lives of the two sisters of Saint Simeon; in which they succeeded again, as we shall soon see.

Let us remember that it was during this period that we are talking about... lons that the Church had the sorrow of seeing arise in within its own ranks the sect of Arianism; and let us note immediately that this perverse and subtle sect, which attacked the divinity of Jesus Christ, found in the Judaism: constant support and the most active. The Synagogue couldn't have asked for anything better than to fan the flames of Arianism, because she saw in it firstly a certain agreement with his own religious ideas gious, and because afterwards she hoped that the sci-
The sion carried out within Christianity would help to arrive itself had its own purpose. The Church of Alexandria had to suffer particularly from the sect's enterprises, and It was there, above all, that the Jews were seen making common cause. common with the Arians. When a part of these here-Ticks, supporters of Meletius, wanted to get rid of Catholics, the Jews, greatly aided them by their calumnies against the holy bishop Macarius, that The Arians were accused of acts of violence committed against a priest in the celebration of divine mystères, against the altar itself and against the sacred vessels; The Jews showed the keenest eagerness to to support these accusations and to corroborate them by their oaths (1). Philagrius, prefect of Egypt, having joined On his side, regarding this conspiracy, it resulted from this con-a violent persecution against Catholics is underway and against their churches. Saint Athanasius, to whom we owe-Having been informed of these facts, he addressed the bishops. a circular letter in which he reports the atsacrilegious attempts committed by pagans, by Jews and by bad Christians, in the church of the orthodoxes; he expresses himself thus: "Soon we saw them enter at"diciously in the sacred baptistery, O abominable-

96 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGLUE.

"tion! the deicide Jews, the atheists and the pagans; there They indulged in the most shameful acts; they "stripped themselves of all their clothes down to the "last, and began to utter such words-
"Obscene things that modesty forbids us to mention"
"Report. Some of these unfortunate people, more

"persecutions, and forcibly dragging them along with them"
"Virgins and virtuous women, they were obliged "to blaspheme and deny Jesus Christ; on their refusal
"They were overwhelmed with blows and trampled underfoot."

(1) S. Athan., Apol. Arianos countered.

CHAPTER II. 97

"Then Gregory the Arian arrived; applauding at everything"
"what the pagans, the Jews, and all the pro-
"those who brought these horrible scenes to light, he rewarded them"
"of their zeal by abandoning the church to be plundered.
"They immediately set to work, removing, breaking, scattering everything that was most precious and He also revered it, and subjected its mysteries to ridicule.
"August of our holy religion." Elsewhere the same saint (1), comparing the sentiments of the Jews and the Arians found them vying with one another in impiety and violence when it came to fighting Catholics; he from this he took the opportunity to urge the latter to renounce to heresy so as not to find themselves enveloped in the sad prerogatives of the repudiated Synagogue.
While fighting Christianity on one side and in
By striving to destroy it, the Synagogue did not lose Moreover, only one opportunity to rise up against the political order, animated as it was always by same spirit of independence and domination. A the era when Constantius shared the empire with Gal-read, that is to say in the year 357, according to the chronicle of Saint Jerome, the Jews, in revolt in the East, massacred a Roman garrison; whereupon Gallus, determined to to bring them back into subordination, had them slaughtered by thousands, without even respecting the youngest age;
several of their cities, such as Diocesarea, Tibe-riad and various towns and castles were surrendered

(1) Serm. III, nos. 27, 28, ed. Maur.

L 4

98 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

to the flames. Who can say how much this misfortunesounds completely unrelated to sedition?

Sovereign power passes to this Julian, whose spirit of impiety made him an apostate, and of which he made the protector-author of all those who share his passions and his hatred against the cross of Jesus Christ. Even though at the beginning of his reign he affected to show moderation of character and tolerance rancid for all religious doctrines, one was not It wasn't long before he was seen as the enemy and the persecutor. Christians, the defender of Jews and pagans. Given his circumstances, it became easy for him to Synagogue to seize him; soon he published a decree by which he forbade giving in the future the the name of Christians to the disciples of the Gospel; one should henceforth they will be referred to as Galileans. as the Jews called them Vazareans, to better convey the humble condition from which Jesus had come out; it is also the name used by the philosopher Sophie Celsus, for the same reason, faithful in this to lessons he had received from a Jewish teacher. "Among all "the harm that Julian sought to inflict on the Christian Church" "Here," said Saint Gregory of Nazianzus (1), "it is necessary "finally, count the vexations to which he incited the "Jews against us; the ever-moving spirit of this "nation, and the burning hatred it has never ceased to have for us"

(1) Orat. IV contra Julian.

CHAPTER II. | 99

"to carry, served Julien for the accomplishment" "of his treacherous designs." Socrates also said of his On the other hand, that at that same time the Jews inspired the * greater fears to the faithful; treating them with in- In all their solemnity, they threatened to do much more harm to Christianity than it did to Christianity. had done the Romans in the past (1). And Saint Am- broise, in one of his letters to Emperor Theodosius, reports in particular on the relentlessness of the Jews, while aroused and protected by Julian, they were... They resorted to the latest violence against the faithful, including They burned the churches, two in Damascus, others in Gaza, Ashkelon, Berytus, and elsewhere, notably the rich and famous basilica of Alexandria (2). And, what The motive, once again, drove the Jews to all these threats and these hostilities against Christians, otherwise traditional intolerance among their nation, otherwise

Christ and his worshippers? Who does not finally see in all these facts the ruling carried again and from age to age by the Synagogue and still in the process of being carried out, this fatal cherm, which is, since the coming of the Savior, the abolition and the extirpation of the Christian name?

Speaking of Magnus, who had made himself the instrument and the ardent proponent of Arianism, and consequently the persecutor-Theodoret, a member of the Catholic Church (3), says that he is-

(1) Socrates, Hist. eccl., book. III, chap. xvii.

(2) S. Ambr., Epist. xL, ed. Maur.

(3) Hist. eccl., book. IV, chap. xx.

100 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE. *

saya d'amener, par la rigueur des tourments, dix-neuf priests and deacons to embrace the doctrine of Arius.
But, finding them unshakeable in their faith, he made them drive to the seaside, where a a multitude of idolaters and Jews who, according to their customs students began to shout death cries against the confessors.

But if we want to know what was important then-morality, audacity and religious prejudices, or rather sacrileges among these Jews living in the midst of Christians that one should consult in this regard the testimony of the authors contemporaries. Saint Athanasius gives as proverbbiale the treachery of the Jews, who did not usually sell-the wine element than by mixing it with water. Saint Ambroise (1) urges Christians to flee all relationships with the Jews, whose only conversation is for man is a source of defilement, and he calls them anxious, impudent, and reckless people. We see through a decree of the emperor Arcadius what was their hypocrisis, while, prosecuted for debts or for crimes
by the magistrates, they took refuge with the Christians with grand displays of piety and invoking the name of Christ. Whereupon the emperor, informed by experience, argued against their being received among the Christians hold on before they have satisfied justice; that after We could verify this if their conversion was genuine.
._ and not illusory.

(1) Serm. XI, In die Circumeis.

Finally, we will recall here with a little more details, a particular fact that will give some idea of this. What was this Jewish intolerance that sometimes pushing the patience of Christians to its limits and could have normally bring about unfortunate, but just results. Let us consult the memorandum presented, in 388, by Saint Ambrose to Emperor Theodosius, who had wished, under Julia's arson law, obligate the bishop of Castrum callinicum to rebuild a synagogue and a temple of idolaters delivered to the flames by Christians. We will also note their zeal, what spirit of piety and evangelical freedom animated Saint Ambrose, and what he thought of the Jewish nation. According to the report sent to Pempereur by the count In the East, the bishop was to be regarded as the veritable author of the two fires. Saint Ambrose, who had better discovered the passions at play in This whole affair, and especially the perfidy of the Jews, insent to the emperor a memorandum in which he so clearly explained the reasons that had led Christians to act as They had done so, and the decree was revoked. The saint The doctor first reminds us what the hatred of Jews is. against Christian worship; supported and encouraged by Valentin's supporters, they had already insulted pu— obviously monks who, according to their custom, were came to the solemnity of the holy Maccabees in procession and singing psalms; they had even prevented from passing through and attending the ceremony. Irritated by such insolence and giving in to excess

6.

402 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

For their zeal, the Christians took revenge by putting the Fire at the synagogue and the Valentinian temple. The Jews then appealed to the count to obtain reparations. tion, and this one, as we know, had given them right.

Saint Ambrose did not approve of the actions of the Christians. but he explains to the emperor the malice of Jews, and what a scandal it would cause the Church by protecting them! giant the Synagogue as openly as he did by his decree. As a result of the hatred that drives them.

they said every day in this same enclosure which has was delivered to the flames, and to their curses they added—were insults to the religious ceremonies of the E-church. If he wanted, he said, to reason according to the law of people, no reparation would be due to the Jews, who, in In previous years, under Julian the Apostate, they had in-many Christian basilicas were burned with impunity, with no other motive than their deep aversion to the Christian name, and they were not asked for reparation-tion of all the damage they have caused. "The Church has not
 "Not yet avenged," he said, "but the Synagogue will be!"
 "Jews were able to set fire to Christian basilicas, and "They didn't have to pay any compensation; we didn't..."
 "Nothing was demanded of them, nothing was asked of them." He It also shows that the bishop was slandered by the representing as the instigator of the fire, and that He was wrongly convicted as such. We have ca-
 I also mentioned the Christians when it was said that they had

CHAPTER II. 103

precious objects were removed from the Synagogue, since these objects were not actually there, and that, if they had they existed there, one could not have deceived the jealous woman and worrying surveillance of Jews to steal from them.
 having provided other, highly convincing reasons,
 He yields to the ardent zeal inspired in him by Christian truth.
 holds and exclaims: "How then will we
 "We who fight, rely on the help of Christ"
 "'tons for the Jews against Christ?.... What caa lomnies can we not expect from those who have ca-
 "Hilmonited Jesus Christ himself and have bribed against "Him, false witnesses? What lies can't he tell?"
 They won't be people who lie even in the "Divine things? Whom will they not present as "Authors or accomplices of sedition? Who would not attack—"
 "Will they not, men known or unknown, when-
 "that they will have to see a quantity of Christians"
 "hold them laden with irons, reduced to servitude, thrown into "the dungeons, struck by the executioner's sword, delivered"
 "to the flames or condemned to the mines as to a An even longer torture? Will you give the Jews,
 "6 Emperor, this victory over the Catholic Church, this
 "A subject of triumph over the people of Christ? Grant-a rez-vous celestial satisfaction à la perfidie judaïque, un
 Do you give such credence to the pride of the Synagogue? Will you speak?
 "Such affliction to the Church?"

Saint Ambrose goes further; he demonstrates that the

the protection of Jesus Christ. a And do we not know

104 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

"
"
"

"

Not, he said, what happened to Maxime, who, shortly after days before its shipment, published an edict concerning of a synagogue burned down in Rome, declaring The protector as a public institution? If so

"although the Christian people cried out: This man has

There's nothing good to expect. He became Jewish by... acting as an advocate for such an establishment. That's it. what we heard said about him. And if that's it that the people thought from the very first moment, that What will he say about what followed? Maxime was defeated. immediately by the Franks, by the Saxons, in Sicily, in other provinces of the empire, everywhere he did war. What, then, do the re- Religion and perfidy? We must eliminate them with the impious to the very embalms of impiety. Com- How could the Lord not have exercised his severity? against the restorer of this Synagogue who misunderstands Where was Christ born? This same Synagogue, rebuilt at contempt for religion and justice, wasn't she a testimony to Maximus's impiety, and does not appeal- Wasn't she carrying out Christ's vengeance? It was indeed the seat of Jewish perfidy raised by means of the des- Church lice; and it was found that the patri- monk acquired by Christians for the service of Christ was being used by treacherous people. The Jews could have inscribe these words on the front of their synagogue: Templum impietatis factum de manubiis christiano- rum (1).»

(1) S. Amb., Epist. n, C, Epist. xL, ed. Maur.

Saint John Chrysostom, in his sermons against the Jews, insists on their immorality, on their deceitfulness and on their spirit of intrigue, agitation and rebellion. He said that the synagogues were, in his time, places of debauchery where people went Shameless women and dissolute men. He speaks of their claim to be skilled doctors; but he adds that their medical science was not imposture, enchantment, amulets and practices borrowed from magic; that's what they use to deceive. They pay people without getting any real results. He speaks also of their wealth; the product of their contributions between them formed considerable treasures which their patriarch had the storehouse, and which served to hold back the enterprises of this bold, impudent nation, troublesome, reckless, and seditious. It is towards this the era that the pagan poet Rutilius wrote about, on what he knew of the extreme avarice of the Jews, who, scattered in the whole world, found a way to put to contribution to all other peoples, to oblige the Christians to hold on and the kind ones to serve them and to make them pass insanely all their wealth in their hands; he wrote: |

Would to God that Judea had never been subjugated
"By the wars of Pompey and the armies of Titus! The
"The plague that we thought we had destroyed is spreading its ravages everywhere"
"The vanquished nation oppresses its conquerors:"

"Atque utinam numquam Judæa subacta fuisset
"Pompeii bellis imperioque Tweety!"

106 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

"Latius excisæ pestis: contagia serpunt,
"Victoresque suos natio victa premit. »

Saint Jerome, who saw even more closely the character of the head of the Synagogue said: "If it is permitted to hate "Men" don't hate any nation, I
"I deeply hate and detest circumcised men, expecting
"that to this day the Jews persecute Our Lord Jesus Christ in their synagogues of Sa-

"to banish heretics because of the errors they pro-They were acting against the Church, all the more so the "Jews, who blaspheme in everything and about everything"
"the name of Our Lord, and who maintain that he
"You shouldn't believe anything about him except that he's dead."

In light of all these facts and documents provided by pagan writers and ca- doctors Catholics, the new defenders of the Synagogue can see how difficult their task is becoming. If However, they have the courage to fight against such arguments, not everything will have been said yet, because we have not-
We will not finish explaining our reasons to them.

In the year 408, Emperor Theodosius II issued a decree which shows us the extent of the Jews' animosity against the name of Jesus. As their aversion could not-was going to appear publicly, they disguised her as substituting another name for the one that was the subject of their hatred; and while heaping curses upon the
the name of Haman, who had once been the mortal enemy of their nation, they were prone to acts of fury

* CHAPTER Hf. 407

against the image of the Holy Cross, which they delivered to flames. "That the provincial governors," it is said
"This decree forbids Jews from burning the image" of the Holy Cross in the days they dedicate so-It is reminiscent of the torment of Haman; it is "This is an act of contempt for the Christian religion, and This act suggests a sacrilegious intent. That in their at the assemblies they do not involve the sign of
"To our belief, but let them perform their rites"
"without insulting Christianity; and that they may be well
"convinced that they could only lose the privileges-
"the gains they have made so far, if they continue-
"They were involved in doing illicit things." These practices impious, which demonstrate the intolerant nature of Jews, we will still find them practiced in the following centuries; and various passages from their books of prayers openly allude to it, as do several times those among them who converted have convicted before Christian courts.
The historian Socrates (1) reports that around the year 415
A brawl broke out between the Christians and the Jews of A-Alexandria on the occasion of a public performance given at theatre by a dancer on the Sabbath; "expected, the historian said, that on that day the Jews engaged in

"saic, but to enjoy the spec- more fully
"Tackling and the pleasures of the theatre. The prefect of the city"
"set about calming the tumult; but, in

(1) Hist. eccl., iv. VII, chap. xnr,

108 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

"their hatred against the Christian name, the Jews do not expect-
"They said that the moment was ripe to attack the faithful"
"and massacre them. However, an edict had just been issued."
"published within the theater premises, and a certain Hié-
"Rax approached to read it, and a multitude of "The Jews, upon seeing him, began to shout that he should not see-
"It was born there only to incite the people to rise up."
"this accusation, however slanderous it may have been, the
"The prefect had Hiérax seized and publicly beaten. The e-
"Bishop Cyril, having learned of the matter, summoned to
"He told the leaders among the Jews, and declared to them
"that if they continued to stir up rumors against
"Christians would bear the responsibility."
"These measures only further exasperated people."
"the Jews, so much so that they resolved to set fire to
"Péglise the following night; which they did in the favor "of darkness. Many Christians, having been warned, are..."
"They rushed to save the sacred building; but
"At the same time the Jews, who were standing ready, fell-
"They descended upon them and massacred all those who were there"
"They were walking in the streets. When the day came and that "It was generally known among Christians what had happened"
"When it had passed, a large number of people gathered and we
"they attacked the synagogues, they drove out the "Jews of the city, and the people were allowed to plunder"
"all they had," one might find that the Christians here overstepped the bounds; but we... asked-
We will see who the real aggressors were and what
Which side was most at fault?

CHAPTER I, at 109

Let us also remember the acts of atrocity exercises carried out by the Jews against a Christian child, beaten and crucified in the vicinity of Antioch in Syria, made generally known, but which we will discuss again later-theirs. It is about this habitual barbarity of the Jews, attested as certain and evident, that the em-observe, among other things, that every time He and his predecessors wanted to make themselves agreeable. to the Jews, they were always rewarded by linen-gratitude. In this letter, which is entirely about... Jewish perversity, we see the title of prefect honorary removed from Gamaliel, the prohibition against circumcising the Christians of any sect whatsoever, or to have for slaves, the order to demolish the synagogues if-killed in places far from dwellings, if you- However, this could be done without causing any uproar or of sedition. This order had been provoked by the fact which we have just mentioned, the remote and deserted places leaving the Jews much more freedom to engage in acts of hatred against Christianity.

Baronius published in his Annals, under the date of M8, a letter from Severus, Bishop of Minorca, a from the Balearic Islands. This letter reveals the miserable the situation in which the Christians found themselves in the midst of Jews who lived on the island in large numbers. Every day they had to suffer something in their religion or in their possessions from these enemies of Christ. One day, a fight was about to break out between the Jews

7

110 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

And the Christians, at that very moment a priest arrived, who was returning from Jerusalem, bringing back the relics of the martyr Saint Stephen. Here Severus, who recounts the event, vows-highlighting the celestial protection obtained by the holy martyr, said that the Christians prepared to to come to blows with the Jews, invoking the help of Saint Stephen, with the firm intention of de-to split their own lives and not to loot from Leucs adversaries. This is what happened indeed; many Jews opened their eyes to the light of the Gospel, and in humbly submitting the rebellious spirit of Judaism to the holy action of Christianity, they procured for the a true religion, one of those triumphs that it ambifunctions above all. Witnesses to this victory, a a number of Christians, inflamed with a greater zeal ardent as praiseworthy, they set fire to the synagogue, eshoping to determine repentance and conversion Jews who remained unbelievers, and prevent them from disturb the peace of the Church in the future, as they have done. had done previously. This very example was followed by Christians from other provinces, who promise themselves-felt compelled to put an end to these abuses, and published-various decrees were issued that prohibited any act of violence as being unworthy of the doctrine of Jesus-Christ, who asks nothing but sacrifices from men volunteers, and does not force them to believe despite themselves. If sometimes, due to circumstances particular and urgent matters, the Christian magistrates were

CHAPTER II. 411

to the point of completely prohibiting the practice of religion Jewish, they only ever did it when the Jews, driven by traditional prejudices, dangerous also for the sake of political order, they had sought to incite Here and there, a few uprisings in the provinces, such as we have seen it in the past, and as history will continue to show us this in the future.

But what can give an idea of the illusions where was then the Synagogue and its hopes concerning the coming of the Messiah and the return of the Jews to Jerusalem, This is the following fact, where we find at the same time a a fine example of the charity that Christians practiced towards the Jews, despite all the efforts they made-
They know how to harm and destroy them. A Jew Cretan, whom the historian Socrates presents to us as a fanatic, claiming to be Moses sent from heaven to save-towards Israel, traversed the entire island in a year and per-Suada urged all his coreligionists to follow him, in their promising to lead them across the seas to the conquest for Judea. On the appointed day, the Jews who had believed in his word, abandon all that they possess, and, taking with them their wives and their
As children, they follow him to a promontory from where he their order to throw themselves into the sea. The first ones, Obeying the imposter's order, they rush to... early on, and a good number of them died, drowned in the waves or shattered against the reefs. There are some many more would have perished, if fishermen and Christian merchants, who were nearby,

412 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

had not rushed over and had not saved some from the shipwreck frage and determined others not to expose themselves, like the first ones, to a certain peril. Well con-defeated by the treachery of this imposter,

of these poor dupes renounced the vain hope—they embraced the Christianity.

The author of the Annals of the Kings of Persia, William Schickard speaks of a revolt that broke out in the 5th century by the Jews who lived in the kingdom. "A fanatic
"of this nation," he said, presenting himself as favored by "divine assistance and like the Messiah sent from heaven"
"to save the Hebrew people, he obtained such ascendancy"
"on the spirit of his fellow believers, that they ended
"by refusing all obedience to Firouz, the prince—
"Legitimate. Strengthened by their numbers and their fanaticism, They held the entire monarchy for some time.
"shits in the turmoil and agitation, seeking to en—
"To drag Your subjects into revolt. But, in the end, the
"The fanatical rebel was defeated, all his supporters..."
"They scattered, and the rest of the nation was subjected to "A harsh servitude."

What, after all, was the right that could be ar—to rob the Jews about the kingdom of Persia, where they had found hospitality and asylum when they were banished from Judea? How can we see in them anything other than this perfidy that dominated them and led them to harm all that who was a stranger to them? Despite the obvious injustice of which

CHAPTER II. 113

The children of the Synagogue were guilty.
in this insurrection, they preserved and considered
They enshrined the memory in the splendor of their history, and this it is only with the utmost respect that they speak of the imposter, like a great prince and a man Extraordinary, New proof of the seditious spirit who leads the Synagogue.

Sixth century.

The spirit of hostility against the Christian name and against the ecclesiastical hierarchy being transmitted from father to sons within the Synagogue, this resulted here and there, in the various regions where Jews were located, always some opportunity that presented itself to them to at—to attack and insult the Christian religion, and forced thereby the Church and the princes to keep a close eye on everything particularly this unfortunate nation. At the com—

his approval of a petition from the Jews of Genoa who were asking to be able to repair their synagogue, His response reveals what their pre-tensions and their designs: "And yet know, their said (4), that you have not ceased to be subject to the strictness of the old laws, if you do not abstain not what is forbidden to you. It is true that we We grant you what you ask for, but it's a

(1) Cassiod. Epist., lib. IH, ep. xxvu.

114 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

It is our duty to condemn the wishes that are made by lost people. It is not within our power to do adopt your religion, because no one can be forced to believe against his will. » We find from even in the Chronicle of Milan another decree of Theodoric, who compelled the Jews of this city to distinguish themselves to deter Christians by their clothing and by certain outward signs; which proves that there was in their conduct something suspicious and reprehensible (1).

Baronius, in the year 508, reporting the acts of Saint Caesarius, Bishop of Arles, gives us an idea of what Jewish perfidy could allow itself to do to the detriment of the holy bishop and his episcopal city. When the Franks and the Burgundians were besieging In this city occupied by the Goths, it happened that a cleric had the imprudence to try to leave the city by sliding down the walls by means of a rope. The Goths noticed and arrested him. Thereabove, the heretics, and especially the Jews, stirred up a great uproar, shouting that the bishop had sent secretly this clerk went to the enemy to help them to seize the city; and without giving the bishop the Time to clear their names, they are leaving his church and have them thrown into a dark dungeon to await their conviction.

While all this was happening and the Jews

(1) Muratori, Antiquity. medii ævi, t. I, p. 894.

were looking for ways to ruin the bishop as guilty of treason, one of them, placed in sentencing she attached a letter to a stone on the walls and he threw it as far away from the city as he could, convinced that it would reach the enemy camp. In this letter, making known what his religion was, he advised— milk to the enemies to appear the following night with ladders in the same place, the guarding of which was entrusted to the Jews, setting as conditions for the service he returned to them, that all the Jews be spared in their persons and their property the next day morning, some Goths who had not been afraid to step aside— inside the city walls, they found the letter, and read it. and made it known to everyone what the traitors.

– Around the year 522, the Arab Dhu-Nowas had managed to to seize the scepter of the Himyarites in Arabia; having made himself Jewish, and hoping to realize the idea of this primacy to which constantly drew the Synagogue, animated also filled with a deadly hatred for Christians, he first proclaimed himself son of Moses and began to persecute the faithful those who lived peacefully in the country. Their churches were looted and destroyed, themselves slaughtered indiscriminately of age or sex. At the same time, at the head of a nom— With a large army, he besieged the city of Najran, which he... It was about to be completely ruined if the inhabitants did not agreed to take down themselves a cross that was being erected so as to dominate it. The Christians having taken refuge there— Ses, the Jew resorted to lies and betrayal: he

116 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

he swore an oath that if he were allowed to enter, he would simply be content to wander around and admire the city and that he would then withdraw without harming her (1). The Christians, full of good faith, opened up about this their doors to their most relentless and most treacherous; trampling underfoot his oaths and treaties, He carried out a horrible massacre of all the inhabitants who remained faithful to Jesus Christ; he destroyed the city and all religious monuments; and, not content with a— seeing an overly trusting population exterminated, he excited the King of Persia once again persecuted the Christians of his States.

By acting in this way, the imposter was only obeying the fanaticism of his coreligionists, who said that to treat the Canaanites, that is to say, to exterminate them in all places. The decree issued by God himself against the descendants of Ham, was transported by the authority of the Synagogue on the heads of the disciples of Jesus Christ. Therefore, Emperor Justin, seeing so many excesses, wrote—did he live in Elesbaag, king of the Ethiopians, to hire him to fight this tyrant, who was indeed defeated and overthrown. But hardly any time had passed when already the The Jews of the country had reached an agreement with the pagans to harass and molest the Christians of the surrounding regions neighbors; which determined the successor of Elesbaas to restart the war; its land armies being

(1) Niceph., Hist. eccl., book. XVII.

CHAPTER II, 11 7

supported by an imposing fleet, it was fully-victorious, and master of disposing of the sovereign He gave power to a Christian prince.

All that the implacable hatred of the Jews did suffering in Arabia was being renewed by the Christian Church at the same time in Palestine. There, the Samaritans, united with the Jews, had revolted against the empire (1), and had proclaimed for their king a certain Julian who He was calling for the Messiah. Under his leadership, they declared-waged a furious war against the Christians who lived peacefully the country and the surrounding areas; everything that their property was looted and burned. and their lives threatened everywhere. Baronius, in the search-the things he says about this period, makes us to know how much the Christians had to suffer at that time in their persons and in their possessions. The bones Even holy martyrs were not respected; he took them from their reliquaries to burn them publicly with the pious Christians who had been entrusted with its care and that they horribly mutilated; in short, nothing of this who could insult in the sacred name of Jesus Christ was omitted by these furious people.

About twenty years later, these same Jews and Samaritans whose hatred for Christianity could be satisfied, they protested again in Cé-Sarée of Palestine, massacred a large number of The faithful set fire to the churches and slaughtered the prefect.

(1) Cedren., year 3 of Justinian, and 530 of 4, C.

118 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

imperial himself in the praetorium, after having de-stripped of all his clothes. But all these atrocities
And these acts of fury did not go unpunished: the widow
The unfortunate prefect wrote to the emperor and informed him of everything that had happened. An army was sent to Palestine; Adamantius, who commanded it, did not have rather became aware of the facts and the violence exercised by the Jews against the Christians, which he con-damned some of the guilty to the torture of crosses; others were beheaded, and still others were banished and deprived of their property. Towards the end of the same century, and during the time of Emperor Maurice, the Jews of Persia, Theophylact Simocatta tells us {1}, having Those who supported Varames's faction were severely punished.
ment by Mebodes, "Let the Jews," adds this historian
"nothing, would have powerfully contributed to usurpa-"Varames's tion, there is no reason to be surprised, because
"At that time the Jews of Persia were very-"rich. Having left Judea after the ruin of "their city and the temple, they had taken with them
"Their riches, and they used them to incite..."
"seditions, to fuel a love among the Persians
"of novelty which drove them to revolt. For this
"The Jewish nation is a corrupt and faithless nation,"
"A friend of turmoil and intrigue, fond of exercising the "tyranny; ungrateful, jealous, envious, she fosters con-
"Between us, an unspeakable and implacable hatred."

L_

(1) Historia Mauricii, lib. V, cap. seen.

CHAPTER II. 419

Among other examples of this constant aversion that the Synagogue, ever misguided, bore in the Christian name at that time, we will report a recorded fact by Evagrius in his Ecclesiastical History, under the dated 552, an event that occurred in his time in Constantinople

Jewish child who entered with other Christian children of the same age in a church, received with them the remains Eucharistic bread, as was the custom at the time, distribute it to the children. Back home, he will— He simply recounted what he had done. Then the father flew into a rage; unable to bear the idea that his son had participated in the mysteries of the Christians He threw it into a furnace prepared for the glassmaking. The mother, who knew nothing about this what had happened, and worried about not seeing her enfant, was looking for him everywhere, calling by his name. Finally, after three days, having approached by chance, in her husband's shop, she heard the voice of her son. Suddenly she breaks down the door and sees, to her great surprise, to his surprise, his lively son was in the middle of the flames. The child, having emerged from there, tells everyone about the miracle of his conservation, and soon afterwards receives baptism with his mother. The father, obstinate in the dispositions which he— had committed such a great crime, was condemned to the supplice de lacroix.

In the year 579, Sigebert reports in his Annals, a Jew converted through the teachings of Saint Avitus of Auvergne. and was baptized on Easter Day. At the time when the

190 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

The neorhytus, accompanied by the faithful, entered the city, Another Jew, angered against him, bore the insolence and the fury to the point of throwing the foul oil on his head. The entire population was outraged by this affront; however, they continit for the moment, thanks to Pintervention and the the bishop's words. But some time later, the Jews giving rise to new causes for discontent to the Christians, who flocked en masse to the synagogue gogue, which they completely destroyed. The impression that this event produced on the Jews was such that they asked the bishop to be baptized, and on the day of the At Pentecost they were received into the bosom of the Church.

Following these acts of violence perpetrated by the Jews, and of many other acts committed in contempt of the holy mys— Church traditions in its most august solemnities and particularly on Easter Sunday, the bishops would vi— forced in turn to forbid Jews from... running through the streets and paths during Holy Week, that is, from Holy Thursday until Easter Sunday. including those. The Jews used to in— to consult, especially on those days, the Christians and their whose reading they accompanied with the most unworthy and most outrageous for the mysteries of the Redemption.

The emperors Justin and Justinian, through ex- laws presses and in accordance with the wishes of the clergy, defended to the Jews to take Christians into their service, of circumcise them, and drag them before their courts;

CHAPTER LH. 14921

They took away their power to judge Christians, the declared themselves incapable of bearing arms and piercing See taxes. These measures, dictated by prudence, as Justinian said, their aim was to distance the Jews from all sedition and to protect them from insinuations from those of their brothers who push them there- know: "So that," said the emperor, "they do not conspire" against God, and that they should not dare to re- "to turn against imperial power (1)."

If modern philanthropists would be so kind as to report back- to all these facts, to which criticism has nothing to oppose will they still be able to accuse Christianity of a- to see acted unjustly or excessively harshly towards Jews? Will they be able to continue saying that the Synago- There is nothing hostile to Christian society, nothing of Dangerous for public safety? In all these Facts, on whose side was the wrongdoing? Where is the intolerance? France? Where are the provocateurs? Where is not-only- The harshness, but the barbarity? It seems to us that in Comparing offenses and punishments, we must find these are light and in keeping with the spirit of gentleness of Christianity, despite its rebellious and obstinate character of the Jewish nation certainly authorized a set of much stricter legislation.

And yet Pope Saint Gregory the Great, faithful to this evangelical gentleness as much as to prudence, He was careful not to oppress the Jews, while taking into account

(1) Codex Justiniani, De Hæreticis et Manichæis, and alibi.

199 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

with regard to them the measures ordered by his con-

voluntary sacrifice, striving to smooth things over before them the paths that could lead them back from their straying; but at the same time he was mindful of honor and justice—the transformation of the Church, by showing how much there is in this nation of perfidy, superstition, and inclination to do wrong. In a letter to the Bishop of Terracina, he the blame for the course he took to expel the Jews from a place where they gathered to carry out their ceremonies—They denied and to their prayers. In another letter to the bishops From Arles and Marseille, he disapproves of the project that one had in each of these dioceses to force the Jews to to profess Christianity. Likewise, having learned that in the vicinity of Agrigento, a novice, assisted by a few individuals as unenlightened as himself, had converted a synagogue into a Christian church by means of he commissioned images of the cross and the Virgin to remove these images and return the synagogue to Jews.

But also when it came to avenging the honor of the Church against the pride and superstitions of Judaism daism, the holy pontiff shows a zeal and a li- berta which take no account of any apposi- secular tion, whatever it may be. In a letter to Li- Bertinus, the prefect of Sicily, first reminds him that God raised him to this position to defend His cause. and then he criticizes him for the extreme tolerance he shows with regard to an impious Jew who, taking pleasure in confusing Christian rites and Jewish superstitions secular, had seduced many faithful and had become Among them were slaves: "And while," adds the saint, "that Such crimes should have been severely punished, Justin. Seduced by avarice, he neglected to avenge the insult done to God." Then he urged Libertinus to make sure of the facts, to prosecute the guilty party and compel him to return freedom to his Thracian slaves (1). Let us note in passing the means employed by the Jew to corrupt Justin, a means which at all times has served so well to cover—to expose the intrigues and misdeeds of the Synagogue; that is On this subject, Deacon John expresses himself thus in the Life of the Pontiff: "And when Jewish perfidy emb- usually bent the gold to deceive and slow down the zeal of the Christians, not only did Gregory not accept He never received anything from them, but he looked at their gifts as if "worthy of execration."

CHAPTER II. 193

above all that he did for the glory of God, in particular the laws he introduced against perfithe actions of the Jews, and their disinterestedness with the-which he rejected the offers they made him of a considerable sum of money in the hope of making thus bending the uprightness of his judgment. By seeking to please above all the all-powerful judge, he told him-He preferred to remain innocent and pure rather than to become rich-surgeon. The author of the Life of Saint Gregory adds: "These

(1) S. Gregorit Epist., lib. III, ep. 38. Edit. Maure."

194 – THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

traditions of our ancestors have been preserved until we, and we have the testimony of it before our eyes;
despite all the rich gifts that these men received persistent people offered, but they were never able to enter special relations with the sovereign pontiffs, nor obtain from them any sign of consideration.

Seventh century,

Still clinging to her hopes, still equal-actively put everything in place to improve his ancient glory, to rebuild the Jewish nation upon the ruins of empires and religions, and especially on the ruins of Christianity, the Synagogue was constantly spying some favorable opportunity to rebel and to to satisfy his deep-seated hatred against Christ and his believers. In 609, say Nicephorus and others anna-lists, a very serious sedition broke out in Antioch. The Jews had wanted once again to shake off the yoke of the Christians
Well, and since it was a movement on their part Having prepared in advance, they initially gained the upper hand, and a A large number of Christians perished by fire and sword. Between other distinguished figures were to be deplored.
In this circumstance, the death of Bishop Anastasius.
The Jews put a rope around his feet and dragged him away-rent through the city until he expired in the middle of the pain, insults and outrages; then his body was consigned to the flames. Emperor Phocas severely punished
He condemned these barbarities and expelled the Jews from the city. No one Historians do not tell us that this fatal sedition was provoked, in whatever way follows, by the Christians.

Another equally deplorable event for the Church and which shows just as much perfidy among the Jews, as we are told in the story of Chosroes, and also attested by Zonare (1), Schickard and Baronius, at the year 614. Chosroes, having invaded, at the head of a large army, the provinces of Syria, up to Jerusalem, took captive all the Christians who had not taken refuge in Egypt, and they sold to the Jews. They bought like criminals worthy of death those who were sold to them as slaves, and they slaughtered ninety thousand of them in bathed in the Christian name; then they sacked all the churches, threw into the fire or trampled underfoot sacred vessels. In this carnage of the faithful, in this The destruction of their temples, how could one not see once again the sentence of extermination carried by the Synagogue against the Church of Jesus Christ, as formerly against the Amalekites and the Canaanites?

It is undoubtedly these atrocities committed in the East, through the Jews, to whom must be attributed the rigor of the decree issued by Sisebut in Spain, and obliging all the Jews of the country to receive baptism, under penalty to be harshly criticized, then exiled and deprived of their goods until they show signs of re-

(1) Annales Regum Syria, t. 11, p. 83.

196 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

pentir. In France, a roughly similar law was carried by King Dagobert, who was not unaware of the spirit intolerance with which the Jews were animated towards of Christians, a spirit that the rabbis were keen to cultivate—to maintain and to make ever more ardent. However the influence of the Church greatly tempered the execution—tion of these decrees. Thus the fifth council of Paris ordered that they be allowed the freedom to conscience, but forbade anyone from asking them their services such as military service, or that they be entrusted to the—no external authority over Christians. As for Spain, the fourth council of Toledo, composed of sixty-two bishops, put an end to the coercion

"As for the Jews," this council said in the ca-
 "No, 51° and following, the holy Synod forbids that at
 "In the future, they will be subjected to violence to force them to the "faith: Cut enim vult Deus miseretur, et quem vult
 "tndurat. To proceed justly with regard to them, he
 "We need to make sure they enter voluntarily."
 "on the path to salvation, and not in spite of them."
 "For man has lost himself by obeying the serpent"
 "By his own free will, no man is saved"
 "by faith that by yielding to the invitation of grace and
 "by changing its internal arrangements. That is "Why we must persuade them to convert"
 "the exercise of their free will, and not to force them"
 "to yield by force." Nevertheless, the Fathers of the Concile demand that those who had already submitted to

CHAPTER II. 197

The Church would be obliged, as far as possible, to observe to uphold the doctrine of the Gospel and to abstain from the practices questions of the Synagogue. Then recalling the old * Church discipline regarding the relationships of 'Christians' with the Jews, the council threatens anathema, comnie sacrilegious are those who, yielding to gold and gifts from Jews would second with their help and support this perfidious nation. In canon 65, at the request King Ferdinand's council declares that the Jews do not may be admitted as candidates for the functions public, because such a claim is merely a an insult to Christians. That is why the judges of provinces, in conjunction with the clergy, must pronounce the suspension against all Jews who would be admitted by intrusion, and not suffer that they fulfill public duties. "Anyone
 "whoever acts otherwise will be excommunicated as a sacr-
 "lege." Similarly, the council decrees that the Jews should not will be able to be served by Christians, nor will the buyers to be treated as slaves, "because it is a crime that "Members of Jesus Christ serve the ministers"
 "of the Antichrist (1)."

Let us leave the West for the East where Muhammad, pre-singing a new doctrine and flattering all the pas-human missions, unites the force of arms with seduction to conquer the world. Here again, the Jews hoped take advantage of these new divisions, as they have

(1) Council. Tolet., \V, an. 633.

hoped for from all the previous ones, and imagining that the imposter after declaring war on the Church of Christ will restore the Synagogue to its former state. their former power, are stirring with as much eagerness more lies and fanaticism than ever. Marracci reports (1) that a Jew named Tobba said when speaking of Mahomets: "He testifies to him that he will be sent by God" "Creator of minds. If my life lasts as long as the "His, I will serve as his advisor, as his son, and I will "to suffer harsh torments at the hands of the Sharachins (Christians, "worshippers of the Trinity) and I will give them drink of "chalice of terror and affliction (2)." Such is the support that Muhammad encountered in his early days, and that The Jews granted him permission until they saw him do it. cheap Mosaic laws, transgressing them, and wanting to make a mixture of it with ideas and principles of the Gospel. So they abandoned him, they became his enemies and laid traps for him. No sooner had Muhammad become convinced of the perfidy Caab's Jewish leader, one of their chiefs, that in three days later he expelled all the Jews from the territory of Medina. In the fifth year of the Hijra, he undertook to rid himself of Quraysh Jews; after twenty-five days of resistance In rebuke, they were forced to surrender to Muhammad, who he left them to the discretion of Saad, son of Moad, A Jew like them. This one, to do something agreeable-blue to the new ectarian, condemned all men

(1) Rebuttal. Corani, p. IV, p. 253.

(2) New application of the Cherem.

CHAPTER II. 199

to be slaughtered, and the women to be sold as slaves with their children; as for their possessions, they were divided among Muhammad's soldiers so that there would be would have more possible means of revolt in the future. By Following these events, Muhammad having married a Jewish woman, she tried to poison him to to avenge the death and misfortunes of his fellow believers. Finally, he became certain that a Jew named Jazir dear-chait to incite the inhabitants of Golfan against him; From then on, he began to persecute this unfortunate nation with such relentlessness that, according to a historian was usually the fate of a nation which, clinging to to lose a people of saints, constantly called upon his his own head, the heavenly punishments due to his perfidy.

But this time there was something particular about it, which is that the Jews did not find in Muhammad the feelings of humanity that the evangelical spirit had always inspired by Christians.

Despite the miserable state they were in at the time Reduced to nothing, they were careful not to let anything slip by.
occasions where they could make people endure something something to Christians. In 634, as reported Théophane in his Chronography, they engaged Omar, caliph of the Muslims, to remove the cross from Christ of the Mount of Olives and many others places consecrated by the faithful to the worship of the instrument

(1) Célius, Aug. Curio, Histcria Sarrac, lib. 1.

130 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

the key to our salvation. In his Annals of the Dukes of Brabant, François Harée reports, under the date of 653, that Moawia, a Saracen prince, after having devastated the island of Rhodes, sold the famous colossus to a Jew bronze statue representing Apollo; this enormous statue, long since overturned and broken, was put in The pieces and debris provided the charge of nine hundred camels. One can see in this fact the custom where Jews were thus able to take advantage of wars, of seditions and public calamities to satisfy their greed at the expense of other nations, such as They continued to do so.

Towards the end of the seventh century, the Church and the State had
In Spain, there is much to fear from religious fanaticism.
The Synagogue's politics and philosophy. Always persuaas soon as they were one day raised above all the nations and that they would see Christianity defeated by a self-proclaimed Messiah, descended from the line of David and master of the land, the Jews who lived in Spain did not doubt-were by no means certain that it was among them that ap-to appear as this Messiah, because they looked at each other as the true descendants of the tribe of Judah and of the race of Jesse. Their commentaries on the Prophets, which we will have to examine elsewhere, show how much This idea was deeply rooted among them. Nurtured in these illusions, perpetuated by their masters, flattered in their pride

they only refused to open their eyes to the light of The Gospel, but they were still training again

CHAPTER II. 131

in error those of their coreligionists who, to at that time, they had been baptized in a fairly large way number. Many of these, educated in the documentation-the trine and morality of Christianity, accepted by the con-descent from power to public offices and even with the charges of the court, they remained no less inwardly attached to their old superstitions tions. Blending the practice of Judaism with that of Christ-lianism, which they professed to deceive the authorities ecclesiastical and secular, they retained at heart and in their secret relationships all the rigor of the precepts of Moses and the Pharisaic traditions. A all of this quite naturally combined into a kind of a profoundly immoral life, contrary to nature, and entirely capable of dishonoring the Church and the nation Spanish. This state of affairs could not remain for long-
A time unknown to the sovereign and the episcopate. After Having ascertained the facts thoroughly, King Aegiza convened a gathering bler in Toledo, in 693, a council where five-nine bishops. In a speech he gave during the first meeting, and where he spoke to the Fathers of the con-civic with truly Christian eloquence, he explained what the main objective was that should be propose to the assembly: "What matters most," he said
"For the bishops, it is to put an end once and for all to the
"The perfidy of Jews of both sexes; and for this it is necessary"
"that the laws previously enacted by us against "their perversity and recently renewed have "a full and complete execution; a sanc-

132 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

"New interpretation of these same laws halts the "Excess of Jewish malice. Thus, it will henceforth be
"It was settled that those Jews who persevere in their "obstinacy will not be able to appear before the tribu"nals to handle any matter whatsoever, nor to have "No common interest with Christians." After having listed certain advantages and certain examples
the promises made to those who would sincerely convert,
He adds: "We understand that the entire tribute
"imposed on the Jews of our States, falls back on the charge"

"Attention to traditional prejudices. Among other things"
 "points that we have decreed, we want that "We completely destroy among them the crime ob-
 "scene of sodomy, infamous act which defiles and scourges"
 "It destroys all honest life and provokes heavenly wrath."
 "of the sovereign judge. And as the greater part "of these treacherous men, not obeying God, but the or-
 "Guard, distinguished by an ambition that threatens
 "the throne, whichever of them, abusing honor-
 "neur and durang he would have obtained at court, conspire-
 "would lead to the ruin of the nation and the land of the Goths,"
 "or would seek to incite unrest within "PSpain will be deposed, he and all his descendants, from "all the duties of the palace; he will be, he and his family,
 "reduced to serving for life; his property will be "Taken away and given to whomever the prince wishes." Then comesfollowing, in the acts of the council, the first canon which expresses roughly the same ideas. But, something

CHAPTER H. 133

However just and religious the provisions of this law, and although it was of a nature to happily modify-the conduct of the Jews towards the Christians and of the secular authority, it appears however, by a decree of the following year 694, which she had produced among the Jews in the country face even more hostility than before.
 against the Church and against the throne, more agitation and of hatred against the name of Jesus. The council convened from new in Toledo under the protection and patronage of the same sovereign, acquired the authentic proof of a conspiracy hatched by the Jews of Spain and by their coreligionists in Africa against the nation herself and against the Church. The guilty parties were condemned to perpetual servitude. After that At the opening of the council, the king had set forth the reasons for Following the convocation, the bishops decreed the following:
 in the 8th canon, which we will report in its entirety, so that we might get some idea of what it must have been like then the Jewish spirit:

"Just as righteousness and fairness among the faithful-
 "They must be recognized and rewarded, from
 "Even the perversity of the infidels must be prosecuted."
 "with rigor by the sword of justice. 'For he is "Just that the believers be exalted as much as their "opponents are killed, so that the first
 "always grow in prosperity under the protection
 "divine, and that the others fade away more and more"

"since the unfortunate Jewish people have withered away-

8

134 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

"even by his sacrilege, which he caused to fall upon his "Headed the blood of Christ, and has deserved, many times, the "Name of perjurer by the number of his crimes, he has
"should expect to bear the punishment for the acts he committed"
"Found guilty. Thus we have seen not only "to seek to disturb the Church, but also to strive,
"with insolent audacity, to attract the last evil-
"hours upon the country and upon the entire nation, that is to say "that, believing himself to have arrived at the moment of restoration
"With his power, he undertook to exterminate all the "Catholics. Such criminal and strange illusions"
"had to be dispelled by rigor; and so it is"
"that strict measures have been taken to ensure that everything
"A crime established by law must be punished. Thus in-"
"core, while, gathered in this holy Synod, we "let us give our full attention to other things,
"We were suddenly informed of a conspiracy-
"a plot hatched by the perfidy of these same men-
"my; not only, in defiance of the promises they
"They had done, they defiled, by the practice of their "traditional rites, the robe of faith of which the Church
"had clothed them by pouring over them the water of the holy baptism-
"same, but they still dared to form, like us
"Pavons said, a conspiracy to seize the "throne. It is by their own admissions that our as-"seemed to have had full and complete knowledge of "this criminal enterprise; and that is why we
"We have agreed that they must
"to be subject to irrevocable penalties. Consequently-

CHAPTER II. 135

"quence and by order of our most pious and most religious"
"the noble Prince Égiza (who was inflamed with zeal for the "Lord, and full of zeal for our holy faith, do not "doesn't just want to avenge the insult to the cross"
"of Jesus Christ, but also proposes to remove from the "Guilty by any means they want to do"
"to bring about the ruin of the nation and the country) we decree that:
"stripped of all their possessions, abandoning their ri-
"cheques to the public treasury, and scattered here and there"

"will be slaves of all those to whom they are given command"
"to obey. And as long as they persist in their obsti-
"nation, they will not be able, under any circumstances, to be "restored to liberty, given that they have been fully-
"They were found guilty of a multitude of crimes."

If we want further proof of this criminal
The attempt by the Jews can be found in this passage of Book II, title v, of the Visigothic code: Quod et tempo-ribus nostris detectum facimus, manifestis eorum (Hebræorum) confessionibus retinetur, qui gloriam vestram conati sunt aut gladio interimere, aut mortifera veneni potione decipere. Certainly, one would have the right to trou-
The decree we have just issued is excessively severe.
to quote, if there hadn't been reasons that were entirely... cultural ways of defending religion and the throne against the Jews. In reality, it was about taking down an enemy who could not tolerate any foreign government against its nation, and who hated any religion other than the his own, and above all Christianity. Finally, he

136 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

These various circumstances must be taken into account, that Jews were very numerous in all the provinces
'those of the monarchy, to which they were strongly attached to the idea, hereditary among them, that their nation was destined to exert a great predominance in the world; that they were rich, and therefore had a great influence on a large number of people lacking of fortune and strength of character; that they maintain-maintained close relations with their coreligionscountries of Africa and the bordering provinces of kingdom. The purpose of these relations and this influence Is it not, moreover, found in the principles and the lessons that we have presented from the outset, and to which the nation added a blind faith?

Eighth century.

Exiled from many countries, oppressed in others, it would seem difficult that the Jews had any in-influence in the courts. Generally accused of con-to spire against the thrones, the Synagogue naturally had toto watch with fear over his actions and his tendencies dances. Fallen into ignominy, the object of suspicion and contempt, she had the greatest interest in reforming peoples the slightest reason to believe in his spirit of sedition and revolt. But she seemed to have put a A veil before his eyes, ut videntes non videant. Making ostentation of probity, of humble submission to the gu-

CHAPTER II 137

governments, pretending to render them great services through their financial operations, the Jews were returning always imperceptibly regaining credit; and by Their treasures, used appropriately, they were finishing off to reconcile the spirit of courtiers and princes.

At the beginning of the eighth century, the throne
Spain was occupied by Witiza, whose dispositions tions, too little in line with those of its predecessors-sisters, were immediately appreciated and exploited by the Jews. Through skill and the resources deployed-not only did they obtain ample privileges from him, but vile, but they also had the country recalled their exiled coreligionists, who soon found themselves quite well supported to cause significant harm to the prosperity of the Christian people. Surrendering themselves to all They trampled all the rules against vices.
Catholics, violated marriage laws, diverted-the nation was born of obedience to the sovereign Pontiff, they even persecuted the bishops and insulted them everywhere their actions in honor of the Gospel and the Church, to great scandal among the faithful, who were continually shocked by it.
witnesses. In the end, the Spaniards, resolved to no longer to endure the insolence of this perfidious nation, and listening only to their zeal for the faith, they dethroned Witiza, and the protector of the Jews lost his life with the power.

In 744, the population of Toledo, Spain, was composed of Arabs, Jews, and Christians. The day of the Palms, at the time when they were out of 8.

138 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

the city and all its members devoted to the ceremonies of their worship,
The Jews, in agreement with the Arabs, hastened to... sea part of the gates, and, exiting through the others, they – were all indiscriminately massacred. Their possessions–

Then came the prey of their murderers.

A few years later, that is to say in 723, a Jew fanatic, who sought only to ruin the Christian worship–
tien, promised in the name of heaven to Yazid the possession of the power over the Arabs for forty years if he ab– smoothed the Christian churches, as well as the images of Jesus Christ and the Saints, flattered and seduced by this With assurance, Yazid hastened to issue a decree conforming to the assigned goal. The Christians tried to stop it.
execution; but then the Jews brought to the Arabs the competition of their violence; the holy images dis– appeared partly under the lime; others were burned
Some were bruised, others were trampled underfoot and broken.

Around the same time, Emperor Leo the Isaurian, also swayed by the flattery and intrigues of this unfortunate people, decreed also in all its States abolish holy images, threatening to severe penalties for those who would oppose it. Saint Ger– hand, Nicetas, Theophanes and Baronius, all speak also the requests that the Jews made to Leo so that he might extend to the images of Jesus Christ the same restrictions decreed against images of Saints.

Canisius (1) reports a conversation of Andronicus

(1) T. IV, p. 302.

CHAPTER II. 139

of Constantinople, with a Jew, in 798, in the– Two events are recounted, one of which happened in Bérvyte, and the other in Constantinople. In both From these cities, the Jews having encountered an image of Jesus crucified had taken the opportunity to renew, as much as they could through their actions and through the pa–
the most outrageous roles, everything their fathers had done against the sacred person of the Redeemer.
But by an act of divine mercy, which wanted to show the gravity of the offense committed against God, we saw li– outraged mage shed blood, and the witnesses, struck– Overwhelmed by this miracle, they abandoned the Synagogue for to cling to the Gospel.

Ninth century,

In his history of Normandy, Dumoulin reports that in 802 the Jews, always ready to betray the Christians those who admit and tolerate them among themselves, li-surrendered the city of Bourges to the enemy, who, by The following section was ransacked and burned. The city of Périgueux suffered the same fate. It was again through betrayal. similar to how the Danes seized Bordeaux in 848, and set it on fire. Finally, the same competition Jews helped the Moors, who were besieging Barcelona in 852, to take control of the city; she was put then to the pillaging, and almost all the Christians who The inhabitants were massacred (1).

(1) Annales Bertiniani e scriptor. rer. gallic., t. VIF, p. 65.

140 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

At that time, Agobard, Bishop of Lyon, addressed, together with several of his colleagues, representations to the sovereign regarding the seriousness of the scandal which resulted in religious and moral practices superstitious beliefs in use among Jews living in the middle Christians; the prelates also pointed out the infamous and the odious trafficking that the Jews carried out in the person even Christians, secretly abducted from their homes thousands and delivered to the barbarians of Africa; it was known by men and women who had escaped the chains of servitude, what they had suffered to be filled with atrocities and infamies on the part of the Jews.

In his Fastes de la France, Aimoin, recounting the death of Charles the Bald, said that to cure oneself of the fever, this prince took a powder that had been sent to him a Jewish doctor in whom he had great confidence; but It was a poison for him that ultimately carried him off. eleven days. This fact is also attested by Mauclerus and Calvisius; only Basnage believed he could dismiss him doubting it, without noticing that a century earlier, A caliph had been killed by this same drug. Also prescribed by a Jewish doctor.

Tenth century,

The following centuries present us with the Synagogue, pursuing its same goal, still animated by the same spirit, always seeking to harm Christianity in its civil and religious existence. The ec- canons

CHAPTER II. aa

Clesiastics and contemporary history attest to the the perversity of Jewish practices and customs, the the gravity of the resulting scandal for the faithful to in the environments where Jews were allowed to live, the ou- tragedies done to Christian worship, and the harm caused to the so- company by usurious contracts, by agreements unjust, through frauds of all kinds which condemn evangelical morality, but which find their full and complete justification in the Talmudic doctrines ques, as we demonstrated from the outset cement.

Around the middle of the tenth century, the city of Sparta being ravaged by a pestilential disease, the ma- Gistrats begged Saint Nicol to come to the middle of- instead of them and to ask God for the cessation of the scourge. The saint promised to go there, and assured at the same time as long as the evil would disappear as soon as one had drove the Jews out of the city, and that they would not defile it plus the land of their abominations and their sa- crileges. The magistrates followed the saint's advice, and the expulsion of the Jews actually brought about the cessation of scourge (1).

Eleventh century.

In the year 1009, following a council held in Arles,

The Jews addressed letters to the reigning prince in Babylon to persuade him to destroy a high church in Jerusalem and dedicated to the Redeemer; to support

(1) Edmond Martène, Life of S. Nicon, t. VI, p. 859.

142 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

These tips led to slander against the Christians of Palestine. tine, who was accused of conspiring against the sovereign

With that one, yet another church was destroyed. the region, dedicated to Saint George, martyr. But what—that some time later the Christians came to discover the evidence of the Jews' wickedness towards them, and he They made them suffer the punishment (1). Who here could pity—to tell the Jews about what they then had to suffer in their persons and their property?

Five years later, in 1014, during the pontificate of Be—In the eighth day, the Jews of Rome were guilty. of unworthy outrages against the august symbol of our redemption. There again they renewed against a crucifix all the attacks that their fathers had committed put into words and deeds against the person of Jesus—Christ. It was a Jew himself who proclaimed them, and on the evidence that was acquired against them, the criminals They were condemned to the ultimate torture (2).

The death of Evrard, Bishop of Trier, which occurred in 1066, was the result of the revenge of the Jews, who had resolved his downfall, because the worthy prelate made use of his power by banishing from the city all those who—between them who were a cause of moral ruin or mad—deadly for Christians through unjust acts and scandalous (3).

(1) Annales Bertiniani è scriptor. rerum gallic., t. VII, p. 68.

(2) Labbe, Glaber, lib. HI, cape vin.

(3) Dionys. Sammarthani, Ga/lia christ., an. 1066.

CHAPTER II. 143

Saint Gregory VII, afflicted with humiliation where found the Church of Spain due to the excessive freedom that King Alfonso granted to the Jews, he wrote to this prince: "Do not allow that in the lands "who are subject to you, that Christians may be under the "domination by the Jews, nor that the latter exercise over "They have no power. Putting Christians under the do—" "the mination of the Jews, and to force them to recognize these "For judges, is this not to oppress the Church of God and "To exalt the synagogue of Satan? To want to please the "Ennenis of Christ, isn't that an insult to the person—" "Does it even sound like Christ? Beware then, O my "Son, to act towards your Lord and Creator as "You would not allow your service to act with impunity—" "Terror towards you. Remember that it is to the bunté "and to the mercy of Christ that you owe honor—

"Kings of Spain, etc. (1)."

The Annals of the Benedictines, speaking of the perversion—
The city of Count Jean de Soissons tells us that his mother, driven by ambition and a love of power, had caused the death of his own brother, aided in this by the complicity and assistance of a Jew. Facts of this nature, so often attributed to the Jews, gives rise to think seriously about anyone who wants to study the history of this unfortunate nation.

(1) Baronius, year 1080.

144 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

Twelfth century,

In his Chronicle, Jean Brompton reports that, the Good Friday of the year 1143, the Jews who lived Syracuse tied a live goat to a cross to insult the death of the Savior and the practitioners in this way.
questions of the Christian religion. Accused by a woman named Apis, and convinced of this abominable sacrifice—legion at the tribunal of Prince Tancred of Sicily, the coupables were condemned to death.

No doubt, moreover, as we have seen up to now—felt, and as we will see later, that the Jews did not want to revive always among themselves and to to pass on to their descendants the memory of the torture of Jesus Christ. To continue insulting him, they have seen outraged by the Holy Eucharist, engaging in acts fury against the crucifix, renewing the passion of Savior through the sacrifice and immolation of Christians innocent, or engaging in barbaric and sacrites, to the most heinous acts, finally to imprecations and blasphemies, always showing at world of what profound antipathy, what hatred they are animated against the person of Jesus of Na-Zareth.

Otto the Frisian says that in 1146 the Jews were persecuted cut in Germany and France, and that a big name—
Many of them suffered greatly. In truth,
If we examine the facts in detail, we will be able to to find among these unfortunate people many in—rightly accused or beaten; but it is also certain that there was then a multitude to be borne by the Jews of specific events that had pushed the pa- attitude of Christians towards this unjust nation and cruel. This will become evident later.

In the meantime, if we want to get an idea of what the Jews brought misery and shame upon the Christians around the middle of the twelfth century, that Pon takes a look at the letter that Pierre, abbot of Clugny, wrote to Louis VII, King of France, at the time of where this prince was preparing for war against the Saracens. It is in this letter that Peter, with a Completely evangelical frankness, leads to the foot of the throne his complaints and legitimate claims against abuse of the freedom and protection granted to Jews at that time, and for a long time already, so that they had succeeded, through sheer persistence, monopolies and frauds, to concentrate all the treasures in their hands of France (1): "But what good will it do," he said, "to com-
"to defeat the enemies of Christian hope in the e-
"foreign and in distant lands, if, near
"we and in our midst, the perverse and blasphemous Jews"
"Phemators, far more criminal than the Saracens,"
"can still freely continue, as "They have done, by blaspheming, outraged and trampled on
"The feet of Jesus Christ and his most august mysteries?..."
"If we must abhor the Saracens, who

(1) Duchæne, t, IV.

146 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

"However, they admit with us that Jesus Christ is "Born of a virgin, but who separate from us on
"Other points, what remoteness and what horror"
"Should we not have compassion for the Jews, who do not accept-"
"They agree with us in nothing concerning Christ"
"who have none of our beliefs, and who even reject-
"They try, blaspheme, and ridicule motherhood"
"virginal and all the mysteries of our Redemption?"

"I don't mean at all that we should..."
"to put to death; but what I ask is that we "punish them to a degree proportionate to their

"that which is at once a condemnation of li-"Iniquity and a satisfaction given to charity? What "more just than to strip them of everything they
"They accumulated through fraud? They plundered and stole"
"like thieves, and what's more, like thieves"
"Their insured, until this day, have enjoyed impunity. What What I'm saying is common knowledge. Because it's not by "the simple tasks of agriculture, nor by the service
"regular in the armed forces, nor by the exercise of function-
"honest and useful actions that they make the cereals abundant"
"them in their shops, the wine in their cellars, the "money in their purses, gold and silver in "Their coffers. How much they have amassed throughout this..."
"which they took by trickery from the Christians, by all this
"which they bought furtively and at a very low price from the vo-
"their, who have passed many things through their hands
"Objects that are most precious to us! If a thief comes

CHAPTER II. 447

"to steal, during the night, censers, crosses,
"consecrated chalices, he escapes the prosecution of the "Christians by resorting to the Jews; and finding among
"from them a security that is unfortunate for us, not-
"He is preparing for new misdeeds, but "He delivers to the synagogue of Satan all that he has in-
"The lifting of the sacred in our churches."

"And what these sacred vessels, delivered, do not perceive"
"Jesus Christ senses the insults of the Jews in them."
"For, as I have learned many times from men
"not suspects, the perversity of the Jews makes them em-
"to bend these celestial vessels to uses which are a "reproach for us and for Jesus Christ himself:"
"a horrible thing to think about and one would never want to-
"But come on! Furthermore, for such a critical business to..."
"minel between the Jews and the thieves could be done in
In complete safety, there existed a law as old as "diabolical, yet carried by Christian princes"
"Look, by virtue of which if any sacred object-
"that was found in the possession of the Jews, or if
"had concealed some sacrilegious theft, the possessor"
"was not obliged to make restitution, nor even to do
"To know the thief who had sold him the item. We "leaves a detestable sacrilege unpunished among the Jew"
"that the Christian is made to atone for by horrific torture-
"Rible of the rope."

If we move from Gaul to England, the an<

Christians also made unhappy by the vexa-

148 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

tions of the Jews protected by the princes; and we will see there-will continue to cause the saddest events to result from this state of affairs. Walter Hermingford, in his chronicle from the year 1189, telling us about the coronation of Richard I, King of England, ceremony at which the Jews had taken part despite the prohibition against them was done, he said, and from that moment they began to crack down.
against them, and he adds: "But it is especially in York that the Jews suffered the most, because there they had managed to keep all Christians in their dependency through their usurious loans; all property Christians, and even sacred objects, had ended up to fall into the hands of the Jews. And all this thanks to the special protection of kings who, in their needs, re-ran to the treasures of the Jews, allowing them to exchange for engaging in unfair trafficking to the detriment
"Poor and innocent Christians."

William of Newbridge, on the occasion of the same Richard's coronation, one wonders what the because of these extreme measures taken against the Jews. He said he wouldn't have done anything if they weren't motivated.
through fear of certain magical operations at-which the Jews had then given themselves up to, and also by lap-the apprehension we had about seeing them always make sure more royal protection at the expense of Christians. What is certain is that enjoying then of this protection as they had received it from-Then, for a long time, they exercised their monopolies with unlimited freedom, and found themselves, by a scandal-

CHAPTER II. 449

their reversal of order, surrounded by more than consideration and advantages compared to other subjects.
Proud of this position, they lifted the heaviest tributes on the Christians and lavished on Christ the more insolent outrages. Trivet adds that their covetous-This led them to alter and clip coins, a crime which led to the condemnation of some of them as early as the year 4170, and which dated back to a much earlier time.

Finally, let's listen to Guillaume himself tell us what granted to the Jews: "In Linna," he said, "where lived

"Many of these people, and where, because of their name-
"bre, of their immense riches and of the protection
"which they enjoyed, they had become insolent and "cruel, a movement formed against them, and "This is the occasion on which one of their number converted."
Having embraced Christianity, they saw in him nothing more than a de-
"A servant who rebels against the laws of the nation; eager for his "blood, they were only looking for an opportunity to sate-
"to see their fury upon them; finally one day they armed themselves and "They threw themselves upon him as he passed by. To
"To escape the danger, the good novice took refuge in "a nearby church. This was not, however, an obstacle-
"key to the rage of his persecutors; they rushed in
"Furious with the church doors, they made them fly
"into pieces and tore the neophyte from his sanctuary."
"At that moment, a universal cry arose among the faithful."
"who were present and calling for help. This
"A cry was heard in the distance; its source was soon known."

450 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

"Because they ran armed and eagerly to the de-"Deliverance of the persecuted Christian. The inhabitants of
"in this place, fearing the king's wrath, they acted only with "a certain moderation; but a large number of "young foreign men, who had come for business"
"in commerce, they put more determination into it and did not
"did not spare the insolent enemies of the "Christianity, so that they abandoned
"the fight and fled." Which side are the Wrongs? Where are the provocateurs here now?

But these are not the only evils that this evil-happy people made to Christian society, towards the same era. He was still dominated by a spirit of pride. and of revolt; and under the inspiration of this spirit he always found some individual more excitable and more perverse in proclaiming himself among the nations as the awaited Messiah, destined to raise the Jewish people to-above all others, to give him domination without limits, and above all to ruin the empire of Christ-Christianity. In the year 1137 it appeared in France, among the Jews, An imposter who took the name of Messiah. King Louis the Young Man, seeing the multitudes that this imposter gathered around him the legitimate fears of se-ditions that everyone was experiencing, caused the synagogues to prevent all gatherings. Soon.
Then we seize the troublemaker and his main

The following year, another fanatic, named David

(1) Christophe Wagenseil, Tela ignea Satane, t. E, p. 238.

CHAPTER II. 451

Almussar incited the Jews of Persia against the authority by also claiming to be the Messiah; he gathered even a formidable army with which he dared to march-expensive against the capital. It was only with great difficulty that this mass of people could be brought back into the fold of duty rebels. Subsequently subjected to heavy tributes, they were in addition, obliged to wear at all times a sign of their revolt.

In Cordoba, in 4157, another imposter, arrogating to himself the same title, managed to draw the Jews after him of Spain. Their audacious claims, which did not-they were aiming for nothing less than the overthrow of the government, attracted-These unfortunate people are subjected to harsh and unjust conditions. deserved. Ten years later they renewed the same attempts, so much so that the Christians were forced to resorting to arms to suppress these movements insurrectionists. This second uprising appears to have was provoked by another fanatical Jew from Arabia, who had the secret to doing extraordinary things by means of which he deceived his coreligionists res and a fairly large number of Arabs whom he brought to the rebellion. Armed force was necessary to prevail. seditious people, and although their leader had subsequently condemned to death and executed, the superstition of his some members even went so far as to claim that he was still alive and that he had been resurrected.

In Persia, in 1174, another Jew, displaying the same claims forced the king to take up arms to to compress similar movements. And the century was not finished before the Jews renewed their en-undertaken, so as to hold the entire Persian nation in a rather long period of commotion.

459 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

All these facts are not only undisputed his nations, but in addition they are confirmed by the even the leaders of the Synagogue, some of whom limit themselves to deplore the sad end of all these fanatics as well as the unfortunate outcome of their ventures, while the others praise their memory and do not mention Their name is revered. Rabbi Maimonides, in a letter addressed to the Jews of Marseille, Salo-My Ben-Sevet and other Rabbis speak at length- the actions of these fanatics and the specific acts of each of them. Now, we ask this of the apologists of the Synagogue: was this an act of justice or of violence on the part of the authorities, either in France or in Spain, whether in Persia or Arabia, what a reprimand! What about the audacious claims of the rebellious Jews? On what right were all the seditions based? created by them in the midst of foreign nations? In countries where they were tolerated only at the expense of the society and religion, what reason did they have to seeking to overthrow legitimate power?

It should also be noted that this was not the op- pressure they would have had to suffer that carried them to revolt; but it was their blind trust and obstinate in the Messiah they were waiting for, who armed them at every moment against the State, whatever the rest their situation among the people. That is because of their eyes, it was not only a good and honest thing, but it is a religious act to rebel following their Messiah against the power and to overthrow it; for such was the consequence of this deep-rooted prejudice in their minds, that they would one day dominate the the whole world and completely abolish Christ- Tianism. In all these various insurrections, we have could see that the success of the Jews, under the leadership of fanatics who appointed themselves their leaders, had been more or smaller in inverse proportion to the plus or minus of vigilance and strength that governments had against which they rebelled; for many times, and we saw it clearly throughout the whole part of the history we have gone through, we knew how to warn in time the disasters and calamities that threatened Christian peoples in particular; while others- three times the preponderance of the Jews, already too well established- blie previously, was about to deliver everything to them has sealed the fate of Christians who are already impoverished and oppressed.

CHAPTER II. 453

is not only among Christian nations and In Europe, it is still among the Muslims of Asia, that the Jews were rising up against legitimate authority, allowing themselves to be drawn in at the first call of some im-poster; so that the Muslim princes ended by driving them out of all their provinces. In the
In the eleventh century they were driven out of Babylon;
the following, they were banished from the entire empire of 9.

454 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

Saracens. And Victor of Cobden makes a very good observation that at that time, in the midst of the Saracens, the Jews were, of by their own admission, reduced to the most miserable condition and subjected to all contempt; and this because of these steps-greedy and proud sions that led them to deceive by those with whom they were dealing and to disturb the order wherever they were found in sufficient numbers.
to finish disabusing those who support them, we Let us add that it was obviously not hatred, the selfishness and intolerance of the Christians who persecuted were the people of Israel in the Muslim provinces tanes from Asia and Africa; it was only because Jewish perfidy everywhere called for execution public creation about this unfortunate nation.

The thirteenth century offers us, like the previous one examples of this barbarity with which the Jews sacrificed Christian children to their hatred against Jesus Christ and made them serve in their operations magical. We will address this topic in a chapter to part, and we will only observe here that if we Let's not talk about the mistreatment that the Jews have
The fact that he had to suffer during the course of this century is that he
The cause must be attributed to these abominable crimes of which they had been guilty in various countries of Europe, as we will demonstrate until-than obviously.

CHAPTER 155

Thirteenth century,

However, considering from another perspective the an-stated by Mr. Peel in this speech where he reports the truly barbaric treatment by John I, King of England land, inflicted on a Jew from Bristol, ordering that he be he pulled out a molar tooth every day until he would have paid a sum of ten thousand silver marks. The fact is undeniable, as is also undeniable that this cruel king, led astray by hateful advice, did not he was not content with persecuting the Jews of his states by extorting money from them, but he also exercised his tyranny towards Christians, and in particular con- among the sacred persons, whom he stripped of their possessions, that he even had put to torture, and of which several su- they suffered martyrdom under a prince not very different from these Roman emperors who in the early centuries of the Church inflicted so many cruelties on the disciples of Jesus Christ (4). Furthermore, Sir Robert Peel will not be able to to disregard everything that was done then the Jews, even more active and cruel in Pégard des Christians that John [er] was not; and meanwhile, the history- The director will demand an explanation here from Mr. Peel for an error which seems to betray bad faith or ignorance in him to an uncommon degree; if he actually acted by

(1) Matthew Paris, year 1210.

456 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

ignorance, let him resign himself to learning the facts; we Let's explain them to him.

Around this same time, Philip Augustus, king of France published strict laws against usury and fraud which the Jews engaged in in their relations trade with Christians. But the intentions Philippe having not sufficiently achieved their goal, Saint Louis, his successor, published new edicts, and first ordered that the Jews wear ha- * commonly and everywhere a distinctive mark that They were recognized. Then, to ensure execution With his decrees against usury, he compelled all the great of his kingdom to swear an oath that they would do them observe and that they would not allow the violation to be im- punished. Finally, he subjected the Jews to certain conditions if they wanted to be tolerated in the kingdom: that- it was a matter of becoming merchants or artisans, or of earning their livelihood through some honest profession, such as the other subjects. These regulations, which Henri Sauval ap-that a Jew might make some usurious profit, besides that he was obliged to return everything he had unduly- If it was perceived as wrong, it was still rigorously punished. However, it was not lacking in the king's councils, of men to represent to him what interest-bearing loan was the lifeblood of commerce; to eliminate it would be ruinous. the people, depriving the colonists of the means to cultivate the lands and to the merchants the means to make their trade: Saint Louis scorned all these reasons;

CHAPTER 1. 457

For as long as his reign lasted, this disorder, which his predecessors The authorities had tolerated it out of avarice or habit, had to stop absolutely. He also took care to to know to one's children the resulting harms the company, so that its prescriptions continued to be in force after his death (1).

We see in German history that in 1222 the Western Jews rose up over the rumor that an ar- Persian army, accompanied by their brothers from the East, was heading towards our region; they were convinced that For them, it was an army of liberators, and they had given to the chief who commanded it the title of son of David.

At the general assembly of its states held in Bar- In Celone, James I, King of Aragon, published a constitution tion in which, says Pierre de Marca (2), he claims- it would be necessary to put a reasonable limit on the wear and tear practiced by the Jews, by forbidding them to receive more than twenty percent annual interest; which probably then seemed a rather modest benefice. From there one can judge the extent of Jewish avarice. He decreed, Furthermore, that in the future no faith would be placed in the ser- items lent by the Jews, (let us recall their documents) (trines at this point!) He therefore wanted us to refrained from asking them, and that it not be admitted as evidence against their debtors that regular titles, or legal testimonies, or finally pledges and mortgages. Finally, they were declared ineligible to fill them out. public functions and they were forbidden to have Christians at their service. Despite these regulations, the king was forced, twelve years later, to take new strict measures against insatiable avarice and The Jews were tough, and they always found a thousand ways to extort money and property from the faithful, which de- For these people, the danger of apostasy often arose. All of this, however, did not greatly intimidate the Jews. that the following year one of them failed to deceive Christian with such skill that he found himself in difficulties from which it was very hard for him to extricate himself.

(1) Edmond Martene, Collect. veterum monumentor., t. I. Henri Sauval, vol. 11, History of Paris, book X.

(2) Marca Hispanic., lib. IV, year, 1228.

If we want to see, on the other hand, what the spirit of patience and gentleness of the Church in the face of perversity Jewish, one should consult the canons contained in its councils. One will notice with what care the Episcopate was intent on removing all reproach from the Christian name of cruelty and to instill in the faithful respect and tolerance for the Jewish nation. We will be content to mention what the council of 1236 decreed Towers against those of the crusaders who, at the time of doing the war against the infidels, attacking property and the no one from the Jews who, in their eyes, were making a cause common with the enemies of the Christian name. At the cha- pitreiv the council said: /Vos autem districtius inhibits mus (1) ne Cruces Ignati, vel alii christian, Judæos

(1) Labbæi Concil. Turonense, an. 1236.

CHAPTER II. 459

occidere, seu verbare, vel bona eorum invadere, vel au- ferre, vel quascumque injurias eisdem inferre præsu- mant, cum Ecclesia eos sustineat, quæ non vult mortem peccatoris, sed magis ut convertatur et vivat, scituri quod si contra præsumpserint, ultionem canonum non evadent. May the Synagogue in turn show us the cannons and decrees that it then issued against its children, since they were putting to death Christians, they set traps for them, betrayed them, stripped them of their possessions as much as they could- were, and were finally seeking every means to ruin and to overthrow the Church.

In his research and observations on the Jews, Schudt cites a case of collision that occurred in Frankfurt around the Christians, one of whom wanted to be baptized, in was not only dissuaded by his own people, but also was materially prevented from doing so by his family and by his relatives; which led to the collision we are talking about—words between Jews and Christians. Words that We had initially discussed this, but we soon got down to brass tacks. and a war was waged in which some Christians perished well, but where a greater number of Jews lost—kill either by the sword or by fire, which these unfortunate people lit up to their own detriment as to the detriment of Christians, and which destroyed a great part of the city (1). From this, one can judge what were the hatred and intolerance fostered within the Synagogue—against the name of Christ, since the instinct of the conservation sometimes gave way, among the Jews, to desire blind to harming Christianity.

(1) Scudtius, De origine el incremento Judæorum, p. 521.

460 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

Poggiati, on the authority of Matthieu Pâris, writer contemporary, recounts the attempts made by Jews in 1241 to bring down Germany and what—than other countries under the rule of the Tartars and the Cumen, whom they called their brothers as descendants in those of the two that Alexander the Great transported in the mountains of Asia: "In a council sessions: "Since God allowed us to have "to suffer under the domination of the Christians, the momentest arrived where, freed from servitude by a "Another judgment from God, this time it's our turn." "to oppress Christianity. For behold, our brothers "left their homeland to reduce the entire world "under their power and ours. As much as our service—"The struggle has been long and cruel, so too will the struggle be long and cruel." "Glory awaits us. Let us go to meet them." "carrying with us wine, weapons and fro—"lying." To accomplish their plans, the Jews deceive—they trick the Christians into believing that the Tarflaws in their religion meant they drank only that wine that they had done themselves, and that is how they obinsisted that they be allowed to transport this beverage, which would later prove fatal to the Tartars themselves because of the poison that had been mixed in. The Christians

Too credulous, they allowed the Jews to circulate freely until... than on the borders of Germany, where treachery was discovered by customs officers; in the objects Weapons of various kinds were found during transport.
 that the Jews were going to pass on to their brothers.
 The guilty parties were condemned as they deserved:
 some confined to a life sentence, others—many were put to death with their own weapons. Who can—Are we accusing here? And doesn't the historian have the right to to exclaim, as he does: "Unheard-of betrayal! And com—
 "How then do we tolerate a nation like this in the middle of..."
 "Place of us?"

In the history of the archbishops of Trier published Edmond Martene alludes to this fact and to the wild hopes awakened among the Jews, which They believed then, at the moment, that their Messiah was about to arrive, their reign will be re-established and extended over the ruins of Christianity. Despite the peril that always threatened it From such enemies, the Church turned a blind eye on their infidelity, awaiting their return, and left them to live in peace among his children.

Now, if we want to get some insight into the evils caused by Jewish perversity in society Christian in Germany at the time we are discussing,
 , let us take a look at the letter that the Pope Gregory IX addressed to the bishops of Germany the su—throw of the humiliation in which Christians lived.
 The reason was that Jews were raised to positions of responsibility.
 public, and especially that they had at their service

e

162 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

faithful of your sex over whom they exercised all a kind of cruelty and infamy, even forcing them to to be circumcised. On this subject, the Sovereign Pontiff strongly urged the bishops to seek support from the secular arm to remove the Church's disgrace from Jesus Christ. At the same time he was addressing the king of Hungary through its legate Cardinal Jac—ques, bishop of Palestrina, and implored him to put a a check on the insolence of the Jews in his states. Finally, the con—all usual communication and all kinds of life common with the Jews, because there was fear justified in being poisoned by them, to abstain also of commercial relations with them, because the initiative abandoning the pursuit of profit could burden the conscience of the Christian Here, or the Jew's cunning, playing with the good The faithful man's faith made him his victim. They defended him by in addition to Jews visiting sick Christians, to practice medicine on them, in fear that they do not administer harmful substances to them under the pretext of medication, or by resorting to magical operations, they did not train the fa-wounded in apostasy by the hope of recovering the health. They were forbidden from staying in the streets when The holy sacrament of the Eucharist was carried, because that they were taking the opportunity to blaspheme the saint in the name of Jesus and to insult the people present (1).

(1) Vid, Canis. sub hoc anno and Bartolucci, Bibliot. rabbi., t. IV.

CHAPTER II, 463

And while history thus offers us in the facts prove Jewish perversity, and its injustices against the Church, in that same century the rabbi Moses Maimonides, who was then writing his commentaries silenced on Mosaic laws, he poured out his hatred there against the society of the faithful, expressing hope whose ruin he and his family flattered themselves on seeing pro-chain of Christianity.

If we now refer to the principal motives principals who expelled the Jews from England to at the end of this century, we will first see that it was the barbarity that led them to sacrifice children, a crime which we will discuss elsewhere and which alone would suffice for to banish them to the deserts of Libya, and then the bad faith they put into everything their relations with Christians, bad faith which This stems from their own admissions. English historians they all agree on how much their nation has lost to this contact. Matthieu Pâris notes, under the date from 1250, that the Jews having succeeded, through hypocrisis and intrigue, to win the prince's favor, had succeeded in making certain inactions suspect him. traitors and to have them removed from office. The same author, recounting the conversion of some Jews in 1259, is expressed

"In this way escapes the devil's snares, and
"as punishment for an act of villainy he had "Formerly committed. For it was said that it was in his "house where the poisonous beverage had been prepared—

464 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

"sounded who took the lives of a great number of gentle people—
"English men. And this fact was confirmed by his "confession. But when he acted this way he was only doing one
"Demon; now he has been changed into a Christian."
Many other similar facts will establish a undeniably what at certain times
Some people thought they could call it into question.

Elsewhere the same author speaks of another Jew who had a particular horror of the name of the Most Holy Virgin; he had placed her image in a filthy place and took pleasure in defiling it with paroles and the most obscene acts. It went so far as to strangle his wife who, out of a sense of honor—out of modesty and decency, he had shown more respect for this image and had wiped away the garbage from which its Her husband covered for her every day (4). This abominable crime—blue having been discovered, as well as the patterns which had made him commit it, the murderer was locked up in the dungeons of the Tower of London. Wanting then to escape the torture he so richly deserved, the
The detainee offered to make revelations that prove—would say that all the Jews in England were traitors of the worst kind. (Which can very well be admitted—to put it in perspective, considering what they were tending towards in the middle of society.) Wanting at all costs to prevent it from being following up on this accusation, his coreligionists did everything in their power to have him convicted

(1) Paris. Hist, Anglic., p. 758.

CHAPTER II. 165

dead. But Count Richard intervened on his behalf.
Then the Jews accused him of other crimes, among others others for having defaced the currency, and they offered to counts a sum of one thousand marks to make it con-damned to death. One might wonder, in passing, what that an honest judge would think such things today

who are now acting as protectors and apologists of Judaism? | |

It was also during this period that Henry III, having tasked a few trusted men with conducting an investigation concerning the wealth that was in the hands of the Jews, He even added a Jew to their case, who then became the accuser. of his fellow believers, and revealed to the Christians what Secret perfidy was employed to harm them. The vigilance of the magistrates only became more severe and more active; and even though one was very inclined to see some exaggeration in the revelations of the Jew, It had to be acknowledged that there were very few of them, if any at all—times there were some, when the facts came to bear witness of the deception of the Synagogue. Matthieu Pärís, do—observing that in his time all Jews had with a miserable air, adds that none of them are real—living in misery, because they create means of subsistence for themselves. tence, he said, by altering the coins, by falsifying the seals and papers; several times we have them for—They were prosecuted for these misdeeds, and found guilty. were sentenced to death. Knightton speaks of the same and tells us what punishments several of them suffered—rent during the reign of Edward in 1277. The chronicle Thomas Wiche's is even more explicit. It reads:

466 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

"The English Parliament having had occasion to convince itself"
"of the frauds that the Jews had employed to "the regard for many Christians to deceive them in "the contracts they entered into with them, obliged the pre—
"first to return all the papers they possessed,
"and all obligations contracted by Christians"
"Those in favor of the Jews were annulled. Six years and afterwards, as the Jews continued to practice the
"the same kind of wear and tear, a decree came to forbid them
"to lend their money at interest and put them in the ne—
"cessation to seek their means of subsistence in "trade and the work of their hands. But in—
"although these regulations to which we were subjected
"The Jews, though not without results, however this "was not enough to curb their avarice;
"Always inclined to deceive, they began to trim and
"to alter the currencies, so that the merchants of "The continent ceased to frequent the coasts and the "markets in England, which caused the price to rise"
"their goods in the kingdom above the "Ordinary course. An order having seized and impri—

"trial, and it turned out that few of them were in-"Nocents. The most guilty were condemned to
"died with some Christians who had converted"
"their accomplices,"

Finally, in 1289, the royal and ecclesiastical council,

CHAPTER 11. 467

considering the intolerance of the Jewish nation under all civil or religious relations with persons those who profess another religion, considering the blasphemies and outrages that attack the mystery of the Redemption, considering thefts and frauds committed to the detriment of the faithful, to the point that well families were reduced to the most extreme misery, carries a decree that banished the nation to per-petty. It should be noted, however, here that in the execution of this measure, some sailors having stolen Jews during the crossing, they were severely punished by the royal court. De Larrey, who is discussing this question of the expulsion of Jews from England, does not can't help but admire the wise slowness that the gou-
the government opposed the general impatience of the people English, and he adds that moreover "Jewish culture had has the skillful care to always keep sums at the disposal
"the prince's position, while enriching himself through
"illegitimate means that ruined families and ap-
"They were impoverishing the state. Until then, there had been a lot of protests-"
"against them, and, if some had been "punished under previous reigns, the others had "had enough skill or credit to evade the ri-
"the fear of laws and the animosity of Parliaments."
"Henry III and his predecessors, Edward I among "others had received too much aid from the Jews to
"to resign ourselves to banning them."

We will not go into further detail here.
on the acts committed by the Jews during this century

168 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

against the mysteries of Christianity, and on the outrageous activities to which they particularly devoted themselves during Holy Week, sometimes adding the audacity of into publicly consult the faithful in the midst of the pious their practices of worship. The canons published by

Time and place are sufficient evidence of this which was happening. We will only add two facts. which took place, one in Paris in 1429, and the other in Ro-tingen in Franconia; both are worthy of being mentioned.

In Paris, we say, a Christian woman does not find—before any means of settling the debt to a Jew who had lent money, pledged, at the urging that This unfortunate man did this to him, handing him a consecrated host. created. As soon as he had in his power: "I shall see "Now," he said, "if this is the body of Jesus Christ, "As the Christians claim." And immediately Placing the host on a chest, he struck it several times stabbings; all of a sudden he sees them coming out of the blood as if from a body full of life. Astonished, he ap—he calls out to his wife and children who are in turn te-less astonished by the marvel. But, instead of ceasing his outrages, this man takes a nail and pierces The consecrated host was smashed with a hammer. The blood continued to flow. to sink. So the wife wants to prevent her husband from to engage in further acts of this nature, but in vain, and, as the prodigy continues to manifest itself by increasingly striking signs, this woman, moved

"CHAPTER 169

And frightened, she retreats to a room so as not to be witness to her husband's fury.

However, a child of this Jew, who was on the the door of the house, opening onto the Rue des Jardins, of— He asked some Christians who were passing by where they were going. "We are going to church," they said, "to worship God." "It's useless," the child replied, "my father gave him..." He hit him so many times that he killed him. Without paying attention to what what these words could mean, they continued their way when a woman, whose curiosity had been Naturally excited by this, she entered the house of A Jew, under the pretext of asking for a light. She saw the hos— He took her respectfully in his clothes and carried her to the priest of Saint-Jean en Grève. The Jew, arrested with His entire family confessed to everything he had done; on The bishop exhorted him, his wife, and his children, to convert; but neither exhortations nor example of his entire family who went there, could not shake him— He would go and he persisted in his obstinacy. Then the e— The bishop abandoned him to the secular arm, which delivered him to the flames.

In the midst of the torture, he was heard to cry out: "Ah!
If only I had here a book that's at home, the fire
"couldn't do me any harm!" The judge immediately-
He went to fetch this book from the Jew's house; they gave it to him attached around the neck, and both were equally consumed. The event had such an impact, he adds the historian, that it was discussed in the countries further afield; and Villani, a contemporary author,

10

470 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

in fact, he mentions it in his history of Florence (1).
In the year 1299, says the priest Sigfrid, a contemporary writer-Porain, a Jew from the town of Rotingen in Franconia came to an agreement with the warden of Péglise, who left him take, during the holy night of Easter, a few Consecrated plots. These plots were distributed. to the Jews of the cities and towns outside, to be, among their hands, the object of the outrages to which the nation Jewish woman had once surrendered herself against the person of Savior. The historian adds (2), that in the trial which ensued against the main culprit, according to by the Jews' own admission, it was proven that in di-towards times and various places similar sacrileges had been committed, which had raised Pindigna-The Christian people's opposition to the Jews. How it is therefore surprising to see the animosity that is everywhere erupting
What was the situation against a nation guilty of such crimes?

On the occasion of Part of the magic, which is being discussed in one of the two facts above and which practiced then the Jews, by indulging in all sorts of evil-
We will point out that Henri Sauval cites Rabbi [name omitted] as a famous example of this genre.
Ezekiel; the Jews called him saint, and Christians, that of a magician, because of the means used in all manner of... particulars he had to impress scholars and

(t) History of the city of Paris, by the Benedictines of Saint-Maur, t. I, p. 458. — Dubois, t. 11.— Boniface VIIF, decree of the year 1298 related to this topic.

(2) Sigfridus presbyter, Epitom., lib. 11.

instinctive and suggestive, influenced by that perverse mind which is essentially an enemy of all virtue and all Holiness, the Jews saw nothing more insulting for the august mysteries of our religion than mingle with their abominable practices and the cult of The demon, the desecration of the Holy Eucharist. facts that we have reported so far and many others that we could add are one permanent testimony. Thus, for example, the chronicle Belgian code for the year 1306, setting forth the various reasons that led to the banishment of Jews from French soil, They add to this the outrage they committed against a consecrated host that they had obtained from a Christian woman by force of instances, by giving him a sum of money that she owed to one of them.

Fourteenth century.

As we delve further into the history of this nation, despite the burdens and humiliations of which one She sees herself overwhelmed in return for her hostility and her attacks of all kinds against Christianity, we re- always finds herself ready to become insolent and aggressive again sive on every occasion and in every place, so much so that it is dominated by hatred of the Christian name. It was from the beginning 4319, as seen in a decree of Philip the

(1) Henri Sauval, History of Paris, vol. II.

479 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

Long, King of France, that the Jews of Lunel, four only years after being admitted to the country, he- publicly, on Easter Day, resorted to insults and sacrilegious mockery of the mystery of our Redemption, by carrying through the city streets a cross against which they threw filth, and striking those among them who wore it and who thereby even represented to them the person of the Savior (1). Faced with such affronts, could the faithful then should they remain indifferent and calm? And the Church should not- She did not deeply feel the insults thus directed at her. to the august object of his profound veneration?

But let's move on to another question that is no less important. of importance and which so far seems to have been

Christians. These are the attempts made by the Jews in 1321 to get rid of the Christians by empoisoning, attempts which are not, it is said, sufficient-which were observed and which allegedly provoked persecution unjust treatment against the Jews. The plague that was then raging in southern and western Europe gave rise to some to claim that the Jews were perfectly innocent- no one is aware of these accusations, and others are left to think that this plague had only served their purposes and to cover up their attacks. To guide us in understanding- a clear picture of what happened, we have before our eyes a monument taken from the compilers of the Fasti of

(1) Benedict. of Saint-Maur, Hist. du Languedoc, t. IV, p. 161.

CHAPTER II. 473

Bohemia and published by Marquand Treher. The exposition The facts are attached to the Pope's letter, De Leprosis. John XXI. In this letter, which dates from the same year In 1321, the sovereign Pontiff reproduced a report which is addressed to him by Philip, Count of Anjou, and which talks about the various means implemented by the Jews to harm Christians. "Finally, the next day," he said. "Philippe, people from our county have stormed in" among the Jews regarding drinks (tmpofationes) "which they had composed for the use of Christians." engaging in active searches in the house of Jews, in one of the dwellings that belonged to the "Jew Bananias, in a dark place in the house, in a "a small chest containing his treasures and secrets," "a sheepskin, or parchment, was found, covered- green writing on both sides. The seal, which was "of gold and weighing 19 florins, was retained by "has a red silk cord. On the seal was represented- "felt the image of the crucifix, before which a Jew..." "showed himself in such an ignominious and dishonest- "Honest, I'm ashamed to describe it. Our people don't have-" would not have paid attention to the contents of the letter, if They had suddenly and by chance been struck of the length and width of this seal. Of Newly converted Jews translated the letter. Bananias himself and six other Jews sufficiently educated people made the same translation, not of themselves- same, but constrained by fear and by the force. Separated and then tortured, Bana-

RS RRRARRARA

174 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

"Nias and his companions persevered in presenting the
The same translation. Three learned clerks in Ja
"theological science and in the Hebrew language,
"They finally translated the letter into Latin."

The letter was addressed to the Prince of the Saracens, master of the East and Palestine, the seat of the Jewish nation, and whose power extended as far as Granada, in Spain
pagne. They requested that a treaty of friendship be concluded.
between the Jews and the Saracens, and, showing hope to see the two peoples reunited one day in the same religion, they begged the prince to please restore
To the Jews, the land of their ancestors. It read:

"The Christian nation obeys the son of a woman"
vile and poor of our people, who have unjustly
"Usurped our heritage and that of our fathers. When we will have forever reduced this nation to the yoke of our domination, you will hand us over in possession of our great city of Jerusalem, of "Jericho and Ai, where the sacred ark rests. And we we will be able to raise your throne over the kingdom and the Great city of Paris, if you help us to achieve to that end. In the meantime, and as you may be able to to ensure this by your noble Viceroy of Granada, we we worked on this piece by skillfully throwing poisonous substances were found in their drinks.
powders composed of bitter and perni- herbs cieuses, by throwing venomous reptiles into the waters, in wells, in cisterns, in foundations
"tainies and in all watercourses, so that the 2

2 R

A RAR 8 RAR TO RA

LS

"Christians, one after the other, and each following
"its constitution, perish prematurely under the effect

SR RRRESRRLRRRRRRRS RER

ES

HAS

corrupt vapors exhaled by these poisons.
We have successfully completed this particular project.
erment by distributing considerable sums to some poor people of their religion, whom we call lepers. But these wretches suddenly turned against us; and, seeing themselves surprised by the Other Christians accused us and revealed all of this is true. Nevertheless, there remains this glorious point.
For us, it's that these Christians had... summoned their brothers, a sure sign of their dis-strings and their dissolution. Undoubtedly, on Pac-In accusing these lepers, we have been ignominious-harshly treated and cruelly imprisoned; but we patiently endured these mortifications and we still support them every day from Christians, because we hope that God will give us abundant compensation in the future life. We have no doubt that we would have were exterminated, if not for the immense treasures tempted their avarice. Also our gold and our silver and Yours have bought us back, as you can see.
Inform us through your Viceroy of Granada. Please let us know.
so, to continue passing gold and silver, so that we can do more, after having left
Some time should pass. These beverages, which have not
They have not yet been able to produce the expected effect, they will produce it
In the future, we hope; we will keep you informed.

476 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

"

"

"
"
"
"
"

SE

AA

Se RAR ££&

being thoroughly informed of everything; you will be able to soon, with God's help, you will cross the sea. return to Granada, and extend to the rest of the Christians Hold your magnificent sword with a powerful hand and an invincible arm. And then you will be sitting on the throne in Paris, and, at the same time, had become again Free, we will possess the land of our fathers, that God has promised us, and we will live in harmony. under one law and one God. There will be no more Never, from that time on, did I experience either anguish or sorrow. for Solomon said: He who walks in unity with a Only God, He has but one will with Him. And David adds: Oh! How good and sweet he is! to live together like brothers! Our holy pro- Thus, Phetius Hosea spoke in advance of the Christians: Their hearts are divided, and because of this, they will perish. We are forwarding to Your Majesty Royal, this letter patent and signed by us, by the through Zadok, high priest of the Hebrews, and Leon, the most learned man in the science of our law, which will explain to you even better "I'll discuss the whole question verbally."

Henri Sauval (4) mentions two letters written to the Jews, one by the King of Tunis and the other by the king of Granada, concerning the poisoning of waters, and the means to be employed to reach the but. It contains expressions that are more or less conforms to the information provided by the relationship of Philip of Anjou: all this confirms the story of The attack on the Jews. Notwithstanding such testimonies After such a long time, Sauval, stopping at minor and insignificant variants that we remarked in these letters, concludes thus: "That's it "Many absurdities and errors. I am strong "surprised that Pierre de Pui, a character ordinarily "so well guarded against popular opinions and so "contributed to history, having left in the Treasury of These two letters, filled with falsehoods, were addressed to the Charters and "impostures, moreover undated, and of which we do not "doesn't have the originals. As for proving that they "were supposed by the enemies of the Jews, this "is not necessary; this is quite easily seen." "and by the expressions, and by the circumstances, and "Based on the evidence I have provided."

(1) History of Paris, vol. 1, book X, p. 517.

Firstly, it does not seem to me that the absence the original and the date is such a strong argument against the authenticity of these letters. The letter that I have reported above contains in itself all the elements necessary to demonstrate that she was written by the Jews, and everything in it is Likely. Anyone who knows a little about it turns of phrase in Hebrew and its expressions, cannot to argue that the original of this letter was not written in Hebrew. This would require assuming that a neo-at least the phyté commented on it. But all the circum-constants noted in the report of the Count of Anjou formally exclude such a supposition. The rest should be viewed as inventions of Christians not only the two letters relating to the poisoning Sauval talks about, but also the one we mentioned above, in which the Jews are dealing with the same subject, a letter that offers so much conformity with the other two, and which shows if well the sovereign impropriety with which the Jews are accustomed to speaking of the person of Jesus-Christ. Now, we cannot suppose that this comes from a Christian. How then can it seem strange to It was possible that the Arabs were considering at that time invade Christian lands, and that they use- felt to succeed from the perfidy of the Jews, from this little-in foreign countries to conduct its trafficking, ready to betray the people who welcome him, if he sees his profit, which runs everywhere it finds something to win, which looks at the earth, from one pole to the other, like his legacy, which rejoices in all the dissensions, of all wars between nations, between princes and their subjects, between sects, who Finally, he casts the fire of sedition among the peoples. certain of thus improving his own condition, and uh- heartbroken to see the peace of the Christian Church destroyed, the object of his most ardent hatred?

178 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

Labbe provided strong evidence of the veracity from the account of the Count of Anjou, quoting the letter addressed by Pope John XXI to all the faithful for

CHAPTER II. 479

to urge them to war against the Saracens; the Pope, Indeed, it reminds them of the attack they are talking about. relation(1).Paul-Emile, a contemporary writer, tells us- form that the Jews, upon their return to France, having received money from the kings and leaders of the Turks and Saracens, hired the lepers, who lived on alms and er- would travel from country to country, spreading poison in the wells. A large number of them were caught off guard, They were put on trial, and, upon their confession, they were handed over to the ultimate torture. Consequently, the Jews were put in prison, and, having been questioned separately, they confessed- rent the crime. The author of the Bohemian Chronicle, quoting the lepers' letter, he said: "In this same "In the year (1321), I traveled through a large part of the "banks of the Rhine and Gaul, and I saw all the "The lepers' dwellings were burned, and they had burned "at the same time all those of these wretches that "We had been able to find it. The rumor had indeed spread." "that the lepers, corrupted by the gold of the Jews and "Saracens had thrown poison into the waters," "in the fountains and in the wells. I also saw "in the various regions of Gaul many There were closed wells and fountains covered with earth. "letter from the Pope, in which is contained everything that "relates to this matter, came to me from the mo- "Movimond nastery through a person- "sonne who claimed to have received it from the Curia ro-

(1) Labbæi, vol. XV, p. 149. Venice edition, epist. 2 Joan, Papæ XXI, vulgo XXII.

"I wrote it down in my own hand."

Guillaume de Nangis, cited by Spondanus in his continuation of the Annals of Baronius, mentions, at that date, of the attack planned by the Jews. Another writer, under the name of Auctor Memorialis Historiarum, said that the poisonous substance consisted of mainly human blood, urine and three Various herbs whose names he does not give. In The Council of Reims is among the cases reserved. to receive drinks from the hands of the Jews, because that, in that same year, poisoned drinks had been fabricated, which led to the expulsion of all the Jews of the kingdom of France. They were condemned to be burned. many lepers whom the Jews had used for to bring these poisonous drinks into the market born. The chronicle of Saint Evrould and others— Testimonials confirm the same fact.

It may seem strange that the Jews attempted to destroy by this means the Christian kingdom of France to rebuild their own nation. But that is not—it does not conform to the idea of their cherem, or anathema that they pronounce against Christians, their principles ps enemy, as I have already re— scored? And nothing could be more fitting for such a goal than to employ the office of the Saracens. In support of what preceding it, it is found in a Hebrew manuscript, where one reads the prayers specific to the synagogue of Mainz, a thought that has the greatest connection with time and the things we are talking about: "We see that, in Paffliction to the place where the Ishmaelites live, the God whom we bless "will call upon the kingdom of the Ishmaelites for help, and "They will be saved from the hand and power of the "Idumeans, that is to say Christians (1).

CHAPTER II. 481

Finally, to avoid any ambiguity, we must not to confuse this attempted poisoning on the part of Jews, along with the one that took place in 1346 or 1348, while a truly devastating plague invades and afflicts gea almost all of Europe. Schæbpflin (2) observes at this the subject of the unjust persecution of Jews at that time.

But, at the same time, history is careful to point out that at that time, citizens of all classes were the debtors of the Jews, as a result of the monopoly and the usury that they exerted on Christians. This caused great religious and moral harm. to Christianity, because of the influence that money Jews gave them into the society of the faithful.

Albert Krantz recounts, around the year 1323, that the Jews who lived in the small town of Krakow, having broke down the doors of a church, seized the holy man here—drink, and which they tore up, trampled underfoot and scattered the holy hosts it contained pierced through the streets may, so that the Christians themselves mar— They dearly to the divine species without knowing it. The pre— those who were the first to notice the sacrilege, did not know— They wanted to know who to blame. The case having

(1) De-Rossi, Bibliothecu rabbinica anti-christiana.

(2) Asatia germanica illustrata, t. II.

11

182 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

was brought to Gustrow's attention, who suspected the Jews were accused of being the authors; they were called before the court; they confessed their crime, and denounced— their accomplices, who were arrested in the proceedings vinceset condemned to death (1). At the sight of these pro— fannings and their multiplicity, who could deny the diabolical horror and feelings of intolerance of Jews for the mysteries of our holy religion? He These feelings must be very powerful, since Punishments and tortures do not prevent them from seeking to renew their attacks through words and through actions. And if the Christian people have sometimes been Having risen up against these desecrators, where does the provocation come from?

Florien, reporting, on the authority of Sébastien Franck, the invasion of the Flagellants into the provinces Germans, in 1346, said that, having arrived in Frankfurt, they threw down on the houses of the Jews, and many Israelites perished in the ensuing conflict. Christian citizens armed themselves against the invaders, at their own great risk and expense, and they succeeded finally, to restore peace to the Jews. But these, convinced that others could not possibly want to do them freedom to act, misinterpreted the service that the Christians had just returned to them and believed that in re- They had been told they wanted to harm them. To get revenge, they put the fire in the house where the councilors met. The

(1) Aĭb. Krantz, Historia Wandalie, lib. VUI.

CHAPTER II. | 4183

The house burned down, and the fire spread to the buildings. neighbors. When the Christians learned of the authors of disaster, they flew into a rage that was easy to understand. to take; the Jews were pursued, and all were killed those who had survived the previous massacre (1).

At the same time, the historian Dlugosz deplored the outrages and insults to Christianity in Po- logne, after King Casimir had taken as his mistress a Jewish woman, whose prayers led him to grant to Jews enjoyed very great privileges; and, the historian adds, to this day it remains like a fetid smell (2).

Albert of Argentina (Strasbourg), in his Memoirs on the life of Berthold, bishop of this city, he said, in pro- posed terrible circumstances in which the Jews were found around the middle of the fourteenth century: a We recently held a council meeting in Spain- They were accused of wrongdoing concerning the Jews; they were found guilty. "of witchcraft, infanticide, and counterfeiting of banknotes," has defaced currency, and many other things "Offenses insulting to the Divine Majesty." Towards the same at the time, Louis [*], King of Hungary, knowing that the the monopoly still exercised by the Jews was very prejudiced detrimental to Christendom, he expelled them from the country without... dear in no way to their fortune.

In his History of Spain, which reached the year 1360, where he recounts the actions of the King of Castile, who gov- Mariana mentions her people harshly.

(1) Schudt, De origine et incremento Judæorum, p. 480.

(2?) Dlugosz, Hist. polonica, lib. IX.

S#

184 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

of a Jew named Samuel, who was put in charge of the finances by this monarch whose measures he supported despots. Samuel began to manage the finances at his own pleasure, and he thus acquired immense wealth. chesses which were once again the cause of his ruin. Put in remains to account for all its squandering tions, he was condemned, and all his property was confiscated. taxed. Four hundred thousand gold crowns were found at his home. furniture and clothing of great value, so much of riches, in short, that it seemed wonderful that a single Jew could have become so wealthy in our time-pens. A6 uno disce omnes.

We have spoken more than once about curses
The Jews speak out against Jesus Christ every day.
and their worshippers; we have seen that they have not ceased to per-to crack down on this ungodly custom, and to inspire their children the horror they feel for the Christian name tien. In 1374, King Alfonso, in Spain, their de-defended under the most severe penalties of reciting pa-reilles imprecations, although, contrary to confessions made by several novices, they strive to to make people believe that these imprecations referred to other things less than to Christians. Despite this defense, they con-continued to pronounce them in another form and under another name, as noted by the Book 56 of the Tefillah, written in Hebrew characters - Spanish, and preserved by de Rossi, whom we have
As mentioned above, in 1380, the Jews were expelled from France.
because of the means they used to attract

s CHAPTER 185

all the cash and usury they hoarded
They blamed the Christians who resorted to them.
Christians, exasperated to the point of injustice, rose up
In several places, they killed a great number of them.
They seized their belongings, and especially their documents.
which contained evidence of the debts; documents that We are far from approving, but who had been caused, it must be admitted, by avarice even Jews.

We read, in the Bohemian Chronicle cited by Jean-Georges Eckard, that in 1388 or 1389, in Prague, the day when Jews celebrate Passover and remembrance During the crossing of the Red Sea, a priest happened to pass by near their neighborhood to bring the Holy Eucharist

Jews, inflamed by their hatred against Jesus Christ and led by their fathers who were present, rams-
They poured stones and mud into the street, and threw them
They are desecrating the Blessed Sacrament. This sacrilege stirred up the Christians who then attacked the Jews, they killed a great many of them, and then looted their houses, which they set on fire (1). Krantz makes the following observation regarding this event:
"We were living then under an indolent and cowardly king, for
"that there was nothing sacred; the Christians could not-
"to bear the insults of the Jews for longer;
"They all rose up together against them and burned-

(1) Jean-Georges Eckard, t. I, p. 1139, and Krantz, Historia Wandulie,

486 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

"They left their houses." What kind of Christian, anyway? Filled with love for his faith, he could have contained himself the sight of such impiety and intolerance People? Who were the provocateurs?

In 1439, a decree was published in Paris which prohibited Jews were forbidden to practice medicine, in fear that they no longer administer potions to the sick harmful as well as useful to their healing (1). The following year, Abraham Zacut, author of Juchasin, recalling the marvelous conversion of two hundred thousand Jews observed by Saint Vincent Ferrer in the provinces of Catalonia, Aragon, and Castile, recounts that a Rabbi, named Judah ben Asher, had cruelly put to death his wife and his mother-in-law, fearing that they did not embrace the Christian religion. This rabbi then killed himself (2).

Fifteenth century.

The fifteenth century arrives, and hatred and intolerance- the Jew's rancidity against the mysteries of our holy religion, especially against the Eucharist, demonstrate still just as violent, and it seems that the spirit of evil this hatred is further inflamed, especially where Christians are distinguished by a greater faith, where the fruits the salutary benefits of redemption are shown with the most

- (1) Benedictines of Saint-Maur, Hist. of Paris.
(2) Bartolucci, Library. rabbi., t. III, p. 87.

CHAPTER II. 187

abundant in the piety of the faithful. The chronicles of Silesia reports indicate that several Jews were condemned to the fire for having outraged the sacrament of the Eucharist. In the main church of Glogau, one can see an inscription which attests to the outrage. The event dates from 1401, and in 1404 the Jews renewed the same of: to Salzburg (1).

Around the same time, according to the historian Dlugosz, cited above, the freedom enjoyed by the Jews-knew in Poland during the reign of Casimir, their had it has amassed immense wealth, the fruit of their usury, and had led them to the ultimate excesses of insolence. Their crimes went unpunished, thanks to complicity of a power that was hardly concerned with rendering justice. It was a tactic against the people. Divine vengeance was reserved for itself. punish herself for crimes which the power hand ensured impunity. On Easter Tuesday, March 27, Master Rudeck, canon of Wislichi, according to the inspirations of a zeal more impetuous than prudent, warns the people, as they descended from the pulpit, whom he had received an important letter. He is asked to read it: it informed that, the previous night, the Jews of Krakow had killed a Christian child and had used his blood for abominable rites, and that, moreover, they had thrown stones at a priest who was wearing Peucharistie to a sick man. This story stirred the people against the Jews, who had to suffer cruel treatment

- (1) Marci Hanaissii, Soc. Jes., Germania sacra, t. 1.

188: __ THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

ments, despite the efforts of the magistrate who was trying in. It is pointless to stop such damaging demonstrations. in their wake to Christians as well as to Jews.

Around the year 1420 (1), the Jews of Asia, continuing to show themselves to be just as treacherous towards Christians and their worship, prompted the Turks to occupy the David's tomb, under the false pretext that they would find there-

The real aim was to destroy a Christian church.
erected in honor of the tomb of Our Seigneur; and, indeed, they obtained what they desired, to the great detriment of Christians. That is why Martin V addressed the Queen of Naples, Joanna I, who imposed a considerable fine on the Jews of Calabria in compensation for the damages suffered by the Christians.

It was also around this time that the chronicler Albert Krantz wrote: "The Jews, a perfidious nation, having been "convicted of having supplied weapons and money to "heretics of Bohemia, who were waging war on the "Catholics, Frederick, Duke of Bavaria, had them put "in prison throughout the extent of its domains and the "sentenced to heavy fines. It's really a
"A nation to be kept away from Christian countries, because it does everything
"To insult Christ and destroy his worshippers."

We read, in the Fasti of Austria written by Pez (2), that, around the year 1421, Jews who had obtained from a

(1) Giannone, Sforia di Napoli (History of Naples).

(2) T. II, p.851. .

CHAPTER II. 4189

'Christian woman, a few fragments of the host, take them shared among themselves to renew upon them the outragedies formerly committed to Our Lord during his Passion,
The fact was acknowledged, based on the woman's own admission,
And they were punished. This impious act, committed at the time of Easter time, indicates that the Jews, having been unable to have a young Christian child in this circumstance to sacrifice him out of hatred for Jesus Christ, they had wanted to satisfy this hatred of the Holy Eucharist.

In the History of Silesia, we find the account of a a similar sacrilege committed in 1453. Joachim Cu-Reus, a heretic, calls this fact into doubt, and rises up against the harsh treatment inflicted on the Jews.
But he finds these strictures too great precisely because because of the little accounting he did, in his capacity as Protestant, of the adorable sacrament of the Eucharist and of the real presence of Jesus Christ under the holy species; so that he believed that the Jews had He did not deserve such harsh punishments. But he-even shows afterwards that we shouldn't have received to have admitted.

When, around the middle of the same century, the Turks attacked they sought with such cruelty the Christians of the East, the Jews rejoiced and they extolled the fierce con-seeking, in the hope that he would be their Messiah, that he would restore the Synagogue, and that he would destroy the Church Christian (1).

(1) Ugolino, Thesaurus antiquit., t. XXIII, p. 1066.

A1.

190 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

It was around this time that Saint Antoninus, bishop, lived. than Florence. Speaking of the Jews in his treatise De The supreme pontiff, he recalls the canons of the ancients centuries of the Church that earnestly recommended to the Christian magistrates to remove this people from the ad-Ministry of Public Affairs. Saint Antonin re-commands also to the bishops and Christian princes try to turn the Jews away from idleness and paresse, by forcing them to engage in industry or some trade, so that they do not have to procure means of subsistence in another way, that is to say-to say, through usury and other shameful means. This insistence of the holy bishop, and these prescriptions of previous centuries that forced Jews to work they display in all their day the malice of these men who spent their lives in idleness and laziness, seeking only to live off the sweat and possessions of Christians whom they misappropriated for their own use through usury, through the monopoly they held and through genuine looting. This disorder engendered a thousand other inconveniences-provisions for the Church and for the State. Therefore, it seems to us-Is it that no one today can approve of a a similar system followed by the Synagogue in the middle of the "Christian nations. Who, therefore, would dare to bla-sea the measures taken by the episcopate with regard to this people ?

Moreover, one only needs to consider the conduct of the Church towards the Jews, as the saint points out Bishop of Florence, and to think about the care she took them in order to pull them out of idleness and all these ridiculous and barbaric prejudices that they drew from the Talmud and in the commentaries of their rabbis; it one only needs to consider the redoubled efforts of the episcopate Christian, to eradicate so many harmful thoughts from their minds maxims, and to the unfortunate success of all these attempts ves, to see clearly that the degradation of the Jews at that time it was entirely their own work, the logical consequence of their indolence and their bad-will of good will, and in no way the effect of intolerance which Christian magistrates, whether secular or ecclesiastical, were being treated towards them, since these magistrates were all their efforts to tear this unfortunate people away to his ignorance, his mistakes, and his inertia.

The most remarkable fact of the fifteenth century, re-
The discrimination against Jews was their expulsion from Spain under the Reign of Ferdinand and Isabella, in 1492. This act
The Catholic monarchs provided a pretext for the defenses of Supporters of the Jewish cause to cry out against the cruelty.
Before judging it that way, wouldn't it be con-just able to examine the case from its various points
From a religious and political point of view, to make a particular-be wary of the testimonies of novices, and more even to those of the rabbis themselves, not to mention documents that will be provided by Christian historians about this providential act of which the Jews were the victims?

Alphonse Spina, or whoever the author may be, who is certainly a Spanish novice, who is doing the same thing.
History of the Jews in Spain, recounts, in the third

192 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

book De bello judaico, that, in the village of Tavera, belonging to Louis d'Almanza, in the kingdom of Castile, a Jewish blacksmith whose son had been Jewishridiculously condemned to death, the fool feigned, and began to roam the country shouting afrook, so that he was allowed to do it, because one He excused himself because of his madness. However, it was not that it was a feint, and the traitor was secretly forging with his other children iron bars pierced with holes that he wanted to use it to close and nail during the night, all the doors of the houses. He had also pre-adorned with iron spikes which in Spain are called abrojos, which criminals commonly use to injure the feet of horses and men who They pass into the places where they have been placed. One work one night under cover of darkness, and traversing the locality with all the signs of its ordinary madness, he opened the doors of the houses and saw everywhere set iron spikes to injure those who would come to them. They were about to leave their homes. That done, help, without no doubt, from several other Jews who desired like him, the destruction of all Christians of the village, he set fire to the houses and fled. Awakened through fire and smoke, the inhabitants rose up in haste; to escape the fire, they run to open their doors, but unable to overcome them, they perished in large numbers. Those who were able to get out, met with the iron spikes that injured their feet.

CHAPTER II. 193

When the king learned what had happened, he ordered that all the Jews found in the village were killed. Let us remember here, as confirmation of what we have said and from what we will discuss later, a monument to a very important historical event, the bull of the antipope Benedict No. XIII, published in 1415 in Spain against the Talmud and its doctrines, which they declare intolerant from a religious and moral standpoint, and contrary to the natural reason. This bubble clearly shows the damage caused to Christian society by the tricks of Jewish commercial dealings when they dealt with Christians, and with what obstinacy this people persisted in his perfidy, despite the threats he made against him was the object.

The author we have just quoted tells us another fact. During the reign of John II, in Castile, and during the regency of his mother Catherine, a Jewish doctor from Segovia bought a consecrated host at a high price. He consecrated, which he threw into Boiling Skin, in company accompanied by several accomplices. Some of these, horrified by this terrible sacrilege, they resumed the host and brought it back to the monastery of Saint-Cross of the Order of Preachers, in order to avoid the punishment they would have to suffer if the deed were discovered. The prior of the convent made the fact known to the Bishop of Segovia, John of Oxerdesillas. The regents, who were then in that city, had knowledge. Active research was conducted, we found the culprits, and, among them, Don Mair, the

the Jewish doctor we just mentioned, who had
He was physician to King Henry. Subjected to torture, not only he confessed to the outrage he had committed against the saint Damn, but he still declared that he was the cause of the death of King Henry, and he was condemned to death with his accomplices. This revelation pushed the event-than to do even more precise research on the misdeeds of the Jews. These, fearing to be discovered green, earned by dint of money the sommelier of the e-bishop, in order to get rid of this vigilant pontiff by the poison. The sommelier received Pargent, and, taking advantage at a time when the cook was absent, he threw the poison in a vase filled with sauce; then he returned prepare his master's table. The cook, to rein turn, continued his work; but, a few drops of The poisoned sauce having fallen onto his hands, he was quite surprised to feel almost immediately an invery painful inflammation. He thus recognized that the
The sauce was poisoned, and he warned the bishop of this.
who had just arrived. They searched for the perpetrator of the crime; Suspicion quickly fell on the sleeper-to link, who eventually confessed and was sentenced to death along with some Jews: the other guilty parties took the leak. "These facts," adds the author we are following, were told to me by Father Martin of Cordoba, of Order of the Augustinians, who received them from Brother John of Canalejas, of the Order of Preachers, and witness
"Observing the entire procedure."

Add to all this some curious confessions made by the

CHAPTER H. 195

Jewish Solomon ben-Sevet, in a conversation with King Alfonso on the subject of the immorality of the Synagogue in his dealings with Christians, at the time the very one we are dealing with. Ben-Sevet, comparing Christians to Jews, in their prayers and In their customs, it is said that the latter pray more that Christians (1), and he adds: "Christians,
"To respect their laws, they refrain from plundering," has fraud, usury and other things that seem-
"bles. The Jews, on the contrary, are not used to
"To abstain from theft, fraud, and plunder."
And elsewhere: "The Jews, with the subtlety of their minds and with their address, know better than the Christians have the means to make a profit, so a that they acquired great wealth through initiative

"of the truth, would find that a third of the land and of "other properties of Spain fell between the "Hands of the Jews, through their excessive usury." Our
 The author continues, and he lists the main causes.
 calamities that befell the Jews among the Christians here (2): "1° the gravity of the faults of their fathers;
 "2° the limited right they have to goodwill; 3° the
 the death of Jesus of Nazareth. It was not in vain Moses 4 said that if we sacrifice the gods
 "abominable Egyptians in their presence, we
 "we would be overwhelmed by the stones they throw at us-

(1) Res Judæorum a Georgio Genteo editæ, p. 76, 329, etc.

(2) P. 339.

196 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

They would be. The fourth cause relates to love.
 "of the law, of women, and of wealth. In this the a "Jews behave like other peoples." fl
 "It has been a long time since the Jews of Spain have "led to love young Christian girls, as a result"
 "of the excessive familiarity with which they live-
 The wind blows with them. And there are some who are not afraid to assert loudly that it is only a minor mistake
 He manages to love Christian women, since he "Only a light sentence was handed down in this case"
 "to lawbreakers, that is to say the penalty of a stick; they forget the traps that their ten-
 "Their rivals' teeth often cost them their lives." Also "Do the Kabbalists believe that these men will be "condemned to eternal torment. But what there is What is most criminal about this is that such a com-
 "Commerce increases the number of idolaters (Christians)"
 "Well, look." The desire for wealth also drove the Jews
 "to carry their scythe into the harvest of business and of
 to the Christian industry, from where did evil come?
 a very serious series of thefts and robberies to which they belong "deliver. The sixth cause is the perjury that they They commit without any restraint. The seventh is "the pride and ambition that drove some
 "some of our own who want to dominate Christians and
 "on all peoples, etc."

Such an admission from a Jew is, certainly, valuable.
 to collect. May those now who understand religious principle of Christianity, which loves order, good morals and their homeland, they say, if the measure

 The expulsion of the Jews from Spain is justified. And that What will they think of this measure if we add that the Jews claimed to have special rights to dominate in Spain, because it was a tradition among them (It is Ben-Sevet himself who acknowledges this) that it exists in this land of the descendants of the tribes of Judah and of Benjamin, from one of which the Mes- must be born what they expect? This traditional belief rensaid the Synagogue, more ardent in overthrowing the dominion Christian tradition in this country as in others. They further confirmed this belief by reading in the prophet Obadiah the word Sepharad, what their rabbis they interpreted it as the word Spain, and they imagined that they would become the masters of Spain under the conduct of the Messiah.

Simon Tuzzato, one of the masters of the Synagogue, while blaming Ferdinand's decrees relating to the ex-the impulse of the Jews, frankly admits that the great number of Spanish Jews, which he puts at a thousand lion, easily leads one to believe that he is among
 They have many reasons for revolt which explain the soup-lessons from the King of Spain. If we add to this the fears which inspired the Moors overseas, with which The Jews were almost always intelligent.
 Pon will better understand the measure taken at their regard. Finally, the same rabbi admits that a great a number of murders and robberies had been committed by the Jews, his brothers, to the detriment of the Christians, which

198 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

should not have been of light weight in the determination-king's tion. Blanca (1) is counted among these excesses the murder of Pierre Arbuesio, inquisitor of the Holy Roman Empire Office, a crime plotted by the Jews, who won two Christians to carry out their horrible design. This assassination dates from the year 1485. And it is necessary to which must be added the numerous bows made to the e-guarding the mysteries of our holy religion, especially at with regard to the Eucharist, the object of their special hatred and that they sought to obtain by theft or by force of money, in order to testify, by their words and by their actions, 'how they abhorred it.
 All these facts are known through the revelations of the neo-

We must not, moreover, remain silent other serious scandals that afflicted the Church of Es-loincloth by magical operations, curses, the incantations that the Jews introduced there in fre-counting the Christians. We see how much these kinds of practices are disastrous for religion and Christian morality
yours. The reforms brought about by Cardinal Arche-Bishop of Toledo, with the help of Ferdinand, proved-
The wind showed how far the evil had spread. Jérôme Paolo, a jurist from Barcelona, wrote at that time to Paolo Pompilio, by giving him details about the situation-Barcelona's perspective: "Our city is particularly "worthy of praise above all others, because

(1) Hieronymus Blanca, Commentat. rerum Aragon.

CHAPTER II, 4199

"that it is not possible for Jews to live there, as "being a sordid, debauched, shameless, su-
"Perverse and execrable when it is not contained"
"by the brake of slavery, a race given to wear and tear"
"and to all kinds of shameful gain, and trying, by
"as a result of the singular hatred she harbors for Christians"
"Well, to deceive them anyway."

After reporting all these facts, most of which relying on the testimony of the Jews themselves, it seems to usit is clear that the defenders of the Synagogue should per-to dispel their illusions, since it is in the decree of exan impulse driven by Ferdinand that they find to be the culmination of the injustice done to the Jews. All Statesmen, without exception, applauded at Expulsion of the Moors; why would they disapprove of it?
their expulsion of the Jews, which is based on the same reasons sounds? Shouldn't everyone see that there were even more powerful reasons to take action which the Jews suffered from, since they understood each other usually with the Moors and whom they seconded with all their might the enterprises of these peoples con-between Christians, so great is their hatred against the
The name of Christ and his worshippers? Isn't it proven Indeed, they have always sought to dishonor this name and to exterminate those who revere him? Certainthe Moors, more tolerant in matters of religion region, less corrupt in matters of morality, deserve-were trying to be treated with more consideration than the Jews.

harmful and fatal for society, and of which the greatest part, driven out three centuries earlier because of its misdeeds, taking refuge in Spain thanks to the indulgence of princes, continually rendered himself unworthy, by his ingratitude for the hospitality that had been shown to him. Finally, to understand the treacherous nature of this nation, a character so in keeping with the spirit of the Pharisees, whose doctrine the Jews have always followed and For example, one only needs to read the protests addressed to Charles V, successor to Ferdinand, by some Jews who had embraced Christianity to avoid exile, these Jews, who secretly followed the rites of the Synagogue, having found a favorable opportunity to to demonstrate their perfidy, they sent deputies to stirred up the Gospel against their will, adding that they were "Honestly, their business, which they were the most "useful and, perhaps, the most faithful subjects of his a kingdom. They therefore hoped that as a result one "would leave them the freedom to return to their former "religion. They also promised to come to the aid "to the needs of the State, and offered eight hundred thousand "Gold coins in recognition of this kindness." Note in passing the impudence of these men who dare to to be given as the best subjects of the kingdom, after that their masters themselves confessed to the crimes of Jews and all the evils they have caused to society and to the Christian religion. Let us open the Gospel, and we We shall see how these protests agree marvelously kindly with their character: Gratias tibi ago, Deus said the Pharisee in the Temple, quia non sum sicut cæteri homines, raptores, injusti, adulteri, veluti hic publicanus. Our Lord Jesus Christ said of them. with marvelous accuracy: ZLabiis honoring me, cor naive confession of a Jew who had met a Christian during a trip he was making to Castile, and who told him, As they parted from him: "You know how much we..." "We have shown signs of goodwill in this "a journey, where we conducted ourselves like brothers, one another" has with regard to the other. Know, however, that, whatever whatever signs of kindness I may have shown you showed the hatred I harbor in my heart "was no less great. As a reward for the services- "The vices you have shown me, I want to give you this advice: "Never trust a Jew, no matter how friendly" "that he show you (4).9

* Charles V to remind him "that they had em-

,

CHAPTER II. 201

This was indeed the system adopted and practiced by the masters of the Synagogue at that time: knowledge in- to develop their words and actions of hypocrisy the most subtle, in order to deceive simple men. After a careful examination of Abrabnel's writings, that The Jews regard it as the oracle of the Synagogue, Bartolucci thus concludes (2): "This was the greatest en- "enemy of Christians. But what is most abhorrent-

(1) Itinerary of Father Philippe to SS. Trinitate, Liv. VI, C. VII.

(2) Bibliotheca rabb., t, IUT, p. 875.

202 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

"What's wretched about him is that, at the very time when he "filled his books with curses against teenagers" to the failures of Jesus Christ, at that very time he "He flattered the Christian princes. He did not avoid the so- "community of the faithful, and seemed to take pleasure, in the con- "to milk, to converse amicably and familiarly with" "Them. He even sometimes expressed feelings "which would have led people to believe he was a perfect Christian." "However, he kept the venom of the "hatred against Christianity, and he imbued his "writings, spreading everywhere, and especially in his Com- "Commentaries on the Scriptures, blasphemies against Jesus Christ, against his Church, against the Sovereign to the Pontiff, against the Bishops and the clergy, and against to all Roman Catholics. It is difficult to ren- to counter a page of his observations on the pro- "phètes, which does not contain some of its perni- "Wonderful ideas." If such were the doctrine and the actions of one of the most respected masters of the Syna- Spanish gogue, what should we think of the disciples

It seems to us that, in light of all these facts, if criticisms can be made of the court of the Holy Inquisition in Spain, that's certainly not for the harsh measures he took against the Synagogue, whose entire purpose was to fight the dogmas and to overturn the morality of the Gospel. It would not feel the strength of the Christian principle, would not be touched by his truth and his holiness, and not to love social order, so as not to hate it highly the conduct of the Jews of Spain. But let's continue. events.

CHAPTER II. 203

Many Jews expelled from Spain took refuge in Portugal. King Emmanuel held a council on this subject with the principal lords of his court (1). It was agreed above all that the Jews formed a class harmful to the society and the state, primarily in Christian countries. And so, they deliberated on the best course of action to take in this circumstance. The majority rejected the opinion of those who saw their wealth as an advantage for the State. "It is not without reason," it was observed, "that this people were expelled from France, from several provinces" "those from Germany, and from the kingdoms of Aragon and of Castile. And the princes acted in this way because" "that they underestimated the abundance of the tributes imposed on the Jews that the integrity of the religion, consequently defeated that the Jews were attacking the belief of simple, that they were insulting the most holy name of Jesus, and that their speeches maintained a few" "These errors in the minds of many and" "led to the ruin of the least educated men." It was not prudent, moreover, to confide in these enemies of the Christian name, that no precept of religion could not prevent revealing to a stranger what has the secrets they would have discovered, and to work with us for hire for money. As for the advantages they

(1) Hieronymi Osorii De Rebus Emmanuelis' regis Lusitaniæ lib. I. ;

"See these people known for their frauds with all
"the property they possess, rather than having to expel them" and after they had amassed all the wealth
"of the kingdom, since in the current circumstances"
"they could only take with them what they had"
"Acquired in Spain. If they stayed longer
In the kingdom, one should have expected to see them to enrich themselves at the expense of Christians, thanks to to the frauds and deceit in which they are "past masters," Emmanuel, struck by these considerations derations, published, in 14496, the decree that expelled from his kingdom all the Jews and the Moors.

After having made known the powerful reasons and the events that led the kings of Spain and Portugal to tugal to distance the Israelite nation from their states, we want to say that we are and that we will always be far from approving the con-
The rite of Christians or other people who employed all sorts of cruelties and violence
these to transport the unfortunate out of these countries born punished by law. These acts of violence and cruelty-These practices were in no way approved by the princes.
and they are contrary to justice and maximum-my Christianity. The story of this exile which brought a fairly large number of Jews to Genoa recalls that Tanarega, in the Splendors of this city, reports an old law by which it was forbidden no Jew may remain there for more than three days, after the-

CHAPTER II. 205

which he had to leave the city (1). Shouldn't we suppose-to suggest that some criminal act had prompted the senate
Why did the Genoese make this decree so severe?

We now need to search for the acts of the Synagogue in other countries during the same century. Scardeoni writes the following in his work on the antiquities of Padua: "In 1491, when one established in this city the Mont-de-Piété to free-
"to free Christians from the usury exerted on them by "the Jews, who demanded twenty percent of their "loans, we abolish twenty-two banks that the Jews
"had mounted, and which provided them with a bene-
"annual income of twenty thousand gold crowns. They are mea naça at the same time as a very heavy fine, if they
"They continued their operations."

bourg, reports, under the date 4492, a fact which in-Prince Magnus IIT was greatly aroused. The Jews committed-commits a horrible crime at that time. A priest of Stenberg, called Pierre Danois, a man of questionable morals solues, unable to pay a debt he had contracted-ted towards a Jew named Eleazar, was engaged by this one to deliver two consecrated hosts in compensation. The Jew kept these precious objects until the the day of his daughter's wedding, which other Jews attended who were aware of the acquisition made by their coreligion-naire. He contemptuously placed the hosts on the table, on which were placed some torches lit; then he pierced the hosts. Suddenly one saw the blood flow. This marvel frightened the guests, and Eleazar, no less terrified, charged his wife with to return these consecrated hosts to the priest. He, no less frightened by the miracle, could not for long resist to her remorse, and he finally reveals his own sacrilege and that of the Jews. Following the trial which was informed, twenty-five Jews were condemned to be burned at the stake, and their other coreligionists were banished from the town. The priest, after having confessed without hesitation everything his crime, was degraded and similarly condemned to dead. The historian adds that the miracle was revoked. doubted by his time and was the subject of great number of discussions: "For us," he said, "we think-sounds that we must stick to contemporary testimonies rains, because it is not easy to impose oneself in this manière to so many men who witnessed the event, and who did all the necessary research to ensure that the miracle was not the result of fraud and A hoax. Moreover, no doubt was raised at the subject of the sacrilegious theft committed by the priest, and of An abominable pact resulting from the perversity of the Jews.

(1) Tanarega, Storia di Genova (Hist. of Genoa), cited by Muratori, Annali d'Italia, t. XXIV, p. 5381.

42

266 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

It is certain that, among crimes of all kinds committed by Jews in this century, there are many-blows which were aimed at the august sacrament of PEcharistie, not to mention those who had preceded and those we will have occasion to talk about in the sequel. I know very well that heretics do all their efforts to dispute the reality of the miracles who accompanied several of these sacrileges, and they. thus seek to cast doubt on the facts themselves on the occasion of which miracles were performed. We will submit the following reflections to these incredulous. The contempt and horror that the Jews felt for the mysteries of Christianity will always remain days as if they were indisputable facts, all the same We would deny that Jesus Christ is truly present under the Eucharistic species. The multiplicity of facts of this nature that we read in the history of the Church, facts accomplished at various times and in various places, excludes the idea of some invention or falsification a deliberate choice that could be held against historians. However, similar acts will always be an offense. very serious with regard to Christianity; they will always a clear sign of intolerance—of the Jews toward of the religion of Jesus Christ, intolerance which pushes—Christian governments necessarily know take rigorous measures against profane—eurs. What would happen, we ask, if, from Nowadays, a Jew would enter, for example, the church of St. Paul's in London, and dared to commit there Outrageous acts against Christian worship?

On the other hand, it seems to us that our adversaries—res should draw other conclusions from the facts than we have reported. The miracles performed by the holy Eucharist, miracles attested by so many testimonies and by the Jews' own admission, several of whom...

208 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

They turned to shame upon seeing them and renounced the Synagogue to embrace the religion of Jesus Christ; the belief public and firm of the ancient Church to the presence The real rage of Jesus in this sacrament; the infernal fury which incited the Jews to insult and outrage this Sacred—August ment, shouldn't all this make them re— Could their mistakes stem from this mystery? If, indeed, the the true body and the true blood of the Son of God did not exist not in the Charismatic Renewal, as they claim, com— How can we explain this hatred inspired by the demon? the Synagogue, which had become the instrument of his malice, he never ceased to blaspheme and outrage the adored body—

12th century.

The sixteenth century is no different from the preceding ones; it provides us with numerous examples of Jewish perversity that. In order to better understand how many justice, civil power, and ecclesiastical power were working to repress and remove from society the ills that stemmed from it, I will begin with the testimony of two Jewish writers who entered within the Church after renouncing Judaism. The first is Victor de Cobden, and the other Pfeffercorn; the latter, in truth, apostatized later and re-he reverted to his old prejudices, but this did not weaken the fact of his testimony. Cobden revealed openly- He exposes the malice and perversity of the Synagogue. He affirms firm in an absolute way that there is no nation more unjust and more obstinate than that of the Jews. Between other noteworthy things, he shows with what The Jew knows how to infiltrate the localities where he is not known, using all available means He has the ability to charm foreigners. He knows how to flatter skillfully he shows the inhabitants great respect; he highlights the usefulness it could have for commerce because of the money he possesses; he multiplies the pro-masses, and that is how he first insinuates himself into the spirits. But that is nothing; what follows is so extraordinary, one cannot read it without astonishment: There is another kind of dishonesty, says Cobden, "which allows these Jewish scoundrels to enrich themselves, and I will make it known without hesitation, in order to put in to guard against their treachery, and to show that one should not They should not be trusted at all. In some places, on "their sales and payment books and in the ac- "Those private agreements, they lend money without pra- wear and tear might be a concern; but one shouldn't rely on these appearances, because they know perfectly well how to change or "falsifying seals; they imitate and counterfeit writings" to the tures of others, they add and subtract, they mo- a difice what they deem necessary to change; they fabric- "also new obligations, and finally, They are deceiving in every way, as has been the case. has proven itself many times. That's why the lamp- "Are you Maximilian punishing the guilty parties in several ways?"

CHAPTER II. 209

210 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

to Carinthia, and that he immediately expelled others
 "that he would have been assured of these falsifications. It is easy "to see from this how much harm the frauds of the Jews cause
 "To the prosperity of Christians."

Elsewhere, the same author reveals bar- intolerance bare which the Jews used towards the Christians, etil provides several examples: "A respectable Jew
 "by his birth and by his wealth," he said to the cha-
 "clown xx1, convinced of the falsity of his religion,
 "embraced Christianity. His compatriots in con-
 "They were so furious that they sought the means "The most criminal act was to take his life. Unable to
 "to accomplish their plan, because he stood on "his guards and that he avoided their ambushes, they had "recourse to two bad Christians whom they seduced" lured by the promise of gold. These men eventually became re-
 "to keep them as friends by the novice, and they pro-
 "They relied on the trust they inspired in him for the
 "to take him to a secluded place, where they put him back in-at the hands of his enemies, who caused his death
 "In a cruel way." Here is another example cited by Cobden: "A Jewish child who happened to be there
 "with children his own age, who were Christians,
 "entered with them into a church, and, returning home
 He told his parents what he had seen. Those-"They strongly criticized his conduct, this
 "which did not prevent him from visiting several more times"
 He goes to the same church as his friends. This behavior
 "so irritated his mother, who was full of zeal

CHAPTER II. | 211

"ardent for Judaism, whom she resolved to kill"
 has clearly his own child, in fear that he She eventually embraced Christianity, and she executed
 "His dreadful plan."

The portrait of the Jews drawn by Pfeffercorn does not differ not of the previous one. The Jew, he writes, is always carried to deceit and fraud; it is always with intentions to deceive, that he deals with business with the Christians. He receives without any scruples the fruit of the Others possess the art of flying. There is undoubtedly something in the world many heresies and many different beliefs, but there is no sect more dishonest, more damore miserly, more deceptive, more disastrous for the Christian people hold on to the vile sect of the Jews. Night and day, These men are only occupied with pondering the means of to destroy and overthrow the power of the Christians. And when they can't find any others, they use wear and tear, they employ all possible kinds of fraudThey insinuate themselves everywhere with all the apparent signs. kindness, friendship, and trade full of charm (1).

Our author goes further, and he notes the zeal that apJews wear them, as if it were a religious act. gieux, continually blaspheming the most augustyour mysteries of Christianity, what he recognizes to be completely opposed to the true doctrine of Moses.

(1) Pfeffercorn, part. 11.

219 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

But the Jews despise the precepts of Moses, and followwind more readily the perverse teachings of the Talmud. They also declared war on the truth and to justice, as enemies of God and of the nature. Resist their stubborn malice, employ Against them, the council, the actions, and the authority, that is to truly show faithfulness to Jesus Christ, as it is acting for the greater good of society, that to move them away from the borders of the Empire, as well as men harmful to the public good. Such is the porThe trait that this author traces for us from the Synagogue to that era.

The facts confirm the veracity of these testimonies. Let us first open the Byzantine History (1) to the year 4522. Before Sultan Suleiman took the reins of the empire, a Jewish magician came to him, and predicted that he would reign. Suleiman having indeed mounted the throne, asked the magician what the events would be provisions of his reign. The Jew replied: "As long as a) The Christians will remain in the cities, they will try "everything to incite sedition, and they will preventreturn to the one who will have placed himself at the head of the revolt. "Therefore, great sultan, you must drive out and destroy" "These men before they committed this wrongdoing."

to consecrate all Christians, if Piri-pacha had not opposed laid out for such a cruel purpose. Who does not recognize, in this

(1) Chronicon historiæ byzantinæ Ducæ Michaelis Nepotis.

CHAPTER II. 913

The Jew's advice to Suleiman, the idea of the Cherem, that is to say—to speak of the destruction of Christians, which never ceases to Meditating on Jewish piety? Without the opposition of the pacha, we would have seen the scenes of the cinema renewed of the 10th and 6th centuries.

We read in the Nuremberg Chronicle, under the date of 1532 (1), that the Jews of Prague and Frankfurt had found a kind of poison so subtle that it suffic-
It took only a single drop to cause sudden death a man or a beast of burden. A Jew had made of it the experiment on a dog. When we learned this, the
The Jew was put in prison, and he confessed to the discovery made parses brothers with a view to using it against the Christians.
Around this time, Paul Jove said, speaking of the cou-Muscovite customs (2): "The Muscovites have a
"such horror of the Jewish race, that they shudder at to the mere thought of this people, and that they do not want not to receive them in their country, because they They look at them as perverse and evil men
"a sants."

In 1555, Emperor Charles V condemned to A fanatical Jew who wanted to pass himself off as the Messiah. This Jew had seduced a great number of deities brothers by magical operations; these, the pre-exciting for the restorer of the kingdom of Israel, exci-
They quelled seditions in several parts of the Empire.

(1) J. Burchardus Menchenius, Rerum germanicarum, t. II, p. 81.

(2) De legatione Basilii Magni, principis Moscoviæ, ad Cle-mentem VII

pa

to suppress the revolt of these perverse men?
Famien Strada (1) recounts that a certain Michez,

a restless and ambitious man, who had fled from Es-

' loincloth and had taken refuge in Antwerp, where he passed himself off for Christian, won the favor of Queen Mary and of the principal lords of the court. He took advantage of this favor to abduct a noble damsel with the-which he went to Venice. From there he went to Cons-Tantinople, where he married a very wealthy Jewish lady.

He then sees him in Cilicia, where he enters into friendly relations tied with Selim, son of Solomon, whose every need he satisfied desires and serves the most shameful passions. When Sé-Lim succeeded his father, Michez became his advisor for matters relating to the war. It is thanks to his influence and his treacherous schemes that the islands more Cruel calamities then befell the inhabitants.
Venice, the island of Cyprus, and other countries as well. The
The annals of these countries have made it more than once a bitter mention.

It is appropriate to recall here a passage from a speech bubble of Saint Pius V, published in 1569. This decree the expulsion of Jews from some provinces of the States of the Church. The zealous pontiff knew what harm was being done to the Christians' daily trade with Jews:
"However," he said, "their impiety, veiled by all sorts of using reprehensible artifices, he went so far that he became

(1) From bello belgieo, decas to, lib. v.

CHAPTER II, 215

"necessary, for the salvation of our people, to oppose a
"a prompt remedy for the violence of such a great evil."
"Indeed, not to mention the various types of wear and tear on by means of which the Jews plunder everywhere the to poor Christians of their possessions, we look
"as it has been sufficiently established that they are receivers of stolen goods and accomplices of all kinds of vels, sacred and profane,
"by concealing products in various ways,
either by making them disappear, or by transporting them
"elsewhere, or by transforming them to make them me-under the pretext of dealing with matters relating to "their trade, frequenting the women's houses"

 "honest and incite them to evil by the baits"
 "more shameful; and, what is most pernicious, through charms, curses and various other
 "magical superstitions to which they indulge, they "Seduce weak or reckless minds, and their "persuade that we can predict the future, find "Stolen items, discovering treasures and other hidden things, all things which are forbidden to "Men to search for. Finally, it is sufficient
 "has known with what indignity this perverse race pro-
 "nonce the venerable name of Jesus Christ, etc."
 Let us also note here that Saint Pius V, at the beginning-the beginning of his pontificate, brought back to the memory of the rabbin Elie Carcassio, president of the Rome synagogue, the promise he had made to him when he was not that cardinal, that is to say, he would become a Christian if the

916 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

The cardinal became pope. Elijah fulfilled his promise and converted along with several members of the Synagogue, who were the most distinguished of the rabbis of this era. The Sovereign Pontiff did not fail without doubt of being informed by them concerning the ills and the scandals that Christianity suffered at the hands of Jews. History shows us more than once that the novices competed, directly or indirectly-ment, to the deliberations of the civil or ecclesiastical authorities sistic remarks concerning the Jews; they sincerely confessed the iniquity of the Synagogue, and the inconveniences that it-
 This would be for Christians the association of Jews, because of the severity of Christian morality and of laxity of the conscience of the Jews in every respect, which constitutes an irreconcilable antagonism between the two morals and was the cause of a great scandal for Unenlightened consciences.

As for magic, Georges Godelmann, who was writing at that time, reproaches the Synagogue Pabus, which she made of the divine oracles uttered by the ancient prophets and the practices of incantation and magiesi offensive to religion and morality, to which He had pushed through the study of the Aebbalagius. And he exclaimed: "He is "truly astonishing that, while the Gospel shines
 "of such a bright light, there are princes and "republics that tolerate and protect blasphemy"
 "and the magical operations of this people. It is for "that which Christophe, Duke of Württemberg, rejected

"specious," they demanded, "the admission of Jews into "The State. The conduct of kings cannot be praised too highly."
"from Denmark and Sweden, voters, principals"
"these and the cities of Saxony, which do not admit at
"They are such an impious nation (4)."

Muslims, who profess great respect
Religious followers of Jesus, son of Mary, have borne punishments serious matters against those who curse him. However, it happened-dant in 1577, according to Gerlach, attached at the imperial embassy near the Ottoman Gate, that a Christian and a Jew having a dispute between.
In Constantinople, the Jew called Jesus Mamzer, which is tantamount to saying "bastard." The sultan was informed of Done. He asked the mufti what punishment the one who deserved deserved had cursed /say be: Mariam, Jesus, son of Mary; on replied that, according to the opinion of some elders doctors said he should have been condemned to be burned at the stake, according to others to life imprisonment, according to others finally subjected to beatings for forty days (2).

Luther, who was perfectly aware of the obstinacy of Jews to preserve their institutions, and the hatred they They bear the Christian name, he wrote these lines: "They
They would have rather crucified ten Messiahs and God himself,
If only it were possible, with all his angels, and destroyed
"all creatures, that we should suffer

(1) Georg. Godelmann, De Veneficis et Magis, p. 52.

(2) Wilhelmi Schikard, Annals of the Kings of Persia, Proemium,
p. 82.

918 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

"the heirs of the true Messiah and the promises of the pa-
"triarchs, we," I say, "whom they never cease to detest and "to curse. They want to have the Messiah alone, they at"tend from him dominion over all the world, and "Christians must then be their slaves; gold and "will have to be subjected to their whims like

"Beasts of burden."

In his History of Geneva, in the year 1582, Spon reports the discussion that arose on the admission of Jews in this town. The Sieur de Candole, returning "from Germany, brought a petition from the Jews who, fear-afraid of being driven out of this country, they asked to be admitted to Geneva. They offered to settle there, numbering eight to ten thousand, towards Saint-Jean or Saint-Victor, and to surround these neighborhoods with walls. where the republic en- would maintain the garrison. They also promised to be the first to arm themselves for the defense of the State, when we would like to employ them, to pay an annual tribute, and to submit to the laws that would be imposed upon them, content to have this place as a refuge, and to be able to- see doing trade with Valais and Piedmont. Some councilors were in favor of receiving them, and they emphasized the great wealth that the Jews brought would be good soldiers if they remained in the country. which would cost nothing, which the city would become, thanks to them, more commercial, that finally no one could- Geneva could be criticized for admitting them, since they were tolerated throughout Italy. Other advisors held a contrary opinion. They represented that the Protestant states had made a mistake with their tolerance with regard to the Jews; that, in the current circumstances, one could not trust this people; that their admission would lead to a significant increase in food prices, because that they would seize them through their usual trafficking raires; that this was why they had been driven out of France, and that they were considering moving them away from Germany Magne. This last opinion prevailed, and the request of Jews were rejected.

CHAPTER 11. 219

Around the same time, Lorenzo Soranzo recounts how the Jews, in agreement with the Turks, and always ready to harm the Christians, they attempted to penetrate the secrets from European cabinets to reveal them to Ottomans. Among these types of spies, one stood out: a certain Jean Lopez who, following in the footsteps of Michez, whom we mentioned earlier, finally succeeded to penetrate the secret designs of Sixtus V, and the made it known to Sultan Amurath.

Soranzo himself recounts an event that illustrates better

"Before Amurath's death," he said, "the Christians of Constantinople ran great risks for their life, because they were accused of having set fire to the different places in the city. Amurath had consequently- consequence ordered the janissaries to massacre all Christians, without distinction of person. The agha opposed this order from the sultan, showing how much the large number of Christians would make its execution

R

920 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

"dangerous action, and the resulting damage" "because the tribute would be reduced and we would have violated People's rights. The result ends up being quite contrary to what was expected, because there were a few Jewish women who had given this advice to Amurath, who were condemned to death." Isn't there not some connections between this inspired accusation through hatred of the name of Jesus Christ, and what happened to Rome during Nero's time? It was also through inspiration Jews whom Nero considered expelling onto the Christians The burning of Rome. We see that the Jews are consistent. to renew their old calumnies against the Christians. This is what the holy martyr already lamented. Justin, and what he reproached the Jew Tryphon and Sy- The entire synagogue, which, unable by itself to get rid of the Christians, pushed by dint of calumnies the Roman authorities to persecute and destroy the nascent Church of Jesus Christ.

We have seen, in previous centuries, how much it was dangerous for Christians to resort to the Jews in their illnesses. Voet provides us with examples that prove this danger did not exist less in the sixth century (1).

In 1512, Bayezid, Sultan of the Turks, perished by the crime committed by his doctor, who was Jewish, and who admitted him nistra, a drug from which he died instantly. Joachim, Elector of Brandenburg, experienced the same

(1) Voetius, ex auctoritate episcopi Senensis.

comes from a Jewish doctor. If we recall—Let us now turn to the words of Abbot Gioberti, who extols the Synagogue as having rendered great services
In the Middle Ages, through the practice of medicine, we
We will see that this writer has completely forgotten the decrees.
bishops and councils that forbade Christians Indeed, precisely at this time, to have recourse to Jews in their illnesses, given the serious matters for fear that they might use, instead of beneficial remedies, harmful medications that experience had taught them. The novice anonymous, in his book entitled Fortalitium fidei contra Judæos, etc., represents as a proven thing—the Jewish doctors boasted in Penvi one on the other hand, in their solemn meetings, to have held a larger number of Christians.

Finally, to see how fu—
nests to society in their relations with Christians
Well, we only need to remember what was established in 1527, in the reform of the Florentine republic. He was Jews were forbidden to lend at usury to any of the following:
toys; they were also forbidden to remain in the domains of the republic otherwise than in pas—sant, and for more than fifteen days. The laws of Al—sace, from 1532 to 1548, absolutely forbade the Jews to negotiate no business with the citizens of Strasbourg. Maximilien IT added to this defense the sentence of the loss of everything they would have acquired through these contracts, except for things necessary for life.

999 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE,

Christian charity sought, as we do, to...
We have already said, a remedy for these ills, which we had not never been able to cure by any means employed until—than that. The magistrates considered establishing what one called upon pawnshops, to which they could have re—courses for citizens who needed money for to provide for the necessities of life, and so they were put to shelter from the usury and rapacity of the Jews. An in—scription that can be read in the main square of Treviso attests to the damages that the dupes had caused to be borne to the inhabitants of this city, especially the poor, with the monopoly they exercised and their various means to get rich, when finally the republic, following Following the example of other cities, decreed the expulsion of this people, and established a pawnshop to come to the aid of

Let us say here, once and for all, that, among the causes of the harms done to Christianity by the Synagogue throughout history, and especially in the Middle Ages, we must take into account the idleness and laziness to which the Jews were particularly prone to it. Fleeing thus any kind of fatigue, whether in agricultural work or in some culture, whether in those of industry or some profession, they spent their lives abandoned to all vices, and engaged in unfair trade in which they were only trying to deceive. That's what we can say. We can infer correctly from these prescriptions so often repeated and renewed by the ecclesiastical and civil authorities to prevent the disastrous consequences for the so-

CHAPTER H. 293

Christian society, which was brought about by the inertia of this people. We will conclude our observations on the sixteenth century, by drawing the reader's attention to the bull of the Pope Clement VII, dated 1459. Recalling in this bull, the decrees of his predecessors Gregory IX, Innocent IV, Clement IV, Honorius IV, John XXII, Julius II, Paul IV and Gregory XIII, this pope renews the prohibition against reading the Talmud and other books of the Synagogue as detestable in every respect: Perpetud prohibemus quosvis libros et codices talmudicos, impios, sæpè damnatos, vanissimos, cabalisticos, atque alios nefarios a prædecessoribus nostris condemnatos, etc. Was such a condemnation not legitimate? In these books, the dogmas and doctrine of Christianity is trampled underfoot and vilified; the public morality is no less outraged there; all the civil and religious disorder naturally ensue from this. and it would be difficult to find more doctrines elsewhere dangerous for society and for religion.

Seventeenth century.

The Synagogue persisted in fostering the same hatred than in previous centuries for the name of Jesus-Christ and his worshippers; this hatred, sucked with the milk from childhood, can only be difficult to destroy. Always ready at the same time to play with the good faith of the Christians, the Jews take care to adapt their conduct in various circumstances, and to 'show as their interests demand, in ca-singing their evil designs under hy- appearances pocrites, which were the distinctive characteristic of their fathers the Pharisees. In 1648, in Vienna, a Bohemian Jew who had stolen a silver vase from the Synagogue, thought of avoiding his brothers' revenge by making himself Christian (1). He gained the favor of Ferdinand III and he lived at court. But, after some time, of in concert with two other Jews, he secretly abducted

 The royal treasury held deposits of great value. It was discovered and sentenced to death. As he was being led-knowing the torture, he clearly showed that his conversion had not-
 It had only been a feint: he threw down the crucifix that one had placed it in his hands, and pronounced this protest-public statement: "In truth, it is only oral,
 "and not from the heart, that I participated in your shameful
 "abominations and to your bread." When the sen-had the order been executed, the authority retained possession of honored by an inscription the memory of this infamous man.
 Buxtorf, one of the most learned Hebraists of that time,
 who had penetrated as far as possible into the es-took from the Synagogue, and who knew the maxims and antisocial tendencies professed by She and collected in his books, Buxtorf says: "By "continuation of the vain ideas of DUISARCeN and domination"
 "to which she attaches herself as to so many pro-
 "divine masses, there is no nation in the world
 "more bloodthirsty and more thirsty for revenge than

(1) Wagenseil, Tea ignea Satan, t. 1, p. 189.

CHAPTER II. 295

"That of the Jews. They consider themselves the people of "God chose to scatter and destroy by iron and
 "by fire all the other nations, and this is good-
 "He has done the greatest thing they expect from their Messiah."

The Jew Leo of Modena, who lived in Italy at this at that time, was so animated by this Jewish hatred-that against Christianity, which he blasphemed... blatantly against Jesus Christ, by uttering the paroles most insulting to his divine character. Also the famous Cromwell, so attentive as he was to favoring trade, the basis of prosperity and opulence

England, he observed, was neither Christian nor poet litigation to allow the introduction of such a race in the country, and he replied to the Jewish representatives that he prided himself on worshipping, along with all of England, this-him whom their fathers crucified, and whom they denied They themselves were divinity; that, consequently, it does not wanted to have no connection with the irreconcilable in-enemies of his religion. And he ordered them to leave immediately Great Britain.

In 1663, the Turks celebrated in Adrianople, by celebrations and festivities, the anniversary of the capture of this city (4); among other things, the people were given the spectacle of a Christian city under attack; but there were so many insults in the performance...
the religion of Jesus Christ, which the sultan, disgusted,

(1) C. Nani, Sforia Veneia, lib. IX.
43.

226 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

had some Jews beaten who were the perpetrators of this spectacle. Such is the Jew in the freedom of his profession.
Sion, such is his intolerance towards Christians, that he even provokes the fury of Muslims by his audacity and impudence.

Spinoza, that famous seventeenth-century atheist,
He was Jewish by birth, as is well known. The study of The Talmud inspired him with doubts about the truth of the doctrines the things contained in this book. He made his doubts known.
to his fellow believers, who were irritated by the difficulties that he proposed and to which they could not respond dre, and Spinoza was struck by a dagger blow.
one of them as he was leaving the synagogue. Indignant at a such a crime, Spinoza completely abandoned ju-Daism, and then lost himself in unbelief.

In Hamburg, according to Voet's report, a master of the Synagogue which had believed it recognized the Messiah in the person of Sabbathai-Sevi, about whom we will speak Further on, he later converted to Christianity. His zeal
The barbarian among his coreligionists flew into a rage upon seeing this conversion; they stirred up some against him men of the dregs of the people, and he was so badly mistreated, that he died shortly afterwards. The same author adds that a Jew named Lazarus, having learned that by another Jew. This event is said to have occurred in 1694. The following event, as recounted by Jean Benoît Carpzov (1), is even more surprising: "Six years ago," he writes,

(1) Theologia judaica, cap. nr.

CHAPTER 1. 997

"that a Jew of the Karaite sect came from the East" here in Frankfurt. Not only did our Jews not want— They did not want to receive him in their synagogue, but in—"They chased him out of their neighborhood, and great and "The children chased after him, insulting him, and threw at him..." "stones and mud, so that the misfortune— Areux was forced to take refuge with the lord "Ludolf, who received him kindly and made him leave—"Shooting from the city while handing him money." When When we think about this fact, we are truly astonished by the audacity Jews, who openly admit the hatred they harbor tent to the Samaritans and Karaites, and who claim to feel no ill will towards Christians, while di— knowing that Jesus Christ was and still is the cause of all their misfortunes.

The emperor, marching against the Turks who had seized Buda, found the Jews in agreement with his enemies, and consequently encountered vigorous resistance This event rekindled the hatred of the Germans. against these men who, taking no account of They hand over the homeland where they were born to the first comer. provided they see their advantage in it, and especially the ruin of Christianity.

Schudt writes under the date 1699: "In the pro— criminal case brought against the notorious brigands of of the Duchy of Luxembourg, it was noted according to the unanimous confessions of the guilty parties, that no important theft— so much had been accomplished without the participation of the Jews, who had been either the authors or the promoters, or the advisors, or the executors and the cooperators—"ers."

9298 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

But the most remarkable fact of this century is with what vividness does it persist in the heart of this little-ple, as the fundamental maxim of his religion, belief in the coming of a Messiah, whom he awaits for to shake off the yoke of the nations, to overthrow the thrones and to trample underfoot the name of Jesus Christ. This was around the middle of the seventeenth century that Sabbathai conceived the intention of being the liberator of the Jewish people in Asia Minor, in the East and throughout the world. To succeed, this fanatic found a favorable way in the cabalistic interpretations of a passage prophecies of Daniel, according to which the Messiah was due to appear in 4675. Another fanatic who was agreeing with him, and who presented herself as his predecessor, maintained that Sabbathai was the Messiah destined to overthrow the empire of Constantinople. Many rabbins opposed this project, but a few others and a crowd of ordinary people began to follow Sabbathai, proclaiming him king of Israel. He set himself in march towards Constantinople. The Grand Seigneur, in- Based on these facts, he had him arrested and given [treatment/explanations]. blows with sticks. But this only succeeded in inspiring the Jews have a greater conviction of the coming of the Messiah. and greater respect for the person of Sabbathai. Thai. So the sultan ordered his head to be cut off, to see if he was invulnerable. Sabbathai, frightened by-

CHAPTER II. E 229

He received grace and became a Muslim. However, he was of again sentenced to death some time later, to because of the troubles he was still stirring up, and he suffered his This hardly opened the eyes of all the fanatic. Hocheplid, consul in Smyrna at that time, recounts, in a letter dated 1703, that another A fanatical Jew maintained that Sabbathai was living in hiding in some underground place, and that he would appear at the end forty-five years old. And, in the meantime, he was spreading the noise of several wonders to make people believe more the prediction he made of the future resurrection of Sabbathaii.

Tenth century.

Some Western rabbis, seduced by this fanaticism... tic and convinced that he was the Messiah, began to celebrate his praises. Later disillusioned, they abandoned- They entered the Synagogue to become Christians (1). It im-poster, not only in Asia Minor, but even in Germany, Poland, Bavaria, Italy—lie, in Transylvania, had reached the proportions of a even greater enthusiasm in Persia, where ha—a large number of Jews who had already previously earlier had made attempts to revolt for other reasons very reasons. That is why the King of Persia, moreover

(1) Christopher. Græfii, In Notis epistolæ Maimonidis de fulso Messiah. in

RER ER te NET

930 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

further convinced of the perfidy of this nation, re—Niten advises the principal lords of his kingdom, and it was resolved that a nation which would be removed from the country had so many wrongdoers and imposters in its breast, and which proposed no other goal than oppression—sion of humankind. From then on, the Persians never ceased—rent to feel the greatest aversion for the Jews; Even today, the Jews who live in these con—They are very miserable and despised, as evidenced by the accounts of modern travelers. What then are the authors of this miserable situation of the Jews in Per—Is it Persian authority, or the perversity of the Synagogue? Can we, in this circumstance, accuse Christian intolerance? Isn't it obvious that it is It is to their perversity that the Jews owe these measures that the necessity imposed on a Muslim government?

Spanheim, a writer of that era, to whom history had perfectly conveyed the character of this people, said that its distinctive character is an extreme avarice and an insatiable greed to accumulate wealth, and that, for this reason, he engages in usury, to plunder, to sorcery, wherever he lives, since the extremities of the East as far as the provinces of A—Africa. Voet adds that the entire study of the Syna—Gogue consists of an abominable hypocrisy, and that all his works, even those that are called his Good works are nothing but genuine sins. because the entire system of their faith, their religion and their piety is merely a mask they use to cover up their perfidy, as the phariseans their masters.

At the beginning of the eighteenth century, Henry-Jacques Bathuysen recalls the vulgar proverb which said that a Christian should be careful not to present himself in court to argue with a Jew, because of the bad faith of this nation, its address and of his persistence in deceiving his opponent and the judge. He further observes that "Jews suck money like the blood of Christians, and that they congratulate one another when they succeeded in ruining some Christian, thus Schudt and Gerson have already sufficiently proven this.

In 1751, writing to the bishops of Poland, the pope Benedict XIV recommends that they divert the Christians I hold the service of the Jews, because, besides that, offensive to Christianity, that's also a thing hard and arduous, not to mention the serious dangers to- What are the risks to men and women subjected to this? to the whims of these masters. The sovereign pontiff did- at the same time, he knows how to notice the imminent misery of Christian people, a result of usury and monopolies, the tricks and deceit of the Jews, who had brought major upheavals in fortunes. And that's exactly eleven years earlier, (like Muratori (as stated in his Annals under the date of 1740), that the Jews obtained permission to enter Naples with the enjoyment of the granting of several privileges, promising the State illusory advantages that their commerce, because of the secret influence they had everywhere in business. The Neapolitan people, who have not- I hadn't forgotten that the Jews had been expelled in 1492, because they were impoverishing the kingdom so much through their thefts, their usury and their extortion of everything type (4), which the irritated citizens had made heard the people, did- we are, saw immediately what damage would result of the admission of the Jews, and united in this circumstance to the clergy, who were perfectly capable of just- what dangers would threaten morality and religion; the discontent he showed forced The Jews gradually withdrew.

232 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

country, writes the following: "It is proven that there is never
"There has been no race of men more disastrous than the Jews"
"for the fertile provinces which belong to the mai-
"its sound from Austria, and especially since the year 1796, in
"in which they counterfeited banknotes and coins,
"made the currency disappear, and produced this "appalling and general shortage in which they
"They were the only ones to earn immense sums."

If we go from Germany to France, and especially in Alsace, here is what the day saidnal La Quotidienne, at a time not far removed from the one we just indicated: "It is located "Everywhere men whose treacherous aid is
"the ruin of those who have the weakness to dis-

(1) Giannone, Sforia di Napoli (History of Naples), lib. XXXIL, Cap. L

CHAPTER H, | 233

"To order. But nowhere do we know what's going on"
"in Alsace, where part of the population is united"quintessentially devoted to money laundering and not seeking-
"It's about laying traps in all sorts of ways"
"to good faith, to credulity, to inexperience..."
"One could hardly believe a large part of the facts"
"which are reported, if we did not have as a guarantee"
"ties the strong demands of the General Councils
"of the two departments that make up this province,
"and the testimony of their representatives. It follows, however-
"fewer of these facts would cause an upheaval"
"general property in Alsace, if all the claims-
"These taxes on the Jews were payable. The Assembly con-
"the constituent assembly itself, despite its liberal fervor, ren-
"said, in less urgent circumstances, a de-
"cred to force the Jews of this country to provide "evidence and testimonies of their claims, in order to
"that the legislative body could establish the means "more equitable to liquidate them fairly." A de-
"The decree of Emperor Napoleon, in 1808, annulled a "part of these debts, and suspended the recovery-
"Lies of others."

There

The insolence of the Jews towards the Christian name has-
Has it diminished in the century we live in?
Has the people renounced their habits and prejudices?
An event that occurred at the beginning of this century, in Reg-

934 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

Gio di Modena, along with several others, comes to prove
The opposite. A Jew from that city had seduced a Christian woman. When he saw that the unfortunate wanted to baptize the child born to their guilty party in business, he grabbed the child by the feet and struck him-
The child was violently thrown headfirst against a table.
his skull shattered by the very hand of the one who had given birth. One of the Jews who served in the French army during the invasion of Spain, under Napoleon, having met a priest who was wearing his
In his chest, the image of Jesus crucified immediately transported by the hatred his nation has shown towards the Redempter, and using the license that the circumstances authorized, he said to the priest: "Tell your Crucified One that It was a Jew who fastened him to the cross.

Mr. de Ségur, in his History of Napoleon and of the Grande Armée in 18192, wrote the following (1): "We
"We do not wish to report here the cruelties exercised-
"created by the Jews against the French who returned from "Moscow in 1812. They treacherously slaughtered them for
"to steal from them; they invited them into their homes"
"They take them in under the pretext of hospitality, and then they de-
"They littered and threw them all naked out of the windows,
"to let them die of cold on the snow and on "Ice." That was the recognition ju-daïque for all that Napoleon had done in favor Jews in his empire. This is yet another example of of the Cherem, still living in the heart of the Jew, and who

(1) T, IE, liv.xu, p. 390.

CHAPTER II. 235

reappears every time the opportunity arises to show the hatred this people feels towards the Christ and against his worshippers.

In 1824, the Frankfurt government, horrified of the decisive influence that the Jews acquired, thanks to their credit and their wealth, prohibited any participation their participation in public affairs, and forced them to shut themselves away in their own affairs and in the exercise of their professions.

To conclude this long story, we will recall a article from the Smyrna newspaper, L'Impartial, under the date of November 1848. The author of this article, examining the situation in the Moldovan-Vlach provinces, wrote, among other things: "However, the factories "brandy absorbs the country's grain; lPal- "Cool that what they produce is immediately sold to the Jews" "who speculate in everything and on everything, and who exchange "this deadly liquor against foodstuffs, clothing- "The peasants' livestock and animals. In order to prevent "a large part of the harm caused in the countryside" "through these brandy factories, the government" "deprived the Jews of the right to run taverns, because "They then had at least one in each pro- "seigneurial prerogative. But there again the law was powerless-" "health and it was evaded by means of front men" "that the Jews found. They are a stubborn race, "who does not easily abandon the prey she has" "seizure. Besides, this sordid nation has not all- "days golden enough to close the employees' eyes"

236 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

"that the government is tasked with suppressing its frauds" " of the. "

We currently have before us another newspaper, the Observer of Trieste, issue of February 16 1849, in which we read the proclamation made by The Prince of Windischgrätz against the Jews of Pest. These Jews were helping the rebel refugees in Debreczin. Notwithstanding the prince's proclamation,

'later an entire shipment of clothing was seized and military effects sent by them to that city.

In Rome, according to the Gazette de Gênes of the 20th June 1849, the Jews favored the enterprises of anar-Christians who rebelled against the Pope. They worked to... their forces to stop the French troops destined to To restore the Sovereign Pontiff to his throne. Finding Moreover, taking advantage of the favorable opportunity, they gathered in their

and in private homes. All these facts prove—wind the ingratitude with which they acknowledged the sove—
the clemency that Pius IX had shown them.

Having reached the end of this story that we have abridged as much as we could, we believe to have brought to light the true aspect of the doc—the Synagogue's trine, illuminating it through testimony facts, and by gathering the depositions of all the centuries that have followed one another since Jesus Christ until us. Now we ask: can we say with Sir Robert Peel and with those who think like Ini: "As for moral conduct, exercise—

CHAPTER II. 937

"A quick-witted champion of charity, and of proven loyalty,"
"The Israelites deserve to enjoy such a great
"Consideration that no other religious sect, whatever—
"Conch?" Could one agree with him more than in as he adds elsewhere: "I feel strongly "that if there was ever a class of our fellow men to the—
"that all European states owe a reparation—
"A ration for centuries of injustice and persecution"
"And of wrongs, it is certainly that of the Israelites?"
Can we applaud, as did the crowd that Pentourait, to the conclusions he claimed to draw from his speech? Shouldn't we rather feel pity for so many errors, so many false assumptions of which he Did he fill it?

Could it therefore be possible that, since Jesus Christ until—that to this day, all those who have demonstrated through facts, Having experienced firsthand the perfidy of the Synagogue,
his antisocial doctrines and prejudices, his incom—compatibility with Christian governments, the antago—direct nism of his religious, moral and maxims political relations with Christianity, would it be possible, di—
We are convinced that all these men were mistaken, and that their judgments were the result of misfortune—
A false illusion? Is it possible that all historians and the philosophers of past centuries, that princes, magistrates of all faiths, pagans, Christians and Muslims, as well as the entire Catholic clergy, the bishops and the councils were not only mistaken, but heard from generation to generation, during the es—

space of eighteen centuries, and met in the same malicious thought to accuse, to dif- to fame and to condemn this nation as per- faithful, when, on the contrary, if we believe Sir Ro- Bert Peel and the modern philosophers and reformers, this nation was innocent, irreproachable, useful to the society, and worthy of general admiration?

Is it possible that, from Saint Paul to the present day, all converts from Judaism to Christianity who, Driven by the force of truth, they recognized divinity of Jesus Christ, and embraced a doctrine that imposes the probity, sincerity in words and deeds, had invented so many calumnies against the Jews their brothers, and, what would be even more astonishing, against themselves, by indulging in these ignominies and these Perjurers?

Is it possible that the Jews themselves con- spanked, to their shame and confusion, for their crimes, their excesses, their cruelties and their revolts against authority, with all the fatal consequences that it have had for the Christians, and that they made them con- to be born to posterity by recording them in their me- Moires, if indeed these crimes were not committed?

Is it possible, finally, that Jesus Christ was mistaken? first of all, by pushing back so highly the per- Pharisaic fide from a dual religious and civil, as we see it in the Gospel? Is it It is possible that he wanted to slander the Synagogue with his doctors, with the scribes and Pharisees, whose

CHAPTER HI. 239

Jews, now spread throughout the world, are the descendants and legitimate heirs, with the exception Karaites? Is it possible that he made a mistake in – reproaching the Pharisees for so many erroneous maxims and perverse things they held, as they said, from the tradition of their fathers, and that their successors have carefully preserved them, which they have entrusted to the e- Scripture in its entirety, and that they teach still to their children and their disciples?

Is it possible that Jesus Christ, against all reason, his and against all justice, declared that the school of Pharisees, which is the foundation of the Synagogue ac-

of pride, hypocrisy, avarice, rapacity, and adult-of impurity, perjury, rebellion, persecutory cut and all kinds of iniquities? that he should be reproved felt as if filled with prejudice against the true idea
And against the wisdom of Mosaic law?
Indeed, we saw it, we didn't need, at the beginning-
The point of this discussion is to gather the maxims of the Jewish tradition found in the books Jews, to show that they are the same as those of which Jesus Christ accused the Synagogue of its time.

However, the fact remains: an attempt was made to rehabilitate the Synagogue, and it was to be so with the ten-dances of modern philosophy, which all seek-they wish to establish equality between the various religions of the universe, which will do nothing less than bring down

240 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

Jesus Christ, of that primacy which he alone possesses, from this divine throne on which he alone sits, and that must occupy his Church to the exclusion of other religions gions. Thus, his doctrine is placed on the same level as all the others, and he is not accorded any more honor than to those of Zoroaster, Muhammad, and all the sec-silences that appeared in the world before or since his incarnation. At the same time, we strive to show that all religions have moral principles and civilians who agree, if not in supernatural dogmas-reals, at least in the general maxims of life social. It was therefore necessary to place on the same level than all the others, the Pharisaic sect, or rather the Synagogue rejected by God, and to treat it as in the same way as the others; it was therefore necessary, remove it from the lowering in which it was immersed-then so many centuries, of the universal consent of men who knew his maxims and knew that they are irreconcilable with other doctrines, especially with those of Christianity, its adversary declared. So people started speaking in his favor, at proclaiming his merits aloud, and we heard Gioberti called the Jews, without any distinction of eat that time, a nation illustrious for its antiquity, for its character, by virtue of his lineage, by a multitude of privileges natural phenomena that surpass nature, and which have lived since fifteen centuries in all parts of the Christian world yours (1). What did the famous writer mean by

(1) Vincenzo Gioberti, Apology for the Modern Jesuit.

CHAPTER II. 241

This praise? It clearly showed it then that in his various writings, he sought by all means to tarnish the reputation of this religious society, which has so well deserved by the Catholic Church, by the true Church of Jesus Christ. Did he not realize that he prepared the blinded peoples to cry out: "Zolle hunc, and dimitte nobis Barabbam (1), that we crucify Jesus Christ, and give us Barabbas; drive out Jesus and the Jesuits, and give us the Jews; give them back to the life, honor, to Christian society. That one condemn the first ones as guilty and scoundrels rats, but that Barabbas and his imitators, seditious and criminals, be saved; let them be exalted, let them be declared innocent, worthy of human society, worthy of "Universal applause." And that's what we have obtained, if not everywhere, at least in more than one country.

Let us now examine the assertions in more detail. of Sir Robert Peel. He strongly deplores, in the discourse—The course we mentioned, the horrific massacres accomplished in the Middle Ages by Christians in various cities in England, France, Germany and others country. He said, "We have difficulty explaining ourselves." "how the remnants of a nation so violently per—"The seized items were able to reach us. Only one thing "explains how they escaped a complete "Extermination is about patience and resignation." extraordinary things they showed in the midst of the per—"Sections."

(1) Luke, 20, 18.

14

242 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

We do not claim to contradict the all of these assertions; we do not wish to deny that it were there excesses committed by Christians regarding this evil? happy people; we can only disapprove of them ver. However, we first have the right to accuse the noble baronet and those who share his opinions, or of unforgivable negligence or unjust bias ity. Indeed, Sir Robert Peel noted all the excesses, all not even to mention the unspeakable cruelties perpetrated by the Jews over the Christians for a period of ten or eleven centuries. During this period, events of which the vera- This fact is noted by all historians, they show us the miserable condition of Christians subjected to all the hatred of the Pharisaic sect, and the horrific massacres of Christians caused or perpetrated by Jews, only because their victims were worshippers of Nazarean, whose death they loudly demanded. from the time of Pontius Pilate.

Among the many examples that could be cited, if Robert Peel and his supporters had launched a simple attack a look at the history of Khosrow II, which we have told in its proper place, shouldn't they have shuddered with horror? furious upon learning of the massacre of eighty thousand prisoners, mostly Christians, whom this king of Persia had sold as slaves to the Jews after his invasion of Palestine, and seeing that the only cause of Was this massacre the religion of the unfortunate victims? Certainly all the murders of Jews by Christians:-

CHAPTER I. 243

They, who were in the Middle Ages, did not, even when gathered together, Unbelievable, such a large number of victims. This fact alone, without taking care of so many others like them is enough to make them ren- within fair limits, the unjust proposals advanced tactics by our opponents against the conduct Medieval Christians' attitude towards the Synagogue. Wouldn't that be enough to show their mistake or their injustice to all those who make themselves the bosses of Judaism, and the critics of Christian governments What about their relationship with the Jews?

Is it even possible that there was no In the Middle Ages, there was no reason for malevolence. Christians, nothing at all that had stirred them up against the Jewish people? Is it possible that, among all these facts reported by illustrious orators, there is not one the only one that offers at least some glimpse of a reason for A Christian uprising against the Jews? Could it be? It was possible that all the Jews had been innocent, and Are all Christians guilty? Could it be that the Christianity inspired a hatred capable of leading to such excesses, without any provocation on the part of the Synagogue? It would be hard to believe, but in pre- In light of the facts, we remain fully convinced, that there are very few cases in which the Jewish, and more specifically by hatred of Jews against Jesus Christ and his disciples, by their extraordinary irreverence in actions and words, in-towards the venerable mysteries of our holy religion,

944 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

and by the barbaric treatment they inflicted on innocent creatures. The historical sketch that pre-gives way, and what remains to be said shows it superabundantly.

It should also be noted that provocation is coming from the Jews and not the Christians. Jesus Christ has
He was the first to be persecuted, and with him all his disciples.
The Pharisaic school opposed with all its might the Gospel message, however confirmed by extraordinary signs, and she sought every means, she used all the cunning she could to prevent the progress of the Christian religion, without fear of resorting even to hell for the success of his conjura-tion. For three centuries, the name of Jesus was blas-Pheme, his Church persecuted, without the faithful had given even the slightest pretext, without them have in any way provoked, by words or through actions, the anger of the Synagogue.

As for the time that has passed since Con-
From Stantin to the present day, it should be noted that, in the conflicts that occurred between Christians and Jews, although the former were most often excited through horrific crimes, among which we must count the murder of children, and that they only carried out reprisals by attacking life or taking the
The Jews' property was always found in the hands of the magistrates.
Christians, what am I saying? The Church itself in the per-sounds of the sovereign Pontiffs, bishops and others wise and zealous priests, who strove to stop the per-

CHAPTER II. 245

sections, violence and excesses of all kinds to-which an exasperated multitude indulged in. The sovereigns Pontiffs even took in Jews perseceded, and these, quite convinced of the magnanimity and the spirit of charity that guided the head of the Church, addressed their complaints to the successor of Jesus Christ, frequent examples. Here, for instance, is what e-wrote Saint Bernard, in his 322nd letter, to the bishop, to clergy and faithful of Speyer: Audimus and gaudemus ut in vobis ferveat zelus Dei. Sed oportet omnino temperamentum scientiæ non goddess. No sunt persequendi Judæi, non sunt trucidandi, sed nec effugandi quidem, etc. Peter the Venerable, abbot of Cluny, had not other feelings, and, to put it all in a word, these feelings were only those inspired in the Church by the es-even took from the Gospel.

The Synagogue acted and thought in a completely different way. different, because she could never tolerate doctrines contrary to his own; they also acted quite differently and thought the rabbis and other members of the Synagogue, constituted judges, leaders and masters of the Jews. These are the ones we always encounter, like the promoters and instigators of hatred in the the hearts of their fellow believers, those whom we see to rejoice every time something happens contrary to the person or worship of Christians. Not-Weren't they the first to conspire, back in the day?

where their fanaticism hoped for the imminent downfall of 484.

216 | THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

Messiah, and to incite their brothers against the Christians or against other peoples? Were they not looking as a pious and meritorious act to outrage the Christian Stianism and the sacred rites of the Church, and to insult the people devoted to the service of Jesus Christ, pen-knowing in this doing a work pleasing to God, as the Savior himself had foreseen it: Sed venit hora, ut omnis who interferes with you, arbitrator obsequium se præstare Deo (1)? |

Let us add to this that by acting against Christia-nism and by inciting its followers to revolt against Christian governments, the Synagogue has never-but could claim as a pretext that she was oppressed mother, but she acted the way she did, because that she is an enemy of Christianity and of everything else religion, and because it is still waiting for the Messiah, whose future advent cradles her with illusory hopes-res. 11 It was enough that a fanatic, that the first im-The poster who came claimed to be sent by God so that she

She rebelled against the established governments. That's what we saw particularly in Persia, where the Jews were very numerous in the Middle Ages, and where they were found—were in a more prosperous situation than elsewhere. It was one of their national historians, Benjamin de Tudela, who attests that they were always more numerous—there are more in this country than in others, and that explains

(1) Joan., xvi, 2.

CS

_ _ a SE RS pt ee RSR Tr QE PAPER NON ps, | 'OPNTTS rt era
ee a ne 5 SR USS

CHAPTER II 247

their attempts to overthrow Persian authority. Their rebellions were therefore properly a continuation of their prejudices concerning the Messiah they are awaiting, and not the servile condition in which they lived.

There is an even more important point to make. in the present question: it will demonstrate the intolerance and the cruelty of the Synagogue towards the Christians, and should, on the contrary, excite admiration for the gentleness and tolerance of Christians towards Jews. There is no axiom more consistently adopted by jurists as this: Licet vim vi repellere. However, the Cherem is a decree of destruction and of extermination sanctioned by the Synagogue against his enemies, that is to say against Jesus Christ and his disciples. Christians could therefore, by virtue of the axiom we have just quoted, also pronounce legitimately, and as being in the case of legitimate defense, the Cherem or the anathema of extermination against the Jews. Who could deny them this right? We On this point, we appeal to all humanist writers. silences of this century.

Nevertheless, let us recognize true humanity, the true charity of Christians. This is an admitted proof. remarkable and extraordinary of this evangelical sentiment which pushes one to risk death for the salvation of others, and to bring souls back to the true path of life who go astray. Isn't that, in fact, being driven by a

these same men who, in the place of Christian society,

248 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

They meditate on ruin and destruction, waiting always the right time to crush the religion of Jesus-Christ and those who profess it, in the same way that Saint Paul confesses to having desired and done it, as we read in his life, when, abundanti-us æmulator existentens paternarum traditionum, he would rush against those who invoked the name of Jesus and dragged them before the Pharisees magistrates to have them condemned to death? It is in this context-
The sequence of these ideas and feelings that the Synagogue, in the prayers of the festival of Purim, celebrated in memory of Haman's punishment, he asked God to bring back the days of Esther to commit a massacre general of nations and especially of Christians, as they had once done to their enemies under the reign of Ahasuerus. Albert Fabricius, Wolf, Grotius and Pufendorf admit that one must be intolerant of with regard to deists and atheists; are we not more in the right to be so with regard to the Jews under the double rapcivil and religious practices, when one considers the maxims contained in their books and their conduct through the centuries, maxims and conduct fatal to the Church, to princes and the existence of society? That is what justifies, in the eyes of politics, the conduct of the Rohands in the early centuries of the common era, during-that they had become aware of the Synagogue's schemes, who, quick to revolt against the Empire, with her voice from the first fanatic who came along, stirring up terror everywhere-revolts and disturbed the public peace. The authority

CHAPTER II. 249

therefore resorted to the means most appropriate for repression these attempts, by causing death wherever she could, the race of David, by defending, under severe penalties res, to practice circumcision outside the race Israelite, by prohibiting the sending of their collections to Jerusalem, and keeping the Jews as separate as possible residing with one another, all measures very well suited to to remove them, or at least to weaken them, hopes for a future restoration.

That is also why there is reason to excuse it, otherwise in Spain, and by Dagobert in France, laws which obliged the Jews to renounce their religious maxims—his, and to profess the religion of Jesus Christ, or to undergo exile. The large number of Jews who lived in Spain, their close relations with the peoples of Africa, which conspired together to ruin the throne and of the Church, particularly forced the monarchs—Spanish authorities to take exceptional measures in the interest of their kingdom, of life and of the freedom of their subjects, and of the honor of religion.

In addition to the previous observations, the following may be added still others, which are no less peremptory attention to the declamations of moderns against the severity and harshness of the laws we have just speaking, laws which they condemn as unjust, inopportunes and ineffective, because, according to them, it is not—It was not in this way that the Jews could be brought back to the salutary the fundamental principles of religion and morality.

250 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

If it were indeed a question of any other people, we would show ourselves to be more willing to make concessions. But, when it comes to the Synagogue, there are exceptions exceptions to be made, which we believe are all the more important better founded, than they were made by Our-Seigneur himself, who wanted to warn us against the pitfalls of Judaism and primarily against its bad faith: Atfendite a fermento Phariseorum, quod est hypocrisis (1). dicunt enim and non faciunt, etc. Let us recall here what the famous Rabbi Salomon Ben-Sevet before Rai Alphonse, namely, that the Judaism is an incurable disease. A wise doctor would add to these words that, in a desperate illness a desperate remedy is needed. And this answer cannot to be approved, if one reflects on the nature of the Synagogue so different, in every way and everywhere, from the character—different from other sects that have appeared in the world and who fought against the Church of Jesus Christ.

The Synagogue, among all its other opinions, among his other pernicious prejudices, he harbored above all They ardently hope to be revived by the advent of the Messiah; for her, this was the golden age so highly praised in the fables of the ancients. In this belief, she asks—every day, and several times a day, the arrival from that blessed time. And that wasn't enough for him. no: she still hoped that her restoration would place her would exterminate all those who would resist him and

(1) Luke, xii, 1.

CHAPTER 11. 251

to oppose his doctrines. This desire for domination possessed it to such an extent that, every time something a favorable sign seemed to appear on the political horizon that, especially each time, she felt something freedom or that some favors were granted to her, she I immediately thought I saw the time for this restoration coming. Then her courage revived, she excited her children, and her hopes were still growing more. The natural effect of these feelings was a growing hatred for other religions, and especially for the name of Christ and his adoration. She saw, in the smallest events, signs of the coming triumph of its institutions and _of his maxims, and the harbingers of the advent—the birth of her Messiah. Full of confidence and Believing herself already victorious, she cried out: Ecce hic est Christus, ecce illic. The entire history of the past centuries—ses bears witness to these provisions.

But, always focused on her maneuvers, on her practices ticks and its limits so opposed to the principles of Christian morality, especially when it saw the authority to be tolerant towards her, when she saw his status improve among the nations, and that she was admitted to participate in civil rights and political, and thus constituted judge of Christians themselves, it was then that she felt her hopes growing. rancid, that she strengthened herself in her expectation, and that she he already believed he saw the destruction of Jesus Christ and of her Church: then too she entered into a more great fury if any of his children strayed of his maxims and abjured his doctrines.

252 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

However, fueled by these high hopes, using of this trick that no Christian will ever be able to possess—seder to such a high degree, according to the rabbi himself Ben-Sevet, and covered in this cloak of hypocrisy

She was often criticized, but she was gaining access to society. Christian, she captivated her with her appearances of a- friendship, she caressed her, she paraded feelings- fraternal sentiments, love of country, humanity, of selflessness, and she showed herself to be a friend of the re- forms with all the more ease as it has always days found its advantage and that they give him a glimpse the hope of a prosperous future.

We do not believe we are giving in to particular prejudices to connect by speaking this way; the reflections we make These are the fruits of a serious study of maxims. and the history of the Jewish nation, a study in the- distinguished men preceded us by their knowledge and more skilled than us at penetrating in the depths of Pharisaic perfidy. We Let us first cite the famous Voet, who loudly asserted- the fact that what contributed most to confirming the Jews in their antisocial doctrines, instead of the to bring back onto the right path of justice (1), "this "These are: – 1° the privileges and immunities that were granted to them

(t) Voetius, Dissertation. select., t. 1, part. 11, p. 109.

CHAPTER II. 253

"sometimes conceded to the detriment of Christians;
&« – 2° The excessive freedom that has been left to them to vi-
"true in the midst of the Christians and to take them to their "service, things that turn into scandal and of"defense of religion and Christian morality, at
"subjects on which the faithful cannot be indifferent;
"and we must not think that this is an act of violence"
"to the awareness that repression through laws and "regulations the seduction of the Jews, and to distance the "faithful Christian, thus removing from the first the "means of insulting and dishonoring the name of Jesus-
"Christ, against whom they show so much hatred;
"– 39 their elevation to some dignity in the republic-
"public, such as, for example, at some magistra-
"ture in commercial affairs, in the exercise of "medicine, at the academic level; –4° the tolerance-
"Rancil among them of theoretical and practical Kabbalah,
"which is so contrary to morality and religion; –
"5° the permission of divorce and polygamy; –"
"60 tolerance of the excessive wear and tear they exert"
"among other peoples, with the permission of "Christian authorities." These are the concessions that nism and to society, and as offering to the Jews the ways to persist more stubbornly in their prejudged.

Pfetferkorn, whom we have often quoted, speaks of the skill of the Jews in deceiving the people and the magistrates

{rats; he shows them always trying to attract the 15

254 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

benevolence of princes through magnificent present, and thus prevent accusations, to overturn—to remove the obstacles that would stand in the way of their unjust commerce with the Christians, from which great damages to the society of the faithful who were court—inevitably under the oppression of these enemies of Christ. After insisting on this point, Pfefferkorn... addressed to public officials; in order to disabuse them of this misconception per of the error in which they are that the riches of Jews are advantageous to the State: "O foolish men "and blind," he said, "who, by favoring the Jews under the "under the pretext that their immense wealth is useful to "the public good, don't think that these rich—"These are the very possessions of your unfortunate con—"citizens, property which has been taken from them by the usu—"and by the monopoly of the Jews. Certainly you "And you have given more to your subjects than they have given you." "have returned."

Schudt shared the same opinion as these writers. He al— milk even further, and he called these Christians Judaizers hold on, those who granted privileges to the Jews and who gave them free access to public sector jobs, while— say that these, always proud and stubborn in their ideas, abused these favors to oppress the less fortunate Christians, and were all the more convinced more in their superstitious doctrines, that they readily suggested that these were all effects of divine grace in favor of their religion and their institutions, and that God thus declared himself by obliging

CHAPTER II. 255

Christians to elevate Jews to such high dignities.

Reason, facts, and men's feelings
More enlightened people therefore show that the Synagogue must be distinguished from all other sects. It contains within her such elements, that, respected, favored and exalted more than evangelical charity allows that, of which Our Lord gave us the rule when—
When he spoke of the Pharisees, she did not renounce any
She kept looking at the goim, reflecting on her mistakes.
Christians like his slaves, and their possessions and their lives like possessions that she could dispose of as she pleased; and so she became more and more obstinate in her belief that she was the object of a very special providence of God, who by this was announcing to him a coming change in his condition. Paul Ricci, a converted Jew, noted in his Opuscles as one of the main causes who prevented the Jews from recognizing the Messiah in Jesus Christ, their love of glory and their thirst for domination. The biggest obstacle to the conversion of Jews therefore find themselves in this hope of greatness and the power they have shown to all the epochs ques.

Thus, when Sir Robert Peel said that the Synagogue called out with his continual prayers and invoked Jerusalem, he was mistaken, in assuming that these vows stemmed from the persecution she endured: the real cause lay in his very doctrines, to which She doesn't want to give up. All the seditions, the revoltes, the betrayals of the dukes in Asia, in Africa and in Europe, tended directly or indirectly to but advocated by the Synagogue. When it came to her interests, she took no account of the nation or of the kingdom that had welcomed her; she did not look other men than as his slaves, expected that she was destined to rule them one day. Therefore, she did not Could she ever truly love, or protect, or to serve a foreign state for her. Proof of this provisions are still found in the importance that it attachment to circumcision, for her a sign and pledge of a indissoluble fraternity, and distinctive mark among the nations. Circumcision is for her like a sign by convention, like a watchword; it's a pact established since the time of Abraham between her and the Seilord, knowledge, that the posterity of this patriarch, also numerous as the sand of the sea and the stars of the heaven, will prosper among all the nations of the earth blinds the Jews.

256 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

Is it any wonder, then, that the Jewish nation is always remained a distinct nation, a state in the State, despite its mixing with other peoples? His opinion concerning the Messiah is entirely con- to conform to the beliefs of Christians, who worship Jesus- Christ as such; his morality is incompatible with the the morality of the Gospel; his politics are incompatible with the policies of other nations; the principle of Respect for civil authority is destroyed by its pretensions tions to universal domination. One could say, however much one might say-granting Jews the rights of citizens, we had good to bestow upon them honors, jobs, and dignities, They nevertheless remained attached to their ideas and to their maxims; they were nonetheless disposed to to act in accordance with these ideas and maxims, of which They are so deeply embedded that they cannot be torn out. of their minds. Everywhere and always, the doctrines and the The rules of the Synagogue are the same.

CHAPTER II. 257

So, finally, the Robert Peels and the Giobertis must... and the whole troupe of journalists who declaim at every remarks against the harsh conditions to which the Synagogue has been subjected the object, we say, is that these men must per- suadent that it is neither hatred nor persecution of Christians who degraded the Jewish people in the centuries- keys past, but on the contrary the barbaric prejudices that it fosters. Idleness, laziness, intolerance, the perfidy, conspiracies, Jewish cruelties, the do- the mination to which they aspire, these are the causes which precipitated them into this degradation which we want to... He would unjustifiably accuse Christianity. That is his perfidy that has degraded the Synagogue in the eyes of the few Christians and people of all nations, and especially, and even more particularly among non-peoples Christians, fostered a united sentiment against her Versal of aversion. It is difficult to reason more badly. that the English speaker did not do in this circum- stance.

It is no less difficult to understand how The Catholic Church could be accused of persecution.

that the Jews had to suffer in the Middle Ages, when one knows everything that the ecclesiastical authorities have done to stop these persecutions, and when we think about the gentle and merciful way in which the sovereign pontiffs have conducted themselves in this regard in their own states. This is a testimony that the Jews themselves gave back to the popes; they acknowledged that nowhere had they lived more peacefully, nor had they enjoyed greater protection than in the States Romans. And this stems precisely from this policy. full of wisdom that inspired firmness in the popes necessary so that, under their rule, the Jews would not could not indulge in abuses and excesses which would have provoked terrible reactions against them. By not granting them not too much freedom, the popes empe- They were careful not to abuse it, and they assured them a more comfortable life. quieter than anywhere else.

We still have one more objection to refute. We will does so less often, and the foregoing would suffice to de- destroy; but it may not be useless to dwell on it- Pause for a moment. We confess to the crimes of which we are accused. Jews; it is recognized that their doctrines are dangerous- They are used for Christianity; their avarice is condemned and all the other disorders that history has recorded in its pages, but it is added that Christians do not are hardly any better than the Jews, and that it is not just to shift all the consequences onto the Jews consequences of these disorders.

We first acknowledge that there may be among

CHAPTER LL, 259

Christians are immoral and wicked men. We are all free, and there are many who abuse their freedom; but it must be noted that the Jew, by indulging in avarice, cunning, and violence, driven by pride, etc., acts without any scruple, and believes he to do nothing contrary to the precepts of his religion. Christians, when they act in the same way, know very well that they are violating the precepts of PÉvan- gile, and that they trample underfoot the teachings of Church.

Now, this is obvious and accepted by everyone the world, which is difficult to find outside of Christ- Tianism, a very honest man, faithful to his promises in its pretensions, modest and firm in its la-commitment, tolerant of others' opinions, benevolent beneficial to all, in short, a perfect citizen. However, the organization-the Synagogue's teachings, its conduct prevent him from forming a citizen of this kind: the Facts have abundantly demonstrated this. Christian morality-

Yours rejects everything that can harm society;
The morality of the Synagogue contains a great name-a set of principles detrimental to any Christian society, and we have shown all the unfortunate consequences-
These, all the scandals, all the evils that result particularly of avarice and greed Jews in their relations with Christians.

This is something that now seems indisputable to us.
table, which Christian governments have rendered a

260 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

great service, from a religious, civil and national point of view tional, each time they have, in past centuries, Jews were removed from their states, or repressed. By what means?
than another means, pride, avarice and intolerance of this people, sworn enemies of Jesus Christ. Indeed, it was remove from their midst or prevent many scans
many traps were set for the good faith of Christians.
Look, and citizens; it was acting like the good father of the "family of the Gospel, who removed the tares"
from the field, so that it could not harm the good grain that it had sown. The Christian governments, by depriving the Jews of the enjoyment of civil rights, not to their-moreover, they were not receiving an unjust punishment, as Sir Robert Peel claims it, but it was indeed a punishment by-fully deserved, for their doctrines and their practices that threatened the existence of peoples in the midst of the-which they lived through. Let us recall here the words of ancient truths, which are all undeniable truths:
Felix respublica, in qua non est Abraham, Nimrod, Naaman, id est, in qua non Judæus, tyrannus, lepro-
above; and this other one: |

And damno absque capere nunquam retinetur in horto,
Sic nec Judæus sine damno in plebe fovetur (1).

There is another proverb that is frequently cited
The masters of the Synagogue themselves said: "There is no no bird more insolent than the rooster, of four

(1) Rabbi Simon ben-Tachis. Bartolucci, t. III, p. 414.

CHAPTER II. 261

no one more insolent than a dog, nor any nation more in-
"More solemn than that of the Jews." This proverb is confirmed. and explained by this other: "There is no nation more abject in adversity nor more insolent in the prosperity than the Jewish nation." Finally, when one occupies-cup of distinctive characteristics and particular qualities Peoples' ranks, we count the Jews, and that is the Sy-Nagogue herself does it, like men the most cunning and stubborn in the world (1).

We truly admire the defenders of the Jews.
when they appeal to the words of Jesus Christ, who
It indiscriminately recommends love of one's neighbor.
Charity and fraternity, these are the virtues that Mr. Maxime d'Azeglio took, as principles, sacred to theme of his speech, in order to support his entire argument reasoning. These words, we say in turn,
These are truths, and Jesus Christ has spoken them more than once.
repeated, more than once instilled in the minds of his disciples, who understood them and taught them to the au-Very. He himself prayed on the cross for his executioners and for his enemies. There is no room for contradiction on that point; but there are still other truths in the Gospel, and we must not forget them any more than the first, as Mr. d'Azeglio and his party-without them, and these gentlemen should have been even less concerned.
forget that they are specifically related to the subject that they deal with. Now, here is what Jesus Christ said about

(1) Salomon ben-Sevet, er Gentio, p. 486.
45.

262 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

Pharisees, whose perfidy and all he knew.
bad doctrines: Cavete a fermento pharisæo- rum, quod is hypocrisis; cavete a scribis qui volunt in stolis ambulare et salutari in foro... which devours domos viduarum sub obtinui prolixæ orationis; estote ergo prudentes sicut serpentes et simplices sicut co-lumbæ: cavete autem ab tis hominibus; trade enim your a false prophecy which comes ad your in vestimentis ovium, intrinsicus autem sunt lupi rapaces. Here it is—

So many truths that express the true character of the Synagogue in the midst of Christians, and which show how great must have been, in past centuries, the prudence of the Christian living with the disciples of this school.

We will not go any further in this discussion;
We reserve the right to make this clear elsewhere.
I eagerly await the injustice of the accusations made.
against the Middle Ages. Those who thus condemn the sieges
Those who have been in the past must be convinced that they were mistaken.
by accusing Christians of their prejudices, and that they have slandered the Catholic Church by presenting it as if driven by a spirit of unfounded hostility, as unjustly persecuting the Jewish nation.
So, which side are the prejudices on? Is it on the side of the medieval Christians, or on the side of modern pa-Prejudices of the Jewish cause? No, these are not prejudices those who have dominated the spirit of the faithful throughout the ages and especially from the Middle Ages. They were very wise and

CHAPTER II. 263

very careful precautions taken against treachery manifesto, against a stubborn and constant hatred maintained with regard to the Church of Jesus Christ, against the perversity of a nation always ready to destroy the life, fortune and governments of peoples Christians. The facts are there, there is no reason-statements that could refute them.

We repeat, therefore, the prejudices are on the side of the reformers of this century, who threw themselves upon a question without possessing the elements or the ramifications-cations, on a factual matter where they neglected to to consult history, which was an essential condition tielle, so that the spirit of partisanship blinded them and the prevented them from seeing the issue in its true light.
And perhaps, even more reprehensibly, they have—
They proposed to deliberately debase the Church by representing it as unjust, senseless, selfish and cruel in its conduct towards Jews.

We can only applaud the sentiments of humanity man who have declared themselves in recent times in favor of the Synagogue. But we cannot these—it is necessary to repeat that the maxims of the Synagogue are

Jewish morality is very broad, as noted a novice, saying that he had found the most a major obstacle to his conversion, while morality Christian is very severe, because it condemns not only-the reprehensible acts and words, but any thought that does not agree with the vo-

964 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

divine love. Which is above all the great obstacle, which separates the Synagogue from Christ as if by an abyss Tianism, which most firmly strengthens the Jews in their prejudice is the belief that the rabbis have ef-forced to instill in the minds of their brothers, belief no less contrary to reason than to documentation Moses' triune 'knowledge, that there is no hell for the Jews, that there are only those for Christians, and that,
At most, a light sentence is reserved in the other life to the sinful Jew, a punishment which should not be eternalnelle. It is not necessary to show what relaxation-Morality must follow such a belief.
and with what ease the Jew must give in to all-your kinds of iniquities against Christians, when He believes he can be certain of impunity in this life and in the other.

This fundamental difference will always prevent the alliance of Jesus Christ with the Pharisees, the alliance of the Church with the Synagogue. For there to be agreement,
One or the other must renounce their maxims.

We could end this work here, but it is, in the declamations of our opponents, a point that we are keen to examine, because it attacks honor of our ancestors, and above all truth and holiness of the Christian Church. We will therefore con-continue. |

CHAPTER II]

Christian men and children put to death by hateful Jews of Jesus Christ.* – Causes of these barbarities. – Prejudices and confidence in magical operations.

This chapter, which is no less important than any other of the previous ones, will deal with a question where one finds oneself

prudence of the Church, and consequently the respect due to the decrees she issued at different times between the Synagogue. Therefore, this question has been for we are the subject of a particular study; all the more so since For many years we have dealt with this verbally and by writings about these child murders often attributed to Jews, and attempts have even been made to demonstrate the falseness, without ever bothering to enter a serious examination of the facts and to support their reality against those who attack them. The silence that has fallen on the one hand, facing adversaries constantly occupied with Denouncing the Roman Catholic Church has necessarily left many doubts in the minds of many Christians, and Some have gone so far as to deny the alleged crimes.

266 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

in this kind at the Synagogue. So we see what it We must bring good faith and love for the truth here. rity, if we want to come to know it.

But, above all, we want people to understand although we are not calling on the current Synagogue no vengeance, no reprisals, no punishments, nor reproaches. We rather ask God that his members convert and live; and for that We want them to be enlightened. Our sole purpose is the honor and justification of the attacked Church, as As we have said, in his wisdom and spirit of gentleness heart. As much as it depends on us, we'll see in the end On which side is intolerance and hatred, or on the side of the Church? or of the Synagogue.

Let us first recall the language of our adversaries sares, and let us especially note the words of one man, whose name we have already mentioned, Mr. Maxime d'Azeglio: "The accusations of cruelty, of murders "of children, of magic, brought against the Israelites in "Less civilized times," he said, "are fables that "can no longer find credence in such an era" "enlightened as ours is; the sad event that happened to Da- "but in 4840, whose truth was revealed and justice "obtained by Sir Moses Montefiore and by the jurist- "Crémieux's study shows precisely that such "Extravagances can only have supporters when..." "in a crude and ignorant society." Mr. d'Aze- Elio was followed by Sir Robert Peel who, returning by twice at his same declamations, he lamented the ca-

the accusations leveled against the Jews when they were accused is known to have caused the barbaric deaths of Christian children. And yet this is not a calamity; that's true. That was one of the consequences natural elements of the perfidious hatred with which the nation The Jewish woman had persecuted her Lord and her God; she had to come to this in order to better demonstrate to the world the perversity that had led her to revolt; she would preserve and renew the memory of death ignominious, the suffering she had caused Jesus Christ, by continuing to sacrifice some of the innocent creatures he redeemed with his blood.

And first, in the early days of Christianity-nism, the Synagogue sacrificed, as we have seen, a multitude of followers of the hatred she had conceived against their Master; she persecuted them and caused them to perish wherever she could do so with impunity, as remark Saint Justin (4) as regards his time; or else she stirred up contempt, hatred and contempt against them the persecutions of the Gentiles; and when all these means They came to be lacking in her, she at least wanted the initiator by secret executions that reminded them permanently what she had done otherwise-times on their leader, and what she hoped for, as she still hopes to do everything with regard to Christianity entire.

For the sake of clarity, we will strive to follow

(1) Apolog., 1.

gun done eut at mes Y0 mn Ge rs à

268 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

as far as possible the chronological order of events, in subjecting them to serious criticism, and reserving ourselves before responding to the objections that one done or that could be done on the whole. We do not We will consider in these facts only what is indisputable in them-ble and generally accepted, without worrying about certain circumstances reported by some historians these various circumstances, omitted by others, facts and the strength of the arguments that it is important to consider to pull.

We hope the reader will reread the story with us.
of this grim event that occurred in a locality ap-Peleus Inmestar, between the city of Antioch in Syria and Chalcis, a fact reported by Socrates, by Nicephorus and by Theophanes, under the date of the year 415 of the Vulgate era gaire, the seventh of the empire of Theodosius II. "What-
"that some time later," said Nicephorus (1), "in the month of March"
"(and during Lent of that same year, adds
"Theophanes, who is alluding to a previous event, this-
"him of the Expulsion of the Jews from the city of Alexandria"
"because of their misdeeds), some time later, said-
"I, the Jews, having committed yet another abominable crime-
"natable against Christians, in a place called
"Inmestar, on the Orontes River, between Chalcis and An-
"They paid the price for it, the Syrian children. Surrendering themselves

(1) Niceph., Book. XIV, c. xvr. Socr., book, VIT, chap. xvi. Hist.
eccl, annotated by Valois.

CHAPTER III. 269

"there, as was their custom, resting and in all sorts of "Entertainment, they push insolence and or-
"pride, in the midst of their drunkenness, beyond all
"the boundaries, and began to grossly insult the "Christians and the Savior himself. Mocking of "those who placed their hope in the 'cross and
"They worshipped in her the instrument of their salvation, they..."
"led to an act of appalling atrocity. Having "Seized with a Christian child, they attached themselves to a "cross, then they turned against him to all kinds of "laughter and jokes, which soon did not leave
"more room than for fury, and so they beat him"
"so cruelly that the poor child expired under "their blows. Following such an act, he rose between "Jews and Christians in bloody clashes, where "Several people died on both sides. The em-
"The informed father ordered his prefects to shoot the Jews"
"A severe revenge." Let us observe in this fact a The circumstance reported by the historian is that the whole took place during a Synagogue festival, and, as It appears from the text that one of the days on which the Jews celebrated Passover. This will provide us with material a little later.
to reflections of some interest.

that Palladius (1) reports the attack committed against Father Gaddane. Living in a solitary place near the Dead Sea, he was attacked one day by some

(1) Historia Lausiaca, c. cx.

970 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

Jews, who wanted to kill him for no other reason than their hatred against the Christian name. A miracle prevented them-cha to commit this assassination.

In the year 1171, Robert Dumont reports (as the Nicolas Trivet also mentions (in his Annals) that Thié-Bault, Count of Chartres, condemned several to be burned Jews for having crucified a Christian child during their Easter celebrations, in hatred of Jesus Christ. After his death, they had put his body in a bag and had thrown him into the Loire. The child was found, and The Jews convicted of this crime suffered the punishment of fire, as we have said, with the exception of those who converted and embraced Christianity.

The same writer, dated 1177, who belongs at the time he lived, speaks of the death of Saint Guillaume, who was killed by the Jews on Passover day (1). On March 25th, according to the Acts of the Martyrs re-gathered by: the Bollandists, the Church honors the me-the shrine of Saint Richard, put to death by the Jews at Pontoise, France. William of Aquitaine, chaplain-Philip Augustus's father, in the story he gives events that occurred in the first year of this reign, he wrote the following: "During these same days (from 1179 to 1180), Saint Richard was crucified by the Jews; his body re-posed in the Church of the Holy Innocents, in Paris, in a place called Les Petits-Champs; and thanks to his intercession, many marvelous things still happen today-

(1) Robert Dumont, Appendix to the chronography of Sigebert.

CHAPTER III. 271

"Them." This testimony is supported by that of Rigord, contemporary writer and doctor from Philippe-Auguste. Here is how he expresses himself: "Some days after the newly crowned king had returned then it lingered in his mind for a long time, but he had postponed out of respect for his father's extreme piety. He had heard it said several times by the princes raised with him at court, and this had remained deep within him—insane, engraved in memory, that the Jews of Paris they made a kind of sacrifice every year in underground places, killing Christians out of hatred for the religion of Jesus Christ. This was done in the se-Maine Sainte, and precisely on the day of their feast Pascal. Always persevering in this practice diabolique, several times, during his father's lifetime, they had been recaptured and legally condemned to be burned. Richard, whose body rests in the church of the Saints-Innocents des Petits-Champs, in Paris, was thus put to death and was crucified by them.

Under the date 1181; Gervais, an English writer contemporary, speaks of a child, named Robert, murdered on Easter Day and buried in the church of Saint-Edmond, near which he had been put to death,

In the year 11490, King Philip of France, being near Saint-Germain-en-Laye, heard about the ignominious death that the Jews had inflicted on a Christian. He immediately went to the castle, and did carefully guarded and apprehended by the body eighty Jews, whom he had burned. Won over by their present, the countess had left them at their discretion a Christian whom they falsely accused of theft and of homicide. Masters of satisfying their hatred, they bound to this unfortunate man, with his hands behind his back, they cut him—they snarled with thorns, and, after having walked him by the village, overwhelming him with blows and insults, they attacked him—cherish a cross. This fact can be seen reported in Vincent of Beauvais (1). Rabbi Joseph, who speaks of it He also adds that Rabbi Jom-Tov had several people killed. gentlemen of his coreligionists in the persuasion where he was that they had received baptism (2). Always of new cruelties.

272 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

Albert of Strasbourg, whose chronicle was followed by Trithemius and Urstadius, reports that on the day of Easter of 1396, the Jews killed five children in Fulde Castle. "This year," said one contemporary, the author of a historical fragment that one often finds with the manuscripts of the chronicle a mill at Fulde Castle, some children Christians to use their blood. The fact having been When it was discovered, several Jews were massacred by the People from the castle and others were burned. The bodies Some of these children, honored as martyrs, were carried to Emperor Frederick, then in Haguenau, and honorable-buried them. However, the emperor was able to make some

(1) Lib. III Specu/i historialis, c. Lutr.

(2) Bartolocci, Rabbinic Library, vol. WI, p. 716.

CHAPTER II. 973

investigations to determine whether the Jews needed Christian blood in the celebration of their Passover; it found nothing certain in this regard, and having received from the Synagogue a rather large sum of money, he calmed the uproar stirred up on this occasion against the Jews. Another chronicle adds that Emperor Frederick, having then summoned the abbot of the Fulde convent, acknowledged the truth of the matter based on the evidence. which established the guilt of the Jews, and which he venerated The children put to death were martyrs. As for the re-the reply given to the emperor, that there was nothing certain concerning the use made by Jews of Christian blood yours in the celebration of their Passover, answer where Mr. Peel believes he has won his case for his thesis. We will discuss it a little later, and it proves to us- We will say the opposite of what was said to Frédéric.

The monk Matthew Paris, in his History of Henry II, King of England, particularly cites a horrible crime committed by the Jews in 4255 on a A Christian child hating the divine Redeemer. It should be noted beforehand that lhis-The Torian in question is contemporary with the event, and that he is generally valued by scholars for its accuracy-study, for its science and for its fidelity to transmit to posterity the events of the reign he speaks of, that finally the publisher had the manuscript in front of him of Paris. Furthermore, the circumstances surrounding the fact were accompanied by these elements gives it a very special character of real importance for the events that will follow.

They raise an eight-year-old child named Hugh and they They locked him in a very secret room where they fed with milk and food appropriate for its age.
In the meantime, they wrote in most of the cities from England where Jews lived, and they gave meet with some of them to attend to Lincoln to a sacrifice that would be made in derision and in hatred of Jesus. It was for this reason that he was kept hidden.
A child destined to be crucified. A number having met in Lincoln, a judge was appointed to remto place Pilate; and it was before him that, in the assembly In general, this poor child was subjected to various torments-wounded, beaten, covered in sores, crowned with thorns, subjected to spitting and ridicule. Then, each of the assistants pushed more or less into his flesh types of knives called anelait; he was given water to drink
They poured insults and mockery against him,
In blasphemies, he was called several times with a sort
In a fit of rage: "Jesus, false prophet!" Finally, after having Tormented in a thousand ways, he was crucified, and he was pierced the side with a spear. After he had surrendered the
With his last breath, they took him down from the cross, and one
He doesn't know why they tore out his entrails, but It is said that it is used for magical operations.
(We will address this last point later.)

The mother of this unfortunate creature did during A few days of all possible research.
neighbors told him that the last time they saw him playing

CHAPTER HI. 975

with Jewish children his own age and that he had entered in the house of one of them: Having gone immediately in this house where she was not expected, she saw the body: which had been thrown into a well. The magistrates-
The people of Laiville, informed by her, had the body removed.
and soon the people, witnessing this spectacle, were captivated by it of horror, along with tears and sobs and the mother's despair aroused in her a profound commiseration. Among the magistrates werewas a man universally known for his wisdom and his prudence, John of Lexington, who was not afraid to say: "It has sometimes been suggested that the Jews almilks even to the point of committing similar acts for "insulting Our Lord Jesus Christ crucified." seized the Jew into whose house the child had gone, as being more justifiably suspected than all the others, and This man said to him, "Wretched man! Don't you know..."

England wouldn't be enough to redeem you. However, I I will tell you how you can, however unworthy you may be in itself, save your head from the blow of death, and your mem-safe from any mutilation. I promise you that you will be spared if you decide to introduce me, without nothing disguised, everything you practice in pa-
"Reil case." This Jew, called Copin, expecting to have Having thus found a way to escape torture, he re-he said: "Lord John, if you do what you
You told me, "I will reveal amazing things to you."
Increasingly excited by the confidence that Jean knew

: RS ee Go GS. IC À Qu D Sr cn SE de

276 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

to inspire him, he added: "What Christians say It's true. Almost every year the Jews crucify a child to insult the person and glory of Jesus sus; but it's not found every year. Everything done secretly and in the most hidden places. This a child named Hugh, it was our Jews who believed him-killed without mercy. When he was dead and they wanted
They were unable to completely cover up his corpse; Linnocent's body was not found clean for the augurs, for that is why they had torn him away his entrails. In the morning, people believed his body hidden, and the earth rejected it of itself; several times
He emerged from the pit, which spread terror among the Jews. In the end they threw him into a well and he didn't She was still able to remain hidden there. The mother, who had put herself searching for everything that was being said, found the body and reported everything to the magistrates.
John kept the Jew in prison, and the canons of the Lincoln Cathedral, having learned of the thing, they demanded that the body of the enfant; they obtained it, displayed it for the veneration of a an immense multitude of people, and they buried him honorably reliably in their church, like a martyr whom they were happy to possess. It is good to say that the
- The Jews had kept this child alive for ten days where, sustained with milk, he had to suffer all sorts of torments. But when the king, upon his return from the pro-northern vinces of England, would have been com-Fully informed of the fact, he blamed John of Lexington for having promised such a great criminal that he would not... would have done no harm, and said that for him he could not granting impunity to a man who had deserved the greater tortures. The condemnation was irrevocable. cable notified to the culprit, and when it was As he was about to be executed, he said: "Death awaits me and the Lord John can do nothing more for me. I will tell you the truth: this child, whom the Jews are accused of having caused the death, has actually been put to death with the consent of the other brothers due in England; and in almost all the cities of kingdom, one of them was chosen from among them to come, on the invitation extended to them, to participate in the sacrifice of this child as to a Paschal victim." After that he had said that and many other horrible things, he was tied to a horse's tail and dragged along the sleigh Faud, where they thought they saw a demon in body and soul. The other Jews, accomplices in the crime, were, in the name of ninety-one, taken to the prisons of London. And this confirms the revelations of the pre-The first person tortured was that, the following year, these evils... happy, seeing themselves condemned, they secretly sent-how to beg the Franciscan friars to intercede near from the Court to save them from prison and death, while admitting that, through their crime, they had ren-unworthy of any forgiveness.

Despite all this evidence, which establishes a ma3-the palpable complicity of the Synagogue in this 16

978 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

horrible crime, Basnage (4) claimed that one does not could believe everything that has just been reported, because of the completely improbable circumstance which Copin is talking about regarding the body of this child that one could not have evaded the investigations of justice. We have every right, it seems to us, to reply that this circumstance is in itself too unimportant aunt, and, moreover, still quite explainable, for that she have the entire deposition rejected as false of this Jew who, by this means, disgraces and condemns himself and his fellow believers, especially after the confessions made in-following the example of the Franciscan friars. We appeal to all

Does she really doubt the truth of the whole thing?
Then, "I don't understand," adds Basnage,
"How could the Jews have fed a child with milk?"
"eight years to make him more sensitive to the turns-
"Mentions of the cross." Here we will reply that nothing does not allow us to attribute this meaning to the historian. He had com-began by saying that the Jews, having locked up the child in a very secret place, they fed him with milk and other foods appropriate for his age; and then repeat-In roughly his expressions, he wrote: Uf tot die-bus pastus lacte tormenta vivus multiformia tolerabat.
These words do not make any sense at all.
they are not suitable for the one Basnage wants to find there; they are not that a repetition of what has been said, and express that,

(1) History of the Jews, 1. IX.

CHAPTER IN. 9279

Having been breastfed for several days, the child had the forced to endure many torments.

Regarding what Jean de Lexington says about the o-popular accusation that Jews were similar barbarities against Christians, the same Matthew Paris reports that in 1235 the king was brought to West-Minster seven Jews accused of having circumcised in Norwich a Christian child, secretly abducted and hidden by them with the intention of crucifying him at their Passover festivals Convinced of the facts, they finally confessed everything. in the presence of the king and were sentenced to prison perpetual. Five years later, in the report of the same historian-Torian, the Jews circumcised another Christian child, they gave him the name Jurninus and kept him for crucify him out of hatred for Jesus Christ. The father of the enfant, solely preoccupied with finding his son, de-finally revealed that it was being kept secret by the Jews.
This crime having come to the bishop's attention Guillaume de Rele and the magistrates seized all the Jews of the city to ensure they could pu-to focus on the real culprits of the attack committed against the Christianity and the insult to the name and character Christian. As the Jews wanted to be judged by In civil court, the bishop asserted the rights of for ecclesiastical, given that it was a question-religious association. Four of the accused were convicted and convicted, as perpetrators or accomplices of the crime, to be dragged behind a horse's tail and then hanged.

Thomas de Catimpré speaks of a similar attack

280 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

committed in Pforzheim in 1261 by the Jews on a an eight-year-old child who had been delivered to them by a woman Christian. This poor child was taken to a place withdrawn, laid out on some shrouds, and, after one
He had his mouth shut, they pierced him with all their weapons.
culations of the body to remove all the blood and in soak the cloths on which it was spread. When He had succumbed to these atrocious barbarities, he was thrown in the river where he was found, three or four days later, by fishermen. At the sight of this multitude minor injuries covered his body, one suspected the Jews of being the perpetrators of this murder.
Following some research, we seized the the woman who had given them the child; she was convinced-charmed by the naive confessions of his little girl, and, by this Through this process, the perpetrators of the crime were identified.
Two of them took their own lives.
and the others were condemned to the ultimate torture.
These facts, the author says, were recounted to me by two re-religious men of the Order of Preachers, Rainier and Égidius, who were in Pforzheim three days after the events and who gave me a detailed account of them.
It should also be noted that the historian was not only contemporary, but which he acquired at those who came after him a great reputation of science and accuracy (1).

(1) Thomas Cantipratanus, De ratione vitæ bene instituende, lib. IT, cap. xxIX. |

CHAPTER IH. 281

The Church honors the blessed as a martyr Werner put to death by the Jews in the diocese of Trier, in the year 1287, and she celebrates her feast on April 49 (1).
The incident is reported with the following circumstances.
Werner, who was just a child, used to help every year the Jews celebrate the festival Easter. This was an opportunity for them. They se-they spoke of him, and their hatred against Christians was exalted-so much so that it led to fury, as we have seen in the events that had occurred in Chalcis, they introduced him to a

He screamed. Then they bound him and hung him by his head at the bottom to a wooden column prepared specifically for this purpose; Then they began to flog him; after which, using of a knife that one has always carefully preserved They served him with his body, and made incisions all over him. so that the blood was flowing from the hands, from the head and from his neck to his feet, there was no longer any limb that was not bloodied. The barbarity of prolonging his torment for three days, the relief-forward, then suspending it alternately, until this that he was completely exhausted. But there was, in the house where it took place, a Christian woman who saw everything without being noticed; she was finally able to aver- The magistrate shot him, who went to the scene and was seized with astonishment and horror at the sight of the spectacle which was before his eyes. However, the Jews managed- they tried to corrupt him with gifts, and the thing remained stifled in silence, until the the child's body was one day discovered under some bushes sailles, despite all the precautions that had been measures taken to ensure the crime remained hidden forever.

(1) The inscription placed on his tomb and the support of the faithful Those who go to implore graces through his intercession are recorded. in the Acts of the Archbishops of Trier, published by Edmond Martène, vol. IV, p. 341.

16,

282 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

The trial was immediately followed with the greatest activity. speed, and all the circumstances seemed to be aligning in support of the truth, to declare the Jews guilty of Werner's death; but the gold offered to King Rodolphe, up to the weight of twenty thousand marks, determined him to proclaim the Jews innocent; he even wanted that the archbishop of Mainz publicly stated that, in In this whole affair, the Jews had been slandered by the Christians. Five hundred armed men were standing ready to pounce on any Christian who dares to to say the opposite (1).

The metropolitan church of Zaragoza, in Aragon, venerates, among its martyrs, Saint Dominic Val, a seven-year-old child, was crucified by the Jews in 1250, in hatred of the name of Jesus Christ and in remembrance kings of Aragon, reports the fact, under the date which we let us speak, and said that the impious nation of Jews, accustomed-prone to committing all sorts of iniquities, in had come to admit and follow this monstrous

(1) Bolland. April 19. – See also Engel's Chronicle-hustus.

CHAPTER II. 283

belief, that any man who secretly removed a Christian child and handed him over to be put to Upon death, he was, by that very fact, exempt from all forced labor. and taxes, and discharged from all the debts he had contracted. As a result of this, a Jew named of Moses Albayhuzet, imitating the traitor Judas, seized young Dominique, garroted him and handed him over to Jews to be crucified. But the crime, scarcely committed, was soon discovered by the Christians. Moreover, Albayhuzet himself, filled with horror at his own fault in the following some astonishing signs that appeared on the child's body after his death, confessed what he had He did so, and he received baptism. Joseph Dormero told us kept at the same time the inscription he had read on the reliquary that contained the saint's relics. In Here is the text which indicates the share that the Synagogue has caught in this murder. "Ossa divi Dominici infantis filii Sancti Val et Isabellæ uxoris suæ hujus claræ urbis below vium; who Cæsaraugustæ Judæorum Synagogæ jubente uti summo supplicio afficeretur, clavis parieti affirus leaks, ac demum latere transfixo, illustrem martyrii coronam reportavit, pridie kalendas Augusti 1250." In his work entitled Ælvetia sancta, the char-Henri Murer reports that, under the pontificate of Honorius IV, during the reign of Emperor Rodolphe [°], the year 1288 of Jesus Christ and the hundredth of-then the founding of the city of Bern, the Jews, who there lived there in large numbers, and indulged their hatred. against the name of Jesus Christ, on the person of a

284 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

a Christian child named Rodolphe whom they had They secretly abducted him. They took him into the house. of one of the principal men among them, made him descend-they took him to an underground place, and there they slaughtered him after

The cry of innocent blood spilled demanded vengeance God. Whatever mystery one might have shrouded him in The crime was eventually discovered, for the child's body was found riddled with wounds, which caused a great unrest among the people. The unanimous voice of the prevery and men best known for their wisdom agreeing to recognize the child's innocence and to to see in him a true martyr of Jesus Christ, we trans-he was carried into the main church and buried near the altar of the Holy Cross which later took the name altar of Saint Rudolph, because of the large number of miracles obtained through the intercession of the young martyr.
The story in 3 was reported in detail by the Bollandists, and it is supported by documents that do not leave no doubt as to the fact itself or its au-eurs. The latter are seized; ju-judged by the city senate, they suffered death due to their crime; the other Jews, who had given their Having consented to the murder, they were driven out of the city. and a decree from the same authority, motivated by this fact and for many other prior reasons, it was settled that at the ave-no Jew would ever again be allowed to live Bern.

In his history of Frisingue, Meichelbeck, ap-

CHAPTER II. 285

supported by the authority of several contemporary writers Rains (4) reports that in 1225 a woman from Munich, Having allowed himself to be corrupted by Jewish money, he abducted secretly gave a young child to his neighbor and delivered him to these sworn enemies of the Christian name. By means of pi-squares and incisions on various parts of his body
They drained all his blood to use in criminal practices. After committing this hor-
They determined that this same woman was guilty of a terrible crime.
using the same promises, to remove a second child. She had already partly succeeded, and she was going to to deliver a second victim to the Jews, when the father the child witnessed everything that was happening. Stopped and li-Having gone to court, this unfortunate woman confessed everything. The rumor soon spread throughout the city, and everyone hastening to contribute to the action of Justice was served, and one hundred and forty Jews were seized who fled rent condemned to the torture of burning at the stake. History adds that the place where the crime had been committed was called in the public Die Grufft, and that subsequently a church dedicated to the Virgin Mary.

At the end of the 18th book of the history of Bohemia by Jean Dubraive, we read: "The year 4305, the day when They were preparing to celebrate Passover, the Jews committed acts of the utmost atrocity against a Christian that his poverty had reduced him to serving them. Having en- He was dragged to a secret location, and they stripped him of everything.

(1) TU, p. 94.

286 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

they took his clothes and tied him to a cross; then some some began to beat him with rods, others to slash him- dear to the face, all to be remembered in one way or another other than what this cruel nation had made suffer in thirteen times to Jesus Christ. Such barbarity, which made It's easy to see the hatred they harbored towards the Christians, aroused indignation among all the people of Prague; it was not only the ordinary tortures that were found were sufficient to atone for the crime of the guilty, and new, more refined ones were invented for avenge innocent blood; the spoils of the Jews will be- then saw to erecting a monument in memory of the _ new martyr.

We read in the History of the Landgraves of Thuringia (as confirmed by a contemporary priest, Siegfried, in his book number of the Aepitome) that a child named Conrad, the son of a soldier, was put to death by the Jews in Wizzens before Easter. The culprits having were discovered, and the enraged people seized all the Jews, and those who escaped the death penalty were forced to leave the country.

Denys de Saint-Martin (1) reports that in the year 4391 The Jews were expelled from Annecy by edict of Philip II. Lippe V for having put to death a young cleric of this city. :

Jean Vitoduran says in his Chronicle that in 1331 The Jews of Uberlingen committed an act of barbarity against a child whom they threw into a well after that they had killed him. A few days later, the body was found; the authorities informed, and as one saw incisions on his body which were added to other clues that we already had, we were convinced that the Jews were the perpetrators of this murder. In this very circumstance, the local judges did not wait for the emperor's consent, which was known to be... voracious to the Jews, and the executions were carried out immediately by the perpetrators of such a revolting crime.

(1) Gallia christiana, t. WE, p. 723.

The same historian, in his Anis oe says that in 1338 a man of noble birth, living in the province of Franconia, victim of the darkest massacre of the most infamous treachery, was put to death by the Jews in an ignominious manner. His brother, having discovered the crime and called on all his friends to avenge him, so that the Christians, overcome with indignation against the Jews, knew no bounds. Moderation and justice led to a veritable massacre of all these unfortunate people.

The Acts of the Church of Cologne provided the Bollandists recount the story of the martyrdom of a child named Jean. Seized by the Jews as he was going to school, and taken to a place where his executioners had nothing to fear, this child was riddled with blows from the neck. He stayed until he breathed his last. One of these lancet-shaped knives have been preserved in the church of Saint-Sigebert as a monument to martyrdom and as evidence against its perpetrators:

288 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

In the Annals of Swabia collected by Martin Crusius, in Book V of Part 3, we see that in 1380, some Jews from the village of Hagenbach secretly raised a child. At that very moment where they made him suffer the horrors of death, they were surprised; immediately brought to trial, they were... damned to the torture of fire.

Father Rader, writing the history of the church of Bavière (4), tells us that they honor the martyr there Blessed Henry, put to death by the Jews in 4348.

In 1410, or according to others in 1413, the marquises Frédéric and Guillaume de Misnie had a priory placed and seized all the Jews from their lands and confiscated all

Bert Krantz and the Chronicle of Hermann Corner, were taken because the Jews had bought from a peasant a Christian child with the intention of having him killed. As for the seller, he was sentenced to be cut into pieces, as punishment for his crime.

In 1454, two Jews surprised a Christian child the lands of Louis d'Almanca, in the kingdom of Castile; having led him away into the countryside, They killed him, then cut his body open. They went to the middle and tore out his heart, then buried him. They hastily removed the corpse and left. Dogs were prowling. They were attracted by the smell; they scratched at the ground and removed the child's body, which they began-

(1) Bavaria sacra, vol, 1}, p. 351.

CHAPTER III. 289

were ready to be devoured; one of them was walking away carrying a the arm which he had made his prey when he was met by shepherds, and that is how the death of this poor child whom his parents were looking for to no avail for several days.

Meanwhile, the Jews, who had summoned secretly, their coreligionists, their hearts burned, and threw the ashes into the wine which they drank together in their meeting. Such were the facts con- noted by the investigations, and whose certainty seemed to be confirmed completely won over to the governor and the bishop. The af- Having been brought before the royal court, the sums considerable expenses were then spent by the Jews, as in ordinary people, to deceive justice, made it last so long the procedures, which the contemporary author to whom we We must tell this story, but we could not see the end of the trial (1).

The same author reports another fact from same kind, and which is accompanied by circumstances so particular and so precise, that one cannot to have no doubt about the hateful barbarity of which the Jews were then animated against Christians.

"Ancona where I was at the Franciscan friary of "Valesola, a Jew from Genoa named Emmanuel, "son of a great doctor of this city, came one day "to find myself in the year of Our Lord 1456; re- "knowing in a very explicit way the error of "The Jewish sect," he said humbly, "he wanted to..."

(1) Alphonse Spina, De bello Judæorum, lib. VI, consider. *.
47

290. THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

"To be purified by the baptism of Jesus Christ. I in-
"I questioned you on a multitude of points; among others
"things I asked him incidentally, since he re-
"knew his nation's mistakes and admitted the
"the truth of the Catholic faith, to tell me what it is"
"was actually the obligation imposed on the Jews to
"to kill Christian children whom they could seize."
"I asked him if that was certain, if he knew."
"really, and if he had witnessed some event"
"of this kind, so that Christians would have to take "More precautions."

"Blocked by his conscience and by sincere love"
he told me about his feelings toward the Christian religion
"two of the most barbaric acts, one of which he knew from his "parents and by many other Jews, the other that he had "Seen with his own eyes. Touching the first one, he..."
"said: Many times I have heard from my "parents and by other people of our nation
"that there was in Italy a Jewish rabbi named Simon
"from Ancona, a doctor, whose profession led
"in many localities and among many large
"lords. [He happened to enter into particular relations-
"Close and intimate with a bad Christian, a man"
"One of the most depraved. This man once kidnapped a
"a four-year-old child to do what they were doing"
"So many men-at-arms. But the child "being too weak to withstand the fatigues of the she-
"min that they wanted him to do, the friend of the Jew"
"abandoned him, without thinking of the evil designs that

. CHAPTER HILL 291

"This one could have, and only so that the en-
"Fant was at his service. The Jew, overjoyed, accepted
"the child and took him with him to Pavia, where he had his "Ordinary residence. Arrived at home, as the time..."
"was in favor of carrying out his barbaric plan,
"He seized the child, laid him on a table and..."
"cut off the head; then leaving the head on the table, he "carried the trunk into another room for

"By divine permission, a large dog entered the
"He threw himself into the room where the head had remained and
"He carried it off by jumping out of a window into the street."
"The Jew, upon returning home, was terrified at the thought that he might-
"was going to be discovered; he immediately left his house, saying-"tribute of money to the last agents of justice,"
"to remain more easily hidden; then he surrendered"
"secretly at the edge of the sea where there was then a
"the building that transported him to Türkiye, and that's how
"that he escaped all the searches directed against him"
"between him. However, the people of justice had returned-"
"I happened to meet the dog in an alley and it-
"fleeing; noticing that he was carrying something away,
"They terrified him with their shouts and threats," it was so good that the dog dropped its head to...
"quiver faster. They recognized with horror
"that it was the child's head, and guided by the tra-
"These blood, they arrived at the Jew's house where they They saw the results of his barbarity. All I
_ "I'm telling you, I learned this from my parents.

299 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

"Then this same Emmanuel told me another
"an act of cruelty, which occurred in Savona, which he had seen from his "eyes and that he attested several times before and after his "conversion," adding that he had even drunk blood "of the sacrificed child. He told me that his father had "One day, I was taken to the house of a Jew in Savona,
"and that there, gathered with seven other individuals from their na"tion, they had mutually pledged themselves by oath-
"lying to never reveal what they were going to do, and to "Keep their secret until death. After that, we "brought into their midst a Christian child aged
"two years; they stripped him naked over the vase where "they used to receive the blood shed in "The circumcision of their children. Four of them"
"Thus took part in the horrible execution. One held "extended the right arm of the innocent creature, another
"his left arm, a third held his head under-raised in such a way as to form a cross, and the fourth u was putting tow into the mouth of the evil-
"Happy child, to stop him from crying. Taking
"then sharp and fairly long iron instruments,
"We pierced it in every direction, mainly in "the heart region, so that its blood-
"It flowed from all sides and fell into the vase."
"It was a spectacle for me that I could not bear the
"I saw it and moved away, putting myself aside as much as possible"

"made me swear that I would never speak of all this to
"Nobody. After which I approached the others"

HET a –

Re TT –. eq PS to! n to ire s

CHAPTER II: 293

"and I saw nothing but the child's corpse, which was "soon after being thrown into the bottom of a toilet in the "house. That done, the Jews cut into very small pieces"
"various pieces of fruit, pears, nuts,"
"almonds and some others, which they threw into the "Vase where the blood had been collected. They all tasted of "This horrible dish; I tasted it myself, which..."
"caused nausea such that that day and the next I
"I could not take any kind of food."

"This is what the Jew Emmanuel recounted before
"I, and in the presence of Father Pierre Vela, guardian"
"from the convent of Villa Valesola. Several times before
"to receive baptism, and after he had received it with the
"In the name of François, he made the same depositions in "The presence of Ms. Gharsia, Bishop of Lucentina, and "of several reverend priests and laypeople. The whole thing has "was drawn up in writing by the office of a notary public–
"public and kept in the same convent of the Brothers
"Miners, in memory of this abominable act. Finally "The novice added that the crime had been committed–
"put four years before his conversion, that is to say
"In 1452."

As of July 12th, the Bollandists are talking about the Death of Blessed Andrew, killed by the Jews in 1462.
in the vicinity of Rin, a small village in the county of Tyrol. Having bought this child for a large sum of money that they delivered to his godfather, they led them to a nearby wood where they stripped him first they removed his clothes and circumcised him, then him

294 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

inflicted a number of injuries all over the body to drain all his blood. After that they suspended him– they spoke to a tree and all together began to blas–
to pheme the holy name of Jesus.

However, the mother, saddened by the disappearance of her son, kept asking the godfather what he was became. At first he pretended to ignore it; but then, hoping to distract the mother from her pain, he took him aside and offered to share the sum for the- that he had sold it to the Jews.

It is reported in the history of Brescia that in 1477, A seven-year-old child named Conrad was put to death by a Jew named Solomon, because this child had led to the blessed James, commonly called from the March, a child of the Jew, to do it to instruct in Christian doctrine. The crime having The murderer was discovered against all odds; he... green and received baptism with his other son Joseph (1).

Benedict XIV, in the bull Beatus Andreas, after Having cited these two facts, he also mentions the martyrdom of Saint Laurentin (Lorenzino) put to death by the Jews in the country of Vicenza in 1485, and of Saint Ursula, young girl also a victim of the barbarity of the Synagogue. The Catholic Church has included among its his martyrs the blessed Simoncino of Trent, put she was cruelly killed by the Jews in 1475, and she in celebrates the holiday on March 23rd. Even the Jews themselves admit that took part in this murder, a confession which is part of the procedure followed against them, exposes in all its day and in a fairly sufficient way the truth of the matter. On the date we have just indicated, the Bollandists reports indicate that the perpetrators of the crime were in a great number; that an old man, more cruel than the others, first began the torture of the child, and then each one tore away a piece of his flesh, while one of the executioners collected the blood of martyr. In addition, he was pierced with sharp blades, and these acts of atrocity were accompanied by blasphemous words cruel and arduous: "As we slaughtered Jesus "Hors, the God of the Christians, who is only a man of "Nothing, so may our enemies be forever confounded!" Jean Marie Tiberinus, physician and man of letters, writing to the Brescia senate, he informed him of the dis- The tails of this horrible scene and begins like this: "The

(1) Bartolocci, Bibliotheca rabbinica, t. IV, p. 729. Ex autoritate Octaviti Rubii in hisloria Brixienr.

CHAPTER II. 295

"Christians through the infamous practice of usury; but "Eager for our ruin, they feed on the blood of our "children whom they torture with horrible tortures and "that they immolate with the same barbarity that has "had Jesus Christ sacrificed." In this trial, the Jews employed every possible means, such as we saw it in another circumstance, to deroto bring infamy upon their coreligionists; but the death-
This was first observed by the vase full of blood that Pon found in Samuel's house a vase that had been kept by his wife Brunette, and which has been preserved

296 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

to this day in memory of the martyr, then by the confessions of the guilty parties themselves. The historian does also note that the Synagogue, wanting to prevent the punishment for the crime, tried to seduce by dint of ar-the city prefect and Bishop Inderbach, but All his attempts failed completely.

Father Rader, in the third volume of his
The work entitled Bavaria sacra reports that in 1486
Six children were found in Regensburg, others say eight, put to death by the Jews, and whose blood had been collected for use in magical practices. "The judges in charge of prosecuting the case, says Phistorien, found an underground place in the house of a Jew called Josfol; there were still remains of the children there The slaughtered bodies, remains of which were transported to the praetorium. There they saw a cup-shaped stone placed on a a kind of altar, and it was there that the mem-
The stone bore the marks of these innocent creatures.
traces of blood were still visible; but so that no one would be surprised...
Without realizing it, the stains had been covered with mud that we only had to remove to find the all-too-certain signs of Jewish cruelty.
Christophe Ostrofrang, a contemporary writer, opens up to a rather long dissertation on the subject of this sub-ground. During the course of the procedure, it was obtained confession of the guilty parties who declared themselves as such at number seventeen. Various authors, such as Christophe Hoffmann, Jean Eck and François Grinwald, we left a detailed account of the whole affair.

CHAPTER III. 297

Antoine Bonfinius, a truthful historian, a good philosopher-philosopher and orator, summoned to Hungary by Wladislas, and he says the following and relates it to the year 1494 (4), the very year he wrote: "In these last months: some Jews from Tyrnau having been guilty of barbarity, they suffered the torture they deserved. Twelve men and two women had trained with they had taken a young Christian man; they had taken in a neighboring house, and after closing his mouth, they had opened his veins, letting the blood flow which they carefully collected until the child breathed his last. They drank some of it blood and kept the rest for their coreligion- As for the body, they dismembered it into pieces. and buried it in the ground. However, the searches of The parents' efforts to find their child had been in vain. until finally they knew for certain that the day Previously, he had been seen in the Jewish quarter and that at From that moment on, he never reappeared. From then on, Suspicion naturally fell on the Jews; law enforcement officers were ordered to searches of various houses, and bloodstains were discovered in one of them, motivated the arrest of the master and his entire family. a thousand. First, the women were questioned, whom the fear The tortures soon forced him to confess everything, the crime

1) Fasti Ungarici, lib. IT, Dec. 5.

17

298 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

even with its details; convinced by these confessions, the Those most guilty were condemned to be burned at the stake by the prefect. of the city; the others were punished in their possessions and had to pay a large sum of money.

In the new Bavarian palatinate, a child named Michel was put to death by the Jews in 1540. Father Rader, relying on the authority of Jean Eck, contemporary writer, in fact mentions it in the book that we have quoted (1). Eck had transported himself entirely He went to Eystadt specifically to verify the fact, and he has he wrote the story in a booklet where he highlighted the odious cruelty of the Jews. He first exposes the... The father, worried about his child and eager to... found, learned that he had been seen with Jews in the Titing village; then how a Jewish child had given very significant clues by telling other children his age, after the perpetration of the the Christians), after having continually cried out pen-For three days, he had stopped screaming. The neighbors, who had heard something, had been careful to reveal nothing, and the body had been taken away in a woods where he had been buried, and where he still wore the very visible traces of crosses, circumcision and wounds through which the barbarity of the Jews had They preferred to torture their victim.

As of April 20, the Bollandists report

(1) Bavaria sacra, vol. NT.

CHAPTER HI. 299

that in 1569, Lawrence of Bobrow, initially yielding to tortured, he finally confessed freely which he had sold for two silver marks, a two-year-old child, named John, to a Jew from Leipzig-Zig named Jacques. The story of this new marthe order of the Synagogue was written by Louis Dycx, ad-royal minister of Krakow, who was the subject of a report to the king; he adds that to Bielsz of Podlaquia and elsewhere their brothers, the Jews, had shed the innocent blood of their children.
Christian children. The memory of this martyrdom has been preserved.
in Vitowicz, where the child's tomb can still be seen.

At Raw in Poland, six leagues from Warsaw, two Jews, named Moses and Abraham, secretly abducted ment, in 1547, the son of a tailor, and made him mou-
The father denounced them to the courts, and, convinced
They were convicted of the crime of which they were accused.
to the torture of fire. All the other Jews were chased away.
forever separated from the locality, so that he is not none of them were allowed to live there (said a historian, Habichi (whom we will have occasion to mention again), as evidenced by the documents from the same year. It is for similar reasons that no Jew can to live in Pultow, a town in Mazovia.

In 1598, in the Polish province of Podlaskie, a child named Albert, returning home alone one day from fields at the family home, was surprised and arrested by two Jews. They took him to their home, and hell-They go to a very secret place to sacrifice her.
the eve of their Passover festival. Their rabbi, Solomon, had warned them to make sure for that day of the per-the sound of a Christian who would serve as their victim. A schismatic Greek woman who served them was char-aged to look after these poor children, and advice was given to the other Jews that they had to take part in the hor-

A terrible sacrifice. He carried it out in the following manner.
First, they tightened a rope around the child's neck.
to stop him from screaming. Then they opened his arters of the feet and hands, and he was pierced in different ways.
rented parts of the body, so as to make flow to the once all his blood, which the Jews collected in vases, and that they shared them among themselves. Finally the
The body, thrown into the middle of the reeds of a pond, was found by a hunter. They observed the wounds he was suffering from.
covered, and it was concluded that the Jews must have been the perpetrators of this heinous murder. According to some Based on the clues that had been gathered, Anastasie was arrested, the the Greek servant we mentioned, as well as a another person of her condition. Subjected to torture, they made known everything that had happened. The Jews compromised by their confessions, were in turn applied to the question; separated from one another, they did, in presence of the elders of the Synagogue, the same de-statements, confessing their crime with the same details, giving the same reasons. Convinced by according to their own confessions, they suffered the ultimate torture which awaited them. However, the Jews who remained at liberty had omitted nothing to stop the course of justice;
offers of money, bribery of false witnesses, warnings

CHAPTER HE | 301

comments and threats directed at those who could contribute
It was a sure way to lose the accused; everything had been done.
Even after the death of the three who had been tortured Despite these actions, the Jews continued to act to evade capture.
them and their brothers, to the effects of universal execration saddle that was attached to them. The acts of martyrdom and of the trials were collected the following year by Alexander Habichi, and deposited at the bishopric of Krakow (1). Of confessions obtained from the Jews in this circumstance, he res-something they regarded as a shame for them to do to bury the corpses of Christians; which thus facilitated the discovery of several similar crimes.

Dom Calmet, in his Fistoire de la Lorraine, reports door, according to authentic monuments (2), a about a three-year-old child. A mother who had experienced the pain-the joy of leaving her child alone in the countryside, a A Jew who was passing by saw him on the road, and took him away with him in Metz. The father, not seeing his son return, set out to find him and went to the city. Based on the information-of the information he received, he was told that a Jew from Boulay had...

Peleus Raphael Levi, who was staying with another Jew, his relative had brought with him, mounted on a horse white, a three- to four-year-old child whom he had enve-He was tucked into his coat. Based on these clues, they arrested the Jew, and his trial was held. Eighteen witnesses at-they testified to having seen the Jew Raphael Levi on horseback, having

(1) Bolland. April 20, and Ludov. Roffman.

(2) T. HI, p. 751.

302 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

He had a child with him. However, the embarrassment they had found this Jew and his accomplices had suggested the idea of transporting the corpse of this poor child in the woods of Glatigny, not far from the place where he had been kidnapped, in order to make it look like he had been the prey of some animal, and thus to avert punishment the threat to the guilty parties. Upon inspection of the
It was easy to recognize the body, by traces too obvious.
significant, that the child had not been torn apart by beasts, but that the hand of man had given it dead. On the other hand, blond hair and a cap _ red attested that it was the same child as the Witnesses said they had seen the Jew on the horse.
Furthermore, the city lieutenant, in the active searches-the acts to which he had subjected himself, had managed to have between the hands a note addressed by the murderer to the leaders of the Synagogue of Metz, a note in which he himself gave evidence of his crime, as well as superstitious fanaticism the spirit that animated him and his fellow believers. He said among other things: "I will suffer death like a child of Israel, and I will sanctify the name of God. I will I am thrown into the misfortune where I am to render service vice to the community; the great God will assist me (1).»
This will help many Christians understand that...
Where does the blindness of the Jews lead?

Around the same time, the pieces were made public of a legal proceeding initiated against the Synagogue of Metz, as well as three parliamentary resolutions, in which

(1) Frédéric Léonard, see Dom Calmet, oc, cit.

CHAPTER HI. 303

The Jews were found guilty and convicted of several crimes.

Finally, we get straight to talking about the murder. of Father Thomas, of Sardinia, a Capuchin friar killed in Damascus in 1840; we must stop there, especially since our adversaries claimed to find in this fact, as well as in the previous one, circumstances favorable to their cause. The details, if we wanted to expose everything, require- would have a volume. In accordance with our plan and our However, we will only highlight the main points. and especially those which present an undeniable analogy- table with the events that occurred in previous centuries. Men who seek the truth without prejudice, will be able to see in the Universe of that same year, 4840, particularly in the May 40th issue, how Proceedings were taken against the Jews accused in this case. - and what was the outcome of the trial.

Father Thomas, of the Capuchin order, exercised the medicine, along with his ministry apost- tolic. On February 5th, he was seen entering with his do- mestic in the Jewish quarter. The next day, 6, he was to have dinner at the home of the doctor of the Pasha of Damascus. Since he didn't arrive, we went to his house to find him. but it was in vain, although all day neither the church nor the convent would have been open to per- The bell rings, either to enter or to exit. The consul of France, informed of the fact, had Father Tho-'s room opened mas; everything was found in order; he alone was missing- quait. According to some data we had obtained

304 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

Previously, suspicion fell on the Jews, but particularly on a barber of that nation, that the justice system felt compelled to arrest and interrogate, according the forms in use in the country. After some re- After giving insignificant answers, this man finally confessed that After nightfall, a wealthy Jewish merchant named David Harari had sent his servant to fetch him; that having gone to the house where he was summoned, one Pa- had introduced himself into an apartment where he had found had given him the order to slit his throat, which he had initially refused, but in the end, defeated by the threats that was being done to him, he had consented to help in the murder. Harari's servant was consequently put in arrest; after contradicting himself in his answers, He made the same confession as the harbier. Various searches- The observations, made over several days, did not lead to... no result. Other people were arrested who were also questioned, and by the different answers that which was obtained from it, it was possible to know the cut- bles, who were seven Jewish merchants, numbering among whom was Rabbi Moussa; there were in besides the barber and the servant. Among them, seven juices now have confessed to their crime; two have persisted to deny it. The first ones stated that a few days Previously, Chief Rabbi Jacob had told the princes- principals of his coreligionists than the Easter holidays were approaching, and it was necessary to ensure that there was some Christian blood; that thereupon some of them they had designated Father Thomas as the man which would be easiest to seize, and which one had slaughtered to obtain the blood necessary for confec- tion of their pacification hosts.

CHAPTER III, 305

The cruelty and barbarity that presided over the execution- The details of the murder are no less revolting than the The motive that led him to commit the act. According to the statements of the culprits, it seems that the barber was holding Father Tho- mas by the head; others held his feet. Au- A basin had been placed beneath his neck for to collect the blood. David Harari himself carried the pre- first shot; a moment later, another gave a se- The blow that accomplishes the murder. When the blood Once the flow had ceased, the flesh was detached, which was carried into a nearby sewer; the bones, after having been broken with a pestle, were thrown into the same The culprits were taken to this sewer which they they had indicated, it was explored in their presence, and it was found Indeed, a quantity of broken human bones, a part of the heart, a piece of jawbone with the beard, the brain, the spine, part of the skin of the head, still bearing the visible mark of the tonsure, a piece of the black skullcap worn by Father Tho- mas, and that everyone recognized. All these debris were carefully collected and first taken to the seraglio,

Thomas having thus been clearly established either by the de-statements of the accused, either through easy admission and certain of each of the recovered debris, we teach it-

306 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

velit in the church of the Capuchin Friars, on March 2nd. All This account is taken from a letter from Damascus dated the 4th of same month.

A letter dated June 6th, written from Alexandria, Egypt,
made some observations about this murder.
alleges that barbaric means were used to discover the culprits. But the French consul asked nothing more of the justice system than the means necessary to arrive at the truth. The de-Defenders of the Jews are careful to rely on a
The argument is that it is impossible today to to believe in the existence of a cult that would require human blood; such a superstition is no longer permitted.
possible in the nineteenth century. To this, the author of the
The letter replies that in the East, religious fanaticism seems to grow more exalted as civilization makes it dis-to appear from Europe. After having presented all the reasons that should lead us to accept it as possible that Father Thomas was in turn a victim of traditions that have always prevailed among the rabbis, he adds: "For what purpose were sums of money offered?" money and rich gifts to all members of French and Austrian consulates? Wasn't it obvious?
"How can they be corrupted?"

We know from a letter of the same date that the Jews having been unable, despite all their attempts, to succeed to bribe the French consul, they approached his agents, and that they offered a sum of two

$

one hundred thousand piastres to his chancellor, and another

CHAPTER II 307

a sum of five hundred thousand piastres to a lawyer who
They were supposed to support them with the consul. These different

Another letter, dated from Alexandria, the May 26, 1840, and addressed to the Universe, it expresses itself thus:

"I promised you the official minutes." of the Damascus affair; but thirty-four pages of writing seemed too miney to me; you do not receive them— You will see that by the first sailing ship.

a The relentless pursuit by newspapers of— follow the French consul in Damascus, as well as our Chancellor, Mr. Beaudin, has grown enormously this case, and made it one of the most famous cases that history has ever produced. I've read everything, trials— court transcripts, supporting documents, certificates of— delivered by the most zealous consuls today against that of France! — Well, I swear it on honor, or Mr. Count de Ratti-Menton, his Chancellor and Sheriff Pasha are, without any purpose, the the most thoroughly wicked men there are in the world, where the crime was committed by Jews accused. Torture can, it is true, make someone confess to a criminal, like many others, the crime of which they accuses; but can she, when they are mad, put to the secret, and questioned separately, to make them agree in the most minute circumstances? Can she, by for example, have them all say it separately, when They were shown a certain collection of knives they had found. at David Harari's, and that they are asked to recognize—to be born among the number the one who served to commit the crime: "He is not there; he was bigger; it was a butcher's knife.

308 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

"The Jews are powerful; they are immensely rich—ches; they found in the authorities of Damascus, in the French consul and his chancellor, men— My upright men, whom no offer could corrupt. Eh Good! They turned around; they found more accessible men, and according to the system of Basil, they said: Let us slander, perhaps it will result— to be something favorable for us.

"A Frenchman was murdered; the murder was de—announced by the French consul to the local authority; of people were suspected of having committed it; Their trial was conducted according to the laws of the country;

Did the Austrian consul intervene between the bourgeoisie and the criminals?

"At the instigation of the Austrian consul, eight consuls out of sixteen asked the pasha for a review of the procedure. This is understandable: France is great in the Levant, particularly in countries subject to the authority of the viceroy. The entire population of Egypt and of Syria is convinced of the Jews' guilt. To clear someone by a new trial is to diminish the influence of France's influence is to win a victory.

"Mehemet-Ali, with his characteristic perspicacity, assessed the full implications of the conduct of the eight signatories, and refused. Mr. des Meloizes, our first student, con-

CHAPTER II. 309

The only young man of the greatest merit has left, currently, for Damascus, in order to conduct an investigation. He too will be incorruptible, I guarantee it, for I know him; the truth will be laid bare, and everything will be revealed. veiled (4).

The same newspaper, in its July 8th issue-let, reports the testimony of the doctors called to verify the facts. The Austrian consul in Damascus has recognized pieces of a black skullcap, which clearly appeared to be debris from that which Father Thomas was carrying it. The barber of the deceased religious he also stated that he had not seen in Damascus another bonnet similar to that of Father Thomas, either for the shape, either because of the reddish edge that made it recognizable. A Genoese merchant, by name and of the Giustiniani family, who attest that the trial against the defendants were monitored regularly, he added that the Jews themselves recognize the regularity of the procedure.

Finally, we can also see, in the same newspaper, what keen interest the Jews of Europe took in this matter to do, and how much they have acted or caused to be acted upon with regard to various courts to obtain a review of the trial, thus dragging things out, and thereby to save their fellow believers from death, and them-even to universal indignation. That is what Jews have done this in all eras. In other times We saw them, through intrigue and by lavishing gold,

(1) Universe, July 1, 1840.

310 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

deceive judges, bribe witnesses, prolong indefinitely the trials begun, and weary the justice: today, thanks to the power of their pro-detectors and the influence they have acquired through them With princes, they can promise each other many things any further.

Let us remember that at that same time > the France lost much of its influence in the East, at the continuation of the great question that arose between Egypt and the Ottoman Gate. Syria, and with it the city of Damas, having then fallen under the domination of Constantinople, England argued before the Porte the services she had rendered him, and adding her instances similar to those of the already powerful Jews in the empire, she obtained the annulment of the procedure followed in This affair: that's how everything had to start all over again. under the influence of Jewish gold.

We will not go any further into the 'narrative of others' similar cruelties of which past centuries have left behind undeniable monuments. We believe that he is more. useful to examine the objections made by our adversaries. A large number of modern thinkers, starting with Basnage, who couldn't ask for anything better. in his History of the Jews, than to represent also the Catholic Church as intolerant, barbaric and persecutory, raised their voices against what they app- denounce such an enormous calumny; they have made themselves the de- defenders of the Jews and presented themselves as their ga- rants against such accusations.

CHAPTER I. 311

But, it must be said, the defenders of Judaism, either Jewish or Christian, like Messrs. Peel and d'Azeglio, They addressed this topic with too little development. We would have liked it, and it was an obligation for them, leaving aside the declamatory phrases against medieval Christians, phrases that have no... They have no value in justice; they instruct better the trial, by seriously discussing the facts, by examining them minimizing in all their circumstances, in order to assimilate

In short, they should have destroyed by evidence solid evidence, the testimonies they contradict, at instead of simply conjecturing and inventing medium terms that cannot prove anything against obvious. Basnage, for example, reasons like this: "He "It was not necessary to commit such acts" "to insult the Passion of Our Lord. One "an insult that so obviously outrages humanity, and which "is accompanied by so many perils, must rarely be "To present to the mind of man. I have difficulty "To believe that such violent acts could be committed" "without any vested interest driving it, and when the "Prudence and humanity are opposed to it. I'm afraid so." "that these crucifixions of Christian children were not "only pretexts to stir up popular anger" "They have airs against the Jews." Modern Jews have reasoned like Basnage: they accused the Christians- It's ridiculous that you invented false pretexts to torment the sons of the Synagogue, adding as proof pe-repeal in their favor that they are forbidden to re-shedding human blood, especially at the festival of Passover that, as: they are also forbidden to engage in the magic and all other kinds of evil spells.

312 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

These reflections, however valid they may be, Ultimately, can they refute so many testimonies that Do they attest to the reality of the fact? Can they destroy the Documents from trials conducted with the utmost care? Can they finally make the sincere confession of the coupables, to which was sometimes added the conversion of the murderer himself, and the perfect demonstration of all the malice that presided over these crimes?

As for the rabbis, when they resort to, for justification- Proud of the Jews, who adhere to the law of Moses which forbids homicide, Bloodletting and all the artifices of magic, it is necessary note that they probably don't all know the doctrinal books sanctioned by the United Synagogue Verselle, or rather, that they pretend to ignore them, or that they contradict them superficially in order to respond to the objections and thus impress upon those who do not examine They don't look at things closely: all that would only to confirm their perfidy. It's too little, it's nothing. even, we might say, for the Synagogue, to attach His doctrines differed from the Law of Moses, deviating from the Talmud. which is the main basis of all prejudices re-vons has amply proven; it is evident that the name of Moses or Mosaic institutions are merely a mask to cover up the infamies of the Synagogue, to im-to pose to conscientious Jews, to keep them in their error, and to deceive the good faith of Christians. There is nothing more clearly demonstrated than hatred fueled by Jews against Christians since their from their earliest childhood until their death: that's what it's there for to them a religious act; to hate Jesus Christ and his worship-killing an animal is a most meritorious act. Thus, killing an animal Christian fan or commit other atrocities of this this sort of thing would no longer be for the Jews anything more than an act in accordance their general maxims and differing in no way from this what did Saint Paul do when he persecuted Christians; And this act, they tried to accomplish it in every century, whenever a favorable opportunity arose Sentenced. We have proven it. Basnage himself admits that there is found in the rabbinic books a poison and a deadly hatred for the Christian name, and Basnage is more inclined to favor than to accuse the Synagogue.

CHAPTER II. 313

There is one remark that should not be omitted in the discussion of the murders of children committed by Jews; that's what we discover there, besides the declared hatred against the Christian name, and an execrable cruelty exercised on innocent creatures, we discover there, we say, that they used human blood and flesh-these poor children were subjected to magical operations they attributed to witchcraft and malevolent powers, and to them, virtues. capable of healing diseases of the body or mind. Often, to make matters worse, they even propose to know how to obtain abominable effects from it, convinced 18

314 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

that it was found in this blood and in this flesh, besides the medicinal properties that they attribute to them were drinking, a particular virtue, an occult force which ensured the fulfillment of their desires.

seeking the reasons that could drive the Jews to to commit such crimes, find four principals pales. The first is that they were convinced, according to The authority of the elders, that the blood of a Christian, placed on the foreskin during circumcision, has the virtue of stopping the blood. The second is that they imagined, by mixing- this blood to their food, revive and maintain their mutual affection. The third is that they believed also that women, by drinking it, could avoid the inconveniences common to their sex. Finally, and this- That was the strongest reason, the Jews, by killing a Christians believed they were fulfilling an ancient decree by which they were obliged to offer to God, in someone of the countries they inhabited, of Christian blood in the midst of their daily sacrifices, Tyrnau's crime had was committed because fate had designated the Jews of that city, that year, to execute the decree.

Thomas de Catimpré expresses himself thus (4): "Îlest
"It has been proven that every year, in some provinces, the "Jews draw lots to decide which city or which
"village inhabited by them must provide Christian blood-
"They care about their coreligionists in other countries... In

(1) De vita instituenda, lib. I], cap. 29, art. 23.

CHAPTER HI. 315

"besides a very learned Jew, recently converted to "Faith," he told me, "is what one of his former coreligionists-
"Gionnaires, on the verge of dying, had done this "Prediction to the Jews: 'Know that you will not be able to
"to cure you of the shameful disease from which you suffer-
"Frez, that by the use of Christian blood." And these are "These words that drive Jews to immerse themselves each
"a year in Christian blood to heal from this"
"illness." It is appropriate to recall here the words from another converted Jew, words which are reported in the trial brought against the Jews of Trent on the occasion of the death of Saint Simoncino. This Jew then said that his brothers were in the habit of committing these murders Christians to celebrate their Easter. And he recountssupported this testimony by what had happened four-thirty years earlier in Tongres, a city in Germania-Lower level: there, Jews had suffered the torture of fire for a similar crime, and the father of that very same person who recounted the event could not have escaped death except by fleeing. He added that the Jews were using the

the Lord Christ.

Jean Eck gives yet another reason for this usage
The presence of Christian blood among the Jews is because they are convinced... as soon as he facilitates childbirth for their wives; also, in in countries where there were no Christians, did they do veto other countries this dried blood reduced to dust.

Sperlingius, speaking against Wagenseil, asserts (1)

(1) Supplement to Grevius.

316 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

that the Jews have defiled their hands with Christian blood when they were able to have them, and looked at them as a a glorious thing for them to bear marks of it on their clothes. Finally, Delrio, leaning on what he said regarding the murders of children, on the authority of Sprenger, de Binsfeld and Grillard, assert that villains used the blood of Poor children murdered because they believed that If they ate the hearts of these children, they could to endure with ease and without pain the torments of
of all kinds, and could not be led to confess of their crimes (1).

All of this is based on the very statements made by the Jews in various circumstances, either by those who have been condemned as guilty, either by others who, touched by divine grace, have abandoned
They gave the Synagogue and revealed its practices.
What else can one expect from spirits?
who, blinded by hatred of Jesus Christ, close themselves off in the light of grace, and who, submitting in in-Sensitive to all the desires of the flesh, they end up... render incapable of following any impulses other than Those of the demon who possesses them?

However, Mr. Peel and those who share his ideas believed that it would be enough for them to bring down all the accusations leveled against the Jews, of ap-Puyer on a response made to Emperor Frederick

(1) Martin Delrio, lib, II, quæst. v. Disquisitionum magic-carum.

when this prince ordered an investigation to discover—to see if the use of Christian blood constitutes a part essential to the Jewish Passover. The official response was—he lied to the emperor that there was nothing proven in this Subject. That's all we've found to refute it. all the accusations leveled against the Jews. But Can such a reason have any value in presence of the striking facts that we have reported? Mr. Peel, moreover, was wrong to omit a circumstance Very important: Frederick received Jews a considerable sum that saved them; money is a a means that the Synagogue always knows how to employ to statements intended to deceive the authorities, and the Talmud does not Mr. Peel therefore neglected to make it known (4). Mr. Peel therefore man—which is historical truth, while remaining silent on the monuments designed to prove the guilt of the Jews. Should he not have seen, as we have seen—demonstrated irrefutably that the Synagogue re—proven has completely deviated from the legislation of Moses? Shouldn't he therefore have thought that it was alleging a bad reason in favor of the Jews than to recall Moses' prohibition against using human blood during the Passover festivities, then—that it is certain, and Our Lord himself said so, that they transgressed the law of Moses to follow the Traditions of their fathers? But these traditions, collected in the Talmud, prove that they have completely abandoned Moses' instructions to follow maxims diametrically opposed to Mosaic law and condemned by it; it is impossible to dispute the facts demonstrated by Pinfamie and the cruelty of their superstitions, and the deadly hatred they harbor in the name of Jesus and his worshippers.

(1) Chiarini, Talmud Babylonic., part. II, p. 90.
18.

318 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

* But, in order to better understand and observe the ver-truth of the facts recalled above with regard to the child murders and the use of flesh and blood Let's quickly review the history of these unfortunate people. of the Church regarding this subject. First, it is really ad—people like that of Israel so it fell into an abject-moral judgment so humiliating as soon as he had been abandoned God, because of his unfaithfulness, and deprived of this special feeling he had experienced during so many sieges keys; that the children of light have become the children of darkness, and that children of God may have been transformed into children of the devil. The Jews, placed in this condition, they should not and could not act that in accordance with the instigations of the evil spirit; They therefore had to demonstrate their thoughts through their actions. and their tendencies according to the evil spirit that dominates them born, to show themselves as enemies of the truth, to contest the apostles their heavenly mission, and invoke the help of infernal powers to overthrow the nascent Church. Thus became the Synagogue: its history and its life. Even the Jews themselves unanimously attest to it. It was a magician, this Simon, who seduced with his pres-

CHAPTER Li. 319

stems so many people in Samaria and in Judee, and who claimed, it is said (1), that by appealing to his aid aided by humble incantations the soul of an innocent and dying a violent death, he could obtain anything he asked for. He was a magician who, by means of his diabolical schemes, he diverted the people to accept the Gospel preached by Saint Paul. These seven sons of the Jew Sceva were magicians. which is mentioned in the Acts of the Apostles (2). This Barchochebas (3) who stirred up an uprising against the Romans, during the reign of Hadrian, and who pushed by his evil spells, his fellow believers to massacre, islands Christians, was a Jew and a magician. They were also Jews and magicians, like this Elseus and this Jesse, of the Ossanian sect, from whom these two descended women who were seen during the reign of Emperor Constantine, practicing medicine, performing spells and sought to lead the peoples (4). Finally, they were Jews and magicians, these Gnostics who, after having converged together the laws of Moses and the Gospel of Jesus-Christ, and troubled the minds of their disciples with the open deny the strangest and most impious, adopted a morality consistent with their doctrines of blasphemy. Among the infamies practiced in their assemblies wheat, Saint Epiphanius reports the horrible custom of

(1) Lib. IE, Recognitionum Clementis.

(3) Euseb. Hist. eccles., lib. IV, e. vi.

(4) S. Epiphan., Hæres. xlx, n. 1, 2. Edit. Valesii.

320 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

to kill and cut into pieces a child born of their disorder; they pounded his bloody limbs in a mortar, they seasoned the meat with honey, pepper wine, aromatics and ointments, to ward off the detaste, and they then participated in this abominable meal. This is how they planned to celebrate their comfortable Easter. compliance with the Law (1). |

Saint Epiphanius also speaks of certain heretics called Quintillians and Peputians, to whom Pon attributed the practice of extracting blood in the same solemn ceremony of an innocent child, by pricking all parts of its body with metal needles, and to distribute between them this blood to use it for sacrifice (2). Eusebius and Nicephorus, recounting how Valerian began to persecute the Christian Church, they report, according to the testimony of Saint Dionysius, who was contemporary I believe that he was a Jew, head of the Synagogue of Alexandria and versed in the practices of magic, which made decree the persecution (3). It was this Jew who allegedly initiated the emperor with the execrable mysteries of the demon within him advising people to kill children, to cut off their flesh in pieces, and to draw from their entrails the means to live happily. If such were the lessons and the practices of a Synagogue leader, which should have—

(1) S. Epiphanius, De Gnosticis hæres. xxvi, n. 5. etc. Ed. Valesii.

(2?) S. Epiphan., Hæres. xlvint, 14, 15.

(3) Euseb. Hist. eccles., lib. VII, 9. — Nicephor. Hist. eccles., Book VI, 10.

CHAPTER II. 321

Should the Jews come under the guidance of such a master? Also Saint Epiphanius observes that the Jews of the time of Constantine was very devoted to this diabolical art (1), and they practiced it with great care, with the aim of giving in to all kinds of impurities. The same saint adds to his testimony that of a converted Jew, who recounted that the Jews practiced these evil spells in underground caverns, by invoking evil spirits; the neophyte himself had seen, in these caverns, various instruments lying on the ground in the dust, and covered in blood and urine.

Rufin speaks only with astonishment mixed with horror (2) of the barbaric customs of these secret societies, in the assemblies of which people were violently killed children and virgins were cut into pieces, for examine the throbbing fibers of these unfortunate women victims. And, although he particularly accuses the pagans, History does not record the organization of these horrors. (3) less (3) than a queen of Persia who had fallen ill At that time, Jewish doctors were summoned to her side. they advised him to have some killed and cut in half Christian virgins, sisters of Saint Simeon the bishop; then we had to suspend the victims' limbs, the The queen would pass through the middle and she would thus be healed.

(1) S. Epiphan. Hæres. xxx, 12 et seqq.

(2) Hist. eccles., lib. II, cap. xxiv.

(8) Evod. Assemani. Menologium Græcorum, t. 1, part. 1, p. 52. — Gassiodorus, lib. II Historiæ tripartitæ.

322 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

The advice was followed, and these treacherous Jews were able to rejoice. for having caused the death of two innocent virgins. That is That is why Saint John Chrysostom said, in his homilies against the Jews, whom they boasted of being skilled in medicine, but that all their science was nothing but a sham, that it consisted entirely of in spells, amulets, and curses, and that they were thus deceiving the people without being of no help.

Saint Augustine and Saint Isidore speak with astonishment of this art of sorcery so common in their time, and recall the means that the Jews used to to deceive those who weren't on their guard. Without No doubt some bad Christians also practiced this execrable art, and they used these diabolical artifices— schemes to corrupt innocence and lead it into Hebrew words that are found on the banknotes that... held invocations to evil spirits, show although these incantations and sacrileges drew their origin from the Synagogue, and that Christians do not made use of what had been imagined by others. It was also during this time that com-

The Talmud, the source of all doctrines, was laid down.
verses of Judaism and cause of so many iniquities com-accusations against Christianity. This pernicious doctrine and diabolical, which the Jews practiced so well is insinuated in this book, and in more than one place,
We have already said this. Eliezer, one of the most esteemed-

CHAPTER III, 323

Mr. de Pantiquité, boasted of having, by means of
of the demon, obtained from the Roman emperor the revolution cation of a decree issued against the observance of the sabbat (1).. Indeed, as one progresses in the
In the centuries of the Middle Ages and beyond, it is noticeable that These prejudices are more powerful, and they show themselves especially with more energy towards the nations that had the most dealings with this treacherous people.
Martin of Arles, in his treatise De superstitione, and Delrio said the same thing after him, he mentioned from a book of magic that was very widespread in its time Spain, and which the Jews and Arabs used to commit the most despicable acts and deceive their brothers and Christians. This book, divided in seven parts, passed from father to son by inheritance and was kept with the utmost care.

But the book that especially deserves to be highlighted under This report is a Hebrew book entitled Clavicula Salo-monis, and that the Jews do not hesitate to attribute to Solomon himself (2). It is probable that the one whose What we just spoke about is taken from this one. Whatever it in itself, in this book, as Godefroi Til-gner, Schudt and Wulfer, are revealed all the means secrets that Jews use to achieve their ends, to obtain, for example, the healing of the ma-ladies, honors, riches, a splendid life
Dide, etc. This is practical Kabbalah. The authors

(1) Georges Edgard, p. 267.

(2) Bartolucci, Bibliotheca hebraica, t. 1. p. 703.

whose names we have just mentioned, abhor report all the preparations that were used to carry out the Jews to their goal, preparations in which meals Hebrew letters and Hebrew words are raised which we have just discussed, and in the forms of-which they believe held hidden mysteries - ches. Father Jaquer, in the work entitled F/agellum haereticorum, cites some examples of Christians who,
 to satisfy their passions, they resorted to evil-the Jews' secrets; they promised them these happy things results, but they first forced them to give up the Christian religion, to curse the sacred names of Jesus and Mary, to profane the sacraments and by-particularly the Holy Eucharist, and to invoke the aid from the devil. So many famous Jewish names.
 in magic presents us with civil and religious history-Joy of all nations and all times! For
 To deny the preceding facts would be to trample underfoot
 The authority of the most illustrious writers, or to close entirely-relment les yeux aux monuments de l'histoire (1).
 We could call upon many names here as witnesses gnage; it will suffice for us to quote Christophe Brouver, in the Annals of Trier. Thus, in the year 1586, this
 The author deplores the progress made by doctrines and the the practice of magic, to the great detriment of the re-religion and society; he recounts with horror the ruin or the death of a large number of people brought

1) Georges Godelmann, De veneficis et magis, p. 62.

CHAPTER NL, 320

by poison or other evil spells, and he Hit con-to particularly pasture a potion that was prepared for this. The initiates, under the inspiration of the demon, did-know how to include several kinds of ingredients in the composition substances, such as cat brains, en-Trailers of children stolen from their parents and killed, poisonous juices from various plants and other things Dirty and obscene. But, what's even more horrible to say, it's that they most often mixed these drugs with infernal gues the sacred host, at the same time as they blasphemed the name of Jesus. We will not describe not the assemblies of these men, nor the actions of honor the vile and disgusting acts that were committed there, nor the appalling lessons were given there on the art of to harm other men and to deceive them. John, Bishop of Trier, managed to uncover these hi-some time. Sixteen years later, however, there are some existhere were still some remains, and a woman who had given to the demon, urged on by her accomplices, had the the cruelty of killing his own son and making him the victim of his wickedness. Later, pressed by remorse, She confessed to her crime and the diabolical art to which she had indulged.

Therefore, compared to so many others that resemble it-
They are concerned with the substance and the circumstances; they are re-
It is obvious that these abominable practices draw their origin and their improvement from the Synagogue, particularly at that time. Why then?

419

J26 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

Are Mr. Robert Peel and his supporters surprised that the Jews, masters in this art, have so often committed such cruelties against innocent creatures, and that they used their blood for reasons
Superstitious, or perhaps out of hatred for the Christian name?

Let's continue, and offer our opponents new... new evidence of facts that will demonstrate the need that the Jews had the right to use human blood for to achieve the end that their prejudices made for them-follow. This new evidence will provide more great strength lies in the authenticity of the facts reported in this which concerns the murder of children. Alphonse Spina, which we have often quoted, recounts, according to the an-nationals of France, that a Jew driven by hatred violent against Christians, she gained the friendship of an officer justice officer (1). This Jew hired the officer, by means of a large sum of money, to give him his heart of a Christian whom he claimed to need for to obtain a cure for a serious illness. The officer of justice took away the heart of a Christian who had been con-damned to death and executed, and he handed it over to his wife.
so that she would pass it on to the Jew. She, who knew that the Jew was given to the operations of magic, con-she begged her husband to give, in place of this hearthand, a pig's heart. And it was later discovered in The effect was that the Jew was using these operations to attack the life of Christians.

The same author recounts a similar event under the

(1) Lib. IN, De bello Judæorum.

CHAPTER II. 327

Dated 4457. "At Toro, a city in the kingdom of Castile, he said, two Christian children, aged seven, they were playing in a part of the city that was deserted. Two Jews who saw them alone followed them, and ended up by approaching one. Fearing he wouldn't have enough While they were busy committing their crime, they cut off one of his teeth. piece of flesh on the leg; they carried away this piece-beautiful, and went to hide in the city of Zamora. I don't know what they did with that piece of flesh, because that justice neglected to investigate him. This was... narrated, adds our author, by the Reverend Alphonse de Vivero, Bishop of Salamanca, who assured me the truth of the matter, by naming me the child who was the victim time of these Jews; this child was the son of a squire named Benefarses.

The following is found in the Memoirs, dated 1492. of Pope Innocent VIII, memoirs preserved in the Vatican Library (1): "Meanwhile, the su-" "jets of affliction and death did not cease in the "city. Three ten-year-old children, veins from which a Jewish doctor had drawn blood, under the pretext of "To cure the Pope, they died almost immediately. This Jew, "to obtain the quantity of human blood he desired" "and young blood, he had said he needed it for "to cure the pontiff, and he had thus obtained from se-" "to give three young boys, to each of whom one "He gave a ducat. But soon the three children mo--"

(1) Cod. vatic., no. 5522, p. 254

PP RS NATURE CRETE GAME CENT TAKES ON VPN. COS CUS DIR TRE

328 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

"They roared, the Jew fled, and the pope was not healed."

Around the year 1503, in Waldkirch, a town in Alsace, a father entrusted his one's own four-year-old child, so that one could draw from it a little blood, after which he would be made healthy again and Except, the Jews did not fulfill their commitment. for so much blood was drawn from the unfortunate child, that he fault, as well as another individual who had received from the ar-the Jewish people to carry the blood extracted from Waldkirch in Algas. The same writer speaks of another seemingly blable arrived in Swabia in 1401, in the city of Dieffenhof, where the Jews agreed on three florins with a farmer to obtain a certain quantity of Christian blood. This, discovered at the moment when he drew blood from a four-year-old child, suffered the sentence that he had deserved, as well as the Jews who had driven to this criminal act.

During the reign of Suleiman (2), a Jew lent to a Christian a certain sum of money on the condition that on the day fixed for payment, the borrower, at instead of interests, would give two ounces of his own flesh. When the time was right, the Christian surrendered the money that had been lent to him, but he refused to pay the interests with his own flesh. The Jew had the audacity to appeal to Suleiman for the decision in this debate. So-Liman, irritated with the Jew, but without revealing his feelings

(1) Alexandre Habichi, apud Bolland., April 20.

(2) Martin Delrio, Disquisition. magic. in præfat., lib. XIV.

CHAPTER HI. 329

moments, had a razor brought, and allowed him to cut the two ounces of flesh in the part of the body that he would like to; but he added that death would be the punishment of the Jew, if he had the misfortune to cut more or less than the agreed quantity. The Jew did not dare to attempt the e-proof, and the Christian was exempted from paying.

After such facts, which it is impossible to deny or to call into question, unless a denial is issued formal to history and documents on which to repose accusations of magic and sorcery practiced demanded by the Synagogue everywhere and at all times, after of such facts, we say, it seems to us that the murders
Children's lives, by the Jews, cannot be recounted When one considers that hatred of the Christian name is as embodied in the hearts of the Jews, and that this the people indulged themselves with a kind of frenzy in the magic, we cease to be surprised that he renewed so much these attacks and barbaric acts are perpetrated, despite the punishments.
the threats and proscriptions that affected the culprits.

This precedes two other testimonies. One of them will prove even better how much they acted on the es- took from the Jews the prejudices that made them see, in the practice of magic, the means to achieve their goal; VPautre will make it clear what drove them to com- to attribute such crimes to the detriment of Christians, and to to persevere in this path, despite the dangers to- what they were exposing themselves to. They believed, in fact, that they were doing so.

330 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

a work pleasing to God, as Our Lord himself He had even predicted it to his disciples, when speaking to them about the Synagogue's machinations against them: Sed venit hora, ut omnis who interferes with your arbitrator obsequium Deo stands (4). Rabbi Salomon ben-Sevet ra- the story goes that the rumor had spread in Spain that a- A Christian fan had been killed in the house of a Jew, and that The Jews had taken the heart of the corpse to celebrate their Passover. "This scheme," said the rabbi, "which, one He conceives of it, but does not admit the truth of history, this ma- China brought great misfortunes upon the Jews. Tou- However, Solomon the Levite, a very wise and very skilled man in the cabalistic secrets, fortunately knew the divert. He placed the name under the corpse's tongue ineffable of God, and thus brought the young man back to life child, who revealed the true authors of his death; that is to say, some bad Christians had sought to shift the blame for the crime onto the Jews that they themselves had committed." This account from Salo- my ben-Sevet is of great importance, for whom- Conque is convinced of the guilt of the Jews in this matter; for us, the rabbi's excuse pa- more likely to confirm this guilt than to It casts doubt, and it provides us with further proof. of the practice of magic.

The second event takes us back to the murder of a child committed by a Jew from Metz, a murder of which we have spoken according to Dom Calmet. This learned religious man re- marks that the fact is completely proven by a naires, a letter in which he begs them to make steps to save him, telling them that he had committed this action only in the interest of the community nautéisraélite; which obviously amounts to saying: "I have committed an act in which you participated through your desires; my fault is also your fault, for it is only with your consent and in accordance with your wishes "I have not been able to commit the murder." The reader can to remember that such was also the language used in front of a English court by the Jew of Lincoln, author of a Similar murder. This man says that all Jews widespread in England had consented to the murder, and that deputies from each of the cities of the kingdom had been invited to witness the sacrifice of the child, like at a Passover feast.

(4) Joan., xvi, 2.

CHAPTER I. 391

Finally, always relying on the facts that we we have reported, especially on those of which all the circumstances have been cleared, we pray—we will ask the reader to postpone his thought for a moment on the murder committed in Damascus in 4840, and of the con—astound all the particularities highlighted by the trial that was then brought against the Jews, the perpetrators of the crime. We would ask him to note, moreover, that the judges in charge of this trial were unaware that I only vaguely know or perhaps don't even know—are completely unaware of the numerous facts that we have reports which prove the cruel customs of the Synagogue. And yet, the Damascus trial came to... to confirm the results of all other proceedings brought in Similar circumstances. Same confessions from the guilty parties. the same cause that drove the Jews of Damascus to murder of Father Thomas, Capuchin, same period, that Easter, which is the time fixed for centuries these barbaric sacrifices. We still find there the ac—The Jewish community was complicit in the murder, the presence of the rabbi as director of the operation; the cri—minel is committed in the same way; a basin is prepared to receive the victim's blood, the rites followed by the Synagogue in times past are even in the nineteenth century, and the passion for the Sau—veur, which the Jews were already renewing in the fifth century, as we saw in the murder of the en—fan murdered near Antioch out of hatred for Je—In the name of Christ, this passion is renewed once again. in our century, in 4840, and not far from the same

332 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

Refuge of Assisi, in hatred of Him in whose name this re-
The religious leader preached the Gospel for the salvation of these people.

Does this very recent event have no significance?
For a man who knows how to think? Doesn't he confirm it?
What about other similar cases? Isn't that proof of the guilt of the Jews in matters of the same nature whose memory has been passed down to us through past centuries?
The Damascus affair is explained by those who Pont preceded, as these are, by this contemporaneous fact-

Ro RE doubts

CHAPTER II. 333

rain. Who will now understand that these crimes if those acts so offensive to humanity fall upon the Synagogue, who participated in it; by the superstition it inspired in its members, and through the complicity of its principal Representatives? Wasn't she the one who inspired thought that God blessed such horrors and that he owed them To reward one day? The conscience of the Jews had to to be indeed stifled by such doctrines; hatred Jesus' feelings dominated all her emotions; she left leaving no room for anything but impious instincts, she could not-should inspire actions in accordance with the spirit of evil
I am going to guide them, as Our Lord said to the Jews of his time: Vos ex patre diabolo estis, and desideria patris vestri vultis facere.

Another reason contributed to throwing e-strange illusions in the minds of the Jews concerning the ex-those to which they were engaging. They were convinced that Their gold would be enough to stifle any lawsuits that might be brought against them.
brought to trial for these crimes: This was a motive for them of unwavering confidence. It is said in the Talmud (1) that Rabban Johanan, son of Zaccai, being ma-Lade received a visit from his disciples. He had scarcely had he They noticed, and he began to cry. They asked him the
The subject of his tears: "If it were," he replied, "about my conducted before a king of this world, who will die at-today or tomorrow, whose anger cannot be eternal-
...and that I could sway her with words or

(1) Chiarini, The Babylonian Talmud translated into French çaise, t. I}, p. 90.
419.

To bribe with money... What should I do?
now that it's a matter of appearing before a king that my words will not waver, nor will my money se-
"To lead?" Such is morality, such is humanity and the integrity of the Synagogue towards other peoples.
These, Christian judges, are the doctrines of these men that You can see those called before you; behold, princes Christians, the meaning of tributes and marks of support mission that you receive from the Jews.

The novice Pfefferkorn puts this point into his entire day; he knew the character of his nation intimately, and knew with what malice the Jew acted in his dealings with Christians. He also reveals "how the "Jews employ feigned words and false pro"tests to seduce other peoples; how
"They know how to win through great generosity."
"Christians, not only the common people, but "still the scholars they use to hide and
"to conceal their perverse doctrines and their actions"
"Guilty. If a Jew," he continued, "deserved for "any fault of being punished by death or of losing his
"He always knows how to find things, either by himself or
"by his own people, some defense and protectors, and
"He manages to get himself absolved despite all "Sacred and secular laws. It is obvious that this
"It is not justice, but money that produces these re-
"Results. I] There is more: if a con-
"Testament between a Jew and a Christian, it is rare that
"The Christian wins his case, or at least the case."

CHAPTER II, 335

"is dragged out so much that the Christian fa-
"Tigué gives way, and the Jew thus prevails, thanks to his gold"
"and to the support of his fellow believers." Pfefferkorn
He also said, in another place, that if these means
When they fail, they resort to other, more criminal methods.
nels, and that they do not even always back down from assassination, when it comes to making someone disappear anyone whose testimony would contradict them.
Henri-Jacques Bathuysen reports that it was said communicipally at the beginning of the eighteenth century, that a Christian must be careful not to appear in public before a court in a dispute with a Jew, severity that Jews know how to use to deceive the opponent and the judge.

This tactic of the Synagogue is not an invention. modern; history tells us that it dates back to of great antiquity. In the fourth century of the Church, Saint Ambrose, who had long been a magistrate, and who had directed public affairs, declares, in part—among the Jews of his time (1), which they were accustomed to to act in an artificial way among others peoples and before the judges themselves: "It is by a thousand tricks, he said, that the Jews would use to insinuate themselves among the peoples, and that they enter into houses. They in— They even bring them into the courtroom, they tire the the ears of the judges and the public, and they become of the

(1) Serm. 1x, In die circumrisionis Jesu Christi. Ed. Benedictines.

336 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

The more powerful they are, the more shameless and more bold."

These observations serve as commentary and confirmation of what we have said about the hatred of the Synagogue versus the Church, and religious prejudices which drove the Jews to kill creators Innocent sins. Thus are explained these sins—regular twists and turns of so many trials that began at amidst the greatest lights, without one being able to con—to harbor the slightest doubt about the guilt of the Jews, and finished amidst the most extraordinary circumstances attitudes, because they complicate the issues clearer, and skillfully sow the most contradictory. They spare neither gold, nor neither promises nor lies to gain false witnesses, to silence those who might comment on them to promise, and to change the judges' decisions; and all this, with such unity and such perseverance, which judges often, weary of the struggle, declared the innocence of the guilty, or pronounced that there was insufficient evidence, shamefully in the name of Jesus Christ and to the great detriment of the so-Christian society. Also the author of the Fortalitium fidei, folio 232, of Judæis, he said without hesitation: "Some "crime committed by the Jews, and some serious "Whatever it may be, they know how to avoid punishment by means of "money which they have, moreover, acquired through the means "more unjust. It's something I've experienced-

CHAPTER HI. 337

"rence. And if it happens that some of them
"They all agree to be prosecuted, they all attest to"
"To prove the innocence of the accused."

Let us move forward, and examine the pretexts invented by the Jews and by those who patronize them, for the de-burdened with the shame of so many cruelties and crimes have cast a shadow over the Synagogue. They claim that All these crimes are nothing but fabricated calumnies.
by Christians to justify the vexations, the per-sections and the spoliations of which the Jews were victims times. To answer this assertion, is it not enough not to recall the large number of facts, and the diversity of times and places where they took place?
Is it possible to view them as pure inventions?
so many facts reported by history during such a long time
A great many centuries? The Jews and their defenders
They do not, moreover, deny the reality of the murders committed about children; they only assure that the Jews do not They are not the authors. But, we will ask our
In turn, can we assume that a father, or any other Christian, he, had violently killed or bled a child, that he had pierced by a thousand blows, that he had cut them to pieces the body, for the sole purpose of accusing the Jews of this crime, and to have a motive for persecuting this unfortunate nation, that they are engaging in violence against it massacres multiplied and that she is stripped of her possessions?
If a Christian could have committed such a crime,
Would Christians be found to renew it?
Century after century? If these monsters had met,

338 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

Couldn't we have at least discovered one? There are Therefore, this is an inadmissible hypothesis, and one that collapses of its own accord.
even in the face of the account of the facts that we have reported.

Let us also note that, assuming such hatred
In the Christians against the Jews, it would be necessary to explain how it is that, in most circumstances Stanzas of this nature, Christians have waited, to rise up against their enemies, that the facts

Conviction pronounced. The guilty parties will not be prosecuted. not so. Christians have even shown all- days, in these circumstances, an extreme moderation- tion. After the judges had pronounced the guilty- They asked for nothing more, given the synagogue's privileges. that the perpetrators of the crime themselves be condemned. They did not engage in any aggression against the Jews, and On the contrary, they displayed evangelical charity. of which the Jews had, however, rendered themselves unworthy by their crimes and their excesses.

And even if it hadn't been that way, when even Christians, moved by the thought that such crimes were being committed in their midst, would have given over to regrettable outbursts, would there be grounds to be surprised by them and to condemn them absolutely? What father, what mother, what woman would not shudder at the thought that her child could be so cruelly treated by these bloodthirsty Jews who called down upon them the blood of Jesus Christ: Sanguis ejus super nos et super our children? – by those Jews who, in order to maintain all-days living with the memory of this conviction, as one preserves the memory of a victory, renew- they see the Redeemer's passion upon innocent people little creatures that they treat as they once did treated Jesus Christ: Ad eum modum, ditPalazio, Chris- tus in parvulis suis pretio venditur sub ære sacrilego sanguinem copiosum effudit secundo, Thought does not Doesn't it raise this idea? Well! Let those who we fight imagine for a moment that one of their children, that any child is exposed to of such cruelties, and that they answer us, that they continue to declaim, if they have the courage, against blindness, against prejudice and ignorance, against injustices, against gratuitous persecution and unreasonable things from which the Jewish race has had to suffer. That the Marquis d'Azeglio and Mr. Robert Peel, and the whole group of modern reformers who They continue to declaim, if they have the courage, against the unjust treatment inflicted on Jews for unfounded motives, as they claim. No Don't they now see that they need to change their your tone, and, if they still have any Christian sentiments left, that they should be ashamed of the dishonor they have brought upon themselves precisely sought to bring it back to Christia- nism? Yet these are the fatal consequences for-and above all eager to please the new world by slandering the former. These are the consequences of an eriimperfect tics which is introduced into the study of history in on,

CHAPTER II. 339

And er DR EU NE

340 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

to tell without resorting to the actual sources where one finds the truth of the facts on which to base the reasoning, or who even does not fear alto reveal the true nature of things: for the
to serve passions and prejudices of which she seeks triumph in defiance of ancestors and P'Euniversal church.

We can say, and we readily agree,
that sometimes, and especially during the Crusades, Christians mistreated Jews unjustly and excessive; but this does not erase the faults of those here; never, before any court, will the Jews be able to to justify the crimes they are accused of. And that's why that Pope Gregory IX, following the example of his predecessors, descendants, well aware of the mistreatment and the vexations that the Christians inflicted upon them times suffering, forbade the faithful from killing Jews and ordered them to leave vengeance to the courts competent: it was the condemnation of the po- tumults popular figures of whom the Jews were the victims, but this was not the justification for these. Also, in exa-meticulously examining the history of those distant times,
It may be found that too much was sometimes used of rigor, sometimes also too much leniency with regard to Judaism; but one can never justify-proud the Jewish nation of the accusations leveled against it for crimes of which she was actually guilty, crimes that earned him just punishment.
The facts were there, and those facts were indisputable.

CHAPTER II. 344

CONCLUSION.

In concluding this long discussion, we invite bend to everything we have said. Let them consider—to see how consistent this nation has been in his perfidy and cruelty towards the Christians, from Jesus Christ to the latter time; and we are not only talking about these We are talking about the horrific murders of innocent children. countless evils brought upon Christians by the Jews, whenever they found the opportunity—casion, and as a result of the hatred they bear in the name Christian. When the Jews displayed such hatred against innocent creatures, they did not want to show something other than what they wanted to do all of Christendom. This is what clearly follows—the entirety of the facts, even more clearly of the conduct they displayed each time they they believed they were seeing the Messiah they had been waiting for so long out of impatience, as happened under the Emperor Hadrian, on the occasion of Barchochebas, when so many Christians They were massacred by them, because they thought to make themselves pleasing to God through these massacres: Pu—aunts obsequium se præstare Deo.

When we consider the sequence of these events, it it is impossible not to view it as an act of true Christianity, not to say a heroic act, the patience that allowed such a people to live among the Christian nations, instead of excluding them from all so—

349 THE CHURCH AND THE SYNAGOGUE.

society, and to relegate it to the uninhabited shores of Oceania or the deserts of Africa.

Against all these facts, what can in—vectors and threats? What can the cries and venal declamations which resound vaults of certain parliaments, in order to force a vote favorable to the Synagogue, eager for domination and of oppression? These provisions of the Synagogue are known; she showed them. From the moment when She was abandoned by God, she tried to realize his desires and against the Roman Empire, and against the idolatrous nations, and more particularly against the Church, which, victorious over paganism, had to continue normally be on guard against companies and the perfidy of the Jews, without always being able to prevent—Dear Christians, driven to the brink, to indulge in Reprehensible acts, no doubt, but perfectly explained by the circumstances. This struggle of the Church saving Christian principles had to be constant such as the attacks on the Synagogue.

Finally, we believe we have contributed to the discussion-if all the reasons capable of convincing the men who are not blinded by prejudice. Like Christian and Catholic, we keenly feel the o-obligation to submit without reservation to judgments of the Catholic Church, which has made it a duty to venerate poor children as martyrs victims of the perfidy and barbarity of the Jews.

9 JY6i

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Pages,

WARNING. ... soso wish bags + v

PAÉPFACE iii di noon eatanemaecutoces SEEN X!

CHAPTER ONE.

General overview of religious and moral maxims admitted his presence in the Synagogue since his disapproval.....!

CHAPTER II.

Hatred, intolerance, persecution, murder, betrayal, fraud theft, sacrilege, bad faith, and crimes of all kinds of which the Synagogue is guilty by following the Talmudic or traditional doctrines, such as we We highlighted them in the previous chapter, and considered from a religious and political perspective..... 67

CHAPTER III.

Christian men and children put to death by the Jews in Hatred of Jesus Christ. Causes of these barbarities. – Prejudice-Wisdom and confidence in magical operations..... 265
Conclusion at 341

Corbeil, printing house of Crété.

re LS ne

9 JYo}

o-|->

PARIS TOURNAI

P. Lethielleux Bookstore | H. Casterman Bookstore
Rue Bonaparte, @6G. Rue aux Rats, 11.

H. CASTERMAN

EDITOR.

LIBRARY

INTERNATIONAL CATHOLIC

The volumes in this collection will be printed in the large, deluxe octavo format or in the compact, economical duodecimo format, depending on the importance of the work; sometimes in both formats, as was done for "Fabiola." A few others in the large octavo format are marked with an asterisk. — Works in press are preceded by an asterisk.

L — ENGLISH SECTION

Cardinal WISEMAN, Fabiola or the Church of the Catacombs. 1 vol. large octavo.

Archer of Westminster.

— Religious, scientific and literary miscellany, collected and translated by F. de Bernhardt. 1 handsome volume, large octavo, approximately 600 pages.

Tell them... Alice Sherwin. A Tale from the Time of Sir Thomas More. 1 vol. large octavo volume of 820 pages.

William ALLIES, Journal of a Journey in France and Letters Written from Italy. Translated by M.J. 1 vol. large octavo of 400 pages in-about.

NEVWMAN..... Loss and Gain, or the Story of a Convert. 1 vol. in-8 by x-382 pages.

Cardinal WISEMAN, Fabhlola or the Church of the Catacomhes. 1 vol. in-12.

Archbishop of Westminster.

P. BAPTISTE. * Ailey Moore. Contemporary History; a vivid tableau of the Situation in Ireland. 1 vol.

æussosseres...e... " Anteine de Bonneval, Account of the time of the Fronde. 1 vol.
His wife... The Servant of Melton-Hili. 1 vol. in-12.
A * Mount Saint Lawrence. 1 volume. in-11.

HUSENBETH Conversion and Martyrdom. Drama in five acts from CAL-LISTA. 1 vol. in-1% of 108 pages.

OAMELEY..... The Young Martyrs of Home. Dramatic scenes taken

E. de FABIOLA. 1 vol. in-12.

Ø 1...

P. John BONUS. ...
CUMMING ,,....
DALGAIRNS ,,....
Dr. Manneng...
COBBETT, ..

IT.

Shadows of La Creix or Suffering Jesus depicted in the Genesis 4 vols in-12.

The Boston Orphan. American novella. % vol. in-12 of 272 and 288 pages.

Life of Saint Stephen of Cîteaux. 1 vol in-12 of 812 pages.

The Foundations of Faith. 1 vol. in-12.

Letters on the History of the Reformation in England and in Ireland. Seventh edition. 1 vol. in-12 of #19 pages.

Everything for Jesus or Easy Ways of Divided Love.
Work translated from English, fourth edition by Fr. G. ke edition. 1 beautiful volume. Large octavo, cavalier.

– ITALIAN SECTION:

APARELLI D'AZSEGLIO. A theoretical essay on natural law based on facts,

Abbé MARGOTTI. *

Member of the Sardinian parliament.

P. BARTOL.

A. BRESCIANTL....

L

& beautiful large octavo volumes of approximately 800 pages each.
Rome and London. 1 vol. large octavo.

A religious and social study on marriage, 1 vol. in-12 by 121 pages.

Life of Saint Stanislas Kostka. 1 vol. in-12 of x11-488 pages.

Works. Translation exclusively authorized by the author.

The Jew of Verona, or Secret Societies in Italy
Preceded by a letter with facsimile. 4 vols, in-12 2nd ed.

* The Roman Republic, following the Jew of Verona. 1
vol. in-13.

* Liomello, following The Jew of Verona. 1 vol. in-14.

Lorenzo or the Conscript. 1 vol. in-12.

* Uhaldo and Irene, 2 vols. in-12.

* The Orfanella. 1 volume in-12. ù

* Don Giovanni. 1 vol. in-12,

* Ingelkerge of Denmark. 1 vol. in-12.

* Princess Mathilde and Kolande of Groningen, 1 vol.
in-12.

Leonard of Port Maurice. Complete Works. 8 vols. in-12 of approximately 800 pages.

- L
- HE,
- INT.

Life of the unfortunate Leonardo, followed by his Correspondence, Enriched with notes by the translator. Panic, 11-inch volume 650 pages.

The Way to Paradise, in-12%

Sermons for Lent (under one)

Saint Alphonsus Liguori. Complete Works, translated by Father Dujardin.

- rt L |
- he.
- III.

Ascetic section. 18 vols. in-12.
Preparation for Death. Second edition. 1/4
The Way of Salvation and Perfection. 12mo. | ;
Great means of salvation and perfection. 19mo.

The other volumes will follow at short intervals.
P. PERRONE. Lo Protestantism and the Catholic Church, Controversies "at

The People's Use, Second Edition. 1 vol. in-12 of vi-12k

P. DOMINIQUE, Excellence of Mary and her caliph. 2 vols. in-13 of 350 pages each.

RANIERI-SANESL, The Good Marin or the Woman Raised in True Piety by | Catholic worship. Award-winning work. 1 vol. in-12 of 360 pages.

III. - GERMAN SECTION.

Canon SCHMID. +. Memories of my life; MEMOIRS of Canon SCHMID, | published and continued by Abbot Werfer, sun neven, only traacknowledgment by the successor, preceded by a Study on the clergy of Germany in the nineteenth century, dedicated to

approved by SG MONSEIGNEUR DE MARGUERYE

Bishop of Autun. { Large octavo volume with four subjects and por-features.

Clément Siemers... History of the Christian Church for Catholic institutions liques. With the approval of the Bishopric of Tournai and the vica-General order of Munster. 1 vol. in-12 of x11-486 pages.

C. 3. HEFELK, , , , Cardinal Ximenes and Spain in the 15th and 16th centuries

15th century, with a special chapter on Inquisition.
4 volumes in-8 of 672 pages.

C. Faesser, . . . History of the Anabaptists of Munster. 1 vol. in-1% of 312
pages.

Ad. BUSE. Saint Paulinus, Bishop of Nola, and his century (380-450). Great octavo volume of 676 pages.

$. DB. HIRSCHER, , Life of the Holy and Immaculate Virgin Mary, Mother of God, especially dedicated to ladies and young people

Christian. In-12 of approximately 350 pages.

P. BENOIT... Our consolations in Mary. 1 vol. in-12 of 360 pages.

Anne Cath. EMMERICH. The Sorrowful Passion of Our Lord Jesus Christ Translation new and complete on the 10th, German edition, a beautiful vol, large octavo.

IV. – SPANISH SECTION,

Don SOBRINO..... History of the Holy Land, 2 vols. large octavo, vi11-616 and 584 pages, with four beautiful maps.

= The Book of Consolation. 1 vol. in-12.

P. ALVAREZ DE PAZ, Meditations on the Life of Jesus Christ, { vol. in-12, = Meditations on the life of the Blessed Virgin. 1 vol. in:19.

P. OF GRANADA. Meditations, 1 vol. large octavo.

Several other works are in preparation.

Conssiz, typography and stereotyping by Cnéré:

E

ra

PCT 0 ne. re ST ST re The ce

se

HAS

4

v

THE

THERE
{

L 5
Fu
:

it: es

Digitized by

Digitized by Google

I TA! seen OMR PMEAMUT i | 1st Mie OUT MA NA h
He ENT \ qu ni NA ROMANE TAN "ES NET AM LUTE |
| Mi #. Ahili til ill

n '+71

pt * TE : | | £ 4 gi æ- nt
RL ER jè ball libéitnteAME FA ARE a ni dd =

n L T0
| l To
'7 " |
, 4 OT LA
U Ah {
\
l Q i to: 1e
'ay Ê V'y mn
Ur e- : ; LL n L
has :
"

Digitized by G

THERE

198

Ci ERS

French

English

Full text of " The Jew: Judaism and the Judaization of Christian Peoples "

See other formats

JL,

Digitized by Google

<36632925790015

<36632925790015

Bayer. State Library

Digitized by Google

THE JEW.

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

THE JEW.

Digitized by Google

The author and publisher reserve the right to translate and reproduce production abroad.

This volume was deposited at the Ministry of the Interior (section of the bookstore) in November 1869.

HKr-î.i I

r.uus. — rvi'OunArniK bkmh pi.ov lurniusin dk l'huphp^ir, ule <'ar.a.\cièrk, 8.

Digitized by Google

THE JEW

JUDAISM AND JUDIZATION

CHRISTIAN PEOPLES

t

PâA Ll CBBVALIBR

'Goügenot des mousseaux,

Author of the liter Ditu BT Lss dibvx. etc." etc.

PLUTOT MolltIR QOB KR PAS SKRVIr!

■ The Boode e*^t goovvroé per de (ost eelrei perionsegee qoe ne a rioigiaed^t eeax dont rvU oe ploage pee dam lei cooliMei..

This diplomacy of Russia, which is the (error of Western rEan*pe, is organized by the JoiCs, and they are the principal agents of the powerful Celtic revolution, which, actoelle-

Meot meme, is being prepared and brewed in Germany, where it will be,
"In fact," a second, much larger reform than the first,
and of which England still knows so little, is developing have entire under the aospkea dn Joif..., etc. • – Disraeli, ex-pre-Osier, minister of the Great Orelagoe, son of an Israelite. See in this Work, cb. x.

The World is governed by different people to what is ioasgined by (bose who are not behind the scene... Tba) mysterious Bossiau diploBscy whicb so elanns western Europe» is...» etc

PARIS,

HENRI PLON, PRINTER-PUBLISHER,

10, RUE GARANCIÂHK.

1869

(All rights reserved.)

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Father Voisin, director of the Seminar for Foreign Missions managers in Paris, former Missionary to China, is one of the theologians the most versed in secular sciences and one of the religious-
The humblest of people we knew. We have submitted the manuscript of this work, which we wanted to publish towards the opening of the Ecumenical Council, and we prayed to him We will send it back to him with his observations. Here is the letter he... accompanies it, and that, in the interest of our book, we believe to deliver to our readers:

"I read with the keenest interest your manuscript entitled The Jew, Judaism, the Judaization of Christian peoples, and I will return it to you- a path without criticism. I learn a multitude of things there that I was unaware of it, and its importance seems extreme to me. Few subjects are more worthy of study not only by Catholics, but of all men of good faith, indifferent or hostile to Catholicism licism. It is time, high time, more than time to open the eyes on the facts that you have been able to bring to light, and on their Immediate and imminent consequences! The extraordinary interest who is committed to reading your chapters is no less than the one who is attached to your works on magic, and your long appendix on the two Cabals incidentally casts a very large day on this last question. Your book, finally, is suitable for all classes of readers, and I like to foresee for him the great and I wish him great success.

Neighbor.

October ISG0.

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

NOTICE

An objection was sometimes raised against us; it seems to us that- see the answer, and here it is; Is it that, since the publication of one of your works entitled God and the Gods {momentarily exhausted), and rolling over certain idiofithric and Christian antiquities Well, magnetism and spiritualism didn't count for you.

ly, and quite the contrary! We only addressed this subject once to combat its follies and dangers, but while keeping ourselves It is good to deny some of the great truths that these manifest-new findings of a long-known illness to the day. Theology deigned not only to approve these writings, but she frequently cited them, she gave them honorable em-prunts; and medical science, represented by some of his eminent doctors, he did not treat them without some favor. To agree with the Church, to profess one's faith, to uphold and justify one's language on scientific questions where fold is pronounced, this no place in the world today can give oneself a title not to be taken seriously.

In the interest of our book, we will therefore consider it as a duty to inform our readers that one of the safest and most illustrious theologians of the present era, Father Perrone, of the Romain College has cited our books on magic many times. in his publication Prælectiones theologicae, and which he said in part—from our friend the Marquis de Mirville and ourselves: Prætreipui auctores quos uti duetes et antesignanos, ex reeentioribus, secuui sumus, et quorum opera profecimus,... etc., p. 158. — Vol. from 1866. — We will recall that the first and largest review of In modern times, Civiltà eolica, said of our four works on magic; All in all, the author shows the author ahbon-danza di erudizione, la medesima sicurezza di giudizio, il medesimo conratenamento di raziocinii; che .inno le TnE qualità di qucsti leriiti tanio lodate dall. Km. cardinale arcircscovo di Beaanzone. 374* li-Vraison, series vi, v. IV, October 21, 1865.

Digitized by Google

We have seen that the first pages of these books bear enough powerful recommendations so that we do not have to rou—to take from this eminently Catholic work, and which we have supported by the speech at the podium of the Congress of Mechelen (1864). Finally, we leave these last lines to repeat the epigraph of our volumes: "The books of Messrs. de Mirville and des Mousseaux on the The supersensible world of spirits offers an extremely curious and interesting not only because of the facts, but also through talent, and, perhaps surprisingly, through the common sense of these writers." — Medical Gazette, February 25, 1834.

"What we can say without fear of being wrong is that Messrs. de Mirville and des Mousseaux are at the head, if they are not the only ones among these writers who unfold a page of Catholic history—and observe that the strange phenomena of which they are the Witnesses are not illusions. — French Medical Review H foreign, May 31, 1861, Paris.

BOOKSTORE NOTICE.

At some bookstores, other than the publisher's, it happens, and on-Throughout the provinces, the response is: Sold out, upon request of works that are not. What is the reason for this defeat?

We cannot say for sure, but we certify the fact. – It is Why, if this book were to run out, would we give one Public notice. ,Usquo-là, whoever asks for it must have it.

Digitized by Google

TALK

Anyone who does us the honor of reading this work
He will probably want to start by looking at the table. and will do well, because it reveals both the elements, the riches and the plan of our chapters. From this our hope is that the reader will deign to engage with us in a talk that we believe is essential to its prompt initiation; and, from the first word, we take the freedom to tell him, pointing at a portrait of the Jew:

Whoever you are, here is your master;

He is, was, or must be.

Each of us has read these verses inscribed at the bottom of a portrait of Love, but what connection can be imagined between Love and the Jew? None, none at all! These lines will therefore simply mean that the Jew
He is, or rather, he will soon be our master! Let us hope Let's think about it, and let's think about it carefully!

Our master, him? Himself, and we will make remark-that one thing above all else distinguishes the Jew and more than ever characterizes him: it is a need for domination nation that fills his heart, and originates in the pride of his national instincts, which his faith religious. But what she hopes for, what she wants, what she desires-the Jew, eager to reach this end, prepares and machines

'See this truth recalled, Archive» israélite» XVI, p. 487; 1869.

Digitized by Google

CONVERSATION.

of the desires and tireless expectation of his nation ^ it is that is what our public is unaware of, in a profound and unexplained way.
 Cable ignorance. The most intimate and the most pressing However, the interests of this public require that they be aware of it.
 and that he learns it as soon as possible, because time is of the essence, and,
 If he didn't know it a moment ago, he would have a moment later.
 He would find out too late*, he would no longer learn it in time Useful! But, let's be clear, this isn't about the Jew.
 In France, this refers to the Jewish nation.

This study, which is becoming more and more indisputable every day-conceivable, is moreover more attractive than perhaps We cannot imagine it; and, we can say, it is equivalent to worth a long journey through regions unknown and sometimes wild; uncharted regions because we have stopped knowing them, visiting them, and going there to cast a curious eye, and that, in order to know what the He's Jewish, we'll ask him himself, we'll accept his word like a historical narrative 1 But wild regions-waves, we add, and how? because, until Towards these last times, all the laws of civilization
 They were raped there! Let those who would imagine themselves con-to be born a Jew because they frequented Paris, or in some of the major cities of Europe, honor-
 The worthy and highly worthy offspring of Judaism, do not hasten not to judge us; let them wait, let them decide.
 They follow us closely, step by step, ready to push us back.
 if they found in us an unfaithful guide.

But, to anyone who would deign to follow us, let us not-don't ignore that our first step is on the mountainside, often arid and rocky.
 leads us towards ancient traces, which are... to rise again, towards ruins of which it is essential to deciphering the plan, if one wants to understand the spec-

Digitized by Google

CONVERSATION.

a tackle which the next moment provokes and compensates the looks. So when our word of decerone, saicatching the traveler's ear, holds him on the stage where Jewish traditions circulate and originate daecians, where the Pharisee shuffles along with studied steps Christ addresses the matter, and whose sons are the Orthodox.
of the present synagogue; when we point it out there-
Down with these innkeepers, these butchers, these resellers!
of robes and braid that are also rabbis; when -
We find them there, knocking at the doors of the consistories, ministers of religion whose authority, sometimes se-laughing, she yields to the authority of the secular Jew, who, far from being governed by the priesthood of Judah, the ruler, the mo-dère, and is often for him merely an object of ridicule,
Some tourist travelers may find the
It takes a while. But it's easy for them to shorten it.
and to take this first step quickly.
She is the one who leads us to the summit of a peak from where unfold, under a flood of light, perspectives without end, and, we believe we can affirm, of the sur- , sockets without terminals.

The last one, if we are not mistaken, is that ' what will the viewer feel when they look back at himself, horrified by the carelessness that... he ignored the world in which he lived, and whose destinies are now leading his own to Steam train!

Yes, here is the Jewish world before us.
with its dark and desolate heights, with its flat country, its putrid marshes, its arid and burning deserts
Serts, homeland of devouring thirst and dreadful passions;
It lies before us with its fresh and smiling valleys.
whose sinuous folds flee before the eye; it has.

Digitized by Google

XII

CONVERSATION.

seduced and captivated by the lure of its prospects, through the illusion of its mirages, through the horror of its precipices from which sometimes silent and deadly erupts boasts of the spectacle of sudden abysses into which plunge paths trodden by the feet of Israel, often more trained as his eyes, and tireless in following the tem-rites of their guides. Here then are before us, men and things, that is this Jewish world, this world where ten-Eight centuries of immobility suddenly come, and as if at the signal of an opera stagehand, to give way to the disorders of a feverish agitation that a thousand bou-

They call with delight the activity of progress!
There it is, rising like a sea pushed by underground fires; growing, spreading, and igniting on its waves, new waves as if to engulf
Our kingdoms. This is the world, and this is the Jew.

The Jew? The Jew, dare we say, provoking Jewish crowds to make a thousand shrill cries resound around of this name which they repudiate with a kind of fury sons of Benjamin and Judah, no doubt ashamed of stains with which he was covered. And yet the respect that We owe it to history, which commands us to preserve it.
and to reject that of Israel; but in protesting with energy against any hurtful and hostile intention, sim-
We are fully resolved to leave each person and to each thing its historical and legi- title
time ' .

* Every Jew is descended from Israel, that is, from Jacob; but the history-toire, when speaking of the sons of this patriarch who populate the West, not
They were not given the name Israelites, and why? Because history-
The story is true. She named them Jews, from the Latin word Judæi, because that the patriarch Judah, son of Jacob, was their father, and that they are the scattered from the kingdom of Judah. But what became of the Israelites?

Digitized by Google

CONVERSATION.

XIII

The Jew, however, when a special qualification will not change our meaning, it will be for us not any offspring whatsoever of the race of Judah, but the man of Pharisaic orthodoxy, the faithful of the savi-vages and unsociable traditions of the Talmud; will be is he ^ on the contrary, from any other member of the family Jewish, the name Jew will not designate him in our pages that when we attach it to his person in the Jew of bastard orthodoxy, the reformist Jew, the A free-thinking Jew. In short, our formal intentions tions are not to be understood under the name pure and simple of the Jew who is the pure follower of the Talmud

Even if the structure of our sentence sometimes seems We beg you to deny us and betray our will.
the reader to want to strongly resist the appareferences, or to correct ourselves, because our intentions remain standing. Anyone who looks closely will see, moreover-theirs which we do not attribute to those whom our word achieved nothing that they did not attribute to themselves.

that is to say the heterogeneous mixture of the ten tribes and foreigners from which the kingdom of Israel was formed? A great question, which, both to Geneva, more than elsewhere, occupies a few staunch Catholics, between other Mr. the Marquis de •'*. We beg the Jew, however, not to to see an insult in this name against which his pride is su-rises, for we speak, preserving it, the language that must forever to consecrate history.

See the Archives' wild glee over the condemnation of Mr. de Villemessant, editor-in-chief of Le Figaro, for having given to The Jewish word, the hurtful meaning it acquired through Talmudic customs.
Arch. Israel., XV, p. 469; 1869. — The Norman or the Gascon au-
Would they, in a similar case, exhibit this clumsy sensitivity?

'We wholeheartedly admit, even in this category of pure orthodox Christians, such honorable and numerous exceptions that the reader's reason will allow him to do so. Jewish or not, he is It is indeed impossible not to be affected by the environment, whose atmosphere... sphere penetrates us.

Digitized by Google

XIV

CONVERSATION.

nothing but what they attribute to each other, nothing beyond what publicists attributed to them who took responsibility for their paroles; and these, for the most part, are of blood Jewish. From time to time, it is true, our weapons inflict significant and sometimes terrible blows.
Yes, undoubtedly, but, as you will surely notice,

Civilized man must not shrink from the—a struggle to uphold its principles and benefits facts against his most skillful and implacable attackers.

Yet this is precisely what the Jew, who begins to taking his name as an insult, he will not tolerate no price; and every day he becomes, somewhere of the world that you brushed against his person, more ticklish—them and more arrogant, more domineering and quicker to challenge. Already, even in the name of this freedom of worship.
which her mouth abuses in such a strange and audacious way defense against Christians not only to fight against his claims, but to take care of the sons of Jacob, if this
It is not to offer them gold and frankincense. A true incident—
The incredible thing will show us in this regard what will become our freedom in the face of the Jew; or rather, what simple freedom will be like on French soil the word and of history, if Jewish arrogance does not encounters some resounding failure.

On June 1, 1869, the Revue des deux mondes published, under the title: The Paris Theft Clan, an article from the most of high interest, and which had been signed by Mr. Maxime du Camp.
Did this article suggest an intention to offend the Jewish? Certainly not, and obviously not; but we wish—so that the reader can judge things with their own eyes,

Digitized by Google

CADSERIB.

XV

and we submit to him the very text of the Review', the begging to first go through the most re—noteworthy details of the letter that the consistory of Nancy wrote lives on this serious subject at the Central Consistory of France.

"Mr. President, it seemed to us that this Writing constitutes the offense of inciting hatred and contempt citizens among themselves, and that in this respect he deserves to be reported to the Paris prosecutor's office.

"All those of our coreligionists who have read this articles have been painfully struck, like us, by the malevolent, even hostile spirit that reigns from one end satiety* without any need for style, as if for pleasure, without supporting evidence.

Such attacks "deeply wound the feelings of" public Israelite; and, in its name, we have just-to order that such deviations be referred to the justice system of country. The Emperor's government*, we in
We are convinced that, if he were affected by this complaint, would not suffer any more than a writer, whatever either its value, hiding behind freedom of thought and to write, throwing outrageous assertions in our faces

* See final note, after the Talk.

^ Six times in thirty-five long pages of the Review I
^ We see in the same Archives israélites, number XV, <869, that in the eyes of the Jew the Emperor's government is immoral, that the flag of France is defiled; it is defiled because it has defiled upheld in its age-old rights, and according to the formal wishes of the im-the majority of the country's representatives, the head of the religion that professes the vast majority of French people. What an insult! Let's read:
I would like "that outside, removing support from this immo- government ral, which is no better than that of the Bourbons, we purify the France's shameful task of liberating Italy, which could be France's best friend," etc. P. 164-5. - Ana-The theme, therefore, is for any government that will not Judaize the drum.
defeating Catholic France I

Digitized by Google

XVI

CONVERSATION.

lions, and poured out ignoainie and lies upon the followers of a state-recognized cult.

We hope that, "thanks to your intervention at-close to the authorities, judicial repression will put an end to abuses that aim at nothing less than maintaining in populations these odious prejudices of which we we have suffered so much in the past, and which we must, at all price, prevent the return in the interest of peace pu-
"Public and of civilization." The members signed of the Jewish consistory of Nancy'...

to get close to the text he dares to criticize is to draw from it justice and vengeance 1 Nothing, certainly, as far as we are concerned, would revolt our thinking as much as "inciting hatred" and in contempt of the citizens among themselves"; and, if we sometimes allow us to handle vigorously the the historian's and critic's pen regarding the Jew, this is by no means, as well as his publications demonstrate that he allows himself to do so, to attempt "to public peace and civilization"; it is, in the con- milking, in order to constitute for ourselves the vigilant and serious defender. Let us therefore keep our eyes open and hasten- we open those of France on a fact which tends to to repeat itself endlessly, and here it is:

Because an honorable man has offended love- own or Jewish claims, a storm This arises, a state emerges within the state and rises up to crush his head: and this man, a citizen of The only nation will find itself alone; alone in fighting against adversaries who gather together as a body, and who find themselves vent to be both French citizens and citizens of

'Israelite ArcWvM*, XIV, p. 430, 431; 4869. .

Digitized by Google

CAUSEKIE.

XVII

the Jewish nation! Alone against all, a people representing- sent by one of his powerful councils, using the rights and the forces of two peoples, and weighing upon him with all its weight from within and outside of France!

This is the sham of equality before the law that leave the French with the civil and political rights that the Jew conquered I And, let it be said with the quality of respect that every citizen owes to the law, good or bad, whatever it may be. governs: if the vitality of our national customs did not oppose a certain balance' still to the abuses of law and the power that the Jewish race dreams of, the organization of Wouldn't the forces at this race's disposal place... before the son of Judah every individual of our nation under the yoke of a reign of terror*?

Already, although in much less critical circumstances-had known something of that terror! and in this Rome, where the pride of the laws would never have admitted that a Jew could rise to the rank of magistrate, and oversee his feet as a subject of the law, a citizen of the people-king. Neither public opinion nor the majesty of the people could stop were the audacity of this formidable tenant sitting at home of the big city. Certainly, we cannot, we will not We must not ignore that before the Jew, skilled in everything time to prepare, to work, to manage the multitude, the prince of orators felt a shiver run through him before whom Catiline trembled at the head of the fanatics conspirators with whom he had filled the city. We could not- we will ignore that Cicero, on the very seat of his power-

'The entire Jewish religion is founded on the idea of the nation.' Arch. Israel., p. 333, etc.; 1864; Lévy-fiing.

^ Not to be confused with Judas the traitor, Judah the patriarch, leader of the tribe of that name.

Digitized by Google

XVIII

CAUSEHIB.

session, which Cicero, speaking from the rostrum, was putting to a muted tone to his word when he had to fear that his word would not- laughed at the Jew's nervous sensitivity, that powerful and skillful exciter (quantum valent in concio- nitnis!).

Well, let's listen, let's listen, for Flaccus is ineri- undermined. The defender he chose was Cicero, and For accusers he has the Jews. Leius, who speaks in their favor, at the address, in order to secure an easy way to be supported by these enterprising men, to remember- to get closer to the focus that concentrates them... "Ah! I understand you- Take it, Leius: That's why this case is being argued. near the Aurelian degrees! That's why you did choosing this place, and surrounding yourself with this peat! You know how many of these Jews there are, how many their union, their understanding, their know-how and their em- worse on the crowds of the assemblies. But I will lower the

I would ignore that in their midst stand their menners, always ready to direct them or against my per-it sounds, or against the elite of citizens; therefore, do not think not that I lend myself in any way to making things easier for them this task*.

The fear from which Cicero cannot defend himself before the Jewish camp, half-entrenched in the heart of the Roman multitude, the ordeal less vivid today-today before the legal experts or before the councils

* Hoc nimirum est illud quod non longe a gradibus Aureliani hsec causa dicitur; ob hoc criinen, hic locus abs le, Leli, alque ilia turba quæsilæ est. Scis quanta sil manus, quanta concordia, quantum valent in concionibus. Summissa voce agam, tantum ut iudices audiant Neque enim disunited which istos in me, atque in optimum quemque incitent; quos ego, ut facilius faciant, non adjuvabo. Cicero, Pro Flacco, § XXVIII.

Digitized by Google

CAOSERIE.

XIX

and the associations that represent, in the middle of each modern nation there and before each of its citizens iso-the entire Jewish nation? And his word does not speak-Wouldn't she still have something of her formidable qualities?
repercussions if he smelled of Jewish peat (turbam)
to move, to stir here under the hand of the consistories, or there at the voice of the leaders of the United Israelite Alliance-universal, this immense network whose meshes are res-do they tighten every day to envelop the earth? For, de-then this prince of orators, accustomed sometimes to raising storms, sometimes playing with the raging waves of the Forum, and which, however, lowers with circumspection the Voices in the face of the Jew's machinations, are we unaware of what is happening said from one end of our Europe to the other?

Ah! You may not know this, you brave ones here-
Toyen, who, in your simplicity, in your ingenuousness,
Do you think you're up to the task of fighting alone in the closed fields?
justice against the one behind whom stands all a people. Well, he said to himself, he said to himself that whoever calls the Jew, or defends his cause against him before the judge, - if this cause is not insignificant, - is lost

Jew, empowered by the countless resources that his nation (see chap. x), effortlessly crushes the reckless who attacks him or resists him, if this reckless man is not a power. And, since these things were being said, is—what the Jews did not enter in tight lines within the ranks of the European judiciary? Is it that they do not count among their ranks people of righteousness? Ticks of all degrees? Aren't they swarming? in administrations, in councils, and in the high-ranking state officials? Finally, if they have retained the respect for pure orthodoxy; if they still have any

Digitized by Google

XX

CONVERSATION.

tenderness for dogmas and adherents of their faith, Has the Talmud stopped telling them: "When a If an Israelite and a non-Jew have a lawsuit, you shall rule in favor of them. "Because of your brother." And, if not, if the matter is impossible, "it is necessary to harass (the non-Jew) with petty squabbles," just—that the victory in the case should remain with the Israelite. (Below, p. 180.)

What was said, and what can be said, we believe not to ignore it too much; but, entirely filled with Israelites assuming our courts, the magistracy of Our country inspires in us a healthy and just confidence. And, something of which it is impossible for us to preserve a Without a doubt, this is that, on our loyal land of France and under the safeguard of public honor, the writer se—Rieux will continue without fear to comply with the demands of his work, whether the Jew frowns or not casting his gaze upon him; for, placed as in the strength of a tower in the midst of his fellow citizens, he will be able to peacefully defy any power enough reckless to want to suppress in his heart the cry of the indignation provoked by enormities of belief ' or morals. No, never any privilege, any artifice, no art of hiding the collective being under the face of the individual Vidu, will not give the Jew power to break the pen of a writer, and to incite the Jewish nation against him entirely in the name of the principles of mo— legislation Last. Public conscience, in a word, will want that every Frenchman should speak as freely about the Jew

'These beliefs are now being established among progressive Jews, with the principles of eighteenth-century philosophy or of the Freemasonry, as they are beginning to boast about openly, at the same time as they themselves establish the reasons for the influence preponderant and the empire that we attribute to them in the Order Masonic. See our chapters.

Digitized by Google

CONVERSATION.

21st

that it is free for the Jew to speak about the Frenchman or about the Arab, the Puritan, or the Mormon.

Singular audacity, indeed, is the audacity of the Jew, who, making them march before him, like the column of darkness of the desert, we know not what prestige of intimidation, raises hand not only against freedom of the press, but against the very freedom of history, as soon as he feels sharp points that wound him, and which, strutting about in all its boastfulness and bad taste of the upstart, poses as a brazen champion of the license 'wherever, acting in its own self-interest, it undermines, overturns and upsets the institutions of Christian peoples.
(Read all Jewish journals.)

For, if the goal of the living Christian of the active life is to Christianize the world, that is to say, to sow the Christian institutions, the only ones that can maintain and spread the benefits of civilization, and to establish a reign of peace on earth, the goal of the Jew, whose conviction works in the direction of The opposite of that of the Christian is to Judaize the world and to destroy this Christian civilization there. Such is the reason we call the active Jew the mission-

* Example: "The time has come, Prince, to perform an act of legitimate authority by breaking this odious plot... To pursue without weakness the newspapers which, for a year now, have been constantly inciting hatred, to contempt, murder, and the expulsion of Jews; dismiss all these cowards officials who violently lent a hand to the appalling persecution, etc. Such is the cute little coup d'état that is being sought against the public freedoms, and for which the intervention of the powers is demanded foreign affairs in Romania, the honorable Mr. Crémieux, assisted by Sir Montefiore, to whom one of the government ministers guilty of defending quest, his coreligionists would unfortunately have caused, otherwise provoked, the movement in question." Letter to the Prince of July 8; Areh. Israel., XIX, p. 88Î-3; 4867. – Israelite Universe, VIII, p. 374; 4868.

Digitized by CoogI

XXII

CONVERSATION.

'born of evil', however honorable he may otherwise be can show from a domestic and civil point of view It is true that our Judaizers are beginning, for the most, no longer wanting to impose themselves on the world through the doctrines of the Talmud, which an ardent propaganda... placed today by the philosophical doctrines of eighteenth century. That is why, from the height of the year 1869, at the bottom of which the ecumenical council will open the Church's sham, the ecumenical council of Israel us

'See the note on civilization below, p. 1SS. – Saint John says (Gospel, 8, U): the bone ex shepherd diabolus. "You are the children of the devil, and you want to fulfill your father's desires x –

In our writing, the root of the Gospel will be restricted to our understanding, ^less than we express the opposite.

r~ ^ The anti-religious, but especially anti-Christian, efforts that distinguish the current era has a character of concentration and universality where one recognizes the seal of the Jew, the supreme patron of the um'^cation of peoples, because it is the cosmopolitan people par excellence; because the Jew prepares, through the licenses of free thought, the times he calls messianic, that is to say, the days of his triumph ^uniwrjel./ll attributes its imminent realization to the principles of re-hung by the philosophers of the eighteenth century; these men at the unbelievers and cabalists whose work prepared the Judaization of this world.

Note the universal character that we point out in the Universal Israelite Alliance, within the universal association of the Freemasonry, and in the more recently established auxiliaries entitled the universal religious alliance, open to those whom the name Israelite She would still be there, whatever she says:

We extend our hand without insults.

To the Jew, beyond all cults,

To Tatheus, above the gods; *

Finally, in the universal league of education, whose principal aim—
The main issue is the capture of women. For the Revolution, despite the brilliance of its His success and conquests tell us: Without woman, there is no triumph!
To overcome God, one must seize the woman and possess her.
— Woman is both the angel of the family and the family itself.
Read to learn and understand these things: Free thinkers and the League of Education; Saint-Albin; Paris, <867; Wattelier; —
The alarms of the episcopate, by Mgr Dupanloup, 4th ed., <868; Paris, Uouuiol, etc., etc.

Digitized by Google

CONVERSATION.

XUII

declares that these "modern principles", which have become at the both the philosophy, politics and religion of the Jew" progressive, are "the vital conditions of V's existence of the "Judicity and its highest development," the lever even of its power! Do we hear it? The com—
Do we take them? Don't we see these doctrines as well?
clearly formulated by the official oi^anes of Al—universal Israelite alliance than through the organs of the Freemasonry? And, every time one of these associations—universal beliefs are expressed, do we not surprise them?
not to repeat, in variations, the language of her sisters?
Here, then, is the anti-Christian philosophy of the eighteenth century.
thirtieth century, the universal Israelite alliance and society universal of Freemasonry living from a single and same life, animated by one and the same soul! And the Freemasonry of the high-ranking adepts, that of the serious initiates, finally allows us to see through the meaning of its manifests that it is ultimately just the organization latent of militant Judaism, as well as the alliance Universal Israelite is just one of its organizations.
patents.

It will therefore be seen, in all points of this globe where a Jewish heart beats, let this Jew bear witness to his the most ardent sympathies to Freemasonry, on the—which the Church of Christ has unleashed the wrath of its ana—themes. Because Freemasonry, stemming from the mysterious

Within its walls, the nineteenth-century philosopher is not that the modern and principal form of occultism, of which the Jew is the prince, because he was in all the centuries the prince and the grand master of the cabal. The Therefore, being Jewish is naturally so, and we add that he is necessarily the soul, the leader, the true grand master of

Digitized by Google

XXIV CONVERSATION

Freemasonry, whose known dignitaries are not, the Most of the time, it's the leaders who are deceitful and the deceived. of the order*.

Within these high and impenetrable councils of occultism, whose specific aim is to de-Christianize the world and to recast in a single mold the institutions of all human societies, the Jew Will it therefore have to constitute a majority? Yes, undoubtedly, and the empire, in these regions of social darkness, is assured by the number of votes. Thus the constitution dictates... tuition of the Order; thus the statutes require, and these The statutes are the ultimate secret of the true adept. That's it. what we must say, and this is what the world He doesn't know what the instigators are hiding from him as the most important to their mysteries; the reason why don- to provide the public with material evidence of supremacy Masonic of the Jew, that would be to attempt almost the im- possible. And we acknowledge it with eagerness- all the more vivid given the evidence of this domination The Jewish nation has registered itself within the facts that are the richness of our pages

Moreover, we are relying on the sum From our research, we grant, for our part, to This assertion is called certainty; we are certain- we, indeed, that it was established in our time by a an eminently truthful mouth, and it was that of a

Evidence below; we say they are misleading to the public, who believes in real leaders. Our word, therefore, is not addressed to the leaders. apparent of the Order.

2 Many lodges are, or rather were, closed to Jews, because that he was unpopular in Freemasonry as elsewhere. But this What is true for the common people of the Order is by no means true for its leaders real ones, who are the friends, the helpers, the liege men of the Jew, and who always welcomed him as a lord overlord.

CONVERSATION.

XXV

A religious man, on his deathbed. Dying in peace.
of his faculties, and scrupulous historian, this learned per-sonnage stated a truth of which he owed the conquest Oh, his tenacious investigations. But perhaps, and we we believe, he owed it even more surely to the tor-the nature of these remorseful thoughts that lead so many and such great guilty before the tribunal of penance, and who,
by the confessional, the object of the righteous fury of the enemies-
the Church's representatives have saved human societies so many times.
Maines by healing Tâm of individuals. Because often it sometimes happens that, content to shelter his name in the shade of a inviolable mystery, the man whom true repentance has always...
He is determined not to leave this life without atoning for his mistakes.
and that he imposes on the minister of the Church the revelation of secrets whose knowledge is the salvation of states.

The Jew, finally, never ceases, in the pages of his journals, ' to declare himself an enthusiastic admirer of all the revolutionaries who disturb and overturn the world, ' but especially those whose hatred is insatiable threatens 'in the most direct way the existence of the Church. Faced with his ardent sympathies, faced with his implacable doctrines, before associations of all nature intended to make them move from theory into the acts, one would therefore have to be struck by the strangest myopia so as not to recognize in the Jew the prepa-' rater, the machinist, the chief engineer of the revolutionaries- 1 tions. For they alone, by de-Christianizing the world, they alone, by Judaizing him, by transforming him according to his own, profit, can lead the Jew to his ends; alone, here below,
Would it be simple enough, when he wants and proposes a
In the end, to push back the means?

But this Jew, whose name keeps coming up under Our pen is not just any pen of its kind;

h

CONVERSATION.

This is not the case, and we wish to state this once and for all. core, in the most courteous terms, the one who forms majority in his nation. He is for us the man of Talmudic faith, he whose zeal and implacable nature bitter resentments are harbored against Christian civilization; the active, shrewd and audacious man who devotes himself to tasked with disciplining and guiding militant Judaism. This is the one we are fighting, because we... let us fear; and our pages have said whether or not it is feared. table! But the legitimate terror we feel at Is its appearance a reason for us to cover it with Our contempt? – No, if it doesn't exist to provoke it an individual and special cause!

Among those with whom the vagaries of this world We mingle from time to time; frankly, we find ourselves revolutionaries, ardent auxiliaries of this Jewish ma-collector of revolutions, and most of them are without their knowledge. Almost all of these men are lost, but They are nothing less than wicked. Some of them They are very friendly to us, and their nature is excellent; we find nothing detestable in them except The doctrines. A regrettable environment, an education flawed, certain intellectual shortcomings, of which nothing to^ The world fails to give them the feeling, they have facts what they are and what so many others had become– naked in their place! Therefore, we are careful not to... to despise or hate them; and, except for any particular reason– for us, it is enough to pity them, even when we we find ourselves reduced to fighting them. This same soft– A movement of fraternal compassion is truly the only that inspires us in the one we call the Jew; and we We will never tire of saying it again. So harshly then that our conscience compels us to attack it, we

Digitized by Google

CONVERSATION.

that without a sincere intention to serve him, and we him
Let us serve by ruining his plans; for his triumph would be its ruin through that of the social order, of which we, soldiers, are responsible.
Therefore, we are soldiers of Christ.

Animated, moreover, by a feeling of cold respect that Every citizen owes a debt to the laws, even if they are far from approving them.
the spirit, but against which his religion and his con-Science does not command him to rise up, we use the right to legitimate criticism against those where the Jew has drawn the audacity that characterizes him, those that make him our master, by simply declaring him our equal.
We might be heard saying, when pointing them out: Dura hx, but we will add sed leæ, and we will not go beyond that! All the less would we be inclined to...
to rebel against these laws, to declare war on them,
It would be a pointless endeavor today; and that, in fact and the story of their existence we believe we recognize a special provision of Providence, careful of to chart a course for events that conforms to expectations secular of the Church.

We profess for the honorable Jew, for the Jew honest and peaceful, a sincere spirit of tolerance, and which extends from his person to his worship; and, in the well-
the concern we feel for this ill man happy, overflowing with compassion even the most foreign to the insult. We believe, we maintain that this Jew is of all countries, but that it is particularly of the ours, because no one escapes the pressure of the environment in which he is immersed and where his life unfolds. If only for-so much so, despite our efforts, that he had escaped our control over him whatever offensive or dubious statement, we are-
My loan, at first glance, to turn us away from everything

b.

Digitized by Google

xwiii

CONVERSATION.

heart against ourselves, to condemn ourselves, to set straight-
We will mercilessly expose the wrongs of our pen.
Moreover, we believe that any imprudence, any Injustice, far from serving us, would turn against us.

in the ways of reason and useful knowledge (things. As for the one whose beliefs and Morals are one of the scourges of civilization, if we sometimes makes his soul bleed, our necessary violence the saires will be those that humanity commands from chi-surgeon who, solely in the interest of curing the ailment,
We wield the sword against living flesh. – Society... will thank him, if he does not forgive us. But, in the accocomplicating our task, our moderation will throw no doubt a particularly favorable day would be around her, () that, leaving intact and within our reach heaps of documents whose use we have forbidden ourselves, we wanted to borrow our parts only from publications with historical significance, or not to accept them than from the hand of the Jew.

Therefore, when we have to deal with someone these diverse subjects: the Pharisees or the rabbis, the Talmudic scholars or reformists, the Talmud, the Kabbalah;
or when we utter such harsh words than these; the hypocrisy of the pure orthodox, the fa-Judaism, we doubt that we will be super-take on a cantilevered position, and without our point of ap-may the very word of the Jew, the Pharisee, be the rabbi. We are still far from repeating all of this.
that, in their marvelous inconsistency, these per-
The echoes of our drama have taught us; and a thousand times fewer are the traits we cast on the field of debate that the weapons in their hands

Digitized by Google

CONVERSATION.

XXIX

offer us help. But let's say better; let's say that if, in the confusion and disarray that reign within beliefs and customs of Judaism, we had Those who answer for our words are the Jews themselves.
who would lend us the support of our most irresistible documents; they are Jews, they are perhaps freethinking rabbis who, out of hatred for fanaticism their own would take it upon themselves, in front of the public, to... justify ourselves!

However, if from some corner of this Judaism arises against the sober and witty writer of the Revue des Two Worlds (MM of the Camp), we would push to the instant the counter-cry, and the situation would become se-laughing; for war would be boldly declared by the Jew, and in the exclusive interest of his despotism, not only to the freedom of discussion, but to the very freedom of history. Incapable of being-would any writer struggle, in his isolation-lying, against a nation that alone possesses the the vital forces of most nations, and that of the press on the front line*, it would be necessary, at this very moment and in the interest of public independence, to oppose to the overt and latent associations of Judaism force of an opposing association. It would be necessary, in the con-permanent councils of its legal experts, to oppose the per-maintenance of similar advice; it would be necessary, on a daily basis-nals of Judah, oppose at distances, on the ground on which we claim to walk with a sure step, one day-anal whose specialty would be to look after Judah; he it would be necessary, and immediately, while awaiting the birth and

* See the five divisions of our Chapter X.

Digitized by Google

XXX

CONVERSATION.

the success of these sheets, fill them in two or three times week, of documents and foreign correspondence the specialized columns of two or three newspapers, that those closest to them and most distant echoes of the popular press*. The reservations of our portfolio*, by lending itself to modifications and to developments dictated by circumstances would attend the council, would take their places there in variations with a success proportional to the uproar surrounding the persecutions including the Jew's invasive despotism towards the The non-Jewish press would have stirred up a storm.

If, therefore, the Jewish nation, under the false pretext of this religious freedom that no one threatens, except its own organs and its auxiliaries when it is not a that of the Christian (Ch. VIII below), judged the moment having just inaugurated the exclusive press in the regions

his legal experts, any pen bold enough to point out his trends and its progression, a collective being would be formed in the blink of an eye, right in the middle of us on one of the planes

'Other echoes would be the sheets that inform the poor spe-growers and shareholders I

2 The experience of others has told us, in many countries, what a significant It is imprudent to keep certain writings at home, and all by-particularly those that might interest secret societies. It is, and we know it, a thousand audacious acts, a thousand cunning tricks required to se impossible to predict, without mentioning the fake police, or the neither smuggling officials, nor special police forces, nor thieves special. We certainly do not want to suspect the Jew of lend themselves to these sleights of hand; but, on this point, those who constitute themse If his assistants and friends had them, they would know how to act spontaneously, however that they perceived a sectarian interest in it, and they have rarely failed Their goal. We know of some almost unbelievable examples. Therefore, be warned, and although we are in times when mysteries seem dear- Dear day, a word of warning to those who might keep these sheets at home. intended for advertising, parts other than those whose loss would be of perfect insignificance

Digitized by Google

CONVERSATION.

XXXI

of which its own organization offers us the model and the choice. And we, in turn, the United Christian Alliance Verselle if necessary, living by the same right as the Alliance universal Israelite ^ and walking alongside him, we we would demand an accounting for each of the publications of the Judaism, in each issue of its journals, attacks so often mendacious and brutal that their implacable hatred of Christianity stirs up against our beliefs, against our worship, against our clergy, against our religious orders and our Sovereign Pontiff, often even against our judiciary and our functions tionnaires, when these do not function as expected sons of Jacob

But, thank God! we spoke too soon; and The declaration escaped our pen too quickly. belligerent necessities into which the law would lead us

where the Jew has still not attained his sufficiency popularity among those who, out of aversion to Catholicism, patronizing Jewish interests. Ha-let us therefore turn back; and, far from raising-
To set the tone, let us congratulate ourselves on having to do justice to the Honourable members of the Central Consistory of France, whose tact and sagacity calm our blood and reprimand us
the frightening impatience of the Lorraine Consistory at the Revue des deux Mondes:

"Gentlemen, the article by Mr. Maxime du Camp, initi-Tulé the Paris theft clan, which you reported to our Please note, this has been the subject of an examination by us.
In-depth. We appreciate the legitimate emotion (read again the excerpt) that this publication has sparked among our

'The publicity surrounding our book might increase subscriptions tenfold' comments, and we hope so.

Digitized by Google

\XXII CONVERSATION,

coreligionists; but you must have certainty that we had already been concerned about it before having received or even communication'.

"The central consistory has never failed in the first instance" of his duties, that of defending the honor of the name and of the Israelite cult when it is seriously attacked.
We do not believe that he is in this circumstance.
present,... and it would be an affront to our dignity that to even make the assumption. Moreover, the work of Mr. Maxime du Camp does not contain a single passage which undeniably offers the legal character
the crime of inciting hatred and contempt for citizens between them. It is therefore impossible for us to ask the authorization to bring the author to trial.
Paris, June 20, 1869. Signed by the members of the council History of the Israelites of France.

The Revue du Progrès and the Archives israélites believed to have to double the following words this answer categorical, and we offer them our compliments.
sincere: "To this attack originating from the press, the press-
In our opinion, only she should answer.

"To the writers who now⁵ are unaware, or who we unfairly depreciate, it is through discussion and through the the opinion of the Central Consistory... which includes within its ranks eminent jurists. »Arch. fsroéL, XIII, p. 395-6, 1869.

Such was, and such will remain, our own opinion; and the question-tion, in this way, will be placed on its true ground.
Otherwise, who will tell us the Archives number, and of

What a menacing vigilance this nation maintains regarding movements of every man foreign to their race, and what an uproar in the world if that of the French Catholic amounted to only one percent.

Digitized by Google

CONVERSATION.

XXXIII

r Israelite universe, where we would not have the right to to pursue the offense with which we were allegedly charged by the Jew against Jew. But, soldiers that we are, we we are nothing less than informers; denunciation repugnant to our customs; it is considered cowardice among us. an ignominy. The son of Israel has the good sense to recognize it. to be born, and declares by its most honorable organ to want to stand frankly on the line of honor, which is to both that of supreme skill. Well, we beat-tones of the hands, and, without him arming his mouth with the me-
In accordance with the law, we consider him our equal elsewhere.
that before an article of the Code. That if we need thisduring the fight, and however arduous the struggle, we we will grant it to him eagerly and wholeheartedly, as to the adversary who inspires in us not the mistaken, but the esteem, the chivalrous salute of arms, and we hope to count him one day among the ours by leading him to bless his defeat.

As the printing of our
The book, the excellent pamphlet by the abbots, has been published.
Lémann: The question of the Messiah and the Vatican Council,
November 8, 1869; Albanel, Paris; 159 pp. in-8°.

There is no real contradiction between this writing and ours on the question of the Messiah, where these gentlemen confine it. When they locate it and we generalize it-Let us realize, however, that our words may not be...

We disagree.

Let us add, regarding this brochure, that if we it happens that certain beliefs are attributed to the Talmudic Jew.

Digitized by Google

XXXIV

CONVERSATION.

That being said, we do not claim to establish that this
This belief is explicitly found in the Talmud; we we simply mean that she lives in the heart and the spirit of the pure orthodox, of the one who forms, according to the A word from Father Goschler, born into Judaism, "the in-"The destructible core of the nation."

The final pages of Messrs. Lémann agree on the most complete way with the first part of our work, the one we removed, and where we were in complete agreement with the famous Duguet {Rules for Understanding Scriptures} holy; and: Truth about the Return of the Jews, 377 pages in-12; a flight. ; Paris, 1716).

Let us observe, and still regarding the same text, the big difference that often exists between what believes and says the common people of the Jewish people, and the secret thought mysterious leaders or chiefs of the Jewish nation.

Digitized by Google

CONVERSATION.

XXXV

NOTE FROM THE TALK.

Lb Clan of the flight in Paris, Revuctles Deux'Mondetf 1*' June 1869, tel.

In a thirty-five-page article in the Revue des

Of all the imaginable thieves, the Jews are mentioned only six times. Of these thirty-five pages, seventeen lines, that is to say a little more about a third of a page, or roughly one-hundredth of the article, form the portion allocated to them. All other criminals are French. But let us present the text itself before the tribunal of our readers. passages that concern the Jew.

"The thief who hoards and hoards is an anomaly that we do not encounter only among certain Jewish receivers of stolen goods." P. 630. – "In old A Jewish man named Cornu, a former chauffeur, was out for a walk one beautiful day He spends time on the Champs-Élysées. He is encountered by young thieves. great admirers of his great deeds, who say to him: Well, father Cornu, what are you doing now? – Still very drunk, "My children," he replies good-naturedly... "The great soûlasse, that's..." "Murder followed by robbery." P. 631. – There are families that seem devoted to theft from generation to generation; or these are the Jews, principally palement, who, engaging in humble but incessant misdeeds, perform these kinds of hereditary functions. They are to be feared, not by their audacity, for they rarely assassinate, but by their persistence in evil, through the inviolable secret they keep among themselves, through the patience they display and the resources they find to hiding among their coreligionists. Jewish thieves are becoming rare—they are waging open war against society; but they are still in a state of muted struggle; it seems as if they are taking revenge, as if he ... are within their rights, and that after all they are only reclaiming their rights, when the opportunity arises, a possession that their ancestors so often and They were so violently robbed by others. Sometimes they meet. in gangs and they steal on a large scale, like one does business; they have their correspondents, their warehouses, their buyers, their books of trade. That's how the Nathans, whom I've just mentioned, operated. They talk about the Kleins, the Blums, the Cerfs, the Lévy's. Anything goes for them: the lead came loose from the gutters, as did handkerchiefs. from a pocket. The chief usually takes the title of commission agent in goods, and makes shipments to South America, Germany and Russia. The Hebrew-Germanic jargon they speak

Digitized by Google

XXXVI

CONVERSATION.

The difference between them is incomprehensible and still serves to mislead research.

They are the world's leading receivers of stolen goods and conceal their actions behind a profession ostensibly practiced. » P. 63i.

"L'huilej" is suspicion; "Judacer" is to denounce someone by doing appearing to be his friend. » P. 636.

"Less brutal are the diamond cutters (sneakers), Jews of almost all origin, and who, humble, polite, elegant children, even attempt to employ excessive means that can lead to irremissible punishments. » P. 642. – 11 is a category of thieves who It specifically targets thieves; they are the /ileurs. A worthy fact Note: Jewish thieves excel at tailing Christian thieves; but they never betray each other. » P. 648.

Where, please, does the malveillanco fit into this list of Thirty-five pages so rich in detail? Where, and especially if we Let's compare what she teaches us with what the Jews have told us. Mr. Gerfberr, of Jewish descent? Where then, and if we bring him closer– the archives of the Jewish people themselves, who recognized, there For two years, women of ill repute of Jewish blood had been prevailing. in number compared to those of any other people M As if these women did not were not included, for the most part, and in all countries of the world, in the rank of thieves; as if one should not see in them the donkey of the ^ crime and the accomplices of criminals of all kinds?

The French Jew is moving away from the pure Talmud; he no longer follows its mo– So be it; and already we have done its part, as beautiful as history. allows us to do so; but for eighteen centuries he professed the <logms Talmudic texts, which credited him with the merit of stripping Christians of their affairs. Do such habits exist in the dregs of a people? They lose it overnight?

All other categories of criminals have French people for to fill their frames. From the point of view of Lorraine Judaism, Mr. du Camp Didn't he, by reporting them, insult France? And why is that? So, don't the Jews of our country feel attacked in these Other pages in French?

If he had thought that the categories of thieves attributed to the Jew would composed of Normans, Gascons, and Auvergnats, which they They recruited mainly from among locksmiths, carpenters, and masons, who would ever have thought to complain about this outrage in Auvergne, in Normandy, Gascony, or the Arts and Crafts Corps? Which man in France, and especially among French Jews, would have put himself in

'See noira chapter V, pp. 124–142, etc., and Archiva itrailiut, XV, p. 71, 1867.

Digitized by Google

CONVERSATION.

the head of accusing the writer of "the crime of inciting hatred and contempt" citizens among themselves? What Jewish redresser of wrongs would have, at this statement, hatefully "reported to the Paris Public Prosecutor's Office", demanding loudly proclaiming "Justice for the country against such transgressions," and supporting—stating that his Christian brothers would be within their rights to see it as an insult to the faith they profess?...

NOTE FOR CHAPTER XI, p. 458.

The following lines appear to be both the summary and the confirmation of one of our most important chapters, chapter xi, and of—
They should finish it, but we receive them too late. We borrow them—tons at the Golos of Saint Petersburg, on the date of October 3 (15), 1869.
We will see there whether the political and preponderant role that they give themselves are resolved to play the Jews is not indicated there as we have describe.

The Russian colossus tenses, convulses, in a display of insolence.
Jewish; but, whatever the height or dignity of his lan—
In his pledge, the Jew, whose plebeians he tramples underfoot, is already one of his masters, very, and the very text of this article acknowledges in furtive terms that it
He must know how to deal with the princes of Judah. (Read on the cover—
(The title of this book is Disraeli's word on Russia.)

According to the newspapers, Mr. Crémieux, on his way to Saint-Pétersbourg will preside over a general assembly of the Alliance in Berlin. Universal Israelite, which aims to address the unfortunate situation — the reuse of Jews in western Russia.

"This famous Alliance has strayed considerably from its destiny—primitive nation, which is concerned exclusively with development morality of the Jewish race! Placed under the direction of a former republican minister—as a republican, she dabbled very inappropriately in politics, and Mr. Crémieux began to seriously play the role of president of the republic universal Jewish. 11 establishes direct contact with the governments comments from other countries, just as if he were himself the head of a government. And, what's even stranger, some governments to respond as if to a man invested with sovereign power/

"Everyone remembers what a storm Mr. Crémieux stirred up in regarding the alleged persecution of Jews in the principalities Danubian. He even dared to address questions to our government—lying when Jews who had not been expelled from Saint Petersburg xxxviit CONVERSATION.

He had no right to deny it, and he managed to obtain explanations.

DETAILED ON THIS SUBJECT.

"So who exactly is this Mr. Crémieux? A head of state or just a simple..."

particular? It seems to us that treating him as if he were a

An official figure is neither in keeping with our dignity nor with our good Meaning. There is, as we know, no Jewish state at the moment. There cannot therefore it is a question of a Jewish government, and even less of a go-universal government!

His successes in Romania encouraged him to intervene in the affairs of our Jews in Bucharest, the friendly advice of Napoleon

Leo 111 can be received as orders; but in Saint Petersburg?

– That V. Crémieux remembers what happened to people much more powerful than him, when they wanted to intervene in the affairs of our Poles.

Thus speaks the Russian; so be it; but the power of Master Crémieux does not resides in no way in his person. It is in this united republic-verselle named by the Golos, and which, among the Jews, bears the name mysticism of Israelite faith. It is she whom the Golos accuses of prelude to the universal government that Judah proposes to establish on the ruins of the Jewish-influenced Christian states.

However, let us turn away from the Tsar, and return to the Prince of the Romania. This prince is paying a visit to Paris, where the barons Alphonse and Gustave de Rothschild instructed him on the condition of the Jews subject to his scepter. He is, he told himself, "deeply moved by the picture of the sufferings to which the Israelites of Romania are subjected 'the share of a fanatical population, and is willing to declare that he will use with all his authority to prevent the return of such profound events "I regrettable."

However, it sometimes happens that, a few days later, the same instances are made to the prince, again in Paris, by the Israelite Bamberger, consul of Prussia: Come now, "to prove to you that I have no kind of pre-"Having been judged against the Jews," the prince continued, "I invite myself to your house I will have dinner at your house tomorrow.

"Mr. Bamberger blushed to the tips of his ears" and finally said: "De-Then for several years I was a Protestant; for, as an Israelite, the go-The Prussian government would never have appointed me consul! – Well! replied the prince;... why then do the powers demand that I, in Romania, am more tolerant and more liberal than the

pp. 643, 646; November 1869.^ Read our chapter xi and refer to it this note, which nevertheless does not waste a single day here.

In Galicia, as in Romania, "one can say without exaggeration-

Digitized by Google

CONVERSATION. xxxix

"The reason is that the children of Israel are a real scourge." He said there. Moreover, organized speculators of this nation who < get married several times, in different locations, with beautiful young women Jewish women, to then sell them in the East and Africa," and deliver them to brothels (Neusande Court.) Then, that a poor-a Jewish girl, to escape the mistreatment of her parents denatured, seeks temporary refuge in a Catholic convent, and The population, incited by the Jews, will force their way into this sanctuary to seize it. dear young girl 'I

* Hermann Kuhn, Mand*, November 1869, and Correspondence to Alemmule, U. the white, a very well-chosen pseudonym for seeing and knowing.

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

THE JEWS

PART ONE

or PREMISES FROM WHICH WE WILL SEE THE MORALITIES OF THE JEWISH FLOW. THAT IS TO SAY, THE MORALITY IN ACTION OF JUDAISM.

CHAPTER ONE.

TRADITIONS.

The Jew is the lowest of men. - On the contrary, the Jew is the pre-First of Men I - Ancient Times; Pharisaical Traditions of Rabbis; they are the source of the Talmud. - ' are the beliefs, and consequently what are the customs of the Jews?

The Jewish people, distinct from all other peoples. - The characteristic that defines it

— This law was that of Muse. — It was attacked by idolatry.
whose doctrines are those of the primitive Nabob Kabbalah (see at the Qn of this book), and by the rabbinical traditions from which the Talmud. — There is therefore a chasm between these Talmudic traditions and the law of Mof.se, that since Christ, the Jew cannot call his religious law without lying to history and to one's faith.

O Jew, step back, and quickly! For, a little further, and you risked to touch us, you, the last of men! What

The Orient, as we traveled through it, showed us, It's that anyone who respects themselves and meets them spits at you he touches your face with his stick, or caresses you with the tip from his foot. However, our words make you smile with dis-dear, for gold abounds in your coffers, and what is there beyond?
Gold? That's your reasoning; we know it, and, truly-Merit, you reason wonderfully for a Jew. But go, all They have only one mouth to say it; the gold you hide and 1

ElflMOTREC^

HEGIA

MOKACF.MSIS

Digitized by Google

2

THE JEWS.

the one you are showing off smells of blood or mud;
This is why even the enemy of the Catholic priest, Mr. Mi-Chelet just shouted it from the rooftops: you are the man on which everyone spits! Out to sea, Jew, out to sea!
and be careful not to approach us: let your garment not touch |join ours ' 1

...What are we saying, my God! and what words indic-Words escape from our lips! Oh no, Jew, come forward, you the first, the most perfect of men, the chosen one of Heaven;
Come forward, and do not humiliate us by retreating, if we Let us approach you. Ancient worshipper of the true God,

Braham, whose genealogy is written in the pages of the
The Bible, the most reliable and oldest of histories, crosses the waters of the flood without getting lost, and ascends, by a lineage of known ancestors, back to the first man. We other Christians, adopted sons of Abraham, who have become,
Since Christ, the nobles before God and before men
My people, the masters of the earth and the heirs of heaven, we Here we fall into the era of our decadence; here we
We will give you the earth and God. Take them quickly, you who know Take it well, and reclaim your rights. To perfections superior aspects of your physical constitution and intellectual faculties
"Tules, which will surprise us in a moment," he adds, after the eruption of turmoil that threatens the world, the perfections that You miss them. Historical missionary of the city of evil, and future missionary of the city of good*, allow me, however,
O Jew, our master already, our lord soon, permit that we draw closer to you to treat you as a brother elder; don't spit in our faces and don't shout at us:
Back up I

These two words, which claim to sum you up, have made us

* These savage customs disappeared from French Antilles, where our laws have already repressed them.

* We will explain in a moment what would be enigmatictick in our language.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER ONE. . 3

"Weighing the pros and cons. Blessed child of the great patriarch^ problem whose unknown is beginning to emerge,
So, what are you, ultimately? What kind of life have you led since the Christ to this day? What are your brothers? Are they even a little-distinct and pure alloy? Are they a race that has mixedsalient, melted, or merging into the mass of the people?
Are they men of a cult that rejects as impure?
and curse every other man and every other cult? Oïi mar-Where are they? What is their mission? What do they want? Where are they?
door, where the wind pushes them, blowing on these mo- waves biles that eloquent mouths have called the ocean of peoples?

Answer: – Despite the enormous difference from the previous day-linked to centuries that only ended yesterday, the Jews are a a people quite unlike any other people who lived or who
Their faith, their law, their hearts, refuse any fusion.

The Jews are a race of men who are spreading among of all human races ^ but this apparent mixture, Beware of calling it a fusion; for no power in-core cannot combine the Jewish element with the element human being distinguished by foreign blood, a faith that trans- They are based on the Talmud. And yet they are called citizens, these Jews who begin to trample the Talmud underfoot, this religious code of Judaism; they adorn themselves with eagerness- the meaning of this title, among the peoples whose genius managed to to gain citizenship. So we can already begin to To say it: There are no more Jews; the Jew disappears from the scene. the Jew leaves

No more Jews? Who would dare say so? No, ja- But, on the contrary, there were no more Jews, and never again the Jew He no longer asserted himself so loudly. The Jew is everywhere, he will... to show us, he will explain to us the enigma of his walk and of its contradictions... Yes, that an incident might seem for a moment to announce to him the one he has been waiting for as Messiah, and Suddenly Europe will see what these national citizens are like.

I.

Digitized by Google

4 • THE JEWS.

lilé double Or else, a war breaks out, aines (jue, se '

By yielding to the demands of their religion, liberal Europe will have separated into its armies, the Jewish legions of the legions Christians, and, if the question from one of its aspects is of interest Israel, set the Jews of the belligerent states against each other. rants. This test will tell you if the brothers are slaughtering each other; if the soldier's faith prevails over that of the believer; in a word, if the descendants of the twelve tribes are citizens of Christian states or of the Jewish nation.

A single and unchanging belief would therefore unite one with the other. among all the peoples who made them citizens, these men souls of the same blood, as well as the same faith joined and united one against the other, within the bosom of Catholic orthodoxy, of Men of all nations?... No! Far from it now.

This union in their faith, which was invincible, and whose due- The reality reached our time, has ceased to exist. And, however, the the most orthodox and the most dissident in Israel, that is to say the two extremes, those who firmly believe and those who no longer believe, faithful to a mission they call di- vine, of which they are the blind instruments, take their places the same men, and meet fraternally in the same temples. The temple floor is for them the floor of the absent homeland; and that homeland of yesteryear, that homeland after which they sigh for, this holy land watered with the blood of Some, sons of Canaan, dream of what she once was; others, consumed by boundless ambition, they expand it in their insatiable lust and want her to be for them the the whole world; for the real Messiah, or the symbolic one, whom they have-tend, promised them domination of the earth, oppressed them the sion of the Church of Christ, the suppression of the Christian name, the next and universal subjugation of peoples:

Who would believe it? But the Jew himself will tell us.
So this is still the Jew's firm expectation! Seated
In his feline patience, he waits; he waits, aided by action of powerful and secretive societies; irresistible machines of

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER ONE. 5

destruction, that the Kabbalah and philosophical philosophy, of which he was and never ceased to be the soul; they organized for his triumph a across centuries and empires

But this unique people, this people with the exclusive and cosmopolitan, let us judge it only in the decisive light of the obvious, and that his own word be that of our main stops. Let us be bold then, let us delve deeper into a few moments in the past, that is to say, to go back a few rungs on the ladder of centuries, in order to do-undermine the course of events and effortlessly extend our looks.

First and foremost, however, using a useful precaution of
In this speech, we will turn to the reader and we will... we will shout: Whoever he may be, man who passes within reach of Our pen, Jewish or Christian, if you tell us who you haunt,
We will tell you who you are. Nothing is more undisputed than this.
adage, because a secret springs forth, pushing the imitation of your nature;
and those that, preferably, we see you seeking, this are those toward whom your inclinations lean. The heart
It drags us down, so vile and so far! The false and lordly heart powerfully our intelligence! But we will also say completely unknown: If we know what you believe,
We will learn what you do. For man acts according to His belief; his faith governs and shapes his morals. He believes
b. the excellence of such food, he brings it into his regime; he believes that such a path leads to such a goal, he commits His steps on this path if he wants to reach this goal. Therefore, such

His morals and character will be reflected in his actions and his life;
This is Ib, as the centuries have proven.

Have we not seen the dogmas and mysteries of paganism defiles the young girl in her prime, educated b to believe, and, by the same token, to practice the lessons of a cult Filthy? Haven't we seen them wither and swallow the

'Our research compels us to see something quite different in the cabal than what Bergier saw there. See below.

Digitized by Google

6

THE JEWS.

matron, fill the temples with prostitutes jiu name of gods of heaven, to introduce and establish, in a thousand forms, the moral servitude alongside physical slavery and worship homicide?

The law of Christ, on the contrary, Christian faith has not-Didn't she make the virgins sprout? Didn't she raise up by Penance, the fallen virginity of Magdalenes? Didn't she not humanized the ferocious beasts that howled the idioms of the North? Hasn't it dissolved, rather than broken, the Irons of the gastens? And, even in the bloody mud of amphitheaters, stirring up the rot of the Roman heart, Didn't she draw out the burning moisture from that manure?
the living pearls of charity, devotion and martyrdom?

However, what history has said about the idolater and the Christian,
Who among us would dare deny it of the Jew? If, therefore, we return the order of things, how, to take the Jew of age in age, to follow the perfumes, the scents of vices or virtues whose atmosphere he saturates around him -, 'has the Judge of old and today through his actions, his morals, his irresistible irritable anger or excessive feelings which of all Parts burst forth in his wake, how could he ignore what he fled from and what What becomes of his faith?

His belief, the source and measure of his actions, must have been and was Indeed, the reason, the source and the measure of his morality.
So much was this faith worth, so much was the Jew worth. Well, what did he believe?
So, what does he believe today? What is his law?

You who are listening to him, hats off to him because, if he speaks the truth, this As a Jew, his faith is the Law of Moses! God traced it with his finger on the mountain stone, when it had faded from the stone of the human heart. And it is by embracing the Decalogue against her chest with demonstrations of love that the Jew cries out; Here is the immortal code of my belief! (espe-
(This is to mislead the Christian and defy his criticism). A Moses, therefore, tells us what Israel believes.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER ONE.

7

One God, the Creator, will be your God; – You will not kill point; – You shall not commit fornication; – You shall not You shall not steal; – You shall not bear false witness;
– You shall not covet your neighbor's house, nor his woman, nor her servant, nor her ox, nor her donkey, nor any Things that belong to him... There, there's faith, there
The law of the Jew. Respect and honor to this worthy believer, and that the door to the alcoves, that of the most secret safes remain open before the hand of this man; for, at a simple statement of the precepts of his religion and the rules of his morality, who wouldn't believe they see in him the model, the strength and the joy of humanity?

This is indeed the conclusion to which we are led in favor of the Jew, the Israelite Bédarride. And what astonishment either short-term, because if everything sees you in France, everything, at All the more reason, one must say. Let us therefore learn to lend a a willing ear to this child of the Jewish race.

"The world," he tells us, "has discovered that it is impossible" to destroy the Jews... Egyptian pharaohs, Assyrian kings, Roman emperors, crusaders, Scandinavians, Gothic princes, holy inquisitors, all of them deployed all their energy to to achieve this goal." And yet, "the Jews, after these blows, are probably even more numerous today than they
They were not in Jerusalem at the time of Solomon's reign.
The consequence to be drawn from these facts is that man cannot nearly fail when he tries to violate the immutable law natural tendency is that a superior race should never be destroyed.
or absorbed by an inferior race.

of these words: superior race. The Jews are not, do not do not claim to be, individually, superior to the rest of the men; but they are the custodians of a law which, going back at the cradle of the world, is found, when one considers it

1 The same thought is found in Coningsby, by Mr. d'Israëli, a man from Elal britannic of Jewish origin; it is expressed there more insolently: Do you thiik thaï the quiet humdrum, etc., p. <83. – Paris, <844.

Digitized by Google

"THE Jülfs."

I

in its essence, when examined in its purity, at the level of the most advanced civilization... That's the pitfall against which persecutions have been shattered; this is what which explains the remarkable resistance of the Jews.'

Oh no! That is certainly not the pitfall against which The persecutions came to an end, for long centuries... have passed since the religious code of Moses ceased to be the regulator of the Jewish nation; and moreover, the would- Furthermore, it would be a brutal insult to reason. the man whom to compare to the magnificent law, but terrible, which bears the name of Moses, the law of love or of charity of Christ, the only one, if history is any witness, Adèle, whose virtue succeeded in civilizing the world of polite activities and the world of barbarian hordes.

To say that the law of Moses is the law of the Jew, that would be to deceive those disposed to judge him according to his faith; this would be to throw into the middle of the social world the most dangerous because of its consequences, and the most false in resuscitation ity; however, the tenacity characteristic of Jacob's Als never tires of reproducing it among the nations Christians, and it always reproduces there with an astonishing success; such is, today, the singular and calamitous ignorance of peoples about the people and things of Judaism. Thus we see this monstrous and grotesque- that error turned to the very great and singular advantage of the Jewish the course of relations between men, the dispositions the legislator's actions and the plans of the European |K)litique, while it facilitates the work of philosophers, who, having become the infallible doctors of humanity, have made themselves the auxili- the men of the enemies of the Christian faith, -the men of the Jew.

Among the countless authorities whose word has decided

'Page 434. The Jews in France, in Spain, ed., by Bédarride, lawyer at the Imperial Court of Montpellier, knight of the Légion of Honour, former president of the bar association, Paris, 1861. We want no- One could doubt Mr. Bédarride's honorability, but he is a lawyer, he is Jew, and we shall see, along the way, with what ink the Jews write the story...

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER ONE.

!

Regarding this question, the illustrious Hebraist Buxtorf has addressed it to us. language': "The Jews drew the foundations of their belief, and their entire religion, not in the letters of Moses, but in monstrous, false, frivolous traditions, and in fables told by seducers of the Phari- sect risaïque*. » However, a very honorable exception k this a prodigious departure from Jewish common sense is presented to us in the the imperceptible sect of the Caraites, whose existence is the cons- living confirmation of Buxtorf's words. But the name of these faithful followers of Moses are probably unknown to us. Let us therefore ask ourselves who these dissident Jews are, and What is their number?

"Only one sect, the Karaites, recognizes only the the law of Moses, and rejects the Talmud; but this sect does not "Don't count on the delk of twelve hundred faithful*."

The Karaites, in fact, reject the entire traditional system of the Pharisees; and it is this system that was and remains closely attached almost all of the Jewish members members of the Jewish nation, scattered across the globe. Because "the stubbornness towards so-called traditions has passed from From ancient Pharisees to modern ones. Those of our time... They therefore maintain that the Jew "who rejects the oral law, – that is to say – that is to say, the traditional or Pharisaic law, – becomes apo- stat, and that he deserves death without any form of trial." He

'Professor in Basel, born in 154, died in 1629.

^Stjnag. Judaic., cap. xxxvi.

3,100 out of four million Jews! History of the affairs of Syria, eic., by Ach buircnt, member of the Oriental Society, 2 vols. in-8". Paris, 1846, Gaume, vol. 11, p. 353, and other authors... "The Cerriani Anen, who lived in Babylon around the year 720 AD. The Israelite scholar Samuel David Luzzatto, from Trieste, professor in Padua, demonstrates with his usual lucidity in scs Prologomeni ud una graminatica ragionata délia Ungua Hebraica, p. 15, that Triglandius was mistaken in supporting the supposed antiquity of this sect... » Congress of Mornings, 2nd session, 1864, M., t. I", p. 412. – The Karaites, says Mr. White Atibé, in his excellent Course of History ecclesiastical, the Karaites, whose origin is no less uncertain, However, they appear to date back to a century and a half before the Christian era. T. I", p. 9. 1867.

Digitized by Google

40

THE JEWS.

Furthermore, it is clear that their hatred knows no bounds. border "against the Karaites, religiously attached to the text" of Moses and the word of God.

However, the strangest changes, and of the more singular speed, have been taking place for some years within the bosom of immutable Judaism, and we read without too much astonishment, in the liberal liking of the Judaizers French, this news, which, less than a century ago, Any sensible Jew would have refused to believe: "The communal Jewish community of Karaites from European Turkey forms a figure of approximately ninety families, and all its members bres have just joined the Alliance israélite universelle*.

The Synagogue, before the current period of decadence, had therefore almost universally dared to put Moses in the index; she had made the sacred books of the Bible her stepladder of his doctors; and Pfeffercorn, Victor of Cobden, Jerome of Holy Faith, who became Christians after having learned lived within the doctrines of the Talmud, that is to say, within obedience-blind faith in rabbinic traditions demonstrated that the Modern Jews have not only abandoned the law of Moses" to indulge in oral doctrines and Capri-beautiful interpretations, but that in addition "they introduced to 'History of the Jews, to serve as a supplement and continuation to that of Joseph, Paris, 4710, l. 1, p. 359: cited hereafter. History of Jews, continued. – Ibid. On the Jews in the nineteenth century, etc. by Mr. Bail, former inspector, etc., very favorable to the Jews. ed.

^Archives israélites, no. XVI, August 4-5, 1867, pp. 766-7. Another This chapter will teach us what this universal alliance is. – The
The same Archives had just told us: "Toiilefoi– the Karaftes, sect very orthodox Jewish, refuses to follow the Talmud beyond the meaning literal from the Bible; they called the other Jews heretics, because that, they said, they had committed an offense against the law: You do not increase
You will not lie about him, you will not diminish him. Denli'ronume, XIII, 4, and IV, 2, Ib. Archives, no.

The doctrine of progress, adopted yesterday in black judaism, make a Judaist very liberal to make him qualify as an ad-orthodox objectives, the detractors of Talmudic ideas, those that such a great crime once rendered, and continues to render in such of countries, worthy of death without trial.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER ONE.

11 within the Synagogue of maxims entirely opposed to Mosaicism and natural reason. » Dcj^ even Adrien Fini counted "twelve Pharisaic dogmas fought by Our Lord in the Gospel as opposites to the spirit the laws of Moses and the law of nations; and he added that This doctrine had persisted to this day among 'all the Jews scattered throughout the world.'

So if we go back to the time when these traditions
The liars had become vulgar; we encounter the
A Jewish scholar who spoke the Talmud even before the Talmud and Christ. He was the ethe time when Judah began to change his appearance, when his beauty was fading, where the purity of belief was about to cease to exist
A characteristic trait between the Jew and the Gentile: a calamity that The legislator had tried to prevent it. For so many rites meticulous Mosaic law, so many uses and restrictions ridiculous in the eyes of these superficial observers whose es-taken cannot stop near a serious subject without to give course his childish and mocking verve; so many press-accumulated and painful descriptions, had not had as their object the main thing is to preserve the Jew from the corruptions of idola-'trie', by isolating him from the idolater through the obligations of a com-commerce with divine law whose frequency equaled its intimacy.

From this close and incessant exchange were born the intellect-tion of a people of the chosen. But the time had only just come too early, when the seductions of pagan idolatry had taken hold. Vahi the holy people; where human malice, mingling documents patriarchal trines, the venom of its doctrines, no longer left subsisting from religious law as a dead letter; cold cada-true that sacrilegious hands would not come to stir near the altar only to provoke heavenly wrath.

Approximately two centuries before Christ (175 years), we see the

* Book IX, Chapter III, Church and the Synagogue, by L. Rupert Caslerman, Paris, 1859, in-18.

® Dü geitium dæmonia. Ps. xcv, 6. El tels étaient les dieux sa-Beists of the cabal, that is to say, your gods of the demonic tradition. See elsewhere in my chapters.

Digitized by Google

I.ES JEWS.

42

Greek trade corrupts the Jews, and "children
"Iniquity goes out of Israel." "Come," they say, "and let us do alliance with the nations around us; for, since that we withdrew from them, we fell-
"They are involved in a great many evils"... And these Jews of-
They are undoubtedly a source of scandal for their brothers.
And horror? – Oh no! Not at all. Progress in the decadence, which the nineteenth century commands us to do in the Modern Jew, a new example, had too widely en-vahi Judah so that the public outcry might rise against these preva-mockers; and far from the excess of audacity that brought them together nations astonished the multitude, it lent itself to these indi-genitality. Jeshiia, the high priest's brother, dared to recast his name because it was Hebrew, to transform it in the name of Jason, and set out at the head of a delegation charged with petitioning to cite the sanction of Antiochus Epiphanes, the one whom Scripture names a root of iniquity. This pretender coveted with ardor, the great sacrifice; he offered the king sums immense efforts to obtain it, and to engage Autiochus with him to allow the establishment in Jerusalem of an academy for young nesse, at the same time as it would make the inhabitants of this city citizens of Antioch.

Now, "the king granted him what he asked for, and the new-no sooner had the pontiff obtained the principality than he Gentiles. He overturned the legitimate ordinances of his fellow citizens to establish unjust and corrupt ones; he had the audacity to establish a place of exercise even under the fortress, and to expose the most accomplished young men folds in infamous places. Even the priests did not attack singing more to the functions of the altar, despising the temple and neglecting sacrifices, they rushed to the games of wrestling and at the shows. They no longer paid any attention to what was honored in their country, and saw nothing more

* Maccabees, Bible, book 1, chapter 1, verses 12 to 16.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER ONE.

ii

It was great to excel in everything that was highly valued by the Greeks, A dangerous rivalry was stirring up among them, because they were jealous of the customs of these peasants, and allTeclaient to be in every way like those who had been mortals in- "Enemies of their country."

However, among the Jews, religion and law were only one The same thing! To indulge in abominable morals Gentiles, tampering with the precepts of the Mosaic books, to change the customs of which they were the sacred code, that was to profane and violate the law. Apostasy therefore began, around the time when we went back up, b becoming a commune^ and, despite the number of true worshippers, despite the saints and the martyrs who bore witness to their loyalty through the effu- Because of their bloodshed, everything in the nation became corrupt. Then, thanks to this shameful decadence of the priesthood and of the few- ple, thanks to the strange know-how and the masterful hypo- The crisis of the Pharisees, the traditions and doctrines of these innovators gradually mingled with the sacred traditions of patriarchs and prophets.

And yet these doctrines, these constitutions that history- tradition cannot name traditional without adding and repeating as soon as they stem from a non-Jewish source and impure*, the Pharisees claimed to have received them from hands of their ancestors, and they infected the spirit of not included in the laws given by Moses,

alone, they supported, that one was obliged to follow.
This dispute gave rise to various sects"; and the a small number, that is to say "people of good standing, em-stirred up the party of the Sadducees, while this read of the
"The people sided with the Pharisees" (V)

A boundless zeal for these vain or detestable tra-

'Bible, Maccabees, book. II, di. iv, v. 7, etc. Id. Josephus, HisI.j Book XII, Chapter VI.

® The (brisl told them: Your ex-shepherd diabolos. St. John, 8, 44.

® Josephus, Uist., book. XIII, cli. xviii.

Digitized by Google

U

THE JEWS.

(Litions form the characteristic trait of these sectarians. Besides the law given on Sinai, God, if we were to believe them,
"had verbally entrusted to Moses a great number of rites" and dogmas that he had passed down to posterity without the "Write." They named the mouths through which they had conserved these so-called traditions, to which they attributed the same authority as the law, and their stubbornness towards them
"has passed from the ancient Pharisees to the moderns," that is to say to the followers of the rabbinical schools.

That the Mosaic Synagogue, as well as the Church of Christ, had its legitimate traditions alongside its holy Scriptures,
This is something we are far from denying; on the contrary 1 And these traditions that are linked to sacred texts, in order to interpret them and supporting them are those very principles of Catholicism; they do not Therefore, they are neither the doctrines of the Pharisees nor those of a some sect or other. Let's listen;

"Besides the written law," one of the high authorities told us of the Church, Saint Hilary, Moses taught separately the the most secret mysteries of the law in the seventies scholars, ordained in the Synagogue as doctors specifically tasked with transmitting this knowledge*.
But nothing of the sort, nothing divine in traditional doctrines the Pharisees' beliefs. On the contrary, adds an elder rabbis, that is to say the Pharisees, audacious falsifiers of the true tradition, they exaggerate everything in the most extravagant, they claim that God revealed Moses not – not only the entire Old Testament, but also the Mishnah and the two Gemaras (that is, the Talmud) as they were subsequently drafted, along with all the objections to Ilillel, of Shammai and other doctors, indeed everything that had to pass through the fevered brain of the lowliest rabbi until the end of the world * 1 »

'History of the Jews, conlin., p. 339. Ib.

* Num dem Moyses, quamvis, etc. Tract in. xi Ps., edit. Bened., p. 28.

® Talmud, Treatise Meghilla, fol. 19, v. Id. Medrasch-Yalcut,

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER ONE.

15

11. There therefore actually exists an abyss – and let us note this well for the intelligence of our subject, – between the traditions of Moses and Human or Pharisaical figures, including the Christian flagellate pride and lies through these words: "O Pharisees! why do you yourselves violate God's commandment To follow your tradition? Hypocrites! Isaiah did indeed... prophecy of you when he said: This people honors me with her lips are on the tip of her tongue, but her heart is far from me; and it is in It is in vain that they honor me, teaching maxims and ordinances. "Human finances!" "Leaving aside God's commandment,

You carefully observe the traditions of men, don't you?

You are not very religious people, to destroy the command- God's way of observing your tradition?... tradition that You yourselves established *!

What can be said, after such words, of the traditions of pbarisai- ques, who, even before Christ, and during his lifetime, com- threatened to destroy the Law of Moses? What about the jumble? of these childish and abominable traditions, increased by those which the Pharisees added after Christ, and which their doctors, created to render the law of Moses taught the Jews to this day under the title of Talmudic doctrine? What to say in truth? We will know-

by listening to some of these Talmudic traditions diques, to what extent the Orthodox Jew since Christ is the Jew of Mosaic orthodoxy.

This first word was essential to prepare us for interesting chapters on Talmudic customs and the Ca-bale, while, from page to page and getting better and better, will now revealing itself to our eyes this audacious and insi-a falsehood, constantly repeated by modern rabbis

Part 1, no. 405. Harmony between the Church and the Synagogue, 1. 1, p. 126.
Pans, 4844, Drach.

' S. Malih. Evang., chap. xv, v. 3, 7, 8,9. – Id. S. Marc. Evang., chapter seen, verses 6, 7.

* Evang. S. Mark, seen, 8, 9, 13, Docente doctrinas et præcepta ho-01 muni, etc.

Digitized by Google

16

THE JEWS.

to the great benefit of Judaism: that the law of Moses is the Law of Juir.

And when we know what the Jew believes, what is his Faith, what is its law, who are its teachers? We shall know what the Jew should do and what he does; we will know what he is, and we have every reason to know it!

CHAPTER TWO.

THE ELDER PHARIAN, FATHER AND FORMER OF THE PHARIAN MODERN,

Or ancient times, which it is essential to know in order to understand the present era.

What the Pharisees are. – Devotions, self-mortification, hypocrisy, popular favor, pride, a prodigy of their power, an example.
Their panegyric in the mouth of the modern rabbi. – Their pora hideous trait in the Gospel, which tells us: Do as they say,
And don't do what they do! – Why? – Strange virtue of unhealthy, and it is a glory for the Pharisee to be Héli in his pages – The founder of the law of love and brotherhood, after the Prophets, it's not Jesus, it's Ildel, and the Pharisees are his disciples. – Their portrait by themselves. – Pictures of their blindness. – Since the Pharisee rejects the Gospel, let us Leaving aside the evangelicals, and questioning only history in his case profane, – Are the Jews truly wretched? – We are far from generalizing such an assertion. – Conclusion: the reader is able to pull it.

Orlliodox Jew, Jew of the Talmudic traditions, we come to tell us, and the rumor is going around, that you are dying. If he goes quebiiie truth in this new one, deign to receive our A sincere compliment, and if there remains a whisper of voice, speak; Tell us, before we breathe our last, tell us what What is your age? Let's say what your date is, who is your master? – I'm quite capable of answering that, curious user–rogaleur, and my mouth will give more than one answer to your Survivors 1 Well, the Pharisee is my match, he is my

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TWO.

17

Father, the Pharisee family dates back to Moses, and we have we received our traditions from his lips, that is to say, the splendors Sinaitic traditions of the oral law, of which he made us the custodians and The interpreters. – Error, error. Pharisee; for, according to Josephus, a member of your sect, and according to Saint Jerome, that learned Liebraist who lived in the intimacy of your Doctors, the origin of Pharisaism does not go back beyond of Hillel, or of Jonathan, one of the Maccabees; she does not know– would be a century and a half above the date of Christ

But from the question of time let us move on to that of the per– rings. The holy book of Judah, the Talmud, if you let it Words will teach us that the Pharisaic sect is divided known as seven orders, recognizable by their practices of de– voting. "One measured obedience according to profit and the glory; the other studied not to lift his feet while mar– singing; the third one was beating his head against the walls, so as to draw blood from it; a fourth hid it in a hood– chon, and, from this hollow, lowered his gaze upon the world as if from the bottom of a mortar; the fifth exclaimed

What have I already done? The sixth obeyed by love of virtue and reward; enun the last he only carried out God's orders out of fear of the penalty "

These orders, let us observe them carefully, by casting this glance indispensable on ancient times, they only formed the insignificant nuances of a homogeneous mass; and, simple in particular, the Pharisees, composed of Levites and men-members of all the tribes, sometimes counted in their
The high priests, among the ranks, lived without vows, without rules.
determined rules, and seemed to have no other purpose than to attack

'See below on Hillel; but the rabbis "only deviate from conjectures about the age of this famous defender of traditions. » Hist.
"of the Jews, supplement, vol. I", p. 358. Paris, 1710.
s Ibid. p. 379.

2

Digitized by Google

18

THE JEWS.

to cultivate a higher virtue in the path of their traditions tions ' .

Eager for the praise and esteem of the people, the Phari-
their people eagerly embraced the great austere-They indulged in fasting, vigils, and... mortification of the senses; but pride was united in them with demands of boundless hypocrisy. They had the art of to only let oneself be seen in the outside world under the mask of a face sloughed off and disfigured by exhaustion. The trumpet announced-said in the synagogues and in the public squares solemn distribution of the largesse they left behind ber in the bosom of the poor. Look, look at these men of good works and meditation, stopping at street corners and seem to forget themselves under the admiring gaze of the crowds-they one would say, annihilated in the ecstasies of prayer!...

But the inner sanctum of their home is revealed to us-the
The door is opened to us, and their bed moves forward to knock our gaze. This bed is a narrow plank arranged in Sleep would have its freedoms. Thorns and pebbles whose expert hand strews them are a remedy against the voluptuousness; and those terrible whips with which the wall displays serve the flagellations which earn them the flattering name of tire-^{ing}; others, it is true, obtain this title by their walks in the streets with eyes downcast or closed; for they must experience this contemplation, which may lead to clashes and hurts. constantly against the walls. Those you see a little Further on, they advance with heads bowed and backs hunched. The thought The respect that motivates them is this: their traditions teach- They say that what they call the feet of God will not rise than four feet above the ground; they bend down Therefore, so as not to profane them by touching them. Only if their Not dragging its feet, it scrapes the cobblestones of the streets; let us remember this on their person and their actions have no other purpose than to to mark for the people the holy and consoling elevation of their

'Ibid., p. 359-380.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TWO. 19

spirit towards heavenly things. The bottom of their robes is Moreover, armed with thorns, and the edges of their garments, no less than their sleeves, are adorned with speech bubbles, that is- that is to say, small strips which cover, in their use and usage The most beautiful sentences from passersby. But the catalogue of Their observances are endless; also, even before God, does their conscience bear eminent witness? And does she proclaim them superior to the rest of men?... The The Pharisee will therefore separate himself from the crowd, for what he says, he He believes it; he will isolate himself from it as if the touch of a person- His foreignness to his sect was a stain upon him; and if the Son God becomes a subject of scandal for him, especially during- that he commits the indignity of allowing himself to be approached and touched by sinners.

These Pharisees, who perhaps do not appeal to us much, and who were the first to appropriate the doctoral title of Master, or rabbi, knew how to mix enough skill with vulgarities their hypocrisy to seize the spirit of the people and to wield it as they pleased. Even princes and kings had ended up trembling before them, and most often the power the sovereign's was too slight to balance their credit. Just one example, which we borrow from the past remote places will spread their light to our time and us will exempt you from any other obligation.

after having braved for some time the hatred and insults of The people respond to insult with carnage. Civil war born of this blood. But, after six years of fighting and The weary prince, weary of massacres, softened; "Let us reconcile—
"We," he said to his opponents, "speak, and what can be done to ob—
To keep your good graces? — To kill you! That was the response.
Answer: "War, war then, and war to the bitter end."
continued Alexander. Now, one day when he had obtained some success—
At that point, he took it into his head to give himself a pastime of a
A taste entirely oriental. Orders were given by his people to gather for a country feast with his concubines. Obedience was 2.

Digitized by Google

20

THE JEWS.

promptly, and, from the top of the eminence where these women were Seated, he directed their gaze towards a space where stood eight hundred crosses. These instruments of torture were inoperable.
pes; but, the next moment, and at a sign of his hand, a an equal number of vanquished, that is to say eight hundred Pharisees, were attached to it. It was already something that this ven—geance. However, in order to give the terrible agony of these unfortunate people, a relief that seemed to be lacking there, their women and their children brought to the foot of these crosses had They offered their throats to the executioners' iron, and fell with their throats slit.
in front of their husbands'.

Some time later, this same prince lay stretched out on his deathbed. He is surrounded by his children and his wife.
Alexandra lets her desolation and her terrors... "Calm down, listen to me; follow my advice,
"And cease to fear," the dying man told him, "who knows his..." world. In a moment, the place my soldiers are besieging will fall into their hands. Go on, leave immediately, go home.
Victorious in Jerusalem, flatter and honor the Pharisees, and,
With your hands, place a large part of your power, for such is the marvel of their dominion over the mind of people, whether they make them love or hate whoever is the object of their love or their hate. Whether you hear them m—Whether speaking or slandering, give no credence to their words; and,
Know this well, pride and self-interest are the sole motive of their actions. But the multitude understands nothing of these things.

cooled body, tell them, as if these feelings escape—
Pay from the bottom of your soul: There it is! There it is at last!
Oh happiness! I can deliver him to you, take your revenge! No burial for this corpse; let it be covered in insults, and that May your desires be fulfilled. This will be justice, and I will it; I I also want to take your advice as a guide; I want to not "To guide me and reign only through your wisdom..."

So it was done; and the Pharisees said to the people:

'Josèplie, llist., book. XIII,' eyelash. xxi-xxii.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TWO. 21

In truth, this prince was a great man, an excellent—slow king; he was worthy of all our regrets; and no one none of his predecessors deserved such magnificent funerals rails!

Alexander's prediction came true point by point, and His wife won the hearts of the people; but she had no queen than the name; and the Pharisees, that is to say, always The leaders and doctors of the sect accumulated power under his name the profiles and the honors of royalty!

Thus speaks history, written, however, by the hand of a Pharisee, at the very moment the Savior was born. And Such was the sect in those distant days, guided by its doctors, by those whom we today call rabbins. .But what will these be according to the testimony of Black Lord?
self-absorbed men, who corrupt the people by their fabricated traditions and false interpretations of the law; these saints who are preparing to trample underfoot. Moses and the prophets, and who will forever consult the le-
The lawmakers and arbitrators of Judah? To Christ alone, in key,
It is up to you to tell us; and, on this historical point, we will owe the light to his precise, incisive and cha-
This time, it was remarkable for its salutary hardships, but not by the weaknesses and condescension of a cowardly moderation. Oh! if anyone other than the Savior held this lan-gage, who wouldn't cry out nowadays against intolerance and hy-Perbole? But the Gospel speaks, let us listen; for the Jew Orthodox prides itself today on being the disciple and the successor of this Pharisee;

"Two men went up to the temple to pray; one
The other was a Pharisee. The Pharisee standing thanks to the fact that I am not like the rest of men, who are thieves, unjust, and adulterers—nor even like this 'publican'.

' Josephus, Hist., book. XIII, ch. xxiii-xxiv.

^S. Luke, Evangelist, xviii, 10-11.

Digitized by Google

THE JEWS.

Such is the Pharisee's opinion of himself, such is his humility, his charity. But when it comes to multi-the study of which he is the idol, the terms by which he describes it instantly become less flattering, and the evangelical text-that they tell us... These doctors have sworn to seize of the person of Christ, but the people who see him at work
The subject is divided. The archers they have...

Those sent to seize him "then return to the princes"
The priests and Pharisees said to them, "Why not?"
Didn't you bring it? The archers reply: Never
No man has ever spoken like this man. — And the Pharisees
They reply: Are you also seduced?
Is there any of the senators or Pharisees who has Believed in him? — For this populace, which does only what it says
"Those people are cursed by God!"

"At this, Nicodemus, one of them, and the same who had come to Jesus at night, and said to them: Our law permits she condemns no one without having heard them and without "Having informed themselves of his actions?" To this doctor of their own school, which is taking it upon itself to point out this outrageous oversight of the law, Their response will be prompt; "Are you also Galilean? Read the Scriptures carefully, and learn that he "No prophet will come out of Galilee!"

People cursed by God! Galileans, so it is found The people are called! This is how any doctor who... allows us to defend justice and the law against ho- pride
The murder of the Pharisee. And this implacable malice was indisconceivable in their domination over these timid crowds who venerated. — For "several senators believed in Jesus —"
But, because of the Pharisees, they dared not acknowledge it.
publicly, for fear of being expelled from the synagogue,
the Jews having already resolved that whoever recognized Jesus to be Christ would be driven out*.

So far, we've pretty much just been blowing on the < Gospel of St. John, seen, 43 to 53.

* S. John, Evang., xii, 42; ix, 22.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TWO. 23

dust of ancient history; we do not allow ourselves no point yet, however impatient we may be, to move away our steps from these first milestones, and the marvelous stroke of u-union that draws between those times and ours the hand of one of Our modern rabbis will, we hope, make us feel the extent from our excursion into past centuries. Here then, in
In the year of grace 1867, the words of Mr. Chief Rabbi Trenel, director of the rabbinical seminary, and whose pen demands between ancient Pharisaism and modern Pharisaism glorious solidarity:

"Let's admit it, these Pharisees we liked, in fantasy portraits, to depict so violent and so orbeggars, they had many qualities, many virtues, read have been much slandered; they were early on victims of this strange theory so often applied to Jews, and who attribute to all the faults and wrongs of a a small minority.

Although for the Jews of the nineteenth century, disciples of Pharisees, may the Pharisees, executioners of Christ, still be his victims, and that the Gospels are nothing less than Let us allow ourselves a glimpse into history, while awaiting further pages.
recent, to oppose 'to their word that of Jesus, ranked by they, as well as their own historian Josephus, all Pharisees that he himself was among the slanderous insignia of their ancestors.

Your prophet Isaiah saw you from afar, and "it is with the reason he has made of you hypocrites, this prophecy tie: These people approach me with their mouths and glorify me-
They speak with their lips, but their hearts are far from me*.
It is in vain that they bless me, because they teach Human maxims and ordinances. Brood of vipers, How can they say good things? Because it's from the fullness of the heart that the mouth speaks

'Israeli Universe. Paris, 1867, p. 454.

^ Evang. S. Mark, xii, 6 to 9. S. Matthew, Evangelist, xii, 34.

Digitized by Google

24

THE JEWS.

"They are blind men leading blind men; and if A blind man leads another; they both fall into the pit

"Be careful to keep yourselves from the leaven of the Pharisees and the..."
Sadducees; for I tell you that if your righteousness is not more abundant than that of the Scribes and Pharisees, you will not enter the kingdom of the two

Ah, those Pharisees, who wallow with delight in Know the spirit and practices of their sect, therefore.
Finally; for if the word of history and the word of the Gospel are not so many lies, they bind, they attach on the shoulders of men burdens so heavy that one cannot would know how to wear them, while for them they do not want point to move them with the tip of your finger 1 All their actions, they
They do them to be seen by the rest of men; and the first-reserved places at feasts, the first chairs in the synagogues, those are the ones they are looking for, likewise that they like to be greeted in public places and to be called masters or doctors (Kabbi, Rabbis).

"Woe to you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites, who Close the kingdom of the two to men; for you do not enter it.
Stop standing up yourselves, and you still oppose those who wish to enter it. Woe to you. Scribes and Pharisees hypocrites, because, under the pretext of your long prayers,
You devour widows' houses; that is why your
The sentence will be more severe. Woe to you. Scribes and hypocritical Pharisees, because you walk the sea and land to make a proselyte, and that, when he is Having become so, you make him twice as deserving of hell as you are.
Woe to you, blind drivers, who say: When a
A man swears by the temple, but his oath is nothing;
If he swears by the gold of the temple, ah! that word binds him! In-Sensible, blind, which of the two prevails over the other?
or of gold, or of the temple that sanctifies gold? Woe to you.
Scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites, who pay tithes of

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TWO.

25

mint, dill, and cumin, but you neglect what
There are more important things in the law: justice and mercy.
and faith. These are the things that must be practiced, without However, omit the others. Blind guides, who gather Filter out the gnat and swallow the camel! Woe to the You, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites, who cleanse the deoutside the cup and the dish, while the inside is full of plunder and filth. Woe to you, Scribes and Pha-You hypocritical people of Ris, you are like tombs.
bleached, which appear beautiful on the outside in the eyes of men, but who, inside, are nothing but bones Death and decay. Thus, from the outside, you seem righteous in the eyes of men; but inwardly, are you not What hypocrisy and iniquity! Woe to you! Scribes and Pha-Hypocritical people of Ris, who erect tombs to the prophets, and who adorn the monuments of the righteous, saying: If we Had it been in the time of our fathers, we would not have
"They were united with them to shed the blood of the prophets."

You? You would not have shed the blood of the righteous and the "Prophets," Christ continued. "Snakes! Brood of vipers!"
How will you escape judgment, the fire of Hell? For behold, I am going to send you prophets, wise men, doctors, and you will kill these, you will sacrifice-
You will flog those ones; you will whip the others in your synagogues.
gogues, and you will persecute them from town to town, finishing thus to fill up the measure of your fathers, so that all the innocent blood that has been shed on the earth falls back upon you, from the blood of righteous Abel to the blood of Zechariah son of Barachiah, whom you killed between the temple and the altar!

"Jerusalem, Jerusalem, who kills the prophets and stones"
Those who are sent to you, how often have I wished gather your children like a hen gathers hers little ones under its wings, and you didn't want it.

THE JEWS.

Thus he rallied against these deceitful men, against this plague of Judah, the sweet and merciful mouth of the Christ;
But although the Pharisees are the chosen ones of his wrath, his wrath does not fall exclusively on them alone;
They strike the Scribes every moment, that is to say the doctors of the nation, whatever their sect of belief, attachment. And yet it is still Christ who says to the crowd: "The Scribes and Pharisees are sitting on the Moses' chair, therefore, observe and do what they tell you "They say, but don't do what they do."

At the very moment when the attacks against the Pharisaic sect resounded... What do the thunderous pronouncements of Christ mean? Therefore, these words, which seem contradictory, and whose the goal is to open the ears of the people to those whom the Son of God himself has just struck with his bloodiest anathemes?

This enigma, Saint Augustine, the learned bishop, the transparent forth his luminous words and allows us to see them through the meaning; "Even the wicked, sitting in the chair of Moses was compelled to teach good doctrines*. Infallible when they exercised the legitimate authority of the Church, which was then called a synagogue, these doctors were not not at all impeccable; and, outside of this pulpit, they searched- They sought the interests of their pride; but not, their audacity did not could rise to the point of teaching the doctrine which was to them own, that is to say, the teaching of error their became an impossible thing: sua dicere non audent...

O eternal and all-too-unnoticed miracle! This pulpit which was that of Moses before it became the chair of Saint Peter, and which was, therefore, neither that of the Pharisees nor that of the Scribes, would have done violence to these doctors if they had revolted against orthodox doctrine. She would have, not overwhelmed their senses as well as the spirit of the ancient tripod

' S. Matthew, Evangelist, xxiii, 2-3.

* Bona dicere cogeantur. Of doctrine. Christ., iv, 27, S. Au-upset the senses of the PjThonisse', but she would have contrain k to bring forth from their mouths the words of justice and of truth. Thus Balaam's tongue strives to curse Israel

CHAPTER TWO. 27

Was she forced to bless him? For this pulpit, which, in their e.\act and profound definition, the centuries have named the pulpit of truth, shut the mouth of lies, and the intellect-agency, the error. Linked since the most distant patriarchs until Moses, and from Moses until the consumption of time, to the teachings and doctrines of Catholicism, She transmits to us the dictations of the Holy Spirit through language of the men who occupy it, however divine or impure that This language happens to exist on its own! But isn't it... more than a man, more than a mere Pharisee, oh, it's while we hear Christ speaking the language of the the most devastating truth, the one that saves peoples in opening their eyes. That is to say, we then see Jesus exercised in all the harshness of their rigor the acts of the great and supreme charity: a misunderstood work and hated in times of moral decline when triumph the principles of selfish and calamitous weakness which, under The hypocritical title of moderation only seeks to evade the issue. to avoid all perils and to win all votes.

But as we were saying earlier: war for war, and the language of the Gospel, far from being for the Jew ju()aĩ.sant Nowadays, even the word of truth is still only The lie of the legend. "The question of authenticity" The history of the life of Jesus, he tells us, should not, k To tell the truth, being subject to controversy is no more so than the authentic- the ticity of the myths that Virgil gives us about the origin of Rome. Every man with even a modicum of education who reads the Gospels Giles, without bias, acknowledges their legendary status*. That is why the name of Pharisee, which the pages condemn, is Evangelicals, this is by no means the name of the Jew

'See our book Magic in the Nineteenth Century, chapter seen: The oracular vapors, Delphi and other places.

*Arch. Israel., 1867, p. 207, no. V.

THE JEWS.

hypocritical devotee, whitewashed Sephardic liar, ambitious deceitful man – No! It's a liter of honor that should only be placed on the front of merit and virtue, for the modern Judaizer is the spiritual son of the Pharisees of Jesus' time; he He wants to believe in the virtue of his ancestors, he proclaims it with lavishly and boasts of it.

Also, Rabbi Lazard informs us that Mr. Trenel, the passionate admirer of the leader of the Pharisee doctrine–secular, energetically rejects "the unjust ruling that the Evangelicals Giles have spoken out against the Pharisees." This prince of pharisaism occupies in his eyes the very place that we Let us give to Jesus! Yes! Let all ears hear it! Hillel—that man whose name only the Jew on earth knows – "is destined to grow in public opinion. Its place is marked–enshrined in the Pantheon of illustrious men, benefactors of humanity. It is he, he alone, after the Torah and the prophets, who revealed to the world the law of love and brotherhood nity'. »

Do you hear it, people of this world and of this century! He alone, after the prophets, initiates us into the life of the heart. It is he, this man of whom it is likely our The pen teaches you about existence, it is none other, and on–All this is not Christ, who, far from Ik, the Jews, to–today, victors over Christian civilization, attach the eternal shame of having slandered the Pharisees, disciples of this great revealer of the law of love and brotherhood!

And if such are the Pharisees, it will undoubtedly matter to pause for a moment on some features of the phari–

I * P. 610, Arch. Israel, XIII, July 1, 1867. Hillel, the Elder, Jewish il–Muslre of Babylon, head of the Sanhedrin, lived more than a hundred years before Christ. Josephus calls him Pulhon. He zealously upheld the traditions oral arguments by the Jews against Shammal, his colleague, who wanted them to... adhered literally to the text of Scripture. This dispute was, according to Saint Jerome, the origin of the Scribes and the Pharisees. Hillel is perhaps the first author of the part of the Talmud which is called the Mishnah. What homage do the Pharisees, disciples of this, not owe him? Talmud, to which we will dedicate a chapter! I. The Torah is the law written.

modern secularism, that is to say, based on a few samples of feelings, science, and criticism of the Judaizing Jew Nowadays. Precious pieces that paint us by their own brush these men in the physiognomy of which we would refuse to see anything other than a flat and a hideous caricature, if the hand that draws them were anything other than a Jewish hand.

"Two things," the organ of the Liberal and progressive Judaism distinguishes Mr. Rabbinowicz, Doctor of Medicine from the Faculty of Paris. Pre-Firstly, he rehabilitates the Pharisees who had hitherto always and for all who are mistreated; secondly, he makes Jesus an action-purely political tator. – We have read the thesis of Mr. Rabbinowicz; the greatest good faith is manifested therein in a very clear way... The Israelite, animated by so many attacks How wonderfully rotten* ancestors, what respect for their traditions! It's easy to guess, but the man of truth is getting used to it. "to feel just as strongly." –j

Indeed, "the tolerance of the Pharisees towards Christians" "It was perfect," he told us, "and when hostility occurred, she was always "caused by miracles that the Israelites (let's say the Pharisees) considered themselves to be super-"darlings employed to seduce and mislead the people."

'P. H3-H4, Arch. israéliles, 1"' February 1867.

^ Ibid. Archives, p. US, n°VUL; l'Univers israélite, March 1867, p. 326. We call to witness this plearisal truth, between a multitude of assassinations, the first two of which were committed by the Pharisees; the legal assassination of Christ, and that of his first Martyr, Saint Stephen. Let's now talk about chapter 23 of the Gospel. of Saint Matthew, and we will arrive, following this path, at the drama the bloody affair of Father Thomas, the subject of one of our chapters.

3. These bloody hostilities were in the name of tolerance, a tolerance perfect? Weren't they the fierce expression of the resentment caused miracles such as the multiplication of the loaves, the resurrection of Lazare, the countless wonders that revealed both the divinity of the Christ and the dreams of the Pharisees? Many wise passages drawn The Gospels prove that Jesus never wanted to reform Judaism. nor alter any of the ceremonies practiced by the Pharisees, adds Mr. Rabbmowicz, and it remains to explain how we arrived at this Israelites, p. l ia, n" viii.

Digitized by Google

THE JEWS.

:i0

The author of the article from the Archives israélites that we Let us quote Mr. Pierre Mazerolle, who is described as a Christian by this Jewish leaf, and concludes his assessment with the lines following. "What Mr. Rabinowicz did, let us repeat, is courageous, and it was necessary. Like his fellow believers
They imitate him; we have a right to this honor, to this trust From them... It's particularly beautiful to see the model religious discussion given by a man belonging to a race which for so long was not granted than slander and insult.

For our part, we could not display this audaa profound admiration for a science that refutes itself even, and which discredits itself by the prodigy of its impubut we find it commendable that it highlights the deplorable and egregious weakness of the great doctors of Judaism, and the incurable feelings of hatred against the Christianity of their flock and their helpers. We Let us continue for a moment longer with simple quotations.
who turn them to our advantage and confirm the word of Christ;

As much in the pages of Messrs. Strauss and Renan, these two-Those who despise the divinity of Christ, "Jesus is raised to the height of the nineteenth-century ideal, as much,
The Israelite Graetz tells us that the people opposed to him (the (Jew) has remained the caricature made of him by his opponents.
pagans and Christians." But "it is not enough to have read Josephus, who wrote a Jewish history only for the use of the Romans, nor to know evangelical writers who lived a a period much later than that of Jesus, and which have, at moreover, written in a spirit manifestly hostile to Jews and Judaism*; nor is it enough to have gleaned some misunderstood phrases from Talmudic literature to paint an accurate picture of the feelings and ideas which

'Archives israélites, p. 117, 1 February 1867.

Hostile to the Jews, whom they tried to attract to them, and for whom Their master was dead?... Hostile to Pharisaism, be it...

CHAPTER TWO. 31

Jewish society was vibrant during the preceding century the destruction of the temple." No, and whoever wants to give His word, with some authority, must "be deeply versed" in contemporary Talmudic and Agadic literature of Jesus.

Thus, to be endowed with some science and knowledge ap- to value Judaism; to give some weight and some Credit k his word, that's the critical means that we impose- The Jews, disciples and admirers of the Pharisees, are aware of this: Turning our backs on the history written by the pagans, by the Evangelists, and by the Jewish historian Josephus, himself a Pharisee- even; to boast, to exalt without measure the traditions rahhi- niques, which Jesus attacks from one end of the Gospels to the other before the Jewish people, who never cease to acclaim him to the eternity The Pharisees' confusion; forgetting that Saint Paul, the the most ardent and implacable persecutor of Christians before his miraculous conversion, he was a disciple of the scholar Rabbi Gamaliel; finally forgetting that the learned and profound rabbis who abandoned the Pharisaic sect to convert to the truths of Christianity, had paled from their childhood on this sad literature of the Talmud'I

But wouldn't that really be asking the right person? What is the meaning of denying oneself? And since the miraculous confession- The regulation of the Jews is one of the most splendid demonstrations of the truth that history has transmitted to us about the Given the facts of Christianity, shouldn't we thank the Pharisees, with their unwavering perseverance, to trace pages that also bear strong witness against themselves than those where similar historical absurdities are found k the latter;

"The appearance of Jesus and his disciples made no mistake"

'Archives Israélites, K, March 1867, no. V, p. 205. Agada means the popular preaching, the study of the law.

We may be permitted to name, among the most learned, Rabbi Drach, who did us the honor of including one of our writings in his Harmony between the Church and the Synagogue, p. 446, vol. II, 1844, and of which we have so often heard in our conversations.

THE JEWS.

I

noise in Judea and Jeri/Salem; on the contrary, it is res-unnoticed, ignored, and all these stories that make it an event-considerable change in the eyes of the upper classes and of the people, are purified of inventions. However, thanks to our modern evangelists', we are now forced to dis-cut into the smallest details of a history of the Jews Gospel legends*. »/

We are examining these details, and, regarding the bloody actglant of Calvary, concerning the historical prodigies which, in the very instant when Christ expired, they shook the Holy city, 1 evangelist Saint Luke gives us the answer from one of the disciples of Emmaus to the traveler whom he did not recognized and who addresses this question to him; Why then Are you sad? – Sad? Really, “are you then the the only foreigner in Jerusalem who did not know what had just happened
 "What will happen there in these days?"

But since this Pharisee rejects the Gospel which
 If it withers, let us ourselves leave this sacred book aside. The history-
 The history of the most secular peoples is enough for us. Is it then that the life and death of Christ did not revolutionize the synagogue, Judea, Roman Empire, the Old World
 From one end to the other? This world which, persecuting, putting b the disciples of Jesus died, following the example of the Pharisees, coutrue to its arenas, before surrendering to Christ, of the blood of More than ten million martyrs! And this is in the face of the event the most authentic and considerable of the annals of 1 humanity; it was this fact that changed the face of world and forced the centuries to break their march, to to change under the date of a new era, which today stands then as now, the blind and paradoxical pride of the phari-
 Let us therefore beware of grieving if we see God's justice condemns the Pharisee of ancient times.

'Messrs. Strauss and Renan! whom we refer to the learned doctor aepp.

'Ib., p. 209, Archives israélites, 1867, n» V.

sunt in illa tiisdiebus? Luke, XXIV, 18. di

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TWO. 33

ancient k to relive, and to come to paint itself entirely under our eyes fixed on the prodigious illogic of his words, let us beware to be surprised if we see him, walking from one attack to the next attacks against history, displayed against the splendors of the Celtic truth, audacity which characterizes the modern Pharisee. The nineteenth century may perhaps forgive us for to associate with the slanderous language of Chriet, against these modes of candor and truthfulness that Judaism dares to rehabilitate to be translated today in these terms: "When one wants to know these worthy and austere representatives of sentiment and of Israelite thought, one might wish to refer to others information that those that were provided by enemies—unscrupulous men. Impartial history will rehabilitate them. in the minds of the people. Nowadays, fortunately, it "There's no longer a statute of limitations for lying..."

There is no longer a statute of limitations for lying, it is for—what the dial showed us the last hour of the pharisaism! That is why his funeral knell, tolled by the Jew himself deafens our ears; that is why the Jew feels compelled to finally break free from Talmudic traditions. He must get out, he has to get out, or he'll die before our eyes. covered in ignominy. And while he makes his retreat, I—for our part, we'll take a look at these monstrous collections, as soon as, at another glance, we have done acquaintance with the Pharisee doctor, with the rabbi, this leader of the synagogue and of contemporary Judaism.

One word, however, before moving on: these are therefore... What wretched people these Jews are! Oh! We will beware! It's good to affirm it! That is to say, we will refrain from 'The lie of Christ, of the unscrupulous enemy apostles, and the calumnies of historians of all peoples, refuted by the truth became Pharisaical! (See VUnivers Israélite, June 1867, p. 454) No. X; Mr. Wolfsson. This journal is that of Jewish orthodoxy in France, a bastard orthodoxy that should not be confused with that of the Jews from a multitude of other countries, nor even with Jewish orthodoxy daecular in France at the beginning of this century. For the immutable Judaism is collapsing; the stones of this edifice are changing shape and their appearance changes with each movement that displaces them.

THE JEWS.

to generalize our words, and to despise these men among which we will have to recognize more superiorities and virtues that our prejudices do not allow us to suppose. For we surpass them only by the merit of our law religious, and only in cases where the beliefs of Christianity truly governs our actions. That's what we... we cannot repeat too loudly that, for us, the Jew on whom the inexorable strikes and must strike—a remarkable turning point in history, this is not just any old thing. the lineage of Abraham: he is the man of the secular orthodoxie based on the Talmud; it is the believer steeped in Jewish hatreds that the philosophical miasmas of this century or that the gentle lights of Christianity have not not yet de-Judaized.

CONCLUSION.

Christ, the Evangelists, converts from Pharisaism, Josephus, the Pharisee and historian of the Jewish nation, addresses to the Pharisee and say to him envy: You are nothing but a proud man, a deceitful man, a hypocrite, the vilest of seducers, and the most shameless of liars.

The Pharisee, whom nothing in the world disconcerts, re-Turn to Christ and say to him: The synagogue does not see in you than a wicked man. The gallows has done you justice, and the sound of your torture, obscure villain, far from resounding from one end k the other of the world, could not awaken the attention of men neither in Jerusalem nor in Judea. Hillel, our revered founder, is the man of divine charity, and your Gospel-Lists were merely writers of legends. Your word, repeated—The testimony of the Apostles was nothing but fable, slander, and blasphemy.

The reader has in this chapter, he will have in the following ones with the evidence before him; to sit as judge; k him to absolve the Pharisee and crush Christ, to crush—to be the infamous one, if the Pharisee's word seems more reliable to him than that of the Gospel and of history.

CHAPTER THREE.

FIRST DIVISION. – THE RABBINS, THE GREAT SANHEDRIN, THE CONSISTORIES.

What is a rabbi? Is he a pastor, a priest, or...? said the Jew today? – He's a doctor, most often made of
of ignorance, and sometimes fulfilling rather peculiar functions.
tions. – He does nothing that a layman could not do in his place.
Rabbis practice a wide variety of professions; they can be butchers, shoemakers, retailers, etc. – Their education. – Elo-
ges <|he give each other the rabbis. – Cruel severity with which They are judged by the very organs of Judaism. – However the Jews, in order to give themselves the appearance of a serious cult, and to obtain-
The state's decree that this religion be salaried gives these rabbis the title of priests, pontiffs, pastors. – And these Jewish priests are
of secular institution; they owe their status as ministers of religion Jewish to Christian princes. – Phases of the legal authority of Rabbis in France. – Napoleon I used them for his recruitment.
military and its political police. – In short, the rabbi is nothing but a doctor; and the Talmud tells us that, since the dispersion, there is no more doctors in Israel I – Yet, in former times, the Moses of Judaism Talmudic law decreed death without trial against anyone who denied the tradition of the rabbis

"The Jews," Kluber, one of the school's leading figures, tells us philosophical publicists whose testimony cannot
To be suspected, the Jews form a politico-religious sect.
placed (in fact) under the rigorous theocratic deepotism of rabbis. Not only are the Jews closely united and con-jurors among themselves, from the point of view of certain religious dogmas, but they constitute a completely closed hereditary society for as regards ordinary life, usual commerce, and the education of the people, excluding all progress, and maintaining carefully cultivated among themselves the spirit of caste and family by the formal prohibition of any alliance with people of another religion*.

And in this Jewish society, almost every man, of-
Then Christ, is he a Pharisee, or a Talmudist, that is to say

1. Important note. We cannot recommend highly enough to the reader-the author refrains from judging any of the assertions contained in our chapters without bringing it closer to its date, which we, have the greatest care to give.

* Kluber, A Glimpse of the Diplomatic Deliberations of the Congress of

THE JEWS.

follower of the traditions that Jesus condemned and that main-the rabbis hold. Who then is among this people
 The rabbi's role is entirely Pharisaical; what is his character?
 – The rabbi, since the time of the dispersion, is what was formerly the Scribe, who however did not then belong to any special sect. 11 is the doctor of religious science.
 His fellow believers bestowed this title upon him, but there is no his person nothing of the priest, for the priesthood has disappeared from the middle of Judah since the dispersion of the people and h. con-Family fusion. No Jew today knows his genealogy—no one knows which tribe they belong to, no one is capable to prove that he descends from Levi, therefore, nothing.
 is not entitled to arrogate to himself either the title or the functions of priest ' ,

Error! Error! And you will hear it argued in Israel that The Jews still have their pontiffs, their patriarchs, their Priests! But no—no, please! he cries in the sixteenth century the bishop of Valtourre, do not go prostituting such titles and apply them to these impure Jews, to these vile people
 These scavengers, these tavern keepers, these traffickers, that no one Iniquity will never make us retreat*.

We are not offended by these terms, because a
 A pen of Jewish origin reproduces them nowadays, but few

Vienna, III, 390. Note that Kluber speaks of the very large majority the identity of the Jewish nation in a period subsequent to the Sanhedrin of 1807, and that, since that recent date, a huge religious revolution has taken place a process that is beginning to take place among Jews, and especially in France.

The priests can only be drawn from the tribe of Levi; and the Levites, although included in the priestly order, are not priests.
 by the sole fact that they are Levites. Bible, Numbers, 3:6–11, etc. Essay ftisf. on the Jews, vol. II, p. 71, ch. VI, anonymous; Lyon, 1771. "The
 The priest's lips are the repositories of knowledge, and it is from his mouth that one will seek knowledge of the law, because he is the angel of the Lord of hosts. » Bible, Malachi, 2:7.

negociatores, omni inicitate plenos, patriarchas aut sacerdotes dixeris Dies caniculares, Dn. Sim. Maioli Episcop. Vulturariensis, 1615, Maguntiae, t. III, p. 878. Id. Subst. Treatise on Police, 1. 1[^] p. 279, etc. Paris, 1705, in-f". Read id. Baronius, Annales ecclesiasticæ. We let us mention these two monumental and very different works of the other one.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER THREE. 37

almost in the same terms (see below)[^] and, as for the priesthood, one of the great preachers of France, the Father Felix, formerly made the pulpit of Our-Lady of Paris of the same truth. "Israel," he exclaimed, "is today "without religion, without a homeland, without priests, without priesthood, without altar and without sacrifice ' 1 »

So this is the one-spot religion that has become widowed of the unique temple where his God allowed him the great ceremonies of worship, and widowed at the same time from her priesthood; because in the entire crowd of his four million faithful, Not a single person could be found who could confirm his word if he dared to say: I am of the unique race from which the priests; I am one of the descendants of Levi 1 But hadn't one of the sacred books of the Bible told us... This point was made in this prophetic language: "A long time will be will pass during which Israel will be without a true God, without a priest who instructs him, and without law*. It is therefore quite natural that the Jewish people, wherever their swarms have descended, no longer have as a single temple anything but simple places of gathering and prayer; in place of law, only traditions foreign, of all divine origin; as priests, that unofficial consultants, or those accountable to the law of nations

'Archives isro«/itM, VIII, April 15, 1868, p. 353. And one of the organs Judaism's response was: "In the past, priests trained among us a separate caste; today the rabbi, or religious leader, enters into a pastoral career by free choice... > Ibid. X, t5 May 1868, p. 445. This supposed priest is therefore a figment of the imagination, a human construct, instituted contrary to the Bible and the Talmud, which we will see in this chapter.

This religion, said Mr. Chaix d'Estrange, rapporteur, in March 1868 to the Senate, a Jewish petition, "has nothing priestly about it;... the rabbins themselves are not priests, but doctors; and, since dispersion, science replaced the priesthood. » Ibid., V, p. 508-9. March 4, 1868. "One could not have said it better," add the same Ar-Jewish Churches, VI, 45 March 1868, p. 251,... on the condition of suppressing-

Why this truth from March, that "the rabbi is not a
"Is 'jirêtre' no longer, in May, anything but a discarded truth, rem-Placed by the opposite assertion? Patience!

* Bible, II Paralip., ch. xv, v. 3.

^ The Talmud. Relinquentes mandateum Dei, tenelis traditionem hominum. St. Mark, see, v. 8-9.

Digitized by Google

38

THE JEWS.

foreigners of an official title; in short, that 'rabbis, that is to say that doctors, of whom, except for a few rare
With exceptions, ignorance is prodigious*.

But let us hasten to produce evidence to support our words the very text of one of the notable members of the consistory from the city of Paris: "The rabbis are not, as the priests and pastors of the Christian denominations, the necessary ministers of our worship. The office of prayers at The process within our temples is not carried out through their organ. They are not the conflicting forces of our consciences. Their power-Seeing can do nothing for the salvation of our souls. Their functions priestly duties are limited to the celebration of marriage*; and their attributions, k the pronouncement, in the pulpit, of a very small number of prayers. They are doctors of the law, and pass to have a deep knowledge of the Talmud. They are canonically invested with the power to confer k a lay
"Any rabbinical diploma." But "this diploma" is compatible with all professions... and we comp-tons of rabbis among us at the bar, rabbis in shop, and rabbis who were traveling merchants. They did not possess-
They lack the elements of any useful science, and are ignorant of the Most of them, up to the use of the national language... Their attackfanatical fanatic of absurd practices, including time and Reason has done justice, which is a title to their consideration mutual and to the veneration of the Orthodox. Their presumption is as excessive as their ignorance is profound. If one invokes

'Second letter from a converted rabbi. 1817, Paris, pp. 366-7. Ibid., Harmony between the Church and the Synagogue, Examples and exceptions, vol. P'', p. 30, etc.

* That's an exaggeration, and we'll see that any secular person can celebrate them. Their functions include, for example, performing exorcisms. magical, like the sons of Sceva, Acts of the Apostles, xix, v. 13, etc.; to watch over women in childbirth, to defend them against the Diseases and the evil spells of the demon Lilit, etc., etc. Harmony between Church and Synagogue, vol. II, p. 320; Drach, Paris, 1811; or else to drawing talismans that must be worn or avakr, to cure a ma- lady, to obtain offspring, or to be delivered from demons 'Archives israélites, IV, February 15, 1868, p. 85. And these last their functions are those of our sorcerers, their imitators.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER THREE. .39

their insights on religious matters, they contrast the mysteries—if you press them, they cry out irreligion—if you If they insist, they get angry. They have the vanity of power, and the a will to intolerance*.

It would be all too easy, alas, if only the slightest movement were made. the annals of Hebrew worship, to multiply in the place rabbis, the traits where the filthy mingles with the absent; but it suffices for us, as an example, to borrow from 'saint Jerome, who lived in close proximity to the Israelite doctors, one of the examples that depicts the ancient degradation of these sad ministers.

"The Pharisees," this great doctor of the Church tells us, invented these traditions which they call deuteroses; and of com- They filled them with fables and fantasies! The plu- parts are so infamous that I cannot speak of them without blush; I wish, nevertheless, to report an example, in order to to cover these declared enemies with shame and confusion the religion of Christ. Therefore, know that the main and the The wisest members of the synagogue were obliged, by duty, to their task, horrible job! to taste the blood of a girl or of a woman who had her usual infirmities, in order to to judge by taste, when they could not do so by sight, whether that blood was pure or not.

Some Jewish journals, disagreeing with They themselves hold a completely different view of the rabbi. pledge. The improvement they report among these doctors, If we take it seriously, it is, in any case, of a very specific date. recent; but we readily admit it.

* Consistories in France, by Mr. Singer, member of the Consistory, rabbis regarding moral preaching in temples, he said Mr. Halévy, duties prescribed by the great Sanhedrin, are not reforms, or are so in an unfortunate way, because of the incompetence of the rabbis in general, due to their lack of knowledge and their habit of preaching in a jargon typical of the Middle Ages. » Summary of the history of the Mohammedans, p. 309. – Haliez, Des Juifs en France, p. 266, etc.

¹ S. Jerome, t. III, ch. xcvi, p. 22t. Letters, trans. Guill. Roussel, Benedictine order, Paris, 1707.

Digitized by Google

40

THE JEWS.

in the sense that, in the most civilized states of Europe, The members of the rabbinate would be honorable men. sometimes quite learned, and who generally have received vulgar education. A large number, in the centers of Christian civilization, therefore, speaks a language 'more or less Correct, which they only allow themselves at rare intervals the editors of the journals that recommend them. But the demagnification of this character so cruelly judged by the will his own, confer upon him the priestly character that the press Judaic has, for some years now, adopted the golden word— To attribute it to him? And his mouth, to be less barbaric, Will it become an organ of religious truth? Because nothing is not exaggerated in the words of the Right Honourable Mr. Singer, a great admirer of his nation's virtues, and we will have careful to retain his last word: "My dual quality of member for the erection of the temple and of the oversight committee launch and administration of consistorial schools, guarantees the accuracy of the information I produce

However, nearly thirty years after they were written, these words... dear to the lips that utter them, received from from a writer of Jewish descent a confirmation too blatant aunt so that we might hesitate to repeat ourselves in offering it to the public's reflections —, our public is so completely foreign to the history of these Jews whose hands They are shaping and already molding the future of our society!

This is particularly true in the area of their spiritual functions. such as the fact that the rabbis "are weak and harmful, because their office does not equal the importance of the holy ministry of priests Christians. It is not they who make the temples resound.

from the pulpit of sublime truths—they do not go into the families bring hope and consolation; they do not seek—They shed no tears for misery to help her, tears for the dry; they do not heal the wounds of the heart, the sick—

'Ibid., p. 7. 1820.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER THREE. 41

dies of the soul, they do not celebrate ineffable mysteries; They are not the confidants of wounded consciences; they have not received from Heaven the gift of forgiveness and mercy —, they are not obliged to blind devotion, nor to the chaste severe head—, they have not taken a vow of poverty. Now, we ask this in full awareness and in all truth; What power can a religion taught by Such ministers? Certainly, as long as the Israelites have for interpreters of their religion, their tanners, their peddlers—their dealers, their discounters, and even their usurers, because Many practice these noble and liberal professions, never They will not be up to the task. It is true. that, "already, we have among the rabbis enlightened men—true and worthy of their holy mission, but they diminish "Three or four of us!"

In France, and in some of the most civilized countries of Europe, the Jewish aristocracy applied itself to combat the ignorance of his ministers and his coreligionists res, of which she is rightly ashamed. Also, when her many efforts are crowned with some success*, is—It is customary to amplify the noise and entrust its repetition to resounding mouths of fame. Before open ears—Your audience, it is also quite simple that the style official spreads an aspect about people and things Significantly more beautiful than life. We are therefore far from to arm ourselves with rigor against the Chief Rabbi of Paris, Isidore, and to repel the flow of hyperboles that pours out his praiseful mouth for us. "I count," he exclaims with This Minister of Judaism emphasized active participation, loyal and affectionate to my colleagues in the rabbinate, including the institution is so great and whose zeal is always at the service of "Religion!"

'The Jews, their history, their authors, pp. 55–6–7, by A. Cerfberr' de Hedelsheim. Paris, 1847.

towards Israelite, September 1867, n» I, p. 14, etc.

3 Archives israélites, VII, April 1, 1867, p. 307.

Digitized by Google

4Î THE JEWS.

But what credit can we give to all the goodwill of the world?
does it allow us to agree with this language, when we hear one of the major organs of the Jewish nation to resound at Far from these words of desolation: "Within the assembly at which is entrusted with the supreme direction of religious affairs among his Israelites, the chief rabbi is the only one in the choice of which knowledge and respect for religion are taken into account in what-that consideration. As for his colleagues..., the so-social and educational aspects are the only ones considered; but,
as far as <f«any measure of knowledge re-religious, of a religious nature, of some religious fidelity grievance manifesting in life, not the slightest scruple
"This is evident in their choice!" The fate of the Israelite religion, the choice of his ministers is therefore "left to a maa brotherhood of men who do not possess your slightest knowledge of religion," which perhaps "are among the pre-First despisers of the Israelite religion and send back the

"A revelation in the realm of myth!" In one In short, "the culture and maintenance of religious science are lacking" throughout the vast empire!... ' »

These words, and this date, are they not, if we Let us fix our gaze upon the kingdoms of the West, a rea terrible revelation of the state of beliefs in Israel and of the general and profound ignorance of its religious leaders?
For, among all the Jews of this world, the Western Jew is incomparably the least ignorant I

However, these singularly chosen ministers, and the most of the time so deplorably foreign to science and to the religious customs of Judaism, the veils, if we in
We believe this organ of the Conservative Party of the Jewish religion,
They have now become not only doctors, but priests.
three, the pontiffs, the priesthood of the nation. For one affects in Israel, and we will know why, to designate them only by these sacred terms – for the word is given from all sides of to repeat this religious qualification at every opportunity, because we

* L'Univers israélite, n° II, October 1866, p. 74-76.

CHAPTER THREE. î) .

claims to instill in every volunteer listener that not only-
The Jewish nation follows the law of Moses, but it has its own clei^é, like ours: the reason why whoever-that which is not a rabbi is called lay, as we first Let's go see it. Each in this way contributes as best they can.
and, as naturally as could be, to give the impression of publishes. Let us therefore follow for a moment with our eyes this maneuver which executes together across the entire line.

"In our country," one of the zealous members of the ju- will exclaim, for example, daism, "a secular man, a man completely foreign to the con-theological births and Israelite life, could be placed with impunity before the ark of the Lord and make themselves heard

Heretical doctrines! And no one protested! What

Balaara, seeing what is happening in our country, would like to say again: How beautiful are your tents, O Jacob! And not Wouldn't he prefer to utter that sublime exclamation, "k l'as-" respect for Christian assemblies, even the least orthodox.
doxes!

Even this distinction between priest and layperson... beginning to prevail outside. Example; "While in In France, Jewish religious education is represented by a talc within the imperial council of public education-that, in a German town, k Nackel, the mu-
The national government is rising up against this same abuse and is using this language:
Jewish religious instruction is compulsory - but the chosen one, being secular, is in no way competent to represent the in-interests of the Jewish section of the school, and he asks for new-the government is calling on the rabbinate to join the committee teaching*.

Alongside these secularists, we no longer need to be surprised if the rabbi finds himself becoming a clergyman, a priest, and if the language is not orthodox, but self-serving, of the ju-Daism reproduces and causes to be reproduced in every way this 'Israelite Universe, journal of the conservative principles of Judaism,

No. 11, October 1867, p. 53.

* Univers israélite, no. VII, March 1867, p. 295.

THE JEWS.

Disappointing phraseology. This is how, in the kingdom of Prussia, "a royal decree published in the Staats-
The anzeiger of August 16th, expressed itself in these terms: The authorization-

The hereby gives the right to appoint ecclésiastiques.
Jews in the duchies of Schleswig-Holstein...' »

But let us listen again, and not be afraid to give to our quotations something of the insistence of those whose speech attaches itself to representing us as living a sa-Cerdoce, which perishes never to be reborn: - In Paris, resumes The Israelite universe, "we find ourselves in the presence of a it is done; we hope that our new sovereign
The pontiff will not forget that he is now the spiritual guide of all French Judaism, and no longer just that community of Paris, where he was able to tolerate things quite a lot unacceptable actions among our coreligionists in the departments, who are hardly as advanced and enlightened as Messrs. Cerf-Berr and Franck.

The same language comes out, even more so, from the mouths official; and, during the installation of the chief rabbi of the con-Central history of France, we hear from Colonel Cerfberr, president of this consistory, addressed a short address by this "new pontiff". Faithful to his regrettable As usual, he allows himself "a very illegitimate invasion of his part on the field of theology The exhibition of his catechism, from its theological program, has something singularly shocking, and those unfamiliar with the Jewish faith-secularists may "believe that the colonel is giving a lesson" of the Jewish religion to the first pastor of our faith, to the professors, to the seminary students, and to the entire rabbinate of France!

However, Chief Rabbi Isidore, impassive and full a sense of serenity before these hands that touch the censer, he peacefully closed the session with these words, in which he posed • Archives israélites, XIX, I, October <867, p. 908. Read ibid. U-Nivers israélite, II, October 1866, p. 76.

^ Israelite Universe, December 1866, p. 117.

CHAPTER THREE. i.'i as a successor to the high priests of Israel: "My brothers,

I am deeply moved as I take possession of this

Rabbinic law, exemplified by so many noble and pious pastors whose memory still lives on in all Israeli hearts your... ' "

And since these rabbis find themselves transformed into eccle-tiastics who go up into the pulpit and deliver sermons;
as priests, as sovereign pontiffs of kingdoms that perhaps a supreme pontiff will soon unite under his papal authority,
Do these pastors not harmonize their language?
with the titles they bestow upon one another, when they name the secular Israelites their sheep," and that they give to their Diocesan letters, the name "pastoral letters*"?

However, what these repetitions, which never tire of the the mouths of Israel have something to tell us, if we know how to understand them.
The thing is, if the Jews didn't have the art of giving credited this ingenious distinction between laymen and priests^ that is, if they did not create and walk in the midst of this audacious fiction, this deceptive phantom of the sa-Cerdoce, they would lose prestige in the eyes of the people to have a religion, this good, this priceless treasure which for so many centuries has perished in their hands; they would lose Furthermore, before the budget, the right to have to present oneself to collect the fees and expenses of a religious service which, without a religion and a truly priestly ministry, could not to be nothing more than a ridiculous and deceitful parody.

Let us remember, therefore, so as not to forget: these pontiffs do not are nothing less than pontiffs; these priests are not prvery much for the sake of appearances, to create an illusion for the people Christians who pay them; their religious authority is nonexistent;
and this truth, which we had to make tangible, escapes constantly from the lips of Israel. The intrepid advocate of the cause

'Univers Israélite, VIII, April 1867, p. 344-5.

* Israelite Archives, IX, !•'' May 1867, p. 389. Ib.
p. 435. — XXI, November 1, 1867, p. 963. Israelite Universe, reads, November 1867, p. 103, etc., etc.

THE JEWS.

Jewish, and one of the notables of that nation, Mr. Bédarride he himself will tell us, therefore, with a simplicity that is too simple—He lacks wind;

"The rabbis derive no authority from the Law of Moses" on their coreligionists; this title, known only to—
 Then the dispersal, which is merely a mark of deference given to doctors of the law who distinguish themselves by their merit. They have no ;u«dtcr«on,— only one addresses to They did so voluntarily, as if versed in the law.

"That if, in certain states, the laws have given some force under the jurisdiction of the rabbis, their authority then derives "Civil law, not religious law!"

In short, only the infidel peoples established the rights of These pastors of Israel, and the source of the rabbinic priesthood is a Christian source!

We will acknowledge, however, that in countries where the
 the old Talmudic cult has retained its vigor —, that in the places where, despite the absence of the priesthood and the temple, the re-Religion fosters a sense of the necessity of sacrifice, the rabbi exercises his authority even in the most daunting circumstances tables, and although without legitimate authority, some of the the priest's duties. He revives around him the idea of sacrifice—he is the priest—or, if his hand does not direct
 The sacred knife, still pointed at the victim's throat,
 It is he, at least, who seizes and keeps the vessel where the blood has sunk; it is he who holds the blood, that part of the victim that the sacrificers must assimilate through eating.
 And, in a moment, we will see even in the last examples whose authenticity we will submit to the reader, the khakhams, that is to say the rabbis of Damascus, during the religious ammunition of Father Thomas and his servant by the Jews, to seize each time the collected blood, and the keep carefully until it is mixed with the bread which it was supposed to be circulated among the faithful:

"Sons of Judah, why then did you kill this religious man?"

'The Jews in France, in Italy, etc., p. 430, 2nd edition 4861, Paris.

CHAPTER THREE. 47

Your friend, 'that man everyone loved?' – For the blood, because we needed it for the celebration of our worship. – And why did the blood not remain in your brother's house? – Because blood must to stay with the khakhams', that is to say with the rabbis.

However, not only are the rabbis not of divine institution, but converted into instruments of order civil and political, these unfaithful successors of the Fathers of The Talmud, that is to say the Fathers of the Israelite Church, are k penalty, as we have just stated, of institution Jewish. Oh, the height of humiliation! Each prince shapes and limit k more or less k at will their power in each of the nations that deign to open their hearts or offer asylum to scattered from Israel!

In the past, the necessity in which several states found themselves Europe to give the Israelites judges who could to pronounce in contentious cases where Hebrew laws were invoked, had given rise to the temporary authority the rabbis' real. Letters from May 21, 1681 constituted (in France) this authority. The rabbis became, in ma-judges of religion, police, and civil law Israelites. Their sentences, in order to be executed, had not need only for the sanction of the ordinary judge; however, the recourse by the parties was optional under this authority.' After Having fulfilled the functions of notaries, the rabbis tried to extend their powers; but a decree of May 12, 1754, and the letters patent of July 10, 1784, suppressed their claims, and restricted their power; then came the Revolution, which put an end to this temporal power.

But the grand master of the Revolution, the conqueror who who fed her, who punished her and bent her to his ends, felt

'Syrian Affairs, pp. 43, 44, 379, etc., A. Laurent. Procedure complete; read all of volume II. See below under the question of Sacrifices Jewish.

* Consist.j Singer, member of the consist., p. 31. Repertory of jurisprudence Prudence, Merlin, art. Rabbis. Cerfberr, the Jews, p. fiS.

* Cerfljerr, ibid.

He strongly emphasized the need to reconstitute this power. He remelted it down from scratch, and adapted it especially to this unsatisfiable need for men that consumption made him feel-limitless mation of its battlefields. We take-drons as an example of his despotism, accepted by Israel, with gratitude, the settlement of the assembly of Israelites of May 30, 1806, where it is decreed that the functions Rabbis are: "1. To teach religion. – 2. To en-to teach at the same time the doctrine contained in the decisions ions of the great Sanhedrin. – 3" To recall, in all circumstances stances, obedience to the laws, in particular and especially those which are related to the defense of the homeland, but of the to urge even more specifically, every year, at the time OF CONSCRIPTION, from the first call of authority, until the law is fully implemented. – 4° To make con-to impose military service on the Israelites as a duty SACRED, and to declare to them that, during the time they will deliver this service, the law exempts them from the observances which do not seem to reconcile themselves with him. – 5" To preach in the synagogues, and to recite the prayers that are said there in common for the Emperor and the imperial family. 6. To celebrate marriages and declare divorces, without them being able, under any circumstances, to proceed except by the par-The applicants have not provided them with adequate and duly justified the civil act of marriage or divorce, etc., etc. *. »

Certainly, these religious injunctions and dispensations accepted by the Jews from the hand of a Christian power, This is what strikes us with astonishment, and what paints us in a... rather vivid colors, the decline of doctrines and Doctors of the Talmud I This places it in a day when it is It is impossible not to grasp it, this de-figured specter of the priest-doce or Judaic doctorate The picture remains incomplete However, and to complete it we must follow from the eye, the features traced by a rabbi whose knowledge and his

* Consistories, the Israelite Singer, member of the consistory, i6. ,

p. 15,

Digitized by Google

cited (the Talmudic tradition.

"I must," the illustrious Drach tells us, "rectify this error so common among people who are not Jewish, to know that rabbis are the priests of the Jews. These men only have the direction of the conscience of those who want It is important to contact them in serious cases; for example, when misfortune decreed that a spoon intended for the lean fell into a pot used for cooking fat*, or if, by mistake, we touched or snuffed the candle on the holy day of the Sabbath, etc., etc.'"

"The synagogue service, which consists of intoning the prayers and hymns, and reading the Pentateuch, the care of distribute public alms, monitor education of youth, to assist the dying, to preside over the en-burials and the ceremonies that accompany them, etc. are generally reserved for laypeople; and when the rabbins take care of it, it's just like private individuals. As for the For a marriage, the rabbi only blesses it, something that can be done and that every Israelite does, and which, moreover, is by no means essential to contracting this bond!... It is the spouse who pro-The nunciates the sacramental words, offering the bride a an object of some value. By accepting it, Without even uttering a word, she becomes his lawful wife. The rabbi's presence is so unnecessary that if this ceremony took place in the presence of two ordinary Israelites If so, the marriage would be valid*. Preaching the word of God, and on matters of simple morality, most rabbis They have no idea! The sermons they deliver, by the way... Their very rarely, they are merely Talmudic dissertations.

'Blind drivers, who take care to pass what you drink-
"You, for fear of swallowing a gnat, and who swallow a camel!"
S. Matthew, Evang. , xxiii, 24. Exculantes culicem, camelum autem glutientes. And what has become in Israel since that time (t8i5) of the ob-Sabbath observance?

See Talmud, tractate Kiddushin, fol. t and following, Matmonidesoii Joseph Karo.

4

Digitized by Google

50

LKS JEWS.

(liqiies, which most of their listeners don't understand Nothing. These essays are sometimes interspersed with scoldings (thohhabhaha) and jokes (halatztot), of which I will provide samples.'

No, a thousand times no, the rabbi is nothing less than priest, nothing less than pontiff, and the Jewish nation "does not possess no longer any kind of priesthood. The priestly caste is there.
unknown since, admirably! the confusion of our
The tribes were represented following the last ordered census.
by Caesar Augustus, and from which results the authentic establishment-the genealogy of Our Lord*. It is true that "the rabbis of our day call themselves doctors of the law;
but they should remember that their decisions are not binding Not at all the conscience of the Jews! As it was not the same thing, the refusal to submit to teaching of religious authority carried the death penalty^^ because there
It then had a temple, sacrifices, priests; it existed a priestly authority and divinely instituted authority! Furthermore,
"The Talmud states explicitly that, since the dispersion, he there are no more doctors in Israel^^ and that the authority of the Sanhedrin-
The Sanhedrin of Jerusalem ceased forty years before the ruin of the temple, that is to say precisely the time of the passion of Our Lord. The Consummation is pronounced from the lips of the
The cross by the Arbiter of the world was therefore the decree of the eternal Dissolution of this famous body®!

No, really, some phantom of doctoral authority that the first Empire allowed Jews to evoke, "it there is no authority today in the Jewish nation that can set the limit, separating what is obligatory in the Law of Moses and in the traditions, of what has ceased

'Pud., first letter of the rabbi, p. 69. Paris, 1825.

^ Ibid., second letter, p. 292. Paris, 1827.

^ Deuler., xvii, 12. Talmud, tractate Sanhedrin, fol. 26 n », fol.
27 r, etc.

* Talmud, tractate Sanhedrin, fol. 13v, fol. 14r; Ghaboda-Zara, fol. 8 V", etc. Second letter, p. 292-3.

8 Ibid., p. 293.

Digitized by Google

of being with the destruction of the State; an authority whose the decisions may calm consciences and re-
"To resolve the scruples of timid men."

EnGn, whatever the rabbinate, the synagogue, of which he
It is important to make known the ancient spirit, it had everything Time strictly prohibited individual explanation of the word of God," that is to say, Protestantism which perce and which, for the past few years, has suddenly manifested among the sons of Jacob. Inflexible in this place,
"The Sanhedrin punished with death any doctor who did not remember-did not submit to the decisions of the teaching authority"; and replacing authority with audacity and law with despotism religious ism / the fanatical and bloodthirsty Maimonides had wanted the "first of the faithful to come and put to death," and even in the current state of dispersion, "the Jew who denied tradition rabbis." 11 For this, he said, "neither witness, neither prior admonition nor judges-but whoever does this
"The execution has the merit of a good deed; it has removed the scandal."
As swift and formidable as the inquisition of the courts
The occult practices of high-level Freemasonry were therefore the subject of the Inquisition Jewish watchful k Tunilé of faith*.

But everything has changed, everything changes, and nothing is more to us than this.
It is easy to follow these revolutions; for behold, placed at our hand and before the eyes of the public, the Pharisee rabbi, that is to say, the rabbi, guide and religious leader of the Jewish nation; here it is, up to the days of the First Empire. and to the very delk of that era. The quotations from which we we took care to strengthen our text, which is defying them on its own.
every opponent, and we represent him as he is-against everywhere the Talmud is your religious law as a Jew. But the position of this quasi-civil servant with a doctoral degree and priestly pretensions change at the moment when fortune

'Letter to an advisor to the King of Saxony, by Baron de S. de S. Paris, 4817, chez de Bure. Ib., second letter, p. 29i.

Veén (sarihh lo guèdùn halria bicycle, daljanim bicycle, etc. Treatise on rebel doctors, c. iii, p. 52. Ibid. second letter, p. 332.

i.

Digitized by Google

Imperial power begins to dominate the peoples of Europe.
Let's take a second look, a closer look.
based on the new form that the hand of the formidable dominant prints in France to the religious organization of the Jewish people opening their minds to reforms.

FINAL NOTES.

FIRST NOTE.

"The French rabbinate is not reformist," said the chief rabbi.
Isidore. He has managed to protect himself from these unhealthy temptations to this day.
which have produced disunity, division, and schism elsewhere.
P. 975. "But if the dogma is invariable, the same cannot be said of the of worship. • Israelite Archives, XXI, p. 976, f" November <867.

Who would have dared to speak before Israel of reference to worship at the commandment of beginning of this century, without fearing the anger of his listeners...? But,
For some years now, the reform, the Protestantism pushed to its limits final limits, is everywhere in Israel, and is introduced not only in the newspaper of progress, the Archives, but even in the newspaper conservative, the Israelite Universe, which we hear itself groaning of this destructive evil.

We have often shown our readers the distressing spectacle that the reformist and schismatic work in Germany. Here again a new and very sad example, given (by certain rabbis from beyond) Rhine, from their wanderings and the forgetting of all duties, of all the conventions... » Israelite Universe, IV, p. <5<, December <866.

Follows I, enumerating the given scandal; then: > It is sad to see a rabbi, a doctor of the law, a guardian of the commandments di-wines, leading such a life, setting such examples for the community, such a scandal would have affected an entire country, and such a confession would have been in the court of justice, before Israel and before the nations

And let us not reproduce this old thesis, long since con-damned by experience, namely that one only wants to bring what-"These changes in public worship..." because "here is a new..."
proof that this thought, even inspired by the best faith of world, contains dangerous illusions." This proof follows... laughing, ibid.

SECOND NOTE.

The government of <830 gave the Synagogue an impetus which did not stop. One of its first acies, the 8th greyhound <83<, was religious practices, and to assign them a treatment based on public funds. That innovation created a kind of Israelite clergy from a legal point of view; But, in the eyes of religion, rabbis have never been and will never be allowed to be... could be ministers of the Old Testament... The rabbis, including The name means masters, or tutors, who were merely scribes. or those less versed in the law, or those versed in the Talmud, who taught commentaries on religion; later, they received— pay a modest salary from the Synagogue for making decisions on the dubious cases of Talmudic morality. Such were their attributions, and they had never presented themselves as shepherds or ministers of their religion <.

CHAPTER THREE. 83

"The current institution of rabbis as ministers of their religion does not date from the year 1808; it is due to the Jewish deputies, who, shameful to proclaim in front of France the nullity and uselessness of Rabbinic functions attributed to the rabbis of that time a certain character fictitious and contradictory to the formal law of the Old Testament*.

The royal decree of 1831 sanctioned this singular anomaly, by endowing the Synagogue with an impossible priesthood. But, in fact, the rabbis, transformed into priests by civil law, and although salaried and ridiculed by the State, they remained without authority among the Jews, and they saw themselves subjected to the sarcasm of both friends and enemies. We had expected that the creation of the rabbinate would give some life to the Synagogue expiring; changes were expected in the ceremonies, more changes in the offices, progress in interpretations; some wanted reforms, the others opposed them; all claimed to govern religious affairs by various means. But the rabbis, vested with an illusory power, incapable moreover of supporting to nip the rattle that had been assigned to them, and perfectly content with their sort, offered only forced inertia in response to the discordant demands of their coreligionists"

The esteem in which the consistories themselves hold the rabbis is measured by This fact, that in the composition of the consistorial body they eliminate them as much as possible

'One can read in the June 1846 issue of the Archives israélites an interesting Note on fraudulent rabbinism.

'Read the Bible, Dark, lit, v. 10.

'The Jewish Question, by Father Balisbonne, converted Israelite, pp. 9, 10, II. Paria, 1868, 31 pages in-8*.

</W., p. ».

END OF DBS NOTES.

Digitized by Google

If THE JEWS.

DEEIIÈHE DIVISION.

The great Jewish assembly of <806, the great Sanhedrin of 4807, which is a false Sanhedrin. Judaic Concordat, Iaus.«anl has the times! The law of Moses and the Talmud. – False statement of this as-seemed. – What the real Sanhedrin was. – A word from Mr. de Bonald on the Jews.

To subjugate his destructive power, to his creative will, the often most disparate elements, and force if necessary nature's tendency to associate them was one of Napoleon's habits. "Leo I", a genius under whose hand the [unclear] felt tamed Revolution, his mother. Now, one of his wishes was the i/ni- the formation of the peoples from which he claimed to compose his empire, and first the assimilation made to its advantage of the elements social structures that existed in old France. We therefore saw it. to stop one fine day wanting the French population set about assimilating the Jewish population!

To frankly elevate the Jew to the rank of French citizen to grant him the full enjoyment of civic rights, and 'to thus conclude the work of the National Assembly', that was to fulfill the most ardent wishes of Israel. May 30, 1806, a large and toll assembly of all the Jews of the France and Italy, united for the time being, had therefore Paris was their headquarters, and its members underwent interrogation. whose aim was to facilitate the benevolent intentions of conqueror k the place of the Jews. Qiielques-iinesdesréponses The results obtained will tell us what the most important questions were. important questions posed by Messrs. Molé, Portalis fils and Pasquier, government commissioners.

"The religion of the Israelites," replied the Jewish delegates, – and let us remember these terms well, for our pages will make full use of them soon all the audacity*, – this religion "commands them to regard the law of the prince as the supreme law in matters civil and political: Jews are required to watch the

'September 28, November 34, 4794.

CHAPTER THREE. 66

French like their brothers, and their first duty is to exercise towards your Christians acts of charity; for between Jews and For Christians, there is no difference in this respect. relations that your Jewish law permits with Christians are and the same as those with the Jews – we admit no other The difference is that of worshipping the Supreme Being, each in their own way. nière; and, opposite the other, charity makes a duty to sometimes lend without interest to the one who is in the need... In this regard, said the Jewish lawyer Rêdarride, The assembly refuted your unjust accusations against the Jews, He wisely interpreted your law of Moses, which rejects, by her spirit and by her words, the prejudices of which she was the object. The Jewish religion was thus vigorously avenged; and Celtic ancient belief, persecuted as intolerant and Antisocial behavior, finally revealing its true nature; persecution thus lost all excuse.'

However, "the members of the assembly had developed– They had adopted the principles of their religion: but nothing confirmed that what they had observed was something other than the expression of their personal convictions. It was necessary to give their opinion "Nim, a doctrinal force that they lacked." El de celte necessity arose "the thought of convening a great Sanhedrin– drin, that is to say, an assembly of doctors of your law, ressus– citing, in a way, this former power whose rulings "These supreme acts were regarded in Jerusalem as laws."

Converted into decisions, the responses of the first the assembly "could be placed next to the Talmud, and thus acquiring in the eyes of Jews of all countries and of all "The greatest possible authority for centuries*." The great Sanlié–

* Ih Bêdarride, p. 403–4–6. Let us observe the perpetual need of the Jews to confuse their religion with the law of Mofse. The rabbis themselves will teach us all the differences between the two; and Mr. Rêdarride was the first to tell us, pointing it out to us, some Lines below, the Talmud, which destroys Morse's law, since it differs from it... essentially, and that which he holds among the Jews has the greatest authority."

^ Authority that is completely insufficient and derisory, since, "since "The Talmud, there are no more doctors in Israel," and that "the decisions Rabbis, who call themselves doctors of the law, do not in any way bind the

the Jews.

driiii, this body that fell with the tetnple, will therefore reappear for to enlighten the people he governed.

Thus speaks the Israelite lawyer Bédarride. May his word sound gives us a reason to evoke for a moment the spectrum of the Mosaic Sanhedrin, so that at first glance the The first person to come along recognizes him and distinguishes him from the Sanhedrin of ûls of the Talmud, that is to say of the Sanhedrin of modern invention.

One day, bending under the burden, Moses cried out, despite the valor of his courage: "Lord, I cannot, alone, to support all these people. – Very well, the Lord replied; assemble for me seventy men whom you know to be the The elders and the rulers of the people, you shall lead them to the gate from the tabernacle of the covenant, and you shall have them remain with you. I will come down and speak to you; I will take some of the spirit that is in the law, and I will put it in them, so that they may bear with you the "This is the burden of the people, and may you not bear it alone."* The seventy men were assembled; the Lord descended in the cloud, took some of the spirit that was in Moses and he gave some to the seventy elders; and, when the spirit had relying on them, they prophesied. – Such is the biblical account. that: "The seventy chosen by Moses, in this great number of magistrates he had appointed according to the council of Jethro and with the consent of the people, are therefore instituted killed in a divine manner his collaborators in the government They lie, and become the perpetual senate of the nation. God communicates to them by this something about these gifts. natural beings that he had gathered together in Moses, and which are designated under the generic name of prophecy*.

Already this august tribunal had lost its luster and de-conscience; » see above, in this chapter. By what right, finally, a sahnhedrin composed of a few rabbis from only two kingdoms where the Jews are quite rare, and operate under the influence of a prince, a Christian swordsman, is he called the great Sanhedrin and would he engage-he" the Jews of the whole world

' Ib. Bédarride, p. 405 to 408.

® Bible. And there is no doubt about your spirit, it is tradamque, etc. Num. xi, V. 11, etc.

3 Rohrbacher, Hist. de l'Église, t. I, p. 449–450, ed. 1850. Paris.

He bowed down when King Jehoshaphat took it into his heart to restore him. It was therefore composed, according to the wishes of the law, of spiritual senators, rituals and temporal senators; the former were priests and Levites, the latter were heads of families. All civil and religious matters were governed by the following rule of judgment the law of God, interpreted by the Levites and the priests. It was, in essence, the council of elders and senators-tors as it existed under Moses. Jehoshaphat, says the text sacred, "established in Jerusalem Levites, priests and heads of families Whether it concerns family interests, questions concerning the law, commandments, and ceremonial-"Teach your brothers, or precepts, what you have learned," he told them. which conforms to the law, lest they sin against the Lord, do not let his wrath fall upon you and your brothers. Let Ananias, your high priest, preside over matters concerning God, and Zabadie, head of the house of Judah, in matters which concern the king. You have among you the Levites who "They will serve as your doctors and teachers."

The priestly element, therefore, is one of the essential elements of the Jewish Sanhedrin, this council upon which God spreads dait, according to his word, his special and supernatural graces. However, in the composition of the Talmudic Sanhedrin, the priest-doce has necessarily faded away, since it has disappeared from the breast of the entire nation; since no one today could tell us with certainty about a single Israelite: This man is from the tribe of Levi. The rabbi we see depicted there He has, from head to toe, nothing of the priest about him; and, even better, while the Talmud tells us that there is no longer any in Israel French law informs us that, as a licensed doctor, the The rabbi derives his title solely from a Christian authority; the The word of this false priest, we know moreover, has no value that under the roof of good people among whom lasts the fantasy of submitting their conscience to the poverty of his science!

k

'Magistros. II Paralip., xix, v. 8-10, etc.

See the authorities above, same chapter.

Digitized by Cj00gl

THE JEWS.

A prince who knows he is a stranger by blood, a stranger-ger of faith, that is to say, a being supremely impure to In the eyes of the Talmudic scholars, the rabbis are what they are. And these same rabbis, scornful of the law of Moses if they These men of the Talmud, the veiled ones who have become orthodox, are orthodox. the nerve, the virtue, the crown of the modern Sanhedrin, which will say the custodian of the spirit of Moses '!!!

But let Mr. Bédarride himself tell us what The Sanhedrin was thus reconstituted – for it was a matter of judging – core according to Talmudic doctrines, – h the authority of- which ones claim to equal the decisions of this great council, – the faithful and the doctors who count quite strongly on our ignorance of their laws and religious customs gious so as not to fear giving themselves to the faith as the men of the Talmud and like the men of the law mosaic*.

The assembly, led by Napoleon's arm, decided that he would be sent to all the synagogues of the French Empire, from the Kingdom of Italy and Europe, a circular announcing the opening of the great Sanhedrin; "that the rabbis, members of the assembly (of 1806) would be invited to to be part of it, that twenty-five deputies of this assembly in would also be part of it; that orders would be given to that twenty-nine rabbis, chosen from the synagogues of the Em-

'The following lines were probably written under an influence rabbiuuue, they nonetheless confirm the necessity of the element doctoral and priestly functions in the Sanhedrin: "All that can be said The most likely explanation is that, since the Maccabees, he had for- among the Jews a kind of council or Senate, composed of high priest, doctors of the law, and notables of the nation, to the- who reported important matters and who judged them; but This senate had neither the form nor the authority that the rabbis attribute to it. They claim that the king could not be there, because he is not per- ordered to argue against him, and that the high priest not enter in this council only when his merit led to his election. However, there It was not apparent that the heads of the Church and the State were there. "No session, if this tribunal had been real." Pp. 70-71. Bist. des Juifs, supplement to Josephus, t. Y.

We do not attack the Sanhedrin nor those of the honorable members which composed it, nor the authority of the laws of the State which were its re- result!

worse and from the kingdom and Italy, could go to Paris; that a
A nine-member commission would be formed to prepare with the government commissioners the matters to be submitted to the Great Sanhedrin; finally, that the Asit seemed that it would not separate before the great Sanhedrin would have closed its sessions"

"The Jews seem to have been thrown into the midst of the nations"
to mark, through their vicissitudes, the progress of reason human. What immense progress must have been made in France so that one could see resurrected within its bosom with all its pomp the most respectable assembly of the year-Jerusalem, the one whose supreme decrees were "Regarded as laws!" The Sanhedrin's declaration
"no longer left any pretext for malice" to suppose that the law of Moses prevented the Jews from enjoying the benefits of laws. The most imposing assembly for the Israelites, she who, as she herself declares, had the only qualification to interpret the law of Moses and establish the con-
The resulting sequences determined which part was the which of these laws was mandatory, what was that which had ceased to be so.' And this (religious) assembly enshrined this principle: "That the Jews owed above all obedience to the laws of the state. In short, the Sanhedrin observed-
This fact was concealed, that the Israelites, called to become citizens, had to shrink from none of the duties that this qua-
"This imposed on them*." That is why "the decisions of the

'Hédarride, ibid., p. 409.

Religious sanctions, it must be repeated with our Jewish authorities, data provided by doctors who have no other right than that which they hold-
The result of a foreign and Christian power! See above.

^ Once again, no, the law of Moses is not the law of the Jews.
Let the Sanh Drin adopt it as law, fine; but then it ceases to be elected Orthodox, he rejects the Talmud, becomes a Karaite, and is no longer much that an object of horror for the vast majority of Jews, for the Jews tatmudisanls or rabbinical.

♦ This would be the place, says the illustrious Itrach, to make known the intolerant and inhumane maxims that the rabbis profess regarding converted JMFs, Christians, etc... That is to say, to govern by formal texts attest to the falsity of the 4th decision of the Sanhedrin of 4807, without

THE JEWS.

The Sanhedrin were received with respect by all the synagogues
 "Gues of France, etc., etc.... '."

But the Emperor was too serious a man to to pay, beyond what he deemed necessary for his policy, of these magnificent declarations which, before the lure of a temporal interest, put the doctors and delegates of the Jewish people in open war with the ancient doctrines of their religion. "It was therefore created by the government, – to the great mortification of the Jews – a regime of exception contrasting with the legitimate expectations that it was permitted to conceive following the solemn act that had just taken place complete...'. But this regrettable act, says Mr. Bédarride, don't must not weaken the tribute of gratitude that the Jews owe to the Imperial Government," because the Emperor com-almost entirely completed the work of their emancipation.
 Another decree of March 17, 1808, further organized the Israelite worship, and created the consistories.

prejudice to what I might have to say regarding his other decisions.
 Ibid., second letter, p. 300, <817.

'Bi'darride, Ib., p. 414, etc.

* Bédarride, ibid., p. 417.

FINAL NOTE.

A word from Mr. de Bonald, the illustrious author of the Primitive Legislation
 The argument, concerning the danger of increasing Jewish influence, must find its answer in Place: < For quite some time the Jews have been the object of benevolence philosophers and the attention of governments. In this diverse feelings include philanthropy, indifference to all religions, and perhaps also a bit of old hatred against Christianity nism, for whom the state of the Jews is proof that one would like to do disappear.

"When I say that the Jews are the object of the benevolence of the philoof the philosophers, we must except the head of the eighteenth-century philosophical school thirtieth century. Voltaire, who throughout his life displayed a determined aversion against this unfortunate people.

- <i Until the time of the Constituent Assembly, the Jews had enjoyed in France the general faculties of which civilized governments

CHAPTER THREE. 61

with the religion and customs of a people at open war with the religion and the customs of all peoples.

Jews were protected in France, both personally and in terms of their rights. their possessions, like the natives, like the foreigners, like the The Swiss, less foreign to France than the Jews; and, outside of service military that the Jews were not jealous of sharing, and which, even For the Swiss, it was rather a condition imposed on the Swiss nation. I don't see any trick by treaties that a favor granted to individuals is a favor. not only the Swiss, who were neither magistrates nor administrators in France trateuia, neither ecclesiastical nor even, in fact, owners, enjoy- "They have, by virtue of the laws, far more rights than the Jews." (Vol. 11) p. i53.

"There is no doubt that if the Jews had been as ambitious in the In other provinces, as they were in Alsace, the friends of the Jews would not have had to reproach themselves, like the friends of the blacks, for the haste with which they called for freedom, which was then domination, a a people always foreign even where they are established, and who also had to be to avenge the unforgivable offense of a long proscription. I do not draw a parallel not the people, but I compare the passions; and greed, which Attempting to steal from another's property by means of trickery is sister to ferocity that takes life through violence. The Jews, if they had been spread throughout France, united among themselves like those who suffer for the same cause, and in league with foreign Jews, to- would have used their wealth to acquire great influence in the popular elections, and would have used their influence to acquire new riches. » Pp. 148, 249, 151 to 156, De Ronald, Uélanr- ges, t. II; Paris, 1819, in-8"; etc. XI of the Works.

Mr. de Ronald was reading the future. – And what will happen the day when the Jews will be more eager to dominate and seize power Is it more about civil and political enrichment than about enriching oneself? Such power v In such hands, such a formidable source of wealth! > See more Down with the CBAP. On the Jews in Romania.

FIN DB LA NOTK.

THE JEWS.

THIRD DIVISION. – THE CONSISTORIES.

Artificial organization, ready for radical disorganization. – Political and police foundations of the consistories and rabbis. Napoleon I, a new Moses in the eyes of the Jews*, and their intoxication. Alliolic organization of the rabbis. – The Jews l('galem<'nl r.ousli-kills in can the distinct by the very law that orthend the merge. – Cruel sizing of the cnn isioir. s, made by the hand of the Jmfs. – This religious institution places the laity, that is to say the flock, to the direction of the pontiffs or the so-called priesthood of Judah. Grievances. – Fruit of these grievances; scandals. – “The repertoire of Judah turned into a club.” – The Christian government of the France has become the regulator of the worship of Israel. – A minister and a General denigrating the Synagogue. – Conclusion.

It was therefore ordered, by a decree of 17 Mar 1808, As mentioned on our last page, a synagogue and a consistories would be established in each department where the the Jewish population would reach the number of two thousand individuals dus-, that a chief rabbi would sit at the head of each synagogue-consistorial gogue;' that the consistories would ensure k em-to catch the rabbis from giving no instruction, no explanation of the law which was not in accordance with the decisions of the Sanhedrin, – which had been agreed upon with the laws of the Empire! – that they would have the eye on the administration synagogues; that they would encourage the Israelites The practice of useful professions, and would make known those who would remain without means of subsistence. These consistories departmental councils were to be under the authority of a central consistory whose headquarters would be in Paris, and to which it would be responsible for to propose the nomination of rabbis and to confirm them. These c< rabbis were responsible for teaching religion and lv doc-trine of the S.vNHÉDRIN; to recall obedience to the laws, sur-all to that of conscription, and to have the ser-Military vice as a duty. They had to swear an oath on the The Bible teaches us to be faithful to the laws, and to make known all that they would learn from things contrary to the interests of the sovereign or of the State.

'Decree of October 19, 1808. Bédarride, tii., p. Jîl. The other ar-articles of this decree, which tends to make the rabbi a police officer.

Digitized by Google

A new Moses kneading with his powerful hand and pl-behind him, to support him, the assembly he pleases to decorate with the title of Sanhedrin, the Emperor therefore sinks with a new Jewish-style approach, this political and police religion whose statutes must now be at the service of scs States and armies, the leaders and ministers of this religion such which, whose population he strives to assimilate to ours.
But who stands to win this religious revolution, this Jewish concordat? Him alone, or this Israelite people who seems destined to play such a significant role in the world soon big?...

With the help of the imperial organization of Jewish worship, that isk-say thanks to k the action of these local consistories, thanks k the direction of this central council, thanks to these rabbis epi-Scopaux, and, thanks to this patriarchal rabbi of France, in awaiting a papal rabbi, here, then, is the heart of our homeland, within this French people to whom God gave the mission to cover the Church of the Christ: Gesia Dei per Francos; here are the naturalized Jews Frenchmen who had become two fugitives on the very earth of our fathers, where we are but one! Here they are having become French citizens as much as a Montmorency; but, at the same time, and more than ever, the set his fees, the payment of which, as well as the costs of worship, are supplied by the Israelites. But later, "the charter of 1830 did not admit no dominant religion, and removed the word alone, which put: it ob tade that the State, its arhlt, the Jewish cook, (this barrier lifted, a law was) promulgated i) which placed the costs of Jewish worship on the State.

Bédarride, ibid., p. 128.

Thus, the Catholic faith, that is to say the former state cult, the cult of the vast majority of French people, or thirty-seven million of citizens out of thirty-eight, is not remunerated by the State. He is the the only one who receives no treatment; because the annuity paid to Audergé ca-Catholic is the irrefutable compensation for property taken from the Church by the Republic, and it was on the condition of this compensation that, by the con-Cordat, the Church made the abandonment of its rights to return to the possessions seized.

The Protestant community, composed of citizens of French descent, and the cult Judaic, composed of citizens of a foreign nation, therefore have the lap-
It is a singular privilege to receive a salary from the State, and to deduct it.
a tribute on Catholics.

THE JEWS.

here are recognized Jewish citizens or members of a nation who is not ours, which branches out and takes root in the the whole world, which asserts itself through its Talmudic law, deadly enemy of ours, and which suffers, willingly or unwillingly, under the under the yoke of his religious orthodoxy, the need to remain foreign to any nation whose government welcomes him And the final straw. Ceasing to live the life of the scattered, here Therefore, the sons of Jacob, by the very law which strives to to merge them, making them a distinct people, and recognizing them as a body of Jewish nation. They peacefully enjoy the benefits of a assimilation that their belief, that their heart, in its re-Talmudic folds, declares that he can only be pro-visor and fictitious; and we see them, at the moment when the law seems to mingle their blood with ours in the veins of the body social, to get closer, to unite, to strengthen one another with a more solid bond than ever, prepared and disciplined by the fact of this organisation, in view of the policy which is their their own, and whose events will dictate to them, on the day day, the advice. So let's not be surprised if these faithful of Judaism are arranging themselves, in the active patience of their waiting, to the supreme act in which are summarized, since for centuries, the imperishable hopes of the Jewish pliarisecularism guided by the rabbis of the Talmud.

These hopes, which so many circumstances have made languish, but to which other circumstances will give a New life and renewed passion, what are they?... We We will certainly have to say it—but let's leave it at that for the moment. This point of view, and let's try to find out from the mouth itself of men who belong, and who belonged to the religion The Israelite region, the merit and value of the consistories. It For us, it is not about the individuals to whom the election opens the door to these councils, but to these bodies themselves—same, charged by the Christian government of France to safeguard the religious interests of Judaism.

In the year 1820, that is to say, long after the the workings of the rabbinical organization would have been fully

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER THREE. 66

leisure to function, one of the most independent members members of the supervisory and administrative committee of

"I am under the watchful eye of the authorities, I call upon the attention of » friends of order and justice on the question of the orga-
"The establishment of Jewish worship in France. My goal is to..."
» to remove, with my coreligionists, from the dapotùme $tu~

"The system of administration that governs us."

I have all the characteristics that constitute the true in-Dependency—I'm not asking for any favors—I would refuse them. if they were offered to me. The abuses I'm going to report, the vices that I will expose, the depravities of which I have imposed the obligation to present the painting, will make me undoubtedly the object of the animosity of the men who perpetuate it to feed on it... »

And some may cry out... "What's the point,
"Please! Introduce the public to these unpleasant mysteries?... "

"Haven't the Israelites suffered enough humiliations?"
Haven't they been subjected to injustice for long enough?
of nations, to the prejudices of societies? Should it be to them reserved to see one of their own brothers also bring the
"A tribute to his criticism?"

But I have nothing to fear for the honor of the Israelites.

H Enough titles recommend them k the confidence of their < fellow citizens of other faiths. Thus I will refrain from denouncing-"that our rabbis are enlightened," because that is false...; that they are tolerant, because that is false...; that the men who preside over the administration of our cult perform their duties in accordance with the laws and according to the rules of wisdom, order, and economy... because that is false; that those who are charged with carrying to the poor the products of charity fill with impartiality in this pious ministry, because that is false; that Our wealthy Israelites devote their care to regeneration.
tion of the lower classes, because that is false; that the consistories, finally, deserve the recognition of their administrators

6

Digitized by Google

66 THE JEWS.

nistrés and the government's confidence, because these "Two points seem to me to be completely false." J

Filled as he is with bitterness, wouldn't he be outrageous?
 Answer; Nearly thirty years after that date, a writer ap-belonging to one of the most illustrious families of the Jewish race
 He repeats the word "k" to the audience. Let's listen: "The freedman-
 The moral guidance of the Jews must come even more from their ef-stronger than the government. It must be Ik, above all, the aïïaire of the solicitude of the consistories; unfortunately, these themselves need the progress of light! Attendants k the
 The herders, they let him... be devoured by leprosy... At Instead of directing the movement, they seem to ignore it Marchel «'. Finally, dares Mr. Cerfberr to say the date of 1847, and we can only leave him with the responsibility for his words: "Instead of being composed of moral, active men, enlightened, pious and upright, they do not count in their midst than rich Jews, who are content to simply be rich*.

Hence this result: that the grievances and complaints the toughest, the most humiliating for the directors and ministers of religion, and the most disastrous for the religion-
 Jewish community, are formulated by the most ho-Norables and at the same time the most liberal of the Jewish nation.
 "That special care be given," they cry in their petitions.
 study, therefore, let them finally be given "the instruction of the rabbins; that they be required to communicate frequently with the faithful; that their preaching, expressed in the terms of the French language, the only one that is national,
 have as their purpose the recommendation of social duties;
 that the spirit of the doctrinal decisions of the great Sanhedrin prevails

'Jewish consistories, pp. 3-5. Paris, 1820, by M. Singer, member of the supervisory committee for consistorial schools.

This complaint, formulated by one of the important figures of the ju-Daism, is re^ete in striking terms of resemblance by the club democratic of the faithful. See the Truth, a journal of Israelite interests.
 p. 4, April 17, 1848; sheet which merged with another.

* The Jews, their history, their customs, by A. Cerfberr de Medelsheim. Paris, 1847, p. 58.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER THREE, 67

constantly in their speeches ^ that they study themselves to make res-respect our holy religion, and that they strip it of its exercisecice of meticulous and absurd practices due to artifice of a policy incompatible with the current state of civilization;
 that they strive to cherish its spirit and documents

virtues »

Having heard these words, we cross the threshold.
pace which separates the year 1848 from the month of December 1866.
We choose when the elections are called French Israelites – a consistorial appointment. There is, exclaimed one of the major organs of Judaism on this occasion,

"There is a current k agenda, it is to operate reforms in worship; but one is necessary, imperative, urgent, unspoken: it's the modi- ■ Implementation of our regulations. We still see silence consistories on their actions. The accounts, that is to say the bulgets are no longer subject to examination by the community Nature: the community's wishes are not consulted.
for the appointment of rabbis, and prayers are on the
"Not to be upset!..." etc.

"Whatever happens, the elections of our cult will take place."
according to existing legal provisions. In the presence of deplorable events that occurred in several circumstances inscriptions, during the last Israelite elections; in pre-the presence of a central consistory that remains silent on acts, more or less reprehensible,... we engage the Israelites of France should abstain, and not take part at the next elections.

"Sincerity. Gentlemen, from all of you, rabbis or administrators. When you accept roles whatever they may be, fill them conscientiously and devotedly

• On Consistories, etc., p. 79, by the Israelite Singer. Excellent!

But, if you abandon the odious and absurd doctrine of rabbinism, he
All you have left is a fantasy religion, which is neither that of Moses nor that of the Talmud.

'Univers Israélite, n° IV, p. 175. December 1866.

5.

Digitized by Google

68 THE JEWS.

'ly'; and if you have neither the vocation nor the time to do well fulfilling these duties, which forces you to solicit or accept Titles? You can be very good people* without them.
But, when it comes to "men whom the law has charged" the right and the duty to ask what the way is to live off these men vis-à-vis Judaism, of which they are the Sayers... What regard do the Pentateuch and the Decalogue have?

do they find in the election of men called to the administration central superior administration of Israelite religious affairs France? The mere possibility that a superior central authority laughter could be entirely composed of desecrators of the Sabbath and violators of dietary laws would not be-
It is not a frightening symptom of a pathological condition.
illegal, distorted, and render illusory the best intentions
"The principles of the law, and producing contrary ones?"

Unfortunately, 111 from whatever angle we consider the needs of religion, we find nowhere a point where the May the scrutinizing gaze rest with satisfaction. The soul
The Jewish religion is religious knowledge, and God has Israel was chosen to be the torchbearer of humanity. Where then?
What is the religious instruction of our youth? Where is it known?
religious zeal of our elderly men?... » ...« Even in the high spheres of the nursery of our preachers and our rabbis, the spirit of superficiality, mediocrity, and lack of science and inertia, a threat to penetrate. Where are the students trained under the aegis of the central administration, which, like Messengers of the God of armies, teach his truth and his con-birth, announces his will and his law?... Alas! their his mouth constantly overflows with the exhilaration of the victories that

* Ibid., p. 992. The service is so well done that there are accounts Mistakes worth sixteen thousand francs!

* Israelite Archives, No. XXII, p. 993, November 13, 1866.

The Jews, since Christ, torchbearers of humanity... If they
Their light, where is the darkness? But the Talmud will enlighten us.
We respect the French spoken by Jews as it is, but we emphasize,
Here and elsewhere, words not underlined in the text, and on which we we want attention to be focused.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER THREE. 69

Jews celebrate in this glorious time of political equality and civil; but they say not a word about the defeats that, in
At the same time, Judaism has suffered and continues to suffer!

"Today's consistory no longer has any of its functions" civil, political, financial, police and even military silences of the consistory of 1808 (under Napoleon I). His mission not composed of natural, legitimate, authorized representatives of religion and morality. Here are twelve strong men distinguished, highly regarded, several of them even famous in various respects, but having no competence in the sacred things, which are the twelve apostles seated in the Moses' chair, judging the twelve tribes of Israel! On contests the Church's temporal power, and the Synagogue has no longer even spiritual power! Alas, Zion weeps for its pont- "He is a thief, and mourns for his prophets!"

The truth, therefore, compels the honorable blind men of Judaism. to repeat it with us: The Jews no longer have pontiffs, and That's an understatement! Because not only the pontiffs according to the The laws of Moses became impossible in Israel, but the Here is someone lamenting the choice of this artificial priesthood that French law allows him to manufacture it – and those he accuses to impose these semblances of priests on him, these are his own consistories, that is to say the elected apostolic councils of his hand and that the law of the State designates to choose them for him... But the grievances that escape from the lips of this venerable Will the organ of French Judaism bear fruit? Yes no doubt, and let our ears be attentive to the words which allow us to judge it –.

"Dear readers," exclaims the director of the Israelite Universe, Mr. Bloch, prepare yourself to learn a strange fact, mons- Trueux, so incredible that we can hardly believe it ■ ' Univers Israélite, pp. 70, 71, 72, 73, II, October 1866. These vic- The three are; a Baptist who marries a beautiful and rich Jewish woman, a poor baptized girl who becomes the wife of a circus performer...

* Israelite Universe, V, p. 203. January 1868.

Digitized by Google

70

THE JEWS.

we ourselves, we who were not the hero, but the victim. »^.. « We have sometimes criticized Mr. Cerfberr, president of the central council, not in his capacity as a man private, but in that of chief administrator of our cult. As such, it undoubtedly falls within the judgment of the Jewish press; but our critics, do we need to Saying it, they never meant anything offensive to him personally...

Lastly, Mr. Cerfberr, encountering us,... walked towards us his gaze filled with sparks of hatred, and addressed us with invile threats, threats of violence made in hideous terms, if we were to speak of him again in our journal... Mr. President of the Central Consistory should re- to present the gentle and polite customs of Judaism,... he likes to better represent boxing.

"...Alas! Judah's scepter has become a club!"

And was this anger the result of a sudden emotion? of a violent and fleeting surprise? No, because "the next day- The scandal was in question,... the hero of the boulevard of The Italians exacted a new and shameful revenge upon us. We'll talk about it another day,' w

However, the fear of this gnarled scepter does not intimidate. all hearts, and it is from the heart of this rabbinate, from which we we have just left it to the Jews themselves to deal with us- To the pitiful and humiliating scene, which strongly... moved will rise controls doctrinal enormities of the con- History, a modern source of the power of the rabbis:

No, "the doctrines issued by the President of the con- central history are not those of historical Judaism and "Traditional, which the Sanhedrin has recognized." And, he exclaims one of Israel's doctoral illustrations, Mr. Grand Rabbi- bin from Colmar, "we will not ask Mr. Colonel

* L'Univers israëlile, a monthly review of Judaism, almost entirely preserved teur, V, p. 196. January 1867.

*76., VI, p. 279, February 1867.

3 The Sanhedrin did the opposite.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER THREE. 74

Cerfberr, president of the central consistory, who gave him right to declare, in the name of tradition, the superiority of the doctrine on rites, when it would be difficult for him to find- ver in the Pentateuch, the prophets and the Talmuds, a The only word... that authorizes it!... We will not ask him nor how, after having declared that one cannot all- dear to dogma, for it is Ik, "the holy ark," he comes, with a single breath, destroy the dogmas of divine origin and of the im-

We profess for Mr. Cerfberg..., we cannot understand How could he, president of the central consistory, forget that the doctrines of the great Sanhedrin are placed by all the decrees and organic ordinances of our worship under the sa-the consistory's representative, was able to go and challenge them in the
"The temple of the Lord, in the midst of a great assembly!"

"In the face of these illegal, strange, unheard-of doctrines, subversives of Judaism,... we have a duty to fulfill towards the religion of which we are the minister, into our fellow believers, of whom we are the pastor...
We must declare that in the presence of these doctrines funests, which are like a threat to our worship in the mouth of the president of a religious administration who, successively arrived k to replace k all the com-Jewish communities of France, holds in its hands everything the future, all the destinies of French Judaism, exerts an immense influence on the education of rabbis, delivers them Us diplomas, and invested with their functions—we must to declare, — we say, — that in the presence of these doctrines
For French Jews, there is only this alternative:
Or, truly attached to the beliefs of their fathers, they cannot neglect any legal means to circumvent the danger that threatens their worship and the freedom of their conscience; or, supporters of the opinions expressed by the president-tooth of the central consistory, they will have to do to the government-This statement is: "The Judaism you have re-known, and that you would pay, is not the one in which

Digitized by Google

72

THE JEWS.

we want to live now; and, while preserving the name for the new religious system which at this time is developed within the matrix of our philosophy, we re-
"We condemn the practices and we challenge the dogmas..."
These are the words of MS Klein, the Chief Rabbi of Colmar. And yet, since 1862, the great rab-Consistory bins are appointed in our departments
"by the central consistory, from a list of three rabbis" presented by the departmental consistory*. The number of these chief rabbis is, in France, that of the nine circum-Israelite scriptures, each of which has a consistory, com-composed of six members. In addition, the central consistory, departmental, headquarters in Paris. The election there is the method recruitment, and their composition includes "the men who are worthy of the highest consideration*.

 The product of constantly repeated elections, and yet, the object of cruel and incessant recriminations, how therefore these high councils, whose authorized pens of the ju-Daism offers us painting, do they become the sad
 a reflection of the religious decay into which we are falling these days the Jewish nation*? Shall we ask the exclusive cause of this to their secular composition, that is to say, the reversal of all the notions of simple common sense in the composition
 From a religious council? No! But what is certain is, that is, in the consistories, this precious fruit of the great Jewish Sanhedrin, the rabbis whose previous pages revealed to us its value – the rabbis, who are neither priests

'Courrier du Bas-Rhin, March 29, 4867; n° IX, Univers israélite,
 May 4867, pp. 394–92–93.

* Before that date, communities chose their own pastors, or intervened effectively in the election. Israeli Archives,
 p. 483, 4"" June 4867, n° II.

3 a The members who compose them are renewed by half every the two years. » Israelite Universe, VII, p. 307, etc., March 4868. Arch.
 israel., p. 207, etc., 4"" March 4,868.

* Read 76., Univers israél., XII, p. B37 to 544, etc., August 4866; and a host of other documents.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER THREE.

73 nor teachers of the law according to the law of Moses, but who give themselves and which are given to us as such by the men of Judaism, find themselves dependent on those who They are—and they call themselves secularists—it's because they live under the leadership of these laypeople who direct their education, who sign their diplomas, and which "eliminate them as much as possible" possible from within these higher assemblies." In other words, the spiritual guides of the French Jew, his pontiffs, his pas-

 The speakers, are led and kept in check, and the sheep, and Let us not forget, these sheep, these secular people, we are told doce, a lesser right than the rabbis themselves to engage-

'ger the conscience of Israel'!

O confusion of confusions! O prodigy that is to give birth!
So many wonders!

In short, the organization that secularizes in the way
Even stranger is the Jewish religion in the most enlightened country of Europe, and which transforms a Christian government as regulator of the worship of Israel, suddenly formed in the early days of the nineteenth century in the grand happiness and the inexpressible joy of Israel. This phenomenon truly incredible, unimaginable, monstrous – but,
Another new and surprising subject! – this phenomenon that no one
What one of us doesn't notice is of such vital importance.
that we let a writer of Jewish descent tell us again, and gather on one page all the wonders that we must have cause this chapter:

"In the state of decadence in which Judaism found itself, Influential Israelites resorted to the government of July... Thanks to the sympathy they received, they obtained a constitution which, in the form of an ordinance-royal finance, was a true civil constitution of the Israelite cultliie. This document, dated May 25, 1814, attracted little attention public. Few people seemed to understand the por-

> See Drach, above4, they Arch. Israel, No. V, p. Î08, elc., 4868.
Id, Le P. Uatisbonne, Question juive, p. 20, 4869.

Digitized by Google

74

THE JEWS.

immense size of an organization that placed Judaism under the direct and immediate authority of the Christian minister in charge from the department of religious affairs in France... You just need to throw a a quick look at the main provisions of this ordinance royal finance to acknowledge the profound harm that she brought to the traditions and hierarchy of the synagogue gogue. Thus it is established that the religion of the French Israelites would now have its home in Paris. A central consistory composed of lay people, and placed, like the holy synod of Russia, under the control of the government, directs the spiritual and the temporal aspects of worship; it may be dissolved by an ordinance trusts 'a provisional administration formed by the minister. Below this supreme consistory are placed consistorial departmental histories, which report on their management to the prefects! » And the same constitution, except for a few changes, being applied by order of November 9 1815 to the Israelites of Algeria, it follows that in this colony, subject to military rule, "the administration of the Mosaic worship is, in fact, found in the attributes of the Minister of War I Thus he is an army general (Christian) which exercises over the Algerian synagogue the supremacy, which the high priest exercised in Jerusalem!

And these consistories which "eliminate as much as possible the rabbis are recruited from among merchants, lawyers, artists and the wealthy, whoever they may be, all very honorable no doubt, and we admit that they are versed in the study of the humanities; but, in general, they are completely foreign to theological studies and the offices of the synagogue!

This organization, so contrary to the spirit and the letter of the Old Testament, resulted in the secularization of the Jewish religion. Judaism, absorbed into the political element, is now governed as a simple branch of civil administration. But the Israelites, /ascended more and more so through the official protection they received,

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER THREE. 75

they applauded this strange situation, which they called a progress, and they refused to understand that human support hand is a very fragile base, especially in a time when the The entire society is subject to perpetual vicissitudes studies »

CONCLUSION.

Today, therefore, and under the gaze of modern civilization, with these rabbis deprived of all legitimate authority and devoid of all prestige; with this false priesthood, where you cberbez in vain the priest \ with this consistorial or apostolic which is composed of lay people, and which was founded some time ago by Sanbédiin deprived of one of its essential elements, the element priestly; in short, with this organization which seems to be a challenge to the nature of things, a stunned by all reason, and which bind the Jewish religion under the dependent on a secular and Christian power, it is necessary that that she disappears, or else she must engage with her goddess, and against all her principles of immobility, in the paths of progress, as well as the word of the Sanhedrin of Napoleon-Léon led the French people to believe that she had been there-pledged.

In other words, to accomplish this miracle and to remain Jewish, which the rabbinic religion replaces in all parts by other beliefs and other customs beliefs and customs that it has established-it is necessary that it progresses by going back to Moses and the prophets, which is tantamount to declaring that he must take refuge in the very vestibule of the Christian religion. And that is So, and this is where making a movement without hitting the church door, without bumping into it, without forcing it open losing himself by transforming into it, he becomes, whatever the the wonders of his skill, the most impressive feat-ticable.

'The Jewish Question,' by Father Ratisbonne, a converted Israelite, p. 18 to 10. Paris, 1868.

Digitized by Google

76

THE JEWS.

But when we talk about the enormities of this orthodox Jewish doctrine, which is almost entirely disappearing from our France and that the West begins to despise, we cannot-We would be understood if we did not first make ourselves known and understanding what the Talmud is

CHAPTER FOUR.

THE TALMUD.

The cause of the hatred and contempt of peoples for the Jew lies in the Talmud. - The Talmud is the religious code of the Jew. - What is it? What is this code? - He who does not have the key to the Talmud cannot decipher the The mystery of Judaism. - Before the Talmud, or the oral and traditional law-Traditionally, the law of Moses is abolished. - Whoever violates this law, This pharisaical work of the rabbis deserves death without trial.

- Israel's orthodoxy shaken; revolt against the Talmud. - Jews mud. — A word from Mr. Renan. — The Talmud, condemned and burned by kings and popes, guardians of civilization. — The Talmud studied in itself and revealed by Jewish voices.

— The villainy, cynicism, and depravity of this code so dear to Judah. His absurdities.' — He places God below the rabbis — Obligated to remove passages that offend Christians and Jews leave them blank and teach them to do it. — Disloyalty of these Orthodox. — They are the indestructible core of the nation. A duel to the death between Talmudic doctrines and civilization, which does not will be saved only when the conscience of the Jew is rebuilt on another plan, because the Talmud is the very expression of the Synagogue; It contains the Kabbalistic doctrine, which is the dogma of the high magic.

Those who find the principle of degradation of Jewish people and the hostile state in which they are towards the United States other peoples in their religion, at/ounrniui unsocial>le, and who consider its flaws, and even its vices, as the punishment for a great crime and to fulfill it— of a terrible anathema, these people think that the correction of defects must precede the change of the political state; that is, attracts, to speak plainly, that Jews cannot be, and even, whatever one They will never be citizens under Christianity. without becoming Christians" By Bosald.

What then is the sacred book par excellence, the code of this unsociable religion, a source of degradation and of vices of the Jewish people, source of hatred and contempt for

'Jews, Miscellany, vol. II, Works, XI, p. 269; Paris, 1819.

Digitized by Google

77

CHAPTER FOUR.

Nations that host it? Could this be the Law of Moses? For the article seen from the Jewish Creed tells us; "The equal of "Moses never appeared in Israel!" No; it was not so. and it cannot be this law whose reign was the glory of descendants of Jacob; this law which, in the scale of the civilisation, secured the first rank for the Israelites among the The first peoples of the ancient world. And we already know by heart that if the Jew elevates above all men the

The first of the laws is Jewish. Perhaps he will give this name and this rank to the iradition* which he claims to have received from Moses; but these traditions, which are the work and the treasure of the Pharisees of his rabbis, are false. We have just heard the Cbrist to brand them in the face of the world—and, since the death of the God-Man, the audacity of the rabbis multiplied them without measure. It is they who defile and dishonor the work indigestible Talmud, for which writings seem to us to be— Then, for centuries, these two famous lines:

Ut turpiter atrum

Desinat in piscem, mulier formosa superne.

Ars poel., v. 3-4.

The Talmud! Therefore, one must not believe that this monster atrocious, be it without beauty. No, let us say it quickly, and have no more to say it again: If her body is hideous, if her folds are those of a foul and disgusting reptile, its head is not without nobility, his bust is not without charm; he has, but above— everything for the eye and ear of the Jew, the attractive charms—the mermaid's irresistible and alluring hair.

The Talmud! This body of religious sciences and precepts... gieux, colossal absurdities and nameless turpitudes, we tries again to praise it; but, in the most ci— when they are debased, we have the spirit to disguise their follies and furies; we are beginning to outlaw the teaching of its immoral— finally dare to depart from its fatal doctrines, which have become, from Christ to the present day^ the only true ortho—

Digitized by GocJgle

78

THE JEWS.

Jewish doxie. But it is shaken, it is strongly en— This orthodoxy is a joke! The prodigious immobility of Israel ' has therefore ceased to exist!'

However, whether the Jew walks or stands still, let us say it from the your tone, from which one thing is certain: the key to Judaism, It's the Talmud, and who doesn't know what the Taimud is? is radically incapable of deciphering history, or to penetrate the mysteries of Judah. What then is this sphinx?

Son of Jacob, what will you tell us?

"Those who wanted to have the Talmud considered as the second law of the Jews, replies to our apostrophe Mr. Bédarride, could have imagined this fact, which is based on nothing serious "

Indeed, the Talmud, this rabbinic work on which The Jewish lawyer Bédarride is misleading us here, and of which he invalidates orthodox value, is by no means the second law of the Jews 5 it is in their soul first, the one that do-'mine and which crushes all other laws'. And what truth is more trivial in Judaism? The Talmudists teach us, Indeed, the study of the Talmud, that is to say, of the oral law and rabbinic traditions prevail over those of the Bible, and that there is more merit in engaging in the former than in the second. This truth lingers 'in the state of a vulgar maxim in The Synagogue: "My son, pay attention to the words of Scribes (that is, rabbis, or doctors of the law), rather than the very words of the law, for the wise have surpassed the prophets in excellence." And the rabbi Isaac Abnab teaches us, in the book Hamida Golah, that the foundation of the Jewish religion is the oral law, or the teachings of the Fathers, and not the law written by Moses. "It is in consideration of Degradation of the oral law that God made a covenant with Israel, as it is written: Abrabanel and the most eminent masters

'Ib., Les Juifs en France, etc., p. 39, 1861.

^ Although the Misclina, the first part of the Talmud, means the seconde loi, the deutirose. See below.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FOUR. 79

The members of the Synagogue held the same opinion. Oral law, contained in the Talmud, clarified the difficulties of Mosaic law, they tell us, and it has fulfilled the shortcomings. All those who say something contrary The teachings of the synagogue masters will be discarded. to the fires of hell. Finally, the rabbis teach that if he encounters in this book something... that surpasses the intelligence, we must blame the weakness of understanding human madness; for, by meditating on it deeply, one note that the Talmud contains only the pure truth.

Consequently, "those who violate the precepts of Scribes (rabbis) must be punished more severely than

Moses can be absolved, absolvi potest; but the violator of
The precepts of the rabbis must be punished by death: death moriatur* .

"The law given by Moses to the Hebrew people is therefore that, in appearance, today, the law of the Jews. It has disappeared in the commentaries; and the Talmud, that is to say the book who has the most authority among this people; consists of the Mishnah, which is the text, and the Gemara, which is its commentary.
commentary. Their combination forms the complete body of the doctrine traditional and religious matters. Having said that, how not to lend an ear to the words of praise that can even today defend themselves against addressing this book
Are the main champions of the Jewish religion sacred?

"The Talmud is not only the civil code and ecclesias-

' Surenhiisius, Mischna, part iv, and Lent. From moderna theol. Heybrceorum. - Rupert, Synag., p. 16, Paris, 4859. - Historical essays. And Critique on the Jews, vol. I, p. 70; Lyon, 4771, etc.

*EH, t. III, ord. 4, leaflet. 4, dist. 40, p. 297. Lucius Ferrari, Prompta biblioth.; and see Maimonides, chap. Veén tsarihh lo guedhim, etc., etc.; Second letter from a rabbi. /6., Drach, p. 332; 4827.
The secret tribunals of high-ranking Freemasonry do not prevail.
point in force on those of these rabbis.

^ Laurent, member of the Oriental Society. Historical account affairs of Syria from 4840 to 4842, etc., in Egypt, in Syria, etc., vol. II, p. 351; Paris, 1846. - Rohrbacher, Universal History of the Church, vol. XV, read p. 484, etc., 4854; vol. V, p. 67, 78, etc., 4850.

Digitized by Google

80

THE JEWS.

lique ()u Judaism, we are told in the very capital of the France, the organ of current orthodoxy; but it is a
A work of great importance for any scholar... One does not no one could deny that the authors of the Talmud have truly deserved to Jews. The moral principles contained in the Talmud produced such sobriety, such abundance of feelings of generosity, fervor and warmth for religion, virtue, and benevolence, that to fail to recognize the importance of this great work, and that all The philanthropist deeply regrets that he was unjustly denied

"This and the value of this work."

If the boldness of these praises causes us a certain a shudder of astonishment, let's try turning around for a moment to Mr. Chief Rabbi Trenel, director of the rabbinical seminary binique, the one we heard earlier wearing so high was the virtue of those Pharisees whom the word of Christ, and whom he calls "the worthy and austere representatives"
"tantrums of Israelite thought and feeling 1"

The Talmud "has always had violent detractors" and passionate apologists. For two thousand years he has
It was, and still is, an object of veneration for the Israelites, of which it is the religious code. On the other hand, it has often been used a text addressed to renegades and other slanderers of our faith, who drew from this arsenal of weapons to compel us
To fight. The truth, thank God, is beginning to come to light.
and the last whispers of intolerance are drowned out by the voice of healthy criticism...*. » Nothing, it seems to us, < Israelite Universe, XII, pp. 568, 570, August 1866.

* Israelite Universe, p. 152, June 1867. Will I be allowed to say, chemin making it so that the Talmud is the supreme code of the supreme intoler-France, admirably practiced by his disciples? And that is what Is-Raël himself will teach us I

The same chief rabbi, director of the rabbinical seminary, told us said: a The editors of this immense collection did not write history in the manner of Father Loriquet (Jesuit), who bestowed upon Napoleon the title of lieutenant general of Louis XVIII's armies and forgets to mention the French Revolution." Ibid., p. 453. If this panegyrist of the Pharisees
If he had been a serious man, he would have written history differently; he begins-

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FOUR. 8t

She is absent from this pious tribute, representing the league contrary to orthodoxy, that is to say the organ of the Protestant ism in Israel, in turn, holds us to the Talmud, a language against which his status as a man of progress puts him himself in frequent and blatant opposition. But we
We will reproduce his words without comment:

"The immense compilation of Ravina and Rav Aschi has spread among the Jews with almost miraculous speed genuine and sincere pressure from traditional law. numerous schools, where the Talmud was the subject of study more respectful, suddenly arose in the East and in In the West, his casuistic decisions were accepted by all the communities, and this triple barrier erected by the rabbis of Palestine and Babylonia around the Torah (law written) did not encounter a single daredevil who wanted to cross it. How this transmission took place would be difficult to explain. to say; but the fact is that the work blossomed on the banks of the Euphrates was, in an instant, in the hands of the Jews who They lived along the banks of the Rhine, the Danube, and the Vistula.

K The attachment of the Jews to the Talmud was bound to be natural—really, to bring this gigantic work to the attention of their enemies... The Talmud became the scapegoat charged with all iniquities, it was attributed to his standard—lying about all the vices and crimes of which they were accused Israelites; and they spread about the principles it contains appalling calumnies, often followed by names—numerous massacres*. Massacres, alas! about which the truth is The Talmud, which will reveal itself to us page by page, will not explain that the cause is all too clear!

would do so by reading the alleged anecdotes he criticizes, and would not repeat of trust, an anti-Jesuit farce that became the confusion of his authors, and whose lie was so publicly refuted. We re—let us see, among other things, the volume of Historical Errors and Lies by M. Ch. Barthélemy, p. 260, etc.; 1863, Paris, Blériot, 55, quai des Augustins.

'Lazard, rabbi. Archives israélites, XII, p. 514–5, June 15, 1867.

6

Digitized by Google

XI THE JEWS.

"Intoxicated by the heady scent of freedom," the rabbi tells us (pie we quote, those who were called the reformers you—milks get rid of all constraints at once; and the Talmud, which since its appearance had enjoyed a His undisputed authority was scorned and rejected. A few Israelites, proud to have, upon leaving the Ghetto, entered the gilded salons, did not hesitate to return the Talmud responsible for their suffering.

Here, then, is a movement hostile to the Talmud in Israel; And suddenly, the same movement manifests itself.

returning from the municipality of Pcsih, writes a traveler
As an Israelite, I passed by the synagogue in this city.
The emancipation and well-being of the Jews, which grew daily nelment here as in almost all parts of Europe, provided them with, both in public functions that in scientific and social life, an influence which, in many localities, equivalent to kl\ scpréhatie. Although, as It is well known that the ancient code of Moses and the strict Talmud Orthodox Christianity, especially in Western Europe, "e be more to the liking of its modern members, and that a large
A schism arose between the orthodox and the refractory.
However, the two parties did not fail to reach an agreement.
on certain points, and to provide together liberally to the necessary funds for the erection of a magnificent temple to Festh'. »

In other words, ultimately, the law of Moses is no longer and that the Talmud succumbs, and that is what we owed observe. What does it matter to us, once we have observed this phenomenon, with its sumptuous temples and sepulchers bleached white and covering only nothingness, continue to to rise under Jewish hands! These hands often dis-Cordantes unite to reject the Talmud, that's the

* Ibid. 547. Ghetto, a district in certain cities designated for residential use Jews; see below, chapter IX.

– Archives Israélites, XIII, p. 563, 1866.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FOUR. 83

fact; and, with the Talmud rejected, the Jew becomes approachable, his
As supremacy is established, it ceases to inspire fear and horror.
In short, the decline of its Talmudic orthodoxy becomes 7
the cause and the dawn of its social preponderance.

But did not certain corners of the earth preserve, besides the Karaite Jews we know, some other descendants of Jacob, kept, it seems, in reserve to one day protest against the Talmud, and hasten, under the influence of their Jewish words, the fall of this mons-A despotic scumbag? Let's listen: Beyond Lake Pathé and riraouaddy, in the Celestial Empire, an Israelite traveler-Lite reports the discovery of certain Shiite Jews nois, and transmits to us some snippets of his conversation-tion with these unexpected followers of Moses whose mouth treats the legitimacy of the Tal- in a rather piquant manner

The Jewish voter, Mr. Stempel. "You do not distinguish yourself not significantly influenced by your beliefs of your brothers of the Occident?"

The Chinese Jew. You might well be mistaken; and, First, we do not accept the Talmud as a code religious.

The traveling Jew. In this case, you are not Israelites.

The Chinese Jew. And why is that?

The Traveling Jew. Because I visited the Israelites of France, Poland, Turkey, Africa, and that I don't I have never seen anyone who did not believe in the religious value of this A book that you reject.

The Chinese Jew. But there are Israelites you haven't who could see, and who don't even know this book by name. Those who inhabited Palestine, from Joshua to Zedekias, and who received the lessons directly from Joshua, from Samuel, Elijah, Elisha, and Isaiah!

The traveling Jew. And how do you know that they do not conclude The Talmud didn't originate there? Because the traditions of which this book is a part 6.

Digitized by Google

84

THE JEWS.

Not only the register "have always been in use in Israel, since they had already been communicated to Moses on the day of the revelation. Even Abraham knew them: the Talmud recounts that this patriarch owned four hundred volumes which dealt with Abodasarah.

The Chinese Jew. But you can't be serious, that's for sure. What! You're looking for your proof in the book itself? whose authority is now being questioned!... Be well convinced that if your Talmudic traditions had been contradicted traces of our Palestinian ancestors would be found

naan until now without persecutions ever having mo-
'difused our religious customs'.

This account is undoubtedly unflattering to tradition.
Talmudic; but, from some period and some side
Now that the Talmud has arrived, let us release what no longer fears today to publish the Jews, friends of progress, the Jews reformists, and let us ask ourselves how their language differs from one of his most outspoken critics:

"We know that in the capital of Austria our core-
For forty years, religious leaders have organized splendid-
The worship... The Vienna synagogue passed through all Europe as a model of dignity, good taste and progress, towards perfection. Well, all this no less Not anymore; all of that is considered insufficient, petty.
condemned as backward, as unworthy of the spirit of the century.

"A Jewish newspaper from this city, the Neuseit, published recently a series of articles entitled the Reaction in the community of Vienna, in which one does not limit oneself 'a criticize the cult, but violently attack Jewish life-entire lite, the Talmud, the Shulchan Arouch, your traditions... The author delivers not only practical Judaism and the teachings of the Talmud to the ridicule and contempt of the public

* A. Stempfel, Fourth Letter. Far East, Arch. hraél., pp. 24-26, 1.1" January 1868.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FOUR. 85

Jewish and Christian, but unfortunately he does more - he in-sinuously degenerates the moral character of the Israelite family, showing a visible lack of a sense of honor, an absence total disregard for anything suspicious Kidush and Hillul Haschem, in a decadence complete. 11 accuses our religious laws of pushing a number of con-
The staggering number of Israelites in the arms of apostasy... He speaks "Like the missionaries!"

Here, then, is Judaism finally laid bare by the Jews themselves.
memes, covered in ignominy by his own people if he remains in the bloody mire of the Talmud; and, moreover, - let us open the eyes, - here he is receiving this blow from the face of the world the hand of Mr. Renan, his assistant,* the executioner of the eter-Christ's new divinity: "Unsociable, a stranger everywhere, without

This anti-Christian publicist tells us that it has often been a scourge for the countries where fate has taken him ' 1 »

What Judaizer or philosopher would dare to argue with Mr. Bail, after such admissions, and these are not the best—their, that "the perversity (of the Jews) is neither in their mo—"Nor in their law?" And what man endowed with any meaning will now allow itself to condemn emperors, kings and popes for having launched the anathema against the Talmud, for having ignominiously thrown into the flames this monstrous book of Jewish law*?

Between these sovereigns, Saint Louis orders that the Talmud will be shouted, "and that the Jews who refuse to obey this Orders will force them to do so, or be punished according to the

'Israelite Universe, IV, p. 152, December 1866.

2 Archives israélites, XII, p. 534, June 15, 1868.

^ The Jews in the Nineteenth Century, second edition, p. 19; Paris, 1816.

* Justinian, Saint Louis, Clement VIII, Julius III, Paul IV, Pius V, etc. "The fear that the Talmud inspired was great," and legitimate, he added. let us. Read this list and the reflections that accompany it. gnent, Archives israélites, V, p. 218, etc., March 1, 1868; and read the Encyclopedic Dictionary of Catholic Theology, by learned doctors of Germany, vol. XII, p. 442, etc., 1861.

Digitized by Google

86

THE JEWS.

rigor of the laws. This condemnation of the sacred book tears to the loudest and most lamentable Jews do—leances; but the protective power of Christian civilization—yours holds firm against their efforts; and, when the Jews stipulate their return to France during the reign of Louis the Hutin, the treaty of June 1315 states "that all books of the law will be restored to them, with the exception of the Talmud," for this The book is abominable; and the letters of Popes Honorius IV and John XXII (1286 and 1320), relating to the villainies of Jews from England and Aragon paint us in colors quite vivid the horror that these men inspired in the people exclaimed one of these pontiffs, that the Jews, setting aside the old law that God had given them through his servant Moses, having adopted another law which they claim to have received from Lord, that which considers falsehood, and which they call Tal-Mutz. A fabric of countless indignities, this enormous work contains, in addition to a multitude of abominations, curses—horrible pronouncements and imprecations that the perfidious Jews and ungrateful people towards Christians utter every day against them in their prayers and devotional exercises. will therefore seize this impious book*... and worthy of all the an-themes.

But let us hasten now, after having listened

* Treatise on the Police, 4 vols. folio, vol. F'', pp. 282–181, 1705, work Delamarre monumental.

^ Read the monumental work of Baronius, Annales ecclesiasticæ, etc. In Angliim Judæi... ul ob graviora scelera... An. 1286, xxiv. These dates and these numbers make it possible to avoid indicating the volumes of this im-this work. — Ipsi enim librum quemdam... quem Thalmud vul-guarantee nuncupanl, abominations, falsitates, infidelitates and abuses muliimodos continentem...

Singulis quoque diebus, in orationibus, vel potius in execrationibus am, in curseem Chrislianorum... prorumpunt, alianonullacom-mittendo nequissima... Ib., 1286, xxiv.

Dolentes qiiippe audivimus et narramus quod Judæi... lege veleri prætermissa, quam per Moysen suum conlulit maje.—'tas omnium condi-toris, quamdara legem aliam, seu traditionem, quam Talmutz vocant, falso iradidisse Dominum conPingunt in cujus amplo volumine abuses fere innumerable, etc... Curses quoque serious, ac horrible imprecationes, quæ ab iisdem Judæis ingratis atque per-

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FOUR. 87

to these documents and these speeches, and noted the diversity of their dates, to study in itself this foundation of the Jewish religion, and let us first draw from a source where our research has given us the certainty of discovering that science and truth.

French rabbi and convert, Mr. Drach, whom we had the frequent opportunity to meet, to receive under our brilliant students of eminent doctors, among whom the famous chief rabbi David Sintzheim, the Naci, that is to say the head of the Grand Sanhedrin of Napoleon I", of which we have just to outline the story.' Now this eminent master told us:

"We who, by virtue of our position, have long taught the Talmud" and explained his doctrine, after having taken a special course on it for many years under the most Israelite rulers renowned figures of this century... we will discuss them knowledgeably. of cause and impartiality-,... we will say what recommends it-order, and what condemns it... Talmud is a be-breu-rabbinique meaning doctrine, study. It designates more particularly the great body of Jewish doctrine, to-which worked successively, and from different eras annuities, the most accredited doctors in Israel. It's the The complete civil and religious code of the Synagogue. Its purpose is to explain the law of Moses in accordance with the spirit of tradition verbal tion*. » From time to time he indulges in digressions on history and science, including scholars, and especially the archaeologists can take advantage of this.

But if the judicious reader of the Talmud often has reason to to grieve over the strange aberrations into which the human mind can fall fidis contra Chrislianos emittunturquotidie in dicta logeseu traditionc daninabili sunt ascriptæ... Baronius, »6., 13I0, xxvi.

'In 1807; first letter, Drach, pp. 31-32, 83; Paris, 1825.

* Ibid. That is to say, consequently, to distort it, since these Traditions are false.

® Id. Brdarride, The Jews in France, etc., second edition, 1861, p. 34. Regarding this code, the Archives israélites, journal of the proletarian-Jewishism, still mislead us with these words; "As for, In the Talmud, it is difficult to say what we think. What answer-

Digitized by Google

hand weaned from the true faith -, if more than once the turpitudes Rabbinic cynicism compels modesty to veil itself face; if the Church is outraged by the atrocious and senseless ca-the homnies that the impious hatred of the Pharisees spreads over all

Tien gathers valuable data and traditions there for the explanation of more than one obscure text of the New Testament, and to convince his religious opponents of antiquity as much as the sanctity of Catholic dogma that'. "

Under the name of Talmud, the rabbis refer to frequent—the Ghemara alone, whose name means the supplement and as the commentary of the Misclma, that is to say of the second law or deuterosis; a study which the rabbis teach us about—signs that God poured the text into Moses' ear on Sinai. And, in fact, a written code is necessarily accompanied by traditions and glosses on the manner of the understanding and to explain it; otherwise the bare letter would be too much An easy toy for whims or passions. Also, throughout history, Did the Israelite people have, in addition to the law dictated on Sinai, a kind of second law, the oral or traditional law, which was passed down orally, and which served so well to to fix the meaning of the Bible rather than to preserve its precepts from oblivion divine things not entrusted to writing. For the Synagogue, that is, since

Would you, indeed, if you were asked your opinion on books French? » Vol. XXV, p. 602, 1864. Such a sentence would hardly be acceptable on the banks of the Garonne! In another passage, the same The review tells us: o 11 is necessary, in order to make ideas favorable to the Talmud, which I first presented, is one of the reasons that led me to to admit a priori its superiority" (over the Bible), and "without diminishing the neither the value of the Bible nor of Moses. >> IL, p. 150.

However, it is for this environmentalist that the Notice on the Congregation The nuns of Zion said: "The observances of the law are to be..." in disuse; Talmudic traditions are unknown to the generation floui-eWe/the administration of Judaism, modeled on that of Protestantism—ism, is now nothing more than a civil constitution that varies and transforms at the whim of governments. » Pp. 11–12; Paris, 1862.

Let us add that these words should only be applied to the Jews of the most populated and liberal centers in Europe, Paris, etc.

'Drach, Harmony between the Church and the Synagogue, vol. I", p. 123–4; Paris, 4844.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FOUR. 89

her disapproval, that is, at the time when "it was still the Church of God, was never a Protestant;... she never surrendered the divine word is arbitrary, generally influenced by the

Such is the tradition entrusted to the care of the elders and of doctors of the nation, under the authority of the head of religion seated on the chair of Moses.

"But like the rabbis, that is to say the Pharisees, audacious falsifiers of the true tradition exaggerate In the most extravagant way, they claim that God revealed to Moses not only the entire Old Testament, but also Miscbna and the two Gbemara*. <> 11 y a d'ail—their two Talmuds: the Jerusalem Talmud, and the Baby—Talmud a compound designed to correct the flaws of the first. This reformist Talmud nonetheless contains a multi—study of daydreams, ridiculous extravagances, and indecencies revolting, and above all horrible blasphemies against what The Christian religion has something more sacred about it.

X The Babylonian Talmud, executed by Rabbi Asschi and his collaborator R. Abina, was closed from the very first years of the sixth century AD, and immediately accepted by all Israel. It is this body of canon, religious and civil law. times, WHO REGULATES UNTIL THIS MOMENT THE CONDUCT OF THE JEWS ATTACHED TO THEIR ERRONEOUS FAITH.

"Everything contained in the Gbemara of Babylon," he said

'Truly papal authority. Ibid. Harmmie, vol. I, p. 125. — Read Josephus, Antiq., book. III, ch. iv.

* Ibid., p. 126.

® Or rather the Gbemara of Jerusalem from the year 279, a compilation due to R. Ynhhanan.

* Precepts of the Talmud contrary to the law of nations and the law of Moses: Constat vero ex Bernhardo Luzemburgio, in Catal. hæret., lib. II, Gregorium IX pontificem AC 1230, Juuiæorum libre, et imprimis omnia talmudica voiuminailammis addixisse, atque idem factum a. c. 1244, imitatum esse Innocentium IV, inductos causa quod ii libri, and nominatim utrumque Talmud, Hierosolymitanum et Babylonium, no soluiiii contumcias and blaspbemias, infamous mullas and horrendas ad—versus Jesum C. Salvatorem nostrum, sed et sanctions et præcepta contra jus geiitium, atque ipsam Jfoists legem contineant, 10, 11. Telaignea Satance, t. I, Altdorf, Novicorum, 1581, 2 vols. in—4°.

Digitized by Google

The rabbinic Moses Maimonides – is obligatory for all Israel. And every city, every region, is forced to con- to train in the customs established by the doctors of the Ghemara, to follow their instructions, and to conduct themselves according to their instructions tutions; because the entire body of the Gbemara has been approved throughout Israel. The judges who established these institutions, these decrees, established these customs, pronounced these decisions, taught- These doctrines, which sometimes formed the universality of doctrines, Israelis, sometimes the majority. They were the ones who had received by tradition the foundations of all the law, from gene- ration in generations, going back to Moses, that peace "Let it be upon him!"

The Jew who would be naive enough to believe that these traditions infected go back to the first legislator of the Hebrews, could therefore, in a certain sense, sincerely affirm this a gross falsehood, that the law of Moses is the law of his nation!

But, however opposed the Talmud may be to the books mosaics, it is enough that it happens to be the sacred book of rabbis so that we have no fear of us to repeat by establishing, through the vote of modern historians, the detestable and supreme authority of this religious code to eyes of every truly Orthodox Jew. Let us therefore leave Mr. Achille Laurent, one of the members of the Oriental Society- tales that have been explored most deeply in recent times Jewish question, confirming the positive claims of the illustrious Drach, the ancient and learned rabbi;

"The Babylonian Talmud is the only one that is followed. It forms a collection that has no fewer than twelve volumes folio. The two Talmuds stifle, as has been strongly felt. Well said, the Law and the Prophets! That's the Jewish religious code. modern, quite different from that of the ancient Jews. It is that which contains all beliefs; and when one has The courage to peruse this immense collection, one finds

'Preliminary Discourse of the Yad-Hhazaka. Drach, Harmony, l. I*', p. 16i. See below the distinction between these false traditions and the ve- ritables; and read in Drach, following, everything concerning the Talmud, its antiquity, etc.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FOUR. 91

the ever-present causes of hatred of peoples against the

"This is the book that all those who study and comment on are studying and commenting on." who among the Jews claim the title of scholar. According to With these commentaries, the text of the Bible is no longer a narrative. historical, a collection of sublime precepts and laws; this is now nothing more than an allegory that the Ghemara explains from the in the strangest and most ridiculous way. It is from this commentary on the chimeras of the Kabbalah, the dangerous errors of magic, the invocation of good and evil spirits, a long heap of moral errors, and a theogony borrowed from Chaldea and Persia. The According to modern Jews, Ghemara is the fulfillment, perfection, and that's even what its name means in Hebrew; but, in reality, this commentary destroys the law through its ridiculous or absurd interpretations, and through the principles Aaine's cipes that it contains for all men who do not not part of what he calls the people of God*.

One of the most learned authors in the history of the Church he told us:

"Far from opening their eyes to the light, the doctors" The Jews, the rabbis, applied themselves more than ever to blinding themselves themselves, and with them their compatriots." They drafted—therefore rent "in a jargon of various languages" the twelve folio of their Talmud. Their goal was "to obscure the truth meaning of the prophecies that showed them Jesus Christ. There However, it finds favorable admissions regarding Christian truth. yours." But what one notices most of all is a

* Same thought, from Ronald, Jews, above, in this chapter. — W. Rohrbacher, History of the Church, vol. XV, p. 483.

* Laurent, Relation des affaires de Syrie, etc., t. II, p. 352–3, Paris, 1846. — Id., the Church and the Synagogue, p. 5–6. — Nicolai Serrarii, Trihæres., lib. II, chap. xvi. — Lireid. Moréri, although that one is not theirs that a very mediocre authority, art. Talmud and Talhudists, vol. VI, Paris, t732.

According to the continuator of the historian Josephus, "there is no limits to the hatred they have against the Karaites, because these Jews reject the Talmud, to remain religiously attached to the text of Moses. » T. pf, p. 359; Paris, 4710, Anonymous.

Digitized by Google

multitude of assertions and fables, sernhlabla to celtes of the gnostiqups and payons by extravagance and even by indecence. However, the Jews place the Tulmud- above the law of Moses. To study the Bible, it says in the Talinud himself, that's a merit, or it's not a merit;
To attend to the Mishnah is a merit, and we are part of it.
rewarded; but dealing with the Ghemara, there is no
It deserves to grow - It's this collection of traditions Pharisees, who form the greatest obstacle to conversion
'Jews.'

The Talmud contains "the most obscene fables," Even on the patriarchs and prophets, humanity did not is no less outraged than modesty*; » and not seidly
The rabbis place him above Moses, but at-above God himself; that is to say, the Talmud proclaims the superiority of the rabbis over their creator. Con-Let us confirm our word by an example, for it must seem more than questionable.

Peter the Venerable, abbot of Cluny, wrote against the Jews a treatise in five books; and, in the fifth, he them confuses them by simply turning the fables against them absurd and impious of the Talmud. In one of them, 'a this Question: What is God doing in heaven? (pages from the book)
The masterful response is: He does nothing but read.
assiduously study the Talmud, and converse with scholars about it Jews who composed it. Now, one day, in one of these conferences-
During the discussions, different kinds of leprosy were discussed, and Someone asked whether such and such a disease was or was not a leprosy. God had an opinion, and, unfortunately for him, The rabbis were of a different opinion. Following heated discussions-sions, the decision of the case was referred by mutual agreement to Rabbi Nehemiah, that the earth still had the happiness of to possess. The idea then came to God to send the angel down there

' Rohrbacher, Universal History of the Church, vol. V, p. 78; 1850.
Talmud, tractate Baba-Metzigna, f» 33.

2 Ib., t. XV, p. 483; 1851.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FOUR. 93

of the monastery, with the mission of bringing the soul of this wise man to heaven;
But the angel found this rabbi reading the Talmud, and the Talmud to die. The angel was therefore forced to use cunning; and, according to He did it at the Lord's command, above the rabbi's house.

such a racket that he looked away for a moment of the Talmud and could be struck.

Rabbi Nebemias' soul immediately ascended to the heavenly dwellings; there she found God fully occupied with dis-to cut the question and to defend it against the holy doctors of Judaism, and exclaimed at first: No, certainly not, this Disease is not leprosy! – God blushes at his defeat, but he dared not rise up against the decision of such a great man doctor, and soon he was heard to exclaim: Ah! my en-Fans have defeated me! Na-zahouni beuaï

"Such is one of the rabbinic fables with which the Talmud. There we see the satanic pride of the Pharisee, who puts his word above the word of God, his knowledge above-
"Sus of the knowledge of God, himself above God."
and, consequently, himself and his Talmud above Moses and the Mosaic Law! Some writers, it is true, claimed to equate these monstrosities with allegorical fables risks of the ancients; but "it suffices," an ancient tells us.
rabbi, to point out that the rabbis welcome them to the letter ' . "

And if we do not reject one of our authorities

'Bib!. PP., t. XXII, p. 1044.

2 Rohrbacher, Universal History of the Church, vol. XV, p. 481–2; 1851.

3 ürach, first letter, p. 74; 1825.— A note that follows the Gospel
The apocryphal tale of Thomas the Israelite recounts one of the monstrous tales rabbis. "This anecdote," it is said, "is nothing compared to a "Fou'e d autres que contenant les écrits des rabbis." Read, for convince yourself of it, \a. Bibtiotheca rabbinica, Rome, 1675–1693, 4 vols", folio, by the Dominican Bartolucci, who thoroughly studied these voluminous writings, and the Bibliothecahitina et hebraica, etc., by Jo. Imbonati, 1694.
"We have gone through this vast directory, and we have found some tales worthy of the Arabian Nights, and sometimes of extreme inde-
"Cence." P. 170, ibid., absurd fables, Book of Enoch, 343. id. Gospels Apocrypha, translated from the edition by C. Thilo, by G. Brunet, Second edition, enlarged; Paris, 1863.

Digitized by Google

9i THE JEWS.

safer, that of the ancient and learned Rabbi Dracb, whose

These doctors, we will know that almost all the guides of Israel confine their studies to the jumble of this dreadful theology!

However, man acts in all things according to his beliefs. What he sincerely believes passes, day by day, and so—wind even unknowingly, in his actions. The faith of a believer is therefore the reason for his customs, and the source of his morality ^ or Well, in other words, his morals are an expression of his faith—, from which we will say, without possibility of error, that, in every religious people, the average of their faith is also the average of their faith. average of the faithful! Among the Jews, where for a long—For centuries faith and law were one and the same thing; among this people who lived only by their re—In religion, the Talmud was therefore the ultimate provocateur of morals. the most antisocial, and the inspirer of the most intense hatred The ceremony of every Hebraist against every Christian. Veiling the scene—The clerical nature and turpitudes of its religious precepts, the to mask, but without suppressing the teaching; in a to hide them from the curious eyes of the uninitiated, such was the Consequently, the Jew's concern, as soon as, from the breast the people who sheltered him, cries of horror and exec—creation resounded with a formidable ensemble against its faith. Some texts then disappeared from this monstrous code, and ceased to be delivered to circulation, but, in the fearing that the world would have to mourn such a loss, the Rabbis hastened to entrust the passages to memory. which would have compromised them, and oral lessons replaced them the deleted letter.

“It is our duty,” the learned Orientalist had therefore written, to make con—to give rise to intolerant, inhumane maxims*, which the rabbins profess h with regard to converted Jews, Christians, pagans and Jews who betray the secrets of the Synagogue—

'Ib., first letter, p. 83; 18t3.

2 And of which he himself was a cruel example in 48X3.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FOUR. 95

that is to say, to prove the falsity through formal texts of the fourth decision of the Sanhedrin of 1807, without prejudice dice of what I would have to say relative to his other decisions! But Christian charity forbids me to publish, except in cases of absolute necessity, the translation of the passages revoltants that I could cite in this note. I will limit myself rent, and who know enough of the Rabbinic language to read them in the original books... »

Because the Talmud and other works of the rabbis contain hold a host of horrors and hateful recommendations tables against Christians and Christianity. But k de- since knowledge of the Hebrew language has widespread in Europe, Jewish printers took the precaution to remove all these passages, leaving la- They substitute names for them. those of Minim, Goyim nohhrim (Christians), Meschoum- Medim, Moumrim (baptized Jews)," and to remedy these gaps "they teach verbally what they indicate and correct words that were intentionally changed. Sometimes they also re- establish k by hand in their copies the deletions and the political corrections of Jewish authors. This last case arrived in the copy of the Talmud that I own. Hel- Vicus recounts in his treatise on paraphrases of the Bibles Chaldean Jews, p. 10, that he had a Talmud, of which a Jew had used it before him, and in which all these corrections were made with a pen.

"On the other hand, extreme scarcity and perhaps loss irreparable damage to several old books,... quite well known by their passages favorable to Christianity, gave rise to k the accusation of bad faith against the rabbis. I regret to declare that this accusation is founded, and that's one thing known in our nation that they made disappear (gane- 'zou) books that contradicted their doctrine'.

1 Among these, the Targum, of which these passages are cited by orientalists Lists of those who read them there: Jehovah told me: You are my son. These two, Father

Digitized by Google

96

THE JEWS.

It would therefore be quite wrong for the ill-advised lawyers to The Jewish race, they would tell us; k If one rejects the Israelites As Jews, they are punished for being born into a religion that is more... earlier than in another; it is a clear violation of 'all human and positive laws'. No, not at first; because apply k those who claim to be followers of the law of Moses' law of retaliation, to place themselves on the ground of their their own justice and turn their own code against themselves rule that governs them with regard to us. No, again; for we to propose the adoption of Jews, without worrying whether they persist-tent or not "in the superstitious practices that the rabbins added to the prescriptions of Moise" , » when these su-Mind-numbing persuasions are homicidal; it would be us to propose introducing the poisonous plant into wheat of the father of the family, and to defile the field of civilization.

That is why, some time ago, in an assembly which takes a task the regeneration of Judaism, an Israelite, struck by these considerations, the obviousness of which is beginning to be grasped "Clear-sighted minds," he exclaimed before Mr. Cœffler; "It is necessary to hasten to leave the old temple; – that is to say, to modern Jews, from the Talmudic temple, – if we do not we want to soon be buried under its ruins*. » It is still Why, nowadays, is one of the leading figures of the school of and Son, are three, in union with a third person, and these three

"They are but one substance, one essence, one God." Psalm 2, etc.
second letter, Drach, 1827, p. 263.

Modern Jews consider themselves the only monotheists, and They accuse us of worshipping multiple gods because of this dogma of the holy Trinity. See how, in the Old Law, their fathers worshipped, from the beginning In the most distant past, this God in three persons. Harmony between Church and Synagogue, vol. P', pp. 280, 285, 368, 453, etc.

Also, "some rabbis, in discussing the divine Trinity, expressed themselves" they were taught in such an orthodox manner that they left nothing to be desired in the most scrupulous theologian on the subject of terminology. » 76., p. 280; Paris, 1844.

* Jews in the Nineteenth Century, p. 16, by M. Bail, former inspector teur, eli . Second edition, Paris, 1816, in-8°.

^ Bible, Exodus, chapter 21, p. 24, etc.

K Th. Daloz, Des Juifs en France, p. 5-6; Paris, 1845.

* The Jews, their history, etc., p. 12; Paris, 1847.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FOUR. 97

Publicist philosophers, Kluber, demand of the Jew, before to allow civil and political society to confer upon it Citizenship status, conditions that most of our contemporary people would view the demands as insulting of an inquisitor, if any Catholic dared to formulate them.

free, authentic and irrevocable, the rejection, the hatred of Talmudism and everything else the government will declare to be able to reconcile oneself with the common good within Judaism of a state whose supreme power would not be among the rulers Jews

And let us note that the Jews are beginning to form sea, before our eyes, in three distinct categories: the indifferent, the reformers, that is to say the followers of a ve-legitimate Jewish Protestantism, and the Talmudists; but we We cannot sufficiently emphasize this point to the public, that these continue to form the im-the majority of the people of the dispersion. Now, "the Talmudists, composed of the older generation, people from the countryside, and those of the lowest class in the cities, recognize the religious authority of the rabbis and the authority The Talmudic law; they scrupulously observe not Not Mosaic law, but rabbinic law—they don't mix. to Christians only for their own self-interest, and continue to be the true enemies of the Church. That is the core 'indestructible of the nation that will endure until the end in his stubbornness.

This period, the end of the UMP, may be quite close to us, and of very long duration. Let us know, however, that it has formed for Germany, as early as 1831, an association of Jews and Christians whose goal is to found civilization-religious, moral and social teaching of the Israelites; and the report-

> Law of the German Confederation, 4th edition, § 516, note iv.
"Let us allow the former rabbi Drach to say, in this regard, that the work Mr. Beugnot's work, "The Jews of the West," deserves the most severe criticism. serious. > Read p. 505 and following, Letters of 1827, p. 278.

7

Digitized by Google

98

THE JEWS.

wearing this association's colors, which cannot be suspected, we offers a passage on which our words are strongly based;

"As long as Jews remain Jews, their emancipation will be "generally impossible!" For the Talmud, the law which governs...

Christianization. The big question therefore boils down to this to ask when the Talmud will perish, that is, when will reconstructed on another plane the consciousness of the Jew-sant, since only then will the insou- disappear-ciable?

However, let the clumsy advocates of the Jewish nation cease to attribute to an era of universal darkness Israel's love and admiration for the jumble of its theology. To speak like that would be to be oneself under the sway of thick darkness, or that would be pretending to mislead his century^ because the glorification of the Talmudic code is, from the part of the Jews, a fact of all ages; for, until our For days, Talmudic doctrine jealously preserved a considerable number of precepts worthy of drawing attention to them The anger and contempt of every honest man! And the Talmud, this imperishable code of the Jewish nation, whose pages have The Talmud contains formidable innuendo, let us repeat without ceases, is not a theological work that the Syna- Gogue can reject with impunity, it is the very expression of the rabbinical synagogue; he crushes Moses—he dominates God even in heaven ^ it is the supreme law, the civil law and '

religious of the Jew—he was so as soon as the spirit of hatred and of The lie exposed him. Alas, he has not ceased to be so to this day. of today, even for no man of Judaism who claims to the orthodoxy that his fathers followed!

We will take a look at a few points in a moment. of the morality in action of Judaism; for it is deduced

'German Catholic Encyclopedia, by the most learned professors' and doctors of theology from Germany, translated by Goschler, t. XII, p. 45S-i53, Paris, 186t; the preceding quotation, ib.

'Read these essays on justification in B^arride, p. 196, and reread p. 39.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FOUR. 99

(the orthodox doctrine of the Talmud, it is the Talmud k the work and producing its fruits of death. We will understand then, the importance of the deletions becomes increasingly clear. The leaders of Rahhinism prescribed to the printers dogmatic books that their failing faith begins k re- to form. Let us, however, conclude our chapter on the Talmud. by this assertion from one of his greatest admirers

"The Kabbalistic doctrine, which is the dogma of the high magic, is contained in the Sefer-Jesirah, the Zohar and the Talmud*. » We must therefore go and look in the te-shameful and unhealthy darks of magic, the venomous roots neuses of this Talmudic work k which, since the Christ, throughout the ages found the heart of the Jew attached; And from this necessity will be born our chapter on the Kabbalah.

The Talmudic Jews form "the indestructible core" of the nation" and the Talmud is the supreme law of the Jew, the source of his faith, his feelings, the rule of his morals. That is why, until the day the Talmud is destroyed, the Jew will be an unsociable being. In other words, a duel k dead, and whose outcome cannot be far off, remains between the Talmudic Jew and Christian society; between the Judasants and the men of the one and only civilization that it is possible for the world to produce, if experience and Reason speaks the truth to us.

* Eliphas Lévi, Dogmes et rituel, p. 93; 1861.

^ History of Magic, p. 28. Eliphas Lévi, (^minent batist.

NOTE.

"The first editions of the Talmud offer the text of this code in its entirety, like those of Krakow, of Venice in 1620; d'Amsterdam, 1600, folio, small format. It is necessary to consult the large rabbinical table of Venice, in four volumes printed by M. Bomberg, to find the hostile passages in the biblical commentaries directed against Christians.

(Some of the maxims I am going to state are not found

7.

Digitized by Google

400

THE JEWS.

than in the older editions I just mentioned. Talraud, treatises Gnaboda-Zara, fol., 4 v", in Thocephot; fol. 40 v", ib., fol. 26 v°, Sanhedrin; fol. 57 r®, Horiot, etc., etc. »

Maimonides, treatises On Homicide, ch. iv, § 40; On Idolatry, ch. x, § 4; On Rebel Doctors, ch. iii, § I, etc.; On Kingship, ch. ix, § 2, etc., etc., etc. Drach, Second letter, pp. 300-301; 4827.

In the edition of the Talmud by Frohen, printer of Basel, executed in 1584, the censors Marcus Marinus, Italus Braxensis, Petrus Gavai-Irius, removed the main passages that attack memory of our Savior, where Christians are represented "as devoted to the most inhuman vices, and where it is declared that the precepts of justice, fairness, charity towards one's neighbor, not only to them are not applicable, but are a crime." Some time later these deletions, the Jews felt compelled to reinstate in an edition from Krakow; but these reinstated passages having aroused indignation Christian Hebrew scholars, the Jewish synod, convened in Poland in 1631, he himself prescribed its removal in future editions, And here is the text of his encyclical.

Therefore, we enjoin, under pain of excommunication major, to print nothing in future editions of the Miscellany or of the Ghemara, which relates, for good or ill, to the acts of Jesus of Nazareth. We therefore urge you to leave in white marks the places that relate to Jesus of Nazareth. A circle like this one: O, placed in its place, will warn the rabbis and schoolteachers to teach these passages to young people orally only. By means of this precaution, the scholars among the Nazarenes (Christians) "They will no longer have any pretext to attack us on this subject." Drach, Harmony, t. I", p. 46'7-168.

END OF NOTE.

NOTICE TO THE READER.

The chapter on the Kabbalah should follow this one; but in order to connect more directly to the Talmud, the pages where Talmudic morality unfolds, we relegate this in- to the end of the volume, in the form of an appendix. interesting question. We ask the reader, however, to accept, under inventory profit, the few lines we need to extract from it to cast a ray of light on the paths we are taking.

The sinister Cabal gave birth to the cult of the stars and their spirits, the Sabaism, astrology, magic. It existed long before it received its name, and before the Jews, who assimilated it by modifying it. Also the Did the Jew become the prince of high heresy, as the Geniuses of the Kabbalah infested with their venom. The unitary doctrines of the Cabal prepared- They are preparing for and leading the unification of peoples.

Digitized by Google

"The Kabbalistic doctrine, which is the dogma of high magic, is contained in the Sefer Jesirah, the Zohar and the Talmud.

"Abraham, leaving Chaldea, had carried away the mystery of the Cabal. » – «The mystical doctrines and magical practices of Antiquity is partly preserved in the Kabbalah, whose books were held in as high esteem by the followers as the books of Hermes Trismegistus.

"The Kabbalah is the mother of the occult sciences, and the Gnostics are born of the Kabbalists." – "The Kabbalah, cultivated by the Jews with an art-unparalleled, almost single-handedly eclipsed all other sisters. secret societies.

There is an undeniable truth, "K," which is that he has a high science, an absolute science, etc." But, "this science is magic, whose dogma is the Kabbalah." And "it is certain that the Jews, deposited to keep silent about the most sacred secrets of the Cabal, almost always In magic, the great masters of the Middle Ages. Everything scientific-tific, grandiose in the religious dreams of all the enlightened, Swedenborg, etc., etc., is borrowed from the Kabbalah. All the associations-Masonic lodges owe their secrets and symbols to him.

To create a secret society, from which kings and pontiffs would emerge, This was "the dream of the dissident sects of Gnostics and Illuminati who claimed to link the faith to the primitive tradition... This idea of-A threat to society arose when a wealthy and dissolute order, initiated bound to the mysterious doctrines of the Kabbalah, he threatened the world with a A huge revolution. The Templars, whose history is so poorly understood, These were the terrible conspirators. The occult philosophy of magic veiled under the name of Cabal, it is indicated in all hieroglyphs sacred ancient sanctuaries and rites still so little known of the "Old and modern masonry."

The great Kabbalistic association known in Europe as of masonry, suddenly appears in the world at the moment when the Protests against the Church threaten to dismember Christian unity. leaders of this association "tolerate all beliefs, and do not profess- They share only one philosophy. They seek only the truth... and want- "Slowly, gradually bring all minds to Reason."

Some leading figures of Judaism openly profess this philosophy. Isophy, which corrupts and draws the Christian world closer to them. Kabbalists call the Jews our fathers in the faith, and their leaders are the leaders of "the great cabalistic association known in Europe as the name of masonry.

In the chapter on Kabbalah, we name the authors of these-tations, which are almost all among the declared enemies of Catholicism licism.

PART TWO.

CHAPTER FIVE.

FIRST DIVISION. – THE MORALITY OF THE TALMUD IN ACTION.

The first man and the first woman; dignity of the human race offspring of these two monsters. – Let us judge the tree by its fruit. – We let us know the morality which originates in Christian dogmas;
Does the one that departs from Talmudic traditions have any connection to it?

– Saint Chrysostom, Father of the Church, on the customs of the Jew; pain-prodigious ture. – Same description by the famous Simon Maiol to the Renaissance period. – Nothing had changed when Delamarre wrote his monumental Treatise on the Police. – Let us cease for a moment to judge Jewish doctrine through the customs of the Jew, and let us judge the Talmud through its text. – God creates Adam, who seeks a companion;
Finding no one suitable, he asks for one that is similar to him.

– Eve is worthy of Adam, and transmits to us the venom of the serpent.
The Talmud being the supreme law and belief of the Orthodox, and
The Talmud makes man regulate his actions according to his beliefs.
Jewish as he is. – An example of the eternal sentiment tamed in France.
and in the nineteenth century, by the Talmud. – Proscription of the pre-varicator.

Kabbalah is the soul of the Talmud, and the Talmud is the mold of the conscience of the Orthodox Jew. Both, the Tal-Mud and the cabal, therefore, will have to present themselves to our eyes, no no profile, but roughly a front view; and, if every tree must be judged by its fruits, what tasty and healthy fruits!
will we see them emerge from him whose fruitful branches
let fall to earth and pile up at their feet the believers under the weight of which the Jew, if he does not wish to cease

At the end of this volume, we reject, and explain why, the chapter of the Kabbalah.

to be what his fathers were, must cover and in some so as to conceal the law of Moses from view?

Alongside these fruits of the Talmud, the reader may wish to... to place, for a moment, in thought, the fruits of the tree evangelical morality, in order to know them better. Evangelical morality, and we know this, originates at the base of the Christian dogmas. It is said of her, and the unbelievers have not This point, proclaimed less loudly than the faithful, is this morality is both the most magnificent and the most complete that ever had enlightened the world. To invent it, if we are to believe some men—my such as the famous Jean-Jacques, was above the human strengths. The intelligence that amazes her restores her a legitimate tribute, and nature, which it softens and cor— by taming it, recognizes both its gentleness and its strength. It is divine, and such are the splendid ones of this liter radiance of her beauty, which the most sub— variations, when they seek to make their way to In the midst of the crowds, they are reduced to making treacherous attacks on him. prunts', b usurp his name, and b compose himself with her a resemblance that plays tricks on the eyes; Corruptio optimi pessima.

But since evangelical morality is a worldly thing the best known, so let's see if the one that arises from traditions Rabbinic, or precepts of the Talmud, would or would not something to do with this rule of Christian morals. An easy, curious study, and one that few strokes will otherwise render complete, or at least sufficient. And, first of all, if the greatest part, though the least sublime, of Catholic morality Islam has its code in the Bible, and let the Talmud be, as the rabbis affirm, a commentary on this Sacred book: how are the fruits of the Bible divine?

'Those, for example, who make Christ the prince of the doctrine of egalitarians.

"We may be permitted to call the doctrines of the Talmud or the Pharisaic or rabbinic traditions predating the writing— tion of the Talmuds, since the Talmuds are the code in which they were formulated these doctrines.

Digitized by Google

40i

THE JEWS.

among the men of Christ, while those of Rahhinism would be described as demonic by the Fathers themselves of Demonic AI, we would hardly dare utter that word, were it not for Saint John Chrysostom; and nothing seems to us—more interesting than seeing, from the fourth century onwards, a to what extent has the distorted doctrine of Judaism degenerated? had, in the name of God, brought down public morality of Israel. If, therefore, the lessons of history have for us what—What an attraction! Let us listen to the impassioned words of this powerful doctor. a keen observer, attentive witness and studious observer of historical customs women he stigmatizes:

"In the past, Jewish fasts only resulted in..." trials and disputes; today, they lead to the li—debauchery and debauchery: we see these men, barefoot, dancing in public squares; they claim to be fasting, but Their actions are the actions inspired by drunkenness. Let's listen. how the prophet wants you to fast: "Sanctify the Fasting! » Thus fasting turns to your benefit. It does not say Not: "Make fasting a profane festival." No, but he said: "Announce the solemn assembly, gather the elders." And the Jews of today, gathering troops of effe—mined by numerous bands of wretched courtesans, attract the entire theater to the synagogue, and the actors of the scene; for their synagogue differs in no way from these places public! What am I saying? The synagogue is not just a theater and a place of prostitution; it is a cavern of bandits, a den of wild beasts. Your house is de—came, so to speak, the hyena's den, said the Seigneur'; and not of an ordinary beast, but of a beast "Impure!"

What, Christians! "when the time for assembly you

'Joel, ch. I, v. 14.

2 Of the infamous: soft; qui alterius fornicationem sustinent, qui in semetipsis fœminas profiteer. From the Ganges.

3 Jeremiah, chapter 7, verse 11.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FIVE. <05

call to the church, you do not awaken the zeal of the indifferent rents—, but when the demon calls you to this solemnity Jewish woman of the Trumpets, instead of retaining those charmed by this by calling them, you let them engage in the place of impiety and on the slippery slope of impurity! For courtesans, the gather. And why speak of the impurities that are committed there?

Tent? Aren't you afraid your wife won't come back from it?
possessed by the demo? Haven't you heard it clearly demonstrated—
He lies, in our first interview, about the souls of the Jews and the places where they gather serve as dwellings for Demons? How dare you, when you have taken take part in a diabolical dance, return to the assembly of Apostles? What! Are you not seized with terror and

"Horror after such misdeeds!"

Living only for their stomachs; hungry for precious goods feelings; of an independence, of a greed, of morals in a words comparable to those of pigs and goats^ the Jews do not know—wind only one thing: to let go of the reins, of intemperance and Drunkenness. The last of the taverns is even less

The synagogues are despicable. The Synagogue is not a A dwelling place of thieves, it is the very dwelling place of demons; and we could say the same about the souls of the Jews."

The famous bishop of Vultourre, Simon Maiol*, seems having taken on the task, among so many other historians, of carrying at the very heart of the Renaissance era, the powerful and The terrible testimony of which Saint John Chrysostom was resounded in the fourth century, when his eloquence thundered born against the morals of the disciples of the Pha— tradition risky.

On the Perfidy of the Jews, such is the title under which it appeared with the brilliance of a noisy meteor the treaty in which he

* Saint John Chrysostom, Complete Works, new translation by Abbé J. Bareille, vol. II, first discourse, p. 349, etc.; second discourse course, p. 372; Paris, Vivès, <863.

^ A remarkable scholar, but one who, in secular sciences, shared—he was making a large number of mistakes made by his contemporaries.

Digitized by Google

postures that these sinister men are plotting. From the height of his doctoral seriousness, he therefore enjoins them to reject the baits that the Jew's hand offers them, and not to prostitute themselves to kill as foolishly as they are inclined to do freedom which is acquired by them by hereditary right.

"These traitors, the most wicked of all men, surrender our homeland, our resources, our strength, and to the Turks We tolerate them, and we feed them! That's fueling the "Fire in our bosom is like warming the serpent there."*

Be wary, and be wary again! For "experience never ceases" to demonstrate that, from the first to the last, the Jews for-follow the Christians with the most implacable hatred, and that If the opportunity promises them impunity, they band together and rush upon them in tight battalions, like 'a troops of harpies who cannot get enough blood that they suck. Ah! fear even their solicitousness even to their obsequious submission; for you have all the more reason to fear them because treachery creeps in beneath their eagerness', Look at the thousand deceptive forms whose wear and tear they bear! Driven by them, it lends itself to unimaginable schemes to devour you; and see in-core: if thieves, criminals, etc. are encountered women forced into prostitution, the Jewish house opens of herself, before their very eyes, and recognizes in them hosts (prompium proebent hospitium). Let these people ra-Pine come to offer the Jew the proceeds of a robbery, and he
He buys them immediately at a low price; he encourages these wretches, It stimulates them and helps them with all the harmful effects. True fruits of gallows (Jurdferi)^ scourges of all honest people, de-endowed with the right to all tolerance, the Jews are, in a word, the instigators and auxiliaries of the son of a family cou-

* Nec libertatem hereditario acquisitam, ità temerè prostitute ve-lint. Vol. III, p. 7; Moguntiae, 1615.

* Ibid., p. 809, col. 2.

3 Ibid., p. 810, col. 1.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FIVE. 107

between his father, the daughter against her mother, and the servant against-to be his master. And how many minions does magic not have?
not in their ranks!

we would not have dared to grant him this apparent license to speeches, if these words of great, courageous and salutary These truths, had they not been reflected so precisely, after so much centuries, the words of one of the Church Fathers, of one of these doctoral illustrations before which they bowed to this day, human generations—but language that would hardly be able to accommodate nervous ears any more than forms the delicately parliamentary style of an era where laissez-faire tends to become the sole principle of life social!

It is up to us now to see if the religious century of Louis XIV, and the Regent's not-so-religious century, did not would have recalled the iniquities of the Jew, in one of their the most remarkable historical monuments, as for the to rehabilitate by offering us a description of their customs which destroys our old and legitimate prejudices, and which allows us to question the fidelity of the punishment the ture that we owe to the vigorous and terrible brush of Simon Maiol. Let us therefore open the Treatise on the Police, this great and monumental work whose author, under the inspiration of Lamoignon and the Colberts, and under the very patronage of Regent, in his pages, describes the relationship between the Jew and the Christian Well. Would the Jew have received the slightest praise there? it may be possible for us to conclude an amendment in its mo- Reality? No! And without deigning to say a word to us what kind of character has the descendant of Jacob has the date of his quadruple vintage this book

< Ilodie otiam apud Jufiaeos, præsertim in Oriente, quid magia frequentius?... Tradunt ipsi Judaici senpiores sepluaginla seniores sues, seu Sanhedrin, magiam apprimè calluisse, idque, iiiquit R. Semoloh, ut præstigiatores eo facilius convincereni! Ib., p. 920, col. 2.

2 First volume in 1705, second in 1710, third in 1719, quatrième in 1738, folio.

Digitized by Google

408

THE JEWS.

silence, as if there was nothing new to teach us about the Jew; as if, within the Kurope, the Jew who remained firm and immutable in his Talmudic faith, he must have remained immutable in its morals; and such is indeed the testimony on this point—

sion of the motives that dictated the famous letter of 1212 of innocent 111, and which determine in the year 1391 the justice of the King John:

"Such is the ingratitude of the Jews," exclaimed the pontiff, "that this nation, sustained by Christian piety with so much kindness, "only gives thanks to its benefactors." crimes and insults »

And when a century and a half had passed since that In the letter, the historian adds: "The twenty-eight years that the king Jean had allowed them to remain in France in the year 1360. and the sixteen years of extension that Charles V had given them granted, were not to expire until the year 1396. But the crime and the abominations they committed every day obligingly Charles VI managed to anticipate this term. He titled it by letters patents of September 17, 1394, which banished the Jews to perpetuity of his states, and forbade them to remain there "hardly a lifetime."

However, after this fourteenth century, two other centuries followed... sink, and the cruel Police Treaty returns to Israel We are told, k the date of the year 1705: "Some Jews of Portugal and Holland having come to settle in France under pretext for trade, at the beginning of the last century— The king was informed, and this gave rise to a declaration. ration of April 23, 1615, by which His Majesty banished from his kingdom, all the Jews, and forbade them to remain there under the penalties imposed by the ordinances of his predecessors, the kings their sisters.

The leader, the protector, the king of the French nation re—< P. 824–2. Read the gruesome details in which this letter goes.

2/6., p. 285.

3 T. I, p. 285.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FIVE. 109

He therefore finds himself facing the same men of evil that his predecessors found there; and these Jews, that it is a question to push them out and remove them at all costs, therefore, have ceased to be, in the opinion of France, a public scourge. Let us not, however, consider this severe prohibition prevents a number of these adventurous men from world, what dam could be impervious to the Jewish race!*

But it signifies what it must have been in the eyes of the vigilante supreme follower of the Talmud, whom the Attorney General of In 1717, Regent Philippe d'Orléans called "the monster of "Civil society!"

After briefly judging Jewish doctrine
Let us now judge by the customs of the Jew in itself.
this adulterated doctrine; let us open the book that contains it, Let's go back to the early days of the world, let's take a look an eye on man, as she describes him to us, emerging from hands of the Creator, and thus let us see, from the very beginning, what becomes biblical truth, what becomes of the sacred books the creation of Moses and the very dignity of our nature before the masterful words from the Talmud.

"The Lord," says this book of books, "did not want to give—to be a companion to the father of humankind before he he himself asked. For, "later it happened that she would in—God, who committed sin, maintained that Adam was not in right to reproach him for a disastrous gift. But having taken this precaution against the one he had made in his image. God made all creatures pass before this monarch of the earth—
res. Now, the first act of the Talmudic Adam is one of these outrages against nature that the law of Moses punishes implacably death penalty*; religious crime, because it is inspired by the gods, that is to say the evil spirits*, constantly applied to corrupt, to degrade the dignity of man;

'A passage that we will quote in another chapter.

* Bible, Leviticus, 18th, 23–29; 20th, 15–16, etc.

® Dii gentium dæmonia. Ps. xcv, 5.

Digitized by Google

440

THE JEWS.

vulgar crime later, and which took its place among the abominations of these Canaanites, whose sword Israel owed to purge the earth.

Adam, who is looking for a partner, falls into prodigious errors; and, far from punishing him, God

pull a rib out of the body, and he builds an aged Eve from it. twenty years old*. But will our first grandmother show herself superior to this sad husband? Will she have tastes of Less humiliating deviations? – Answer: Common opinion The rabbis believe that the mother of men had for the service pent an affection which this inside animal took advantage of to to lead her to transgress the divine precept. Also the Did the monster transmit to him the venom she transmitted? his posterity'.

Such were, according to the venerable doctors of Talmud, the customs of our first fathers in the heart of the parailis and in a state of innocence! Adam's penance did not take place that after his sin, that is, when he had eaten the fruit defended; and we will cite as proof of its long duration the rigor of a fast of one hundred and thirty years, during the- which he refused to drink, to eat, and isolated himself from Eve. Thus, this excess of imprudent rigor had its dis- an early reaction; for the day Adam saw Lilit, a female demon

'We provide the Latin text for the continuation of this narrative, but We do not want to reproduce it in its entirety: Tune compressed omnes... sed cum nihilominus et Terverc... petivita Deo sociam similem sibi. Drach, second letter, pp. 340–311; 4817.

* Second letter from the scholar Drach, former rabbi, pp. 340–314, Paris, 4,827; in-8". – Id., De perfidie Judæorum, by Bishop Maiol, p. 809, col. 2; Moguntia, 1643.

* Multities eam... cum sese... injected in eam tabem, Zoufiama, – qua posteritas mulieris inficitur. These are the own expressions from the Talmud, tractate Shabbot, fol. 446 r"; tractate Yebamot, fol. 403 v"; treatise Aboda-Zara, fol. 22v®. Drach, Harmony, t. II, p. 321, 4844; – letter see rnde., Id., p. 343; 4827. Read about these acts, common in the idolatrous world, Serpentem inter et muliorem; Anthropo-studies logics, the cult of the Serpent, etc., by Doctor Boudin, physician in head of the Saint-Martin military hospital, of the army of Italy, etc., etc.; Paris, 4864, Rozier, 88 pages in-8®.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FIVE. 111

Nin, Lilit pleased him, while Eve, abandoned, met her on the side of the demons who were not of her sex, and that these seducers appealed to him. Thus was born the fierce and ter- race 'rible of men born from demons'.

Oh, the singular austerities of penance among this people!

of her own accord, the reverse, as soon as he revolts against his Creator! Oh, the lamentable aberrations of his doctrinal book! and doctoral par excellence, which brings us back to the naive from which the simplest things are said, these harmful things and calamitous relations between man, the demon and the bully ' !

Man acts according to his faith; his belief engenders his actions, when this belief is sincere. That's what we let us repeat constantly; also the conviction of infallibility Is the doctrinal teaching of the Talmud so deeply rooted? in the spirit of the pure orthodox, which it dominates in the father from family to the most natural feelings, to the the most indomitable instincts of the heart. The fear of withering the innocence of his own sons was therefore, until yesterday, insufficient to prevent the Jew from introducing them to these detestable studies.

Thus, for example, and saying it is easier than believing it, the Talmud's assertion regarding the first reports is Adam's relationship with animals "repeated in a commentary that is taught to very young children; and this comment, the only one taught in schools, ren- closes a host of similar horrors, which the masters cannot- vent se dispense ctexpUquer aux élèves. The first part, which explains Genesis, contains twenty-seven of these passages

* Drach, second letter, p. 316, ibid.

^ Idem, De aliis contra naturam criminibus. Reading in the Church and Sgrmgogue, pp. 131-136, the remarkable words and the cruel accusations of K[^]iza, sanctioned by the eighth canon of the council of Toledo, in 693, which lists fifty-nine bishops. – On alliances between man and the demon, read our book The High Phenomena of the magic, ch. vi; Paris, 1864, Plon.

Digitized by Google

112

THE JEWS.

that I can remember, but I think the number is more considerable." Now, he continues to tell us, in the year 1827, the learned orientalist Drach whom we have just quoted, a The Jewish priest of Paris felt compelled to dismiss a schoolteacher. that he had placed near his children because the latter had of Judaism. What, then, was the gravity of this act?

Here it is: "This young man had taken the liberty of deleting in His lessons contain one of those revolting passages! It's blasphemy!
"Our wise doctors," said the father, "believe that..."
Their writings contain pernicious things. And our
The schoolteacher experienced this firsthand; no longer able to find employment... passion among the Jews of this country, despite his high level of education,
He fell into deep poverty, unable to obtain the the slightest help from his brothers. Christian charity helped him to return to Berlin, his hometown.

If the Talmud is, in Judaism, the cause of the moral corruption, we will have to see if it was not, if it would not yet be, in the places where it dominates, the source of a hatred whose flow poured forth, or is pouring forth, from the breast of Israel over every foreign man of his race. Each of the cha-
The clowns who will appear in our pages will enlighten us.
according to its title, on the strange customs of which these traditions
The Pharisaical views of the rabbis became the principle.

'Drach, second letter of a converted rabbi, p. 311; Paris, 1827.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FIVE.

113

DEDXIÊMK DIVISION. – HOR.VLE OF THE TALMUD IN ACTION.

WOMAN IN JEWISH LIFE.

The young girl in the paternal house next to her brothers in the butte to the explanations of Talmudic turpitudes! – The rabbi and the scholar-
The woman's place among the Jew; beautiful thoughts. – Reply from History. – Mr. Crémieux speaks like history. – The Talmud equates women with slaves. – No law, even in marriage, does not guarantee her even the simplest respect from her husband, for which she is of butcher's meat... – She must tolerate his concubine even under the marital roof. – 11 It suffices that This concubine must not be unfaithful, for then she would not be than a brute in the eyes of the law. – A bizarre display of judicial modesty.

– Right of manual correction of the woman and right of divorce.

– Before God and in religious gatherings, a woman counts
for nothing. – Teaching him the holy law is as guilty as he is.

Jewish blood. — Defects and qualities. — Proportion of two tommes of A much worse life is lived among Jews than among Christians.
(Jewish confession). — The Jew owes it to the Talmud to provide for the proletariat its froth. — But the profession of Judaism redeems, in the eyes of the lalmudisant, all weakness of the woman.

And now, what will they do with their Eve's daughter?
venerable doctors of the Talmud? In what egalitarian or Will the sacred book place her in a position of inferiority in relation to The man? And what if, in the father's house, the younger sister was not separated from her brothers and their tutor by a wall of brass, from which will be born his chance to escape the early appetites for corruption that explain the turp-Talmudic studies will have developed in the heart of the com-companions or the guardian of his childhood? Who will stand by morning to night near his ears to protect his innocence and to protect it against inevitable desecration including the religious lessons from his brothers' schoolteacher will be the root cause? Finally, jwiir to keep the intact
The freshness of its purity will inspire profound contempt in him.
that before our very eyes the lammuçant will testify to the woman and the state of ignorance and abjection in which he con-damned to rot?

No, no, our Christian friend, replied the Jew, you do not con-hardly Israel-, far from degrading women, "the Talmud

8

Digitized by Google

THE JEWS.

remain faithful to the inspirations of Scripture. » Listen, for to repeat to your family some of his beautiful maxims, and "perhaps they will silence the critics of our principles.

"A man must honor his wife, for the blessing of "God only enters our homes because of women!"
— "The loss of the first wife is also painful that would be harmed by the destruction of God's sanctuary." — "Those Those who do not marry do not know happiness; Divine blessing will not enter their home, and they will never experience pure joys." — "It all depends on "The woman," says the Midrash Yalkut. — "Even the altar weeps."
on the one who separates from the woman who received his first oaths. — "One last word, moreover, testifies to bins recommend not marrying girls without the having consulted them, and without regard to their tastes. That's it.

a recommendation that some might need
"Fathers who are not Israelites!"

Most of these maxims, some of which have the breathe in biblical fragrances, rest and refresh the soul.
took. Let us not forget, finally, "that Jewish women showed themselves-they treated in public, on the promenade, in the houses of prayer, in the schools where they came to collect their sons or listen to the words of the master," and that they compare-knew "in the courts where they brought their grievances."

This would refute "one of the most serious criticisms that the foreigner addresses the Judaizer," and which is formulated in these terms: "Israelite law makes women inferior beings;
She denies her all her rights; she deprives her of her freedom;
She delivers her defenseless to her masters; finally, she does not leave.se not even this consolation, which can replace for all we have lost: participation in the law religious*.

'Archives Israélites, XXI, p. 938 to 941,)'='■ November 1866.

^ Archives Israélites, XX, p. 897; 1866.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FIVE. 115

"To educate herself about her duties, to seek in the pray for the strength to accomplish them, to instill them in children.
to encourage them to go to schools, to seek the co-supplement to the instruction she gave them; to put her
A husband capable of studying religion: that's what the Talmud says.
He asks the woman. And then we're told he's excluding her.
of religious law!... Oh! truly, what an outrage! Such is the language of the wise men of Judah.

The first response in history to the claims of these Doctors, this must be a piece that we accept from them hand. It was created by one of the world's most illustrative artists.
Jewish, the highest dignitary of the Scottish Rite of France Freemasonry; the one who first presided over the important association of the Universal Israelite Alliance, finally one the provisional sovereigns of France during the installation of the Second French Republic.

Mr. Crémieux, since we have just named him, does general assembly of this singular association. 11 the en-he passionately maintains his brethren from the East, among whom we will need to search more specifically soon for the Judaizing Jew, this type unchanged for centuries, and who, nowadays, in the liberal regions of Europe, oh

An unmistakable sign of the times! It stirs, emerges from itself, transforms, metamorphoses before our very eyes, feels his faith more unsteady with each step that brings him closer to the right of
He is criticized among the people who welcome him, and is ashamed of his morals.
Talmudic teachings, he rejects them while flattering them with a gentle hand.
reuses the Talmud, and, devoid of all belief, opens with love, his intelligence and his heart, to the doctrines of liberation-anti-Christianism whose sinister drone fills the atmosphere.

"Wherever the complaint comes from!" he exclaimed.
The Jewish orator, our help is coming to him. We are coming,

• Archives Israélites, XXIII, p. 993-i, 1866.

8.

Digitized by Google

146

THE JEWS.

the box in your hand, proceed with the creation of schools up to-unknown times. Mogador, Tangier, Constantinople, Salonikathat, Damascus, Baghdad, our alliance is everywhere, and com-
It begins to regenerate the children. I don't know how quickly.

Instinct drives these children of the Orient, whose progress we They're astonishing...! Girls' schools take up a lot of our time.
girls become women, women become mothers res-, it is through mothers that the memories are engraved in the hearts of children are introduced to the first principles, the first ideas that are The decision of life. I confess, between us, gentlemen, that I have always had for women the gentlest, the most Irresistible inclination. (Laughter.) I understood early on. that the fate of our children depends above all on them, that is to say-
To tell you the happiness of our life; and, if I must tell you all my Thoughtfully, I never really understood why people wanted to hold them in a state of inferiority. I don't want to, above all, the com-
"to take from the Jewish family"

The veil of subjection in which Jewish women were kept.
Wealthy young girls were sent to schools. What Schools! In underground locations, sheltered from the heat, casually stretched out on rugs, they passed the enjoyed indolence. The poor girls had not meeting place. Inside the houses, the Women lived in dependence and submission. And while, gathered in the synagogue, the Jews met me—they bestowed these great honors, the memory of which cannot be forgotten.
On the face of my soul, women, relegated, offered themselves with difficulty k my gaze. I had resolved to rise up against these habits—Are you Muslims, I asked your family?

Do you treat your wives the way they treat their wives? Is that that the God of Israel did not make woman from our flesh?
Isn't she the mother of our children?... Isn't she that (our) law has not placed women on the same level as men in these touching words: Honor your father and your mother? And how will your son honor his mother, if, in the mai—

Digitized by Google

117

CHAPTER FIVE.

his father, he does not see her honored, she, the wife, has equal to his father V »

These words, uttered with art, tact, and caution...
tions that the ticklish ones were imperiously demanding the audience's ears, prepare us for the speech more doctoral, and often so piquant, that it was recorded for posterity one of the most learned men to have come out of Judah daim, and that we have more than once amicably he-sheltered under the roof that protects us*. The Talmud tells us in In 1844, this former rabbi, "the Talmud which assimilates in "All things, the woman to the slave," declares the husband so master of the one he marries, even if he profanes the laws
The most inviolable aspects of marriage do not include women.
to complain, and that he has the right to dominate all his resistances
These. It is therefore up to him "to use them willingly or unwillingly, like meat bought from the butcher, and intended for to suffer, without complaining, that the one who paid for it "accomp-fashion according to his taste and whim.

The masters of the Pharisaic tradition, the doctors of Talmud, the rabbis, who permit and command k the gold—

However, the husband is tempted to ally himself with an unfaithful woman, because the unf... represents a brute to them; and whoever loves him, loves a Stupid. But the husband's cohabitation is not frightening at all.

their morals; and the concubine dared to implant with her adultery under the marital roof, this fact has nothing to erase them from Red; far from Ik! May this rival of the wife not be married; that, above all, she not be unfaithful, and by Even if it is reduced to the level of an animal, everything will henceforth be for the better, and that's all rabbinic rigorism is about. demands!

* Archives israélites, I, p. 14-16, January 1, 1867.

® See Harmonie, t. I", p. 73; Paris, 1844, Drach.

5 Harmony between the Church and the Synagogue., ibid., vol. II, pp. 334-5. Talmud, tractate Sanhedrin, fol. 58v, and tractate Nedarim, fol. 20v, which explicitly authorizes the husband: naturali omisso... Read more, ibid. p. 335.

Digitized by Googic

<48 THE JEWS.

We will not hesitate to point out that, among the masters cited in our pages "on the decisions of the Sanhedrin of 1807," and from which it follows that the pro-Jews They make this convenient doctrine, there is that of Ramban (Moses Nahmenides), whose authority in the Synagogue is so Great! Yet this rabbi is astonished that one could "question If such a thing is permitted. I cannot conceive, he said, How could anyone doubt it! It's definitely a business. permissible./» Rabbi David Adubrabam reports these same words of Ramban' and corroborates them with several sentences of Maimonides. » According to the meaning that the rabbis give h These words from Genesis: "Be fruitful and multiply," therefore no need to submit to the yoke of marriage to achieve the providential goal of the multiplication of the human species; and, through the most provocative disregard for the laws of morality, the liber-Tin and the cowardly seducer do not accomplish with less than 'deserves that virtuous honor is "a divine precept"

As soon as we have learned what the nothingness of woman is Under the roof of the Orthodox Jew, we will be careful not to We should be surprised if the man she calls her husband is not in intensive care. his master's title; if his marital title invests him with right to criticize, to correct the one whom marriage delivers to him;

marry his aunt, while the uncle remains free to marry his niece, for the reason that, in this first case, the conveniences would deprive the nephew of the right to manual correction if necessary for marital bliss!

But this same woman, without offending public morals, mudiques, lived all the time under the marital roof of a Married man, did this woman come to hug him herself? the knots of marriage, oh! that from then on she takes good care to be shameless enough to allow the daring eye of a man to catch a glimpse of just a few strands of his

'P. <<3, col. 3, ed., of Prague.

*Ibid. Drach, Harmony, t. 1, p. 208.

® 76. Harmony, t. II, p. 335.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FIVE. 115

hair; for this forgetfulness of oneself would be a crime against religion ' ^ the husband would find himself at that very moment in the right to expel him from the marital home and to issue him a divorce letter'; she allegedly caused a scandal in the within the chosen people!

Another point: The public prayers of the Synagogue, and Most religious ceremonies can only be performed in front of a meeting of ten people, because of this number, According to the rabbis, it attracts the presence of the Lord. However-dant, K, if there were nine men and one million women, There would be no assembly, for the reason that the women would not are nothing," But let a thirteen-year-old boy just happen years and a day, everything changes immediately, and "there is an assembly holy'.

What! The Jewish woman is nothing? That is truly good Little. Nothing compared to the God she worships! Nothing compared to the son she bore! Nothing compared to the man who, under the marital roof, the place between the concubine that he... She prefers the ever-threatening divorce letter! counts for so little in the world, "that it is excluded from all the ceremonies of worship % she cannot even, without sin, take- to learn the principles of his religion." And "that who teaches his daughter the holy law, says the Talmud, is also "Guilty only if he taught her obscenities!"

Blind guides, said Christ, who take care to pass what you drink, so as not to swallow a gnat, and who swallow a cha-meau! Saint Matthew, Evang., xxiii,

2 Harmony, vol. II, pp. 373-4. The coquettes reconcile the laws of the modesty and decency in wearing false hair. Ibid.

3 Talmud, tractate Meghilla, fol. 23v»; tractate Sanhedrin, fol. 2r®.

'Harmony, t. II, p. 335-6, ib., 1844. Drach, i6.

® In France itself, even today (1844), despite the fortunate In light of the failings of the Jewish faith, scrupulous Jews forbid their women to enter the part of the synagogue where the men are. They must be held either in a separate room or in the galleries. upper rooms closed off with grilles and curtains. » Harmony, vol. II, p. 334; Paris, 1844.

® First letter, ibid., p. 85-6, 1825; – Harmony, vol. II, p. 338; 1844. Talmud, treatise Sotah, fol. 20 r“; id., – Malmonides, treatise Study

Digitized by Google

120

THE JEWS.

Certainly, we will be candid enough to acknowledge that if ja-but a religious law tainted by such offensive passages to the modesty and feelings of a self-respecting person that the Talmud, could be imposed upon us, our first Our concern would be to avert our daughters' eyes from it, and that, according to rabbinic sayings, we would also believe ourselves guilty of prescribing its study to him rather than teaching him obscenities. But, oh reversal of the laws of nature, it is not out of a feeling of respect for the woman, it is out of respect for this vile code of her religion-gion, may the Talmudic Jew keep his daughter away from him!

A few years after Dracli's doctoral pen... had revealed these mysteries, and while the sustained wind of the revolution continuing to destroy, 'to throw pell-mell and one on the other, all religious beliefs, ended up in-to tame the hitherto unwavering faith of the Jew, a painter of customs of Jewish origin revived with a stroke of the brush grasping the whole of this situation j and its table, if we were removing the words we just mentioned, galleries of history as well as light and fantastical works than that of a malicious and mocking artist:

of the law, ch. i, § 13; id. 1. I'''. p. 59. Under the old law, the woman was, from the point of view of worship, inferior to man, but the law of-Redemption has fully rehabilitated her. St. Paul, Gaia, v. 28.

"Every man is obligated to teach his daughter religious law," he said. the Talmud. Solah, ch. 9; Mishnah; 1, in the name of Ben-Azai, say the Archives israéliles, XXI, p. 916; 1866. And in the following issue, They add, regarding Talmudic contradictions: "The Talmud We record the pros and cons, like the newspapers that report A record of the proceedings of an assembly; it is a report. conscientious and impartial about everything that was said. But, when several Opinions are at stake; it is history that must be consulted to determine its-see the one that prevailed. » XXII, p. 994; 1866.

It is therefore history that we question, because it teaches us... takes what is practiced under the rule of the Talmud, and we see there that the escape route of the XrcAïues is only a false door, because n ne the question is not what can be registered under this or that title in the religious code, it is a matter of knowing what is contained in this book as principle, as a rabbinical teaching, and that is what history has just told us. The very words of Mr. Crémieux, president of The Alliance Israélite Universelle reminded us of this. See above.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FIVE. 121

"The Jewish woman has earned less than her husband in wealth-facts brought about by the progress of civilization and the freedom. Woman was nothing but a slave everywhere and always, and that's It was on her that the effects of the mood fell for a long time forced by her husband, she was the instrument of his pleas. sirs, a scapegoat constantly intended to appease the the pains and sorrows of misery and persecution!

"Responsible for all domestic care and for perpetuating" the family, the Jewish woman seemed to have been born for nothing else; her A monotonous life unfolded amidst all these preoccupations. tions,... happy again when her selflessness and her de- His devotion did not attract complaints and bad luck. treatments. The woman was not counted as anything in the state social of the Israelites; his birth was not, like that men, recorded in the community register; His death was not the subject of any such act; his active life and suffering swept across the earth like a hurricane. We did not teach-Jewish girls knew nothing of literature, science, and

'gion'; they were only accustomed to suffering and silence. The entrance
They were forbidden from entering the temple until their marriage, and one has
It is difficult to comprehend their devotion, even their fanaticism.
when one knows that Judaism has nothing to do with the Jemmes, that he grants them no place in the social hierarchy cial;... that he only regards them as indisconceivable, barely worthy of any consideration and some attention! "

Barely married, "the Jewish woman returns to the state of com-
The ordinary filth of her caste. – Unhappy-A fiery temperament generally characterizes the Jewish beauties, and this is, for a great many of them, a pitfall that makes them easily fall and give in to everything

'And the woman, that's family! We see it in France, where, until-that here, only the catechized woman was able to fight against impious nonsense the dissolving forces of philosophical liberalism, and saving society by saving the family.

Digitized by Google

122

THE JEWS.

the corruption of the time without them being held back by religious apprehensions, which are fading day by day in Judaism h as persecution and danger disappear. » Jewish women are also "in great distress-They are sought after by artists, who find models in them finished... »

"The Jewish woman, less than any other, has stripped the
The character of her sex. She is imperious and talkative, weak And gullible, gossipy, and a busybody... She has habits very homebodies, deeply despises Christian women and She speaks ill of her fellow believers... Besides, she is sensitive and generous; charity is a virtue she practices best than humility and marital obedience. When the Jewish women belong to the first families, and when they have received a careful education, they do the honors of a salon with rare distinction, grace and spirit facts*. "

The customs of Judaism are therefore changing; they are becoming improve: Israel ceases to resemble itself; it

This alteration, this transformation, occurs with a dizzying speed everywhere the Jew has common sense and good a desire to emancipate oneself, to break free from the constraints of the Talmud; but also the Jewish woman, that ardent and so long-Captive time, emancipates itself and breaks free from the constraints where the held back a husband who was too often merciless. That is to say, he is true, that the restraint, which for her replaced morality, was weakening-blit; that his taste, that his passion for pleasures and luxury her training, that "her fiery temperament" throws her into the world's fiery whirlpools; where pride, no less that coquetry commands her to shine; and the Universe Israeli does not hesitate at all to teach us himself a

'We know admirable examples of this, and we never let to miss the opportunity to say them again.

^ The Jews, their history, their customs, by A. Cerfberr, pp. 49-52; Paris, 1847.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FIVE. 113

a fact of which 1108 eyes can now bear witness-gnage-, is that in the houses that open themselves to the Jew, or that the Jew opens to the Christian, and "in the season of balls and evenings, your Israelite women, princesses of the race of David", are distinguished above all by their richness and "magnificence of their attire*", that is to say, in good French-Cais, through the excesses and consequences of unbridled luxury that devours us.

Like any other woman, the Jewish woman has be-care not of a tyrannical constraint that reduces her to the necessity of good morals through the impossibility of to deliver to the wicked, but he would need a law of wisdom whose sweetness and divinity penetrated his intelligent soul and his loving heart-this law that religious education does not gives little more, alas! to our sons; that she scarcely gives to our daughters, and how far she is from giving them today in a solid and comprehensive manner. However, the education of the girl Israelite distances him even further from this supreme good. Likewise, the Jew, his brother, it is true, the invigorating atmosphere of the Christianity, which she curses, the envelope, the press, and the modifies; but this pressure is all the less sufficient for him because The Christian atmosphere itself is becoming corrupt. Everywhere Therefore, where the advantages and resources of his position social factors do not help him to support his weakness, or to cover it up Its failures, its fragility are proportional to the mo- value the exact translation, of the value of his belief.

This phenomenon is so subtle in our eyes that our gaze focus on the chapter of Jewish morality; and if, Despite the anger of some involved parties, we believe writers of Jewish race, the judicial archives become—

'Truly Jewish boasting, for no one in Israel can re-know his tribe; and the Jewish women who praise themselves as models to artists, or those who fill brothels, have just as much clientele, Alas! to belong to the lineage of David than those whose millions The Jewish industry has created characters for our world.

* Israeli Universe, VII, p. 295; 4867.

Digitized by Google

THE JEWS.

you

link an irrefutable witness to this truth; hence the conclusion—natural and intended sion that the followers of the Talmud provided sends to the civilized world the scum of the proletariat and of the prostitution. But we cannot take it upon ourselves to The responsibility for these words lies with the Jews themselves. who will undertake this task.

"For a quarter of a century, and we cannot choose At a later date, moralists wonder with This is why it is found in all major cities of In Europe, one notices among women of ill repute More Jewish women than Christian women? Celtic The question is unfortunately well-founded; because, in Paris, at London, Berlin, Hamburg, Vienna, Warsaw and Krakow, in what has come to be known as the half-world, in public squares, and even in homes In prostitution, one encounters more Jewish women than Christian women. yours, taking into account the proportion that exists between both populations. It is very unfortunate to note a fact similar; but, however painful it may be, it is true, and so we did not hesitate to point it out, it's because we we want us to try to remedy it, as we have already "Successfully done for other wounds of this nature."

In Judaism, however, one does not show much ri—a moralist; it suffices to remain an Israelite to to be entitled to full indulgence, and we will produce one we have just quoted. – "A genre actress, born Israeli-little, and who had always remembered it, Miss JF, has just died. His funeral was "yes, it was Israelites."

as her soul had never ceased to be so, and if she has yielded, like so many other women, to the training sessions in-Returning to a theatrical career, she at least retained a pious spirit.
how the traditions of the domestic home and feelings of charity*. » Remaining Israelite is and must be, under the empire

'Archives israélites, XV, p. 7H; 1867.

2 Archives israélites, II, p. 513; June 1868.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FIVE. 115

of Talmudic law, the pinnacle of morality, whether it be or not of the woman, this angelic being that withers and denames Remove the slightest impure and suspicious stain. Any weakness therefore fades into the background in Israel, or weighs only a fraction of one a very light weight, even in the balance of the religious publicist gieuxl and that's what will suffice for the moment to express, after having described the nothingness of the Jewess of Talmud.

NOTE ON DIVORCE.

Saint Matthew the Evangelist tells us that Jesus said to the Pharisees-His people: "Because of the hardness of your heart. Moses allowed you to Send your wives away, but in the beginning it was not so.
But I tell you that anyone who divorces his wife, except for because of fornication, and marries another, is an adulterer; and he who
"The wife, the divorced woman, is an adulteress." xix, 8-9. But, since Saint Matthew, would the Pharisaical heart of the Jew have softened? The answer is in this chapter about women, and we see the divorce letter.
a genuine bill of exchange, putting the dismissed woman into circulation in the world I

The French court in Algiers has just adopted a law for the Jews of Algeria this right to divorce, a victim as it is of the error so fatal to Christians Look, Morse's law is the law of the Jews. Read an excellent article on this subject.
Slow article by Mr. Coquille; Le Monde, ± June 1865.

"The formality that consecrates the divorce consists, according to custom..."
Jews, in the handing over of property by the husband to the wife, in the presence of the allows his wife to remarry as she pleases. – Sarah Blui and David Buksan complete this formality at the court across the Seine, In Paris, First Chamber, on July 13, 1867. These are foreign Jews.

gers... Read Archives israélites, XVI, p. 726-7; <867.

In the province of Oran, Israelites can divorce, "despite "Marriage in front of your town hall, and marrying other women." Freedom re-regrettable, "because this principle encourages divorce, which, unfortunately,
"n'existe quetrop" Archives israélites, p. 83; 868. He also creates in favor of the Jew an odious privilege, and breaks, in favor of his pas-Let us, equality before the law.

Following these words from the same Jewish Review: "We marry the girls to "Twelve years old, and the boys at fourteen," read the picturesque description of the wedding and details that we cannot reproduce; then:
"On the door and on the wall of the wedding house, the imprint is applied by hand, using red and green paint. It's a custom, they say.
which protects against the evil eye. » Ibid., p. 84. Read the details on the funerals

Digitized by Google

126

THE JEWS.

rails and on cabalistic practices relating to talismans

[b., p. 185, n° IV.

Read also: A Jewish woman in Gibraltar, excerpt from travel notes of Emperor Maximilian, in 1861; a very interesting painting.
All these features greatly delighted the attendees, among whom there were cheerful Englishmen and Englishwomen who, "the book to the hand, followed every movement without interruption, and took note note with forceful caustic observations. An old lady sitting next to He told me that, for another eight days, the groom would not be able to seeing his wife, busy receiving relatives and friends, and sitting at high on her throne. She added that marriages are just business of money, and that the woman has the right to leave her husband after a
She assured me that, for the time being, that was what the young woman she had better things to do, given that she found the future horribly ugly... a Prayer is followed by lascivious dances... Ibid., Archives is-Raelites, XXII, p. 1047-8; 1867.

FI.V OE THE NOTE ON DIVORCE.

THE NEXT JEWISH DD.

Is there a man without a neighbor? – Yes, the Orthodox Jew.
Apart from the Jew, every other man must be nothing more than a brute in his eyes.
If he kills it, he kills only an animal. – Words of Saint Epiphanius, Father of the Church, and of Mr. Michelet. – Explanation of this word: Defense to the Jews and the pigs to enter here. – Weaknesses and passions of the Jewish beliefs provoked against anyone foreign to their faith by their beliefs.
musical. – Examples. – How far does this hatred of the Jew go, and above-everything against the Christian. – So robbing and killing the Christian is not an evil; on the contrary. – A much greater number of wrongdoers not applicable among Jews as among Christians. – Different countries, different-examples. – Power and universality of their means of malevolence. – Their dreadful and murderous greed towards
The French army in the disastrous Russian campaign. – Re-implicit knowledge of the Jew's moral inferiority, in pu-Jewish associations. – Their malevolence has been timeless, since the reign of rabbinic traditions; she has them arranged in
"The dregs of the people" from the reign of Vospasien onwards. – Conclusion.
– Notes. – Their terror of public opinion.

We asked the Talmud earlier what That's the Talmudic scholar's wife. Perhaps that's the answer.
Will what the facts have shown whet our appetite for

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FIVE. 127

To know who one's neighbor is! But does the Jew have a neighbor?
Who knows? We will therefore ask ourselves this sin-
Regular question:

Is there a man in this world who can stand up and to tell us: I am without a neighbor! I have none; and, the
The right, the duty not to have any, I draw from my Religious law! – Yes, if the terrible law that holds and governs the conscience of the sons of Jacob must be taken seriously, he This man exists; but he is unique in the world, and he is the Jew! Let's explain: he is a man of pure orthodoxy.
Talmudic; that is to say, a being who was created only for himselfeven. Except for his fellow man, except for his brother of the same race and of faith, therefore, every human creature is foreign to him, loses to his eyes his species, ceases to be man, and, becoming brute, falls in his esteem below his own femiss, the one we have just seen him equate with meat of butchery which he paid for in cash'.

The rest of humanity? – Answer. We read in the Talmud:
“Descendants of Abraham, the Lord has chosen you by the Ezekiel's mouth; you are my flock,... that is to say
You are men, while the other peoples of the world
They are not men, they are beasts*. Bobba-Bar-Abuha
For example, the prophet Elijah was found in a cemetery of Goyim, – that is, non-Jews, – and said to him; Com-How did you find yourself in a cemetery? – But Élic from answer him; And you, have you not learned the law of Purifications? For she carries that decision; The tombs
The Gentiles do not defile, since the Lord said to Israel: You are the sheep of my pasture, you have the

'If we use this term, female, it is because, having read of to include our pages on women in Judaism would be an insult to ortho-the Talmudic doxie of giving it to the Jewess as an equal, this es-clave, this debased creature whom one of these draws closer to his person false marriages whose ghost vanishes before a fantasy of divorce; therefore, we did not dare, without his approval, to allow ourselves to to call her his partner, or his wife.

® Bartoiocci, part. III, p. 55b.

Digitized by Google

THE JEWS.

4 28

quality of men, while the nations of the world have not that the quality of raw material

Rabbi-Schila stumbles upon a man who takes liberties assimilations with a non-Jewish woman, and the flogging. This
The man filed a complaint with the authorities, but the flagellant replies: This wretch has just forgotten himself "with a donkey*. »

Is she who is not descended from the blood of Abraham
Is she a woman? Isn't she a brute? Now, how to treat the one who, forgetting himself with her, descends by that very fact, even to the beast?

The famous Rabbi Menahhem insists, in "several places in his works, on this principle, that the quality
"of man belongs only to the Jews –," and /the infallible Mai-
'monides establishes, in his Treatise on Homicide, that when a
An Israelite even kills a proselyte-resident, the Jewish court elTct "he who rises up against his p-ockain; but he-

This is not our neighbor. Therefore, it is superfluous to say that we cannot condemn an Israelite for killing a non-'Jew' (Goi).

A Noahide – that is to say, a simple living individual according to the precepts of the righteous Noah, but a stranger to the race of Abraham, – if he kills another Noahide and he becomes A Jewish proselytizer before this act, "is not liable to any 5 years, but did he kill an Israelite, and not make himself pro-
"Sélyte, after that, let him be put to death*." Even stronger Reason, if he is a Christian, must it be so, because "he is ordered the Jews to see in Christians only...

' Talmud, treatise Baba-Metssigna, fol. H4 recto, edit. Amsterdam, 1645. – Id., Prompta Biblioth. by L. Ferrari, t. bed, order. iv, tract. 8.
Laurent, Syrian Affairs, vol. II, p. 395; Paris, 1846.

® ialmud, treatise Barakouth, fol. 88, recto. Laurent, ib., t. II,
p. 37, !.

^ Laurent, t. II, chap. ii, art. 11, p. .374-5. – Liretd., Uohrbacher, Universal History of the Church, vol. XV, p. 483, etc.; Paris, 1851.

* Talmud, Sanhedrin, fol. 71 verso. Laurent, vol. II, p. 375. – Read ibid., Church and the Synagogue, pp. 26-50, elc.; Paris, 1859.

Digitized by GocJgle

CHAPTER FIVE. 129

brutes, and to treat them like vile animals.'

In light of the customs that rabbinical traditions, combined
Later in the Talmud, they made the Jew, one of the Fathers of the Church, Saint Epiphanius, therefore had no reason to fear to exclaim: "Ah! their nature has become that of the dog that the rage possesses" And nowadays, Mr. Michelet, the priest-phobe, will only be the translator of one of the truths of history will begin when he lets out this cry; "The Jew is the filthy man who cannot touch either food or woman without burning it; it is the man of outrage, upon whom "Everyone's spitting!" Finally, when one of the bosses of the Jewish race, Mr. Bail, reproduces the famous inscription in so many cities and the city of Frankfurt placed at the entrance to his promenade: "Jews are forbidden and "Let the pigs in here!" he repeats it without the enormity
This odious insult astonishes those who know what he believes Israel, because one of the doctrinal books of the Jewish nation was-

"Pigs." To echo this sad language, this Therefore, it was, after all, simply a matter of treating the Jew according to the law.
Mosaic of retaliation! That was to tell him; Crude enemy of humankind, you want it, well then, since your savage faith spreads contempt and hatred over all peoples, we—
We will bounce back from your own words. Val, no man is the Jew's neighbor, and the Orthodox Jew is nothing but a brute, than a pig!

Far be it from us to applaud this brutal right of retaliation, and we reject it with horror—but we te—non k know in what way, to what extent it is exercised

'L. Ferrari, /'rupta ord.4;tract. 8; Laurent, II,
p. 395, Syria.

^ Est enim hæc iiatura canum, postquam rabie tenlati sunt. S. Epi* phan. Opera; Paris, 1622, in-fol. Adv. hours. t. II, I.iii,p. 1036.— Id., S. Chrysoslome, t. II, p. 347.

^ In Hallez, Des Juifs en France, p. 37; Paris, 1845; and Michelet, History of France, vol. III, p. 110; Paris, 1852.

* Bail, Des Juifs, etc., p. 28, 2nd ed.; Paris, 1816.

Yalkut-re-Ubêni, fol. 10, col. 3. Laurent, ih., t. II, p. 374.

9

Digitized by Google

130

THE JEWS.

the spirit of hatred that the Talmud inspires in the Jew against the Christian, and we will easily achieve our goal by par—current of the eye a few rungs of a very different scale—rent from that of Jacob, which rose from the earth to heaven, and It became the path of angels. For descending, plunging in the darkest abysses of iniquity, this mystery—the laughing ladder seems to offer its cursed rungs only to infernal spirits of lies and homicide.

Following the acts of plunder involving fraud and usury, two religiously legitimate and meritorious means, con—

Indeed, death, and we say too little, is far beyond that. It is eternal damnation that one must dream and meditate against every member of the Church, the true Orthodox Church of Judaism, the unwavering Talmudic scholar, the one whose vitality and civilizing the atmosphere of Christianity has not yet penetrated the heart, in short, the Jew faithful to rabbinic traditions and who says: Is faith that does not act a sincere faith?

At the time when the doctrine of Christ took off, his The Pharisees, embittered and irritated, were the first and most deadly enemies. From his triumphs, they invented new ones in quick succession traditions, some of which are intended to foment the sen- fierce sentiments that the Synagogue directed at the tortured man Calvary. They added to those that Christ had given them reproached, and the Christians were nothing more than in their eyes abominable apostates, the worshipers of an infamous one. They they then declared that it was a work of justice and High piety than to persecute them to death; and this morality the new idea was bravely put into practice by the men of zeal. — Saint Paul, before his miraculous conversion, He showed in him one of the passionate instruments of this faith, and the Synagogue inserted into the ordinary of its office the fa- Meuse imprecation called Birhhat-Hamminhn, where the praying soul piously begs God to deign to exterminate the me- creators!

' Maimonides, TVoVe de la jif iére, ch. ii, § 1. Drach, /farmony,

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FIVE. 434

Later, the Ghemara teemed with passages where virtues of justice, equity, charity, not only must not point does not apply to the Christian, but change in nature and become a crime if he is the object of it; and the Talmudic treatise Avoda-Zara explicitly forbids saving from to restore to him his lost property or to have 'pity for his person'. As categorical as the Talmud, the eagle of the Synagogue, Maimonides, after having listed "The articles of the Jewish faith!" he cried, cursing the one who shrinks from the obligation to submit to it: "If what- * that one is perverse enough to deny even one, he is beyond the communion of Israel; it is a precept to hate it and to exterminate it!*

All the passions, all the weaknesses of the sincere ortho- doxe are therefore called upon to aid his pious hatred. Thus, in a kind of homage that the Jewish tainting celestial bodies his gaze leaped; then, when it seemed having ensured that the elasticity of his hock could not allow him to To try and reach them, do you hear him exclaim: "May they Our enemies can never reach us either! But you. Lord, avenge us against the Christians; pour out upon the teenagers Missing Christ, the wounds and plagues of which you once "You struck Egypt." And Buxtorf remarks with what At these instances, the faithful of the Synagogue implore the Lord to place all the riches of ruined Christians, and to incite among themselves, from east to west-tooth, the most horrific war of extermination*. Shame, shame So, K, who begot them, these wretches; "that their mother be covered in ignominy, and be repudiated, for the The end of Christians is nothing but worms and rot*.

t. I, p. 466, 1844. Id., on these imprecations, Baronius, Annals eccles., 1586, no. XXIV; 1320, no. XXVI, etc.

'Fool. 13 v", fol. 20 V". Treatise Baba-Kamma, fol. 29 v", ib., 466.

2 On the Mishnah, treatise Sanhedrin, ch. x,

* Pfefferkorn, The Church and the Synagogue, p, 23-24-27.

* Ibid., p. 22.

9.

Digitized by Google

132 THE JEWS.

Indeed, our eyes are too wide open to not recognize point that under the gentle and penetrating influence of the Clerical civilization, however flawed we may be The pain of seeing her, the atrocious demands of the Talmudic faith which have become considerably more moderate among Jews born in smart classes and in the most enlightened Europe. But they would be quite foreign to the realities. of the things of this world, the man naive enough to imagine himself ginner than the Talmud, which the empire preserves to this day such a singular power, no longer found under the epidermis, or at least beneath the dermis of the immense major-Jewish community. Too often, in fact, the men of the committee at the beginning of this century, they were able to see with their own eyes, as we ourselves have done, the evidence of the The fidelity of the Judaizing Jew to this odious precept, traced from the hand of Rabbi Isaiah, in the thirteenth century', and that the tenth finally sees it fall into disuse in part ger must be considered as the Christian and thrown into the pit; – or, if it falls into a well and one can do "Skillfully, let him stay there, let's do it*."

Among the most striking examples of this hatred the Jew's implacable hatred of converts, and we choose them-sounds between those of the first quarter of this century, is placed in first line the abduction of the children of the famous oriental-Talist Dracb, this rabbi whose powerful and stubborn studies of the sacred scriptures and the Talmud had led, despite the struggles of his heart and the strongest aversions of his Jewish instincts, the faith of the ancient synagogue and of the Church. We will borrow only with a sober hand. some traits in the touching stories of this cruel father-tested, because we are not aiming at episodes; but We can add our word to his if necessary.

'Summary of VAvoda-Zara.

^Cod. Vatican. Hebrew, No. 184, p. 65. Ib., ÌÉglisu et la Syitagogue^ p. 31.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FIVE. 133

certain coincidences made us familiar with that era the characters, the events and some of the places in this drama'.

It so happened that grace had softened the heart of the loyal Rabbi, this true descendant of Abraham, felt himself wavering In him, the Talmudic faith. Every day, his conscientious and persistent meditations detached him from it more and more Moreover, and in vain did the bonds seem to bind him there the most invincible: his old father and his old mother, his young family and its alliances; resounding successes in the rabbinical sciences, and the magnificent future, the future ten-the teacher who smiled at him from the pinnacle of the synagogue, and sometimes it fascinated him.

He recanted. But scarcely had the unfortunate man declared himself Christian, that treason took refuge in his home, that his His relatives cursed him, and a violent conspiracy of The fury erupting around him would have driven him to despair if his conscience, if the firmness of his Christian faith had not kept upright. However, the most sensitive of blows must have reached his paternal heart: the abduction of his three young children—and this blow was struck by their mother!

parts k this audacious undertaking, and the kidnappers acted in such perfect harmony and with such precise accuracy measures, which the most active investigations of the authority have not revealed They found no trace. They had traveled from Paris to London. drawn, by the well-traveled road from Calais to Dover, and the eye so The police, who were following them, had seen nothing.

"For nearly two years, the police were unable to discover which was the knowledge of the youngest Jewish children, not only in France, not only in England, but also in all the countries where the Jacob's race. In short, the undeniable skill of the The French police failed against the profound discretion that

'See chapter XVIII of our book Customs and Practices of Demons, edit, of 4565; and Harmonie, t. l*', p. 88; Paris, 1844.

Digitized by Google

134

THE JEWS.

Jews know how to observe towards the Goyim, or non-Jews, whenever the interests of some matter are at stake—national'. »

Tired of the agonizing and futile waiting, Drach takes Finally, the resolution to travel and to put oneself in person searching for her children. All official reports The door leads to the conclusion that the fugitives headed towards the border with Germany, after passing through the city of Metz, This is the main headquarters of the Israelites in France. Friends Drach and his team hold council, and decide accordingly that The city of Mainz will be the focal point of his investigations. Rich And large, the Jewish community of this city is in constant trade relations with the Israelites of all parts of Germany and eastern France. One A large number of Jewish merchants passing through have also the habit of stopping there and trading, with their merchants Goods, all the new ones picked up along the way. The eye On the lookout, listening intently, Drach occupies his post as observer—vator; "but what personal dangers does he not face?" to expose in those lands where he is a foreigner, and where the Jews Those who persecute him are more powerful and more suspicious. than in France 1 »

His ignorance of the secret he seeks to uncover is the his perplexity was the same; in vain he used it as auxiliary to a Jew employed by the Mainz police, and in vain from another Jew detached from the Parisian police.

"What can the wisest measures of all authorities do?"

countries against the vast and permanent conspiracy of a people which, a network no less immense than it is solid, spans the entire globe, focuses its forces wherever an interesting event arises.

'Drach, Harmony between the Church and the Synagogue, vol. I', p. 77; Paris, 1844. Let us remember the precious role that must play (ie Such men in the leadership of secret societies! We must understand-to demonstrate the power and skill of Jewish leaders, accustomed to maneuvering in the interest of the mystery, and to be handled sovereignly, with as much Strength as well as finesse, people of their race.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FIVE. 135

"The name Israelite is revealed!" How, moreover, if he discovers Never her children, never to snatch them from the hands of fanatics who combined their plans with audacity, with a such great skill, and who executed them with such precision

So rare! But Heaven is with him, no doubt, and from then on What do the Jews matter! He hopes. One fine day, indeed, a Dissatisfied, a young Israelite was met with defiant behavior from his coreligionists have wounded his pride, comes trou-ver Drach, and reveals the Jewish secret to him. The retreat of his fa-

She is known to a thousand. She resides in London, and never leaves This city! Its children are alive, and growing up under the wing of their mother. Oh happiness! He flies to the feet of this woman, and he rushes there; he uses every means suggested to him by heart; it awakens the full power of memories, it exhausts
all attempts at paternal and conjugal tenderness,
But the implacable Jewess rejects him. He can barely... to obtain the grace to embrace his young family; again this is favor granted to him only in the presence of that who will never forgive her for the ignominy of having made her
The wife of a brute, a convert, a Christian! All of them
All precautions, and indeed all necessary safeguards, have been taken. against the husband, against the father... What will he attempt then, and How can we recover these innocent people? Address-Will it be a request to the authority, Caria British legislation?
nique recognizes, like ours, the father's right over his children. But, at the sound of "his first step, the Jews, masters of his family, umnt of the great resources with which they dis-

By surprise? That seems impossible, with people like
The Jews!

Heaven, however, inspires him with this latter course, which appears impossible to execute, and, God willing, the impossible will be done, was done, Well done, and promptly done. Our testimony is that

'Read in support of this word, worthy of all our meditations, what Drach adds to this on the assassins of Father Thomas. (See below our cha-(Pitre Assassinat.) tb., Drach, Harmonie, t. I'', p. 79; Paris, 1844.

Digitized by Google

THE JEWS.

ISfi

many of those who affirm it; and the reason is that the Chance made us one of the unwitting initiates of the end of This tragedy. Because Drach's children, that is to say, two girls and a boy were brought back to France and placed in safety inland; the son's place of retreat was the old castle, the semi-wild and picturesque castle of a wolf hunter friend of ours, whose wife and daughters-came the orphan's family*; and this asylum was one of the favorite spots on our hunts. It was Ik we knew the learned and concerned rabbi, who soon became accustomed with we even come from time to time to take lodging under our roof!... When the sad events of 1830 took place reintegrated into Europe, momentarily refreshed by the benefits-facts of a restorative regime, the burning era of the revolutions tions, Drach, fearing "new attacks against his children," he left for abroad, resolved to complete their education outside of France. As for his wife, after having resisted the most repeated and tender invitations, she had declared that she never wanted to "know anything" about these unfortunate little things; that is to say, in "his aversion
"For Christianity," she had renounced not only her husband, but his own blood, his own entrails, rather than to love, rather than merely tolerate beings close to one's heart fallen humans reduced to the state of brutes, Christians*!

This fact, which we cannot isolate from its date (1823), is taken randomly among a multitude of similar and more serious. It is not taken from pages borrowed from the sixth,

'That's what we described elsewhere.

contained a drawing of a dagger. Ibid., p. 76. Read more details, but not all the details, in Harmony, vol. I, pp. 73-86, hence We extract these lines without adding our own documents, because we also met in London the opulent and very honorable family Thanks to whom the counter-abduction took place. Read the full account of Dr. Morel, Memor. calh., March 1826. This doctor is a Israelite convert. His father, Yekl-Mutzig, brought him to Paris at a very young age; His mother, having become a widow, left that city because of intolerance. Jews were against her; having remained Jewish, "she was guilty only of having "a Catholic son." Harmony, vol. P'', p. 231.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FIVE. 137

in the ninth, in the twelfth century. No, we pick it up all alive in the heap of those who constitute the wealth of a an era which, for France, and for part of Europe, ends abruptly with that of our youth, 5 and something Something there reminds us of the more dramatic story we had to tell, among so many others like it, from the pen of Victor Cobden.

A Jewish child, this Israelite tells us, playing with young Christians entered a church; and, despite the re-close friends sent to him, he returned there, as if there was any charm in this visit for him. But "this behavior so irritated his mother that she resolved to kill him secretly, for fear that he might eventually to embrace Christianity, and that she carried out her wicked 'project'. It could not be encountered, adds this convert, of a nation more unjust and more obstinate than the Jews; and we Let's see, his fanatical hatred for him extends to bloodshed. formerly followed the Christian, that filthy brute who comes to give him as his next, in 1807, the doctors of the great Sanhedrin assembled at the voice of Napoleon I".

The Jew, moreover, is by virtue of this education tal-Mudique, which devotes him to the execration of the people*, the man He has patience, and, better than anyone else, he knows how to wait; he knows how to weave together cunning, thoughtfulness, and affection, but hatred deaf to the most shameful and detestable lies of heart. Example: a When a Christian enters the home of Israelite, another rabbi who became a monk tells us, this one He welcomes him warmly and accompanies him when he leaves. But, "in this case, the Israelite must repeat this phrase: May illnesses, afflictions, and bad dreams intended for me or someone in my family, may re-fall on the head of this Christian! And "when the Jews they see a dead Christian being carried to his grave

^The Church and the Synagogue, sixteenth century, pp. 210-811.

2 Delamarre, Treatise on the police, 4 vols. in-folio, vol. I", p. 279, etc.; Paris, 1705.

Digitized by Google

138 THE JEWS

trü; ccst-à-dire: Today an impious man died, let him
"I'll die two tomorrow."

The fanaticism of hatred therefore only dies out with regret and scarcely in the heart of the Judaizing Jew; the very benefit it is destroyed only in exceptional circumstances, and the opposite would be inappropriate, because the implacable Talmud makes him feel these things. These fanatics have a duty of conscience, a virtue. Let us leave to this the soul of the Talmudic scholar is depicted in one of his charming ingenuousness:

"You know," a Jew said to one of his companions Christians, — how many marks have we given ourselves of kindness on this journey, where we have treated as brothers to one another. Know, however, that, whatever the signs of goodwill that I showed you, the hatred I harbor in my heart doesn't was no less great. As a reward for the services you You've returned me, but I want to give you this advice: Don't trust never to a Jew, no matter how much friendship he shows you*.

Hate therefore, hatred, ruin and death to the Christian individual; hatred and destruction to Christian society; and the Jew, if we must believe Pfefferkorn, a converted Israelite, but Having reverted to Judaism, he will never do business with the Christians driven by the desire to deceive them. Not dreaming against them what treachery, he receives from all hands, and without scruple, the fruit of the sacrilegious theft committed against them, and he himself teaches the wrongdoer to improve himself in his art. We would search in vain, he assures us, a more dishonest, more dangerous, and more sinister sect. to the Christian people, that the vile sect of the Jews I Night

< The Ruin of the Hebrew Religion, by a converted rabbi, 3rd edition, 1834. Laurent, ibid., vol. II, pp. 380-7. Despite its three editions, the work Information about this rabbi is very rare; it is believed that the Jews made him disappear. Thus they use certain works, which they find a way to acquire to ter, or to ruin, with the help of secret societies, of which there is every reason to believe that the high and mysterious councils are founded and directed Daiism.

* Roam. from Father Philippe to S. Trinüate, book. VI, chap. viii. The Church and the Symgogue, p. 201.

Digitized by GocJgle

CHAPTER FIVE. 139

And these men are only occupied with meditating on the means to destroy and overthrow the power of the Christians,... they employ every possible kind of fraud, and insinuate themselves everywhere, with all the apparent signs of benevolence, "Friendship, or a charming business."

However, a honorable lawyer of the Jewish nation who only studied super-officially the most important part of his case: "at Fundamentally, Jewish doctrines contain no dogma. incompatible with the religion or social institutions of other nations 11 is false. that they look at the Christians like their enemies. This folktale is despised by every educated man... Philanthropy and humanity shape the basis of their belief. It cannot be repeated enough - ter, sufficiently prove, that the Jewish dogmas are reconciled perfectly with those of other nations; that they not separate to the point, as is claimed, the Hebrews of the rest of mankind my, but that they imperiously prescribe them, to to rescue and help them*.

He was more moderate in his praise, and we commend him for that. is another writer, whom it is too important to associate with him the pages of those of Mr. Bail so that we do not miss this homework: "All those who have been k even to study the state of the Jews in the provinces where their number gives to the observance developer of the facilities they lack elsewhere; all those, by For example, those who have been able to get close to Jews in Alsace know perfectly well that they remained not only foreigners, but hostile to the mass of the population; that they have conserved pure and unmixed, their character and their morals, as well as their physical appearance. In the moral order as

'Pfefferkorn, chap. xi. Church and Synagogue, ib., p. 208-211. The af- The confirmation of this Jew is important, because we have cited in this ou- I wrote a passage from Bishop Maiol's De perfidia Judæorum, and others from the famous Treatise on Police by Delamare, and from the Annals of Baronius, ^ Bail, Des Juifs au dix-neuvième siècle, p. 62, 63, 69; Paris, 1816.

Read the opposite in this volume, and in a work hardly suspected of
M. Renan, cited in Archives israélites, XII, p. 584; 1868.

Digitized by Google

UO THE JEWS.

In the physical order, the Jews (that the Attorney General
The Regent called in 1717 "the monsters of society" vile,") have remained identical to themselves for some time thousands of years, and it is easy to recognize them by their "actions as well as the features of their faces."

"The religious question is the most intimate cost of this stubborn exclusivity which has always distinguished the Jewish race, and Sixtus of Siena, a sixteenth-century Jewish convert, indicates the passages from the Talmud he borrows following: 1. We command that every Jew curse three once a day all the Christian people, and pray to God to keep them safe.

to melt it down and exterminate it, along with its kings and princes; but that the priests especially should say this prayer in the synagogue gogue, in hatred of Jesus-, 2° God commanded the Jews to to appropriate the dogs of Christians as many times as they want may, either by fraud or violence, or by usury or by flight; 3* All Jews are ordered to look at the Christians like thieves, and not to treat them otherwise-4° That the Jews do no good and no harm to the pagans, but let them strive, by all the means to kill Christians; 5° If a Hebrew, in vou-If someone kills a Christian, and accidentally kills a Jew, he deserves... pardon; 6° If a Jew sees a Christian on the edge of a meadow
"He is obliged to throw him into the precipice immediately."

And if the Jewish religious code grants him a merit of stealing from the Christian, because this brute could not be his next, or to remove from him as skillfully as possible his well, as a chapter that will perhaps show provoking our gaze under the title "Of Future, Statistics" that, whose calculations told us earlier that the prostitutes were proportionally more numerous

'Authority gone astray. See the analogue, Egl. et Synag., p. 232-3, in 1808.

^ Sixt. Senens. Bibliotheca sancta, ord. i, p. 424; Paris, 1610, Tract., t. I, Distinct. 4. Ibid., ord. iv, tract., 8. Ibid., tract. 4 and 9.

4851. — Ferrari, Prompta bibl., in Thalm., ord. 2, leaflet. 4, distinct. 5; ord. 4, leaflet. 8, dist. 2; ord. 1, tract.-dist. 4, in Thalmud, ib.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FIVE. lil

considerably more so among the Jews than among any other people, will no doubt we speak the same language not only k
This concerns the usurer, but it also concerns the simple thief.

And, in fact, Mr. Bail, the naive advocate of the Jewish cause—that, do not hesitate to love us that "on twelve flights or eleven fraud cases were tried in the Leipzig courts. are committed by the Jews" Then, immediately misunderstanding the effect of belief on actions, that is to say, the action born—necessary influence exerted on the minds and hearts of the Jews by the pre—Mr. Bail, subservient to prejudices, adheres to the antisocial precepts of the Talmud. which stem from his liberal opinions, he adds: k Nothing, this
It seems to me that this does not better contrast the effects of slavery. vage or emancipation! Free in France, they are honored there—"Good people*."

Honest? We would be happy to believe so; and, however—and we must observe that a third of a century later, In 1847, a writer of Jewish descent, in agreement with all The traditions of the kingdom combat this assertion with words whose brilliance was great enough to prevent them from being forgotten Traces not erased:

((Let the Israelites of France take heed; they will co—rent perhaps a disastrous reaction which we wish—
We would prevent the effects through our advice and warnings. They don't realize how much, in their own country, morality is relaxed, abandoned; how much the sordid ideas, and the The lure of easy money misleads them by dazzling them. A simple comparison of statistical calculations will make it clear "easily reveal the full truth and scope of our thinking."

And from this calculation, which Mr. Cerfberr undertakes, it follows that the number of those condemned is largely Jews double what he is among other citizens! But good According to the same calculator, this double is far from telling us enough; for, in its sense, what distinguishes the Jews among the

* Bail, The Jews in the Nineteenth Century, p. 2i; Paris, 1816.

* Ibid., p. 24. It was far from the Jew being a slave in France!

THE JEWS.

U2

other men, "these are crimes of a more perverse nature." profound, because they are the result of premeditation. These crimes include fraud, forgery, usury, and embezzlement. fraudulent bankruptcy, smuggling, counterfeiting, naie, recruitment fraud, the stellio-natural, bribery, fraud, deceit, in short, in all its forms and with all the associated aggravations.

And if we add to the consideration of these facts, "com- well, by their nature, their character, their intelligence and their mental reticence, which allows them to lend the a civil oath by which they do not believe they are bound, they are more cunning than the Christians, one can easily understand- to say that the number of .luifs who escape the wrath of pu- blique is perhaps superior to the one that lies below the locks, and certainly not the most guilty ones!

So it is with France. As for "the German Jew," who is the type and prototype of the Jew as he is portrayed and that we know it in general, will it be better that the Jew his neighbor? - Answer: "He is cunning, greedy and rapacious, without faith or law, although fanatically devoted during- that he finds himself in the lowest ranks of his nation*.

To these few, very precise lines, a German publicist Mr. Hermann Kuhn, of remarkable sagacity, adds a In a summary of a few more lines, and he told us in November 1866; "Among the honest industrialists with whom Vienna abounds, If we are to rely on criminal statistics, the Jews for- The vast majority of those struck by the justice system, well that they have a reputation for being the most adept at dodging his blows. One can imagine how much they must have laughed at the mo- the official newspaper, and its efforts to revive- to be the dedication to the public good, to restore the feeling of Duty and honor!

"This is not a harsher form of distributive justice,

' A. CerfberrdeMedelsIieim, The Jews, their history, their customs, etc., pp. 2, 3, 39; Paris, 1847. These studies, reproduced in part in the periodical review of French people painted by Eu- méfnes, had in Eu-

»

CHAPTER FIVE. 143

As the official body states, it is a justice system based on All other principles, which became necessary. When, thanks to a Jewish woman who proscribed all Christian principles, there is no
You no longer have good character or integrity in business dealings.
Such an evil cannot be cured by mere phraseology.

"killer, and a few pious wishes uttered timidly."

"A major Viennese newspaper (La Presse)^ written and directed by Jews, has as its motto: 'The same right for all'. But, granting the same right to people who know neither the Neither morality nor Christian duty is to make these people vampires of those who are held back by the principles of Christianity, and who cannot follow the abusive errors of "The signs of unbridled competition."

"Almost every week, events take place in front of the sorting-Vienna civil court some monster trial against the swindlers of the worst kind, mostly Jews; the scan-Daleux, shameful swindles, sometimes arise from Huge sums. The illicit loot has been there for a long time.
safe when the perpetrators are apprehended;
and after serving a few years in prison, they can to enjoy their comfort. The maintenance of accused or condemned Jews Prosecutions for property crimes cost large sums, and The robbed, the Christians, enjoy the privilege of contributing to it in the largest proportion through higher taxes*.

When we have read in the history of the campaign of Russia by Mr. de Ségur, a page by the historian Rohrbacher did not consider it unworthy to be included in the Annals of the Church, the terms thrown at the address of these harsh neighbors we pa-
Will they respond with extreme violence? – Twenty thousand French had remained in Wilna, sick, injured, exhausted from fatigue.
"In truth," said General de Ségur, "the Lithuanians, that we gave up after having compromised them so much, in re-
They gathered and rescued some of them; but the Jews,

• Gleiches Recht fur aile. For misfortune, for moral ruin and material from Austria, the press there is almost exclusively instrumental the Jews' lie.

* Hermann Kuhn, Le Monde, S7 ■November 1866.

THE JEWS.

read

whom we had protected, repelled the others. They did much more; the sight of so much suffering irritated their greed. However, if their infamous avarice, profiting from our miseries, was content to sell meager aid by weight in gold, History would disdain to sully its pages with this disgusting detail. so much; but that they had drawn our unfortunate wounded into their homes to plunder them, and then, the view Russians, they threw themselves out of the doors and windows from their homes these naked and dying victims—that, he, they left them Mnpiro! / aWejncn< to perish from the cold—, that even These vile barbarians have earned themselves a reputation in the eyes of the Russians. to torture them there: such horrific crimes must be denounced gifts to the present and future centuries. Today that our hands are powerless, it is possible that our indignation against these monsters, let that be their only punishment on this earth; but finally The murderers will one day join the victims, and Ih, no doubt, "In the justice of Heaven, we will find our vengeance."

We provide the exact dates of these publications. tions, and these figures tell us how useless it is, when—that we seek our examples of charity or civilization—Jewish tradition, to go back to the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, where one of the writers who come from sa—Sir, the pen, to defend the cause of the Jews, traced these loyal words: "The crimes and abominations they committed—daily forced Charles VI to outlaw them*. And what remains clear is that Christian civilization, where the Jew begins to triumph, but who, in our con—the healthiest tres, penetrating it from all sides, a neu—tralized in his soul a part of the poisonous action of the ' Rohrbacher, History of the Church, vol. XXVIII, p. <B5; Paris, t85i. From the point of view of accuracy and military assessments, no his—The story of this dreadful campaign was no equal to that of General Marquis Georges de Chambray; by the way, Third edition, Paris, <838. — Id. Egl. and Synag., p. 234; <859.

2 Hallez, Des Juifs, ut supra, p. 64; <845. Id., Traité de la police, t. I", p. 283; <705. In certain aspects of the world, and even of Europe, the contemporary Jew still paints a faithful picture of the Jews in the Middle Ages. That's what we'll see.

CHAPTER FIVE. U5

The Talmud is still far from having completed its task and completed his moralizing work.

And yet, oh supreme inconsistency of the writer that We quote: "Let the Jews," he adds, "continue to ob-to serve the rites of the old law—that they persist in these superstitious practices that the rabbis added to "Moses' precepts, we don't care!"

It doesn't matter to you! And why? – Because too inclined 'To take man for a machine, you don't think never enough than his belief, which is equivalent to saying his education, engenders and governs its actions. But, thanks to simple comparisons that we have made, do not you
Is it not a given that we can see hatred that is both national and religious?
The Jew's hatred of the Christian, this traditional hatred that Orthodox rabbinism teaches the Jew, to become the the rule of its customs, the core of its morality, descending from generation after generation until around the middle of the century current, to extend without measure and without limits, to take according to times and places, all faces and all manners, to become in a word the soul of the possessed people, to whom Christ said; "Fos ex patre 'diabolo: your father, that is "the one who was a murderer from the beginning," and the con-damned to have no future 'I

To us, in a little while, and in one of the chapters that will Hallez, ibid., p. 5, etc.

* S. John, wine, 44. – Errare humanum est, persenemre Judalcum.

3 Even before the writing of the Pharisaic traditions from which they are derived
They laid down the Talmuds, and from Vespasian onward, the world was already corrupted.
that he is influenced by paganism, and is indignant at the dark malice of these Jews, whom Tacitus wrongly accused, in anticipation, of having been the refuse and the contempt of all peoples (Bonnotty, Annals of Philosophy, no. 108)
p. 456; 1868.) Their perversity already reduced this emperor to declaring them incapable of certain magistracies and public functions that they were not even afraid to grant to barbaric peoples...
Quippè who, a maiitia, magistratibus aliisque publlicis oSiciis, quæ aliis cumluribus nationibus, licet barbaris, concessa fuerant, etc... Baronius. Annals, t. I", ch. xxxi, p. 677; 1705, in-fol.

Theodosius the Younger renewed these prohibitions, and, from then on, "their Their dispersion among all nations was much greater; they were there universally despised, and were the refuse of all other peoples... »

Digitized by Google

THE JEWS.

U6

to follow, to take a look that allows us to see, in letting ourselves drift along the course of this nineteenth century, if, of Nowadays, as in the past, homicide has not yet...
ronné the hatred that Pharisaic superstitions engendered.

CONCLUSION.

The Talmud makes Jews who conform their lives to its religious precepts, that is to say, to the Orthodox Franks, a immense merit of their hateful vices, which do not per-
They put more effort into seeing their neighbor in a man, if the This man's conscience escapes the imprint of the Talmud.
whose rabbinical corner touched their souls.

NOTE FROM PREVIOUS PAGE.

Among a thousand samples that confirm each other, and of which The reader will appreciate the greater or lesser value; we quote the two following; the first, because it is the model of an industry, the second, because it is taken from a book whose popularity was immense.

The government is forced to take measures regarding the Jewish propaganda. A discovery was made in the province of Kherson an association of Israelites who, for a small fee, take on the task of to provide people without acknowledgments with the necessary documents to justify of a social position. Thus a vagrant, a repeat offender, a A deserter, for example, to escape the police, presents himself at the a- association. This one takes its client to the Ottoman consul, who, on Witness statements declaring that the individual is an Ottoman subject, an honorable merchant from such and such a town, having lost his papers, He immediately issued him a valid passport under a Jewish name. So as not to To avoid arousing suspicion, the individual in question is forced to live in among the Jews, frequenting their synagogues, and eventually becoming a true Jew. (Ibid., Kuhn, January 7, 1866.)

Russia. Berditscheff (Podolia), September 3, 1835; Alexan's Diary Drine. A non-Catholic Swedish woman, daughter of the Count of Alopeus: "We are We arrived last night in Berditscheff, a small town populated by Jews. We are and it is through them that all business is done here... » P. 310–311.

"Novogorod, September 4, 1833. "These Jews, an unworthy race of thieves, At the time of departure, they caused us so many difficulties that we we sent them packing, and we took the post. » Ibid., Jour-Alexandrine's final, p. 311.

O Ostrog, September 6, 1833. "We arrived here in four days hours. Horrible house run by Jews... All the women

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FIVE. ' 147

Young people from these regions wear caps embroidered with beads, sometimes very beautiful. The one belonging to the mistress of this house is also in-"Rich in diamonds..." Ibid., Journal of Alexandrine, a non-Catholic Swedish woman Lique, daughter of the Count of Alopeus, pp. 311–312; Tales of a Sister, by Mme Augustus Craven, fourth edition, in-12, t. I'''; Paris.

FOLLOW-UP NOTE.

The Israelite Universe, a journal of Judaism, less progressive and by even more orthodox than its rival journal, Archives israélites, never ceases to highlight the moral inferiority of the Jew, and in his frequent bouts of bad mood and arrogance, this leaf It reveals it to us without us understanding the implications of what it states. Let's let listening to his words:

"Again in its December 9th issue, Le Droit says: Four Is-Dutch Raelites, diamond cutters, appear before the jury of the Seine, etc., etc... It seems that it is finally time for the central history provoked a comment from the Minister of the Interior press release urging newspapers to no longer reveal the worship of any individual Vidu brought before the courts. This simple measure would suffice for to put an end to a revolting abuse, which outrages all French people Raelites and their religion! » XXth year, September 1864, p. 198.

Name, name, among the criminals, the foreigner whom the arm strikes of justice, Spanish or English, German, Italian or Danish-no, and you will see that nowhere is the Israelite disturbed by it, although To pronounce the name of these peoples is to designate Christians. Alais, in a Catholic country, to have the audacity to write the name of Jew on the front of the embezzler, this Jew whose nationality designates also religion, oh the unforgivable and odious outrage! I Privilege therefore in favor of the Jewish repeat offender, and suspension of the liberty of the press towards him, for fear that the Synagogue would smell red to seep into his face at the decrees that punish the crime; out of fear that the Christian should not feast his eyes on disadvantage and shame

Certainly, as for us Catholics, this noise of advertising, which The Jew abhors and fears, that would be our joy; and, since the acts of Man is the natural product of his beliefs, we will say to the justice, however little it may incline it to flatter us; Courage! and no reti-ence towards us I No, no, don't hide anything, on the contrary; and Please establish, with all the clarity of evidence, the exact proportions.
of the crime between the Catholic and the enemy of Catholicism; between the ca-Catholic faithful to his religious faith, and he who professes the neglier; between the simple Catholic and the committed Catholic: the priest,
The religious figure, the bishop. And, far from cursing them, we will bless their hands.
who would hasten to display them from one end of the world to the other, in the crossroads and public squares, this comparative table of morality in action men of impiety and men of various cults.

However, Judaism—a curious and imposing spectacle and prelude 10.

Digitized by Google

148

THE JEWS.

of the biggest events! — has suddenly entered the path transformations. He begins to count by the thousands, in his within, the indifferent, and Protestants alongside its orthodox... He
It therefore begins to divide, either by losing itself in rationalism, which is the ruin of all reason, whether by drawing closer to Moses, whose
The word leads to Christ, which allows even the most observant kindly say, regarding the latter; "The morality of Ju-Modern Daism, setting aside an ambiguous casuistry, offers to barely a few points that deviate from the principles of the Old Testament
ly. Just as this wonderful nation constantly within its ranks a considerable number of noble figures, it has always-days had a series of elementary manuals and treatises on morality excellent', where skilled hands have erased all trace of the enormities tenets of orthodox rabbinic doctrine, that is to say, of that which continues constitutes the foundation of the Jewish faith, and its doctors drew from the an inexhaustible reservoir of the Talmud.

' Goschler, i'nc/cl. cat. allcm. Ib,, t. XII, p. 395.

END OF NOTES.

Kol Nidrai, or perjury in religion. – Sacramental word;
 Three Jews, the first to arrive, form a tribunal that can deto bind every Jew to his oaths and to his commitments of any kind.
 – This fact denied. – This denial destroyed. – All three have the same authority like that of the tribunal of Moses, but they have it against the law.
 Does the Talmud make a moral man a man of contradiction? – No
 A social bond of promise or contract cannot therefore bind towards
 The Christian, the Jew, with whom the Christian makes a commitment? – A ceremony nun releases each year, for the future and for the past, all A Jew forming or about to form a pledge. – Grotesque formula employed by the Jew who is recovering from his commitments. – Tours and formulas which, in the mind of the Jew, deprive his pro-masses and leave his conscience at peace. – These Talmudic customs explain the hatred of the people, and the rigors of social power against these mobile and antisocial populations. – An oath of which The formalities and the text usually seem to strike the Jew of Superstitious terrors were imposed on Jews in most states.
 Christians, and still survives in some. – France. – The Court of Colmar (February 10, 1809) and this oath. – Reflections.

Perhaps some readers are starting to stand up defiant against the morality of the Orthodox Jew, and we However, we are far from having said enough about beliefs

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FIVE. 119

which are the source of his morality: one of them will perhaps complete-
 It is our duty to educate ourselves on this point, and here it is: it is that, by the simple cessation of a sacramental word that comes from their mouth, three Jews prevail both on the law of Moses and on the entire consciousness of humankind. Three of them alone, and in short, they shift, in effect, the immutable notion of justice.
 tice that nature and civilization have placed at the heart of everything man; they make just what cannot be just; they set free the link formed by the free speech of a man who claims to commit; they disengage in a word, validly and reli-Giorably, any Jew who repents of any obligation whatsoeverconch contracted from mud or feather with a Christian There you have it. That's the fact, and it's probably worth being known.

Lies! And odious lies! will be cried from the depths of his throat, the Israelite against whom you would reproach this grievance. Indeed, You hardly know, and you are outrageously slandering.
 our Judaism. But please be fair, it will help you.
 It will cost little effort; simply read these few lines.

Say, and judge:

"Judaism is falsely accused when it is said that it authorizes its followers to violate justice with regard to all the uncircumcised. We're not being any more accurate when we say that at each Yom Kippur holiday (the Day of Atonement), the Israelites recite a prayer that is meant to release them in advance of all the commitments they will make and of all the services things they will do during the year. We read the formula of prayer; but, obviously, no effort was made to find out what it relates to. We wouldn't do the text of an accusation, if we knew that it relates, not to commitments that we make towards our neighbor or to the servants statements that will be made before the judges, but to promises that we make to ourselves, to our vows.

It is therefore in favor of the Israelites that these < Tur Orach Chaim, ch. dcxix.

Digitized by Google

450 THE JEWS.

obligations "that the Kol-Nidra formula was composed of. She must release them, in advance, from unconscionable commitments. desires that they often pre-inculcate, without worrying if they can They hold, and many times they don't. From this In a way, when they fail to keep their promises, because they were too difficult to accomplish, they will not have committed of pecbé. We do not have to examine the value of this here. ceremony; what is important for us to note, for the mo- The problem is that it doesn't meet any of the commitments made before to be taken with regard to other men, and the oaths that we do it to them.

The Kol-Nidra formula does not in any way affect the commitments Contracted agreements with others. This word is precise. Now here to which a scholar responded in advance to the Archives rabbi who was horrified and disgusted by the anti-Soviet doctrine Talmudic text: – The Talmud tells us: "All three that are established as a tribunal over Israel have the same authority as the the tribunal of Moses—and that is not enough to say—for the the tribunal of Moses, erected by God to give force to justice, did not feel at all, like the tribunal of the three, the au- the authority to destroy it; it was the force of right, and not the force against the law I

We read about a demon in one of Mr. de's books.

Holy Trinity, and reforming it in the opposite direction, he explained this act by saying; I want to define myself, and I do it by this symbol; for I am God in reverse! Is-what the inspiring spirit of the Talmud, this religious code of the Orthodox Jew, would only work to make the man morally similar to what he himself is; what to do with this Image of God, a work of art that contradicts meaning, a being that is the opposite? How to revolutionize one's nature? How to make one antisocial at first glance? A leader, the one whom God created to be sociable by nature?...

In any case, and thanks to the Jewish tribunal of the three,

< Archives israélites, t. XXI, p. 1081-3, December 15, 1866.

2 Rosch-Haschschbana Treatise, fol. 25 r", Kol Scheloscha ouscbloscha.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FIVE, 151

all commitments with a Christian are remitted, and remitted Ga-France, to the Jew who claims to use the privilege conferred upon him Kol Nidrai, never, no, never between these two beings social bond of a promise, a contract, an agreement, not has formed, does not form and does not tighten, without the Jew, but the Jew alone, and certainly not the Christian, finds himself armed with the right to break it and cut it. But, in the violating, his conscience remains at peace, free from alarms or of remorse, for she remains pure, Judaically pure, if he is orthodox.

Yes, "even today (1827), it is before a tribune-the final of three that the divorce letters give each other, etc. -, and three ordinary Jews, whom another Jew seated, have full authority to release him from his oaths and to annul his promises, his commitments, both for the past and for the future come'. "

And to ease the conscience of the Jew more, or if one wants, in order to expose its delicate nature less to attacks of the tempting breath, "this ceremony, called the annulment-tion of vows and promises, - Hapharat-nédarim, - is done for every Jew at least once a year," and pre-His desires come to him. The custom is to choose for his fulfillment-"The days of penance, from the day before the day of..." the year, around September, until the day before the festival "Expiations."

Before the cantor had begun to sing in the synagogue

court, and placed at the head of the audience, cancel from their full authority over all vows, commitments, and oaths from each member of the assembly, both those from the year that has just passed to pass than those of the year in which one entered. We call This is Kol Nidra. Some rabbis have tried to argue that This cancellation is only valid for the future;

< Drach, second letter, pp. 82-3; 1827. The magnificent sermon of Bourdaloue's False Conscience, which reveals so many false Christians to themselves, would be quite indispensable to the Jew, if his eyes could to open oneself up to such a text!

Digitized by Google

152

THE JEWS.

but the effect would be exactly the same, since this The ceremony is renewed every year. They have also been victoriously refuted by other doctors, who prove that we take advantage of it both for the past and for the future.

Moreover, there is no necessity for it, and we repeat, it does not exist. for the contractor to accept the slowness of the return of the year-, and nowadays (1827) as in the past, "the Jew who feels his conscience is too burdened with promises and serments/ait asseoir trois de son freres qui assemble immediately in court. Before this court, he states that he repents of all the promises and all the oaths he ever made aculed, and that he retract them. They are so numerous, he said in ter-undermining his protest, which I could not specify. Therefore, let them be in your eyes, O rabbis, as if I were them had listed in detail 1 >< The tribunal formed of these three "any Jews," declares, without further ado, these promises and oaths are harmful, of no effect, and not avenues ' » In turn, the unbound will unbound those who come from to break free from his bonds, if they require it. What of More convenient and simpler?

Parla prayer Omnia vota, pacta, juramenta, made on the day of Yom Kippur, that is, the day of their atonement, the Jews therefore understand, as the learned author of Harmony between the Church and the Synagogue, that "all wishes, all the agreements, all the oaths of loyalty that they may have violated or failed to accomplish in the preceding year, and that they are reunited without any compensation at to establish for the harm that may result. In this belief, instead of seeing themselves as criminals and perjurers, they are convinced of their candor and their sin—"Truth!" Such is the power of perverted doctrines and of the false consciousness!

'Second letter from a rabbi, etc., pp. 82-83, 304-5; one volume in-8"; Paris, 1827.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FIVE. 153

Let us also inform those concerned, of whom it is certain that most people are unaware that there are among the Jews turns of phrase and particular formulas, accompanied of various external acts, which strip or clothe the oath of its validity. "The Christian who is not at aware of these details, believes in the oath, while the Jew he unscrupulously swore something contrary to the truth. What he The positive aspect is that Maimonides, that is to say the pre-First among all religious authorities in Judaism,

"and Rabbi Cozzen, propose a large number of these detours and subtleties to deliver their coreligion—"They are bound by the obligation to keep their oaths!"

When, for example, those who are keen to disengage ' of the sworn faith enter the synagogue the night before For the Yom Kippur holiday, they simply have to hold the book of the law, then to pronounce these words: "I, Isaac or David, etc., I declare before God and before you that all the oaths I will make to someone during the year next, and which I will have promised to observe, while my will not consent to observe them, I want them be harmed, worthless, and not attributable to sin if I do not accomplish them." This formula changes into action. legitimate the most blatant violation of promises and oaths. That's what the rabbis say, that's what the Talmud says. have succeeded in raising human consciousness!

That is why the learned neophyte Pfefferkorn, examining the doctrine of the Synagogue into which he was born, was not afraid to write: "It sometimes happens that a A debate arises between a Christian and a Jew concerning a pledge. of a loan,... or something else important, of so that, in the absence of evidence, the Jew is obliged to "Take an oath..." You then hear him swear, and saus

'One of the essential conditions for the validity of the absolution, When a Catholic who goes to confession receives it, that is the compensation. according to his strength, for whatever harm he has done, and which is called satisfaction.

Digitized by Google

154

THE JEWS.

difficulty^ knowing that he swears to something false, but that he must not fear any god who avenges perjury; for the The Talmud has cleared his conscience, and his religion covers him! In truth, when the Judaizer does not see in the Christian that a brute, and refuses to recognize in him his fellow man, Shouldn't a Christian congratulate himself for not being a fool? Deserving of a place like his fellow man!

Some Jews have argued that the moral law which governs them-' Verne is the very one that governs their relations with the Christians. look; and, to throw us off the scent on this subject, instead They call us Goyim, they call us Gerim. But let us not be deceived, the goyim is the non-Jew, pagan, or Christian; while the gherim is the proselyte who renounces all other worship to embrace the cult of Israel. Now, in the eyes of the law, these foreign converts, these They are brothers; they have ceased to be brutes, they acquire j) their entry into the Synagogue the quality of men; and, therefore, the laws of natural morality become obligatory "gatoires h leur regard'."

The lights, the resplendent beacons that rise to the-projecting above our heads these key points of the Talmud distant influences on the past of the Jews, and the history-A room powerfully illuminated by such fires shows itself to be k we in a light that strips it of its enigmas with regard those lost in the dispersion. We then understand, while rising up against the cruel excesses of reaction, of which The Jews had to constantly suffer from one end to the other of the earth, the despair and fury of the people, ceaselessly and mercilessly disappointed and devoured by these men, all the more so rebellious and hostile to the feelings of human nature that they entered more scrupulously into the spirit of their Religious law. We understand and we congratulate the princes. wise enough, and therefore strong enough, to have known how to protect-to raise their people against these barbarians... And, in this Es-

' Rupert, The Church and Synagogue, p. 54 to 61; Paris, 1859, in-li.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FIVE. 158

The religious loincloth, so miserably slandered by the "allies" Jews ^ far from lamenting the inhumane decrees of the sub- We admire the verain who protects his subjects from them. on the contrary, the King of Aragon, James I, of glorious memory, when we hear him publish k Barcelona, in a general assembly of its Estates, the constitution where the u- sure that Jews receive the rate of 20 percent as a limit extreme, and which forbids adding the slightest credit to their oath. Experience and knowledge of their morals, adds this monarch, have taught what is worth in their , the sworn oath is broken; therefore, one must refrain from making any claim of them this verbal sanction and not admit against their de- "biteurs than regular titles."

This presents an opportunity to recall that oaths of a very particular nature aimed, in some countries, to seek and reach the ortho- Jew doxe at the bottom of this abyss he calls his conscience. sometimes achieved this by using the Jewish formula which gave this act the name of oath more ju- Daico. A friend of the Jewish nation, belonging to the liberal school- advanced rale, published the one we offer to the reader and which was extracted from a ruling of the Colmar court, dated the February 10, 1809. We transcribe this accurately. curious piece, and without allowing us to correct the style :

"By consulting the imperial decrees issued on the ma- tière, and by bringing the provisions closer to those of the Empe- con- Sigismund and Charles V of August 12, 1530, con- defining the privileges of the Jews, of the adopted jurisprudence by the Court of Appeal of Brunswick-Lüneburg, the regulations from the imperial court of Lower Austria, from those of the Magis- Treaty of Frankfurt of December 7, 1705, and of the other States

'Measures which, after twelve years, proved insufficient. – Ibid., Marca Hispanica, I. IV, p. 157; year 1228. James reigns at the naonnt where Moses Maimonides, the great doctor of the Talmud, the true Moses, the Talmudic Jew. We see what kind of person he made of the Jew.

Digitized by CoogLe

THE JEWS.

from Germany, it follows that the Jew to whom he had been Having taken an oath, he was required to appear accompanied by ten Jews of his sex, each of whom was at least thirty years old, k the synagogue, and Ik, his head covered, his forehead and his hand adorned with the Tephillin Schel Rascli, and the Schel jad', covered of Tallis', and clothed in his Arba canphor with the zizzis', to position themselves in front of the Oren »

"At this time, the Kosher Sefer Torah will be..." extracted and carried with pomp on Almemor*, where one will give reading of the passage concerning the oath.

"The Torah will then be placed on the Jew's arm, who will..."
 right hand extended over the fifth book of Moses, verse:
 "You shall not take the name of God in vain," after having having heard the explanation that will be given to him by the rabbi, as well as the oath and curses that the Perjurers will repeat the following formula:

"Adonai (Lord God), creator of heaven, earth and of all things, which is also mine and that of all Men present here, I invoke you by your sacred name in this at this moment, when it comes to telling the truth. I swear in accordance with this-quence » that etc... « I therefore beg you, Adonai, to help me-to confirm this truth. But, in the event that, in

 I would be using some form of fraud to conceal the truth.
 that I may be eternally cursed, devoured, and annihilated by the fire in which Sodom and Gomorrah perished, and overwhelmed by all the curses written in the Torah; that the Eternal One, who has He created the leaves, the herbs, and all things, may He never come but neither my help nor my assistance in any of my

'Leather strap, which the Jews use in their prayers, and with which they wrap their head and left arm.

^ Veil with which they cover their heads.

^ Arba canphor with the zizzis, a kind of consecrated cloak to which eight threads hang.

< Sanctuary, tabernacle.

6 The true book of the law, that is, the law composed of the five wrapped in silk fabric, and adorned with silver plates.

^ Square platform, in the middle of the synagogue.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FIVE. 157

my affairs and my troubles; but, if I speak the truth and act well,
"May Adonai help me, and nothing more."

If it is a matter of Jewish morality to lie to a Christian, that he should be deceived, that he should be harmed in his person and in his Well, even if it's a meritorious act, really, what's the point of this per-
The fide and burlesque ceremonial of the oath more judaïco?
The Jew considers it a bloody insult; but this servant
he had been lying from time to time about his mind, as he seems to have it, a superstitious value, does not destroy in neither the savage precepts of the Talmud nor the virtue of dissolvent of the words of Kol Nidrai. Trust in the honor of such and such an Israelite; to believe and to maintain (|that the number of those whose word it is reasonable to accept grows k as Talmudic belief fades, so be it, and nothing of better for sure; but trusting words is more important than faith.
the people declare worthless with regard to the Christian, what naive-Veté of confidence and what need to get caught in the nets of hunter!

In any case, these different examples of mistrust universal, legal, and legitimate of peoples; these curious formulas of oaths taken more judaïco, that is to say con-formerly the custom of the Jews, are not abolished and tom-obsolete in all the kingdoms of Europe. And What we are witnessing is that they exasperate and cause the Israelite to roar with fury in the land where his mouth is free; for they proclaim today the face of men, the complete lack of credit that ruins them in advance any promise or oath coming from Jewish lips;
They authentically depict the reduced Christian to rely on the terror that he supposes must arise from for-superstitious mules to reach the Jew deep in his soul and tie it.

In truth, we could not finish these sad pages nor

* Id. Hallez, De Juifs en France, etc., p. 351; Paris, 1854. Collection Judgments of the Court of Colmar, vol. IV, p. 368, etc. See the final note Kol Nidrai.

THE JEWS.

begin the following without repeating these words of Tun Defenders of the Jewish cause: After crossing without perishing in the torrent of centuries, "the Jews have preserved almost intact their superstitious practices and their national customs, completely incompatible with the conditions
' tions of modern society'.

'Hallez, Des Juifs, etc., p. 262-3 ; Paris, 1845.

I

FINAL NOTE.

We read in the preamble to this judgment that the oath more ju-daïco is, "by its very nature, both civil and religious;" that this
The oath was used in Alsace, because of the Jews of that province.
Germans of origin, followed like the Germans "from point to point to the point of the Hebrew rite, that is to say that they were like them, Talmudic-dists, while those in the south of France follow the Portuguese rite
They are gay, they only admit the law of Moses, and do not have, like the Jews Germans, two ways of taking an oath. One that binds them, and No, not the other.

These Portuguese Jews, let us hasten to say, are the elite of the nation, and have always been placed by public opinion incomparably above the others, who form and will form, we will be told, the indestructible core of the nation. These Portuguese descend, or claim to descend of Jews who had emigrated long before the deicide.

In 1810, the Court of Cassation, in a ruling dated July 12, recognizedstill knows the necessity of the oath more judaïco for the Jews of Alsace, "whose Talmud was the law." See this consideration; Hallez,
p. 362; i6., read from 350 to 365.

This oath is now abolished. What do justice and the Why? And what new guarantee does the oath of the Jewish Talmudist offer?
to whom the law of certain European states allows to be a civil servant, and to judge or administer to the Christian?... We respectfully ask
The question, and nothing more.

Read about the oath more judaïco, in Poland, Arc/u'oes israélites,

CHAPTER FIVE.

159

FIFTH DIVISION. – MOR.4 THE TALMUDIC. USURE.

Jewish and usury, words linked by a cohesive force twenty times stronger. laire. – The Jew usurer? – Paradox, for one cannot rob him – Trick and contradictions. – The Jews are devouring France. – Driven out for the crime of usury; they accept servitude and con- The most degrading editions to obtain the right to return. – In a few years "Your greatest part of the Christians' possessions are "In their dependence." – Christians become the property of those whom they made their serfs. – The famous petition of Pierre de Cluny against these excesses. – The Jew, despite the persecutions he laments, He wants no other paradise than the land of his persecutors. – Letter ce-famous and magnificent of Innocent III denouncing their crimes and engaging-giant princes to make them disgorge their ill-gotten gains. – These princes often accused without justice of greed. – Protection of the pontiffs extending on the Jew who seeks their justice, and on his property, as well as on The Christian. – The Archives of Champagne. – Example: the Jews of Troyes, etc. – Rates of their usury. – It was considered good, however-dant, to have in the Jews "a corporation damned in advance, which made the profession of the reprobate." – A council condemns them to wear a A mark that distinguishes them. – Definitive banishment under Charles VII. "for the crimes they commit every day, – Louis XIII re-new this decree. – Lorraine and Alsace, which are excepted, are consumed by their wear and tear. – Leopold's edict against them in Lor-Raine, in 1728. – The Attorney General of the Regent, in France, where Many Jews returned, calling them "the monsters of the so-civil society. – What the Jews are doing to Alsace. – Napoleon P'' and the Jewish moneylenders. – The Jews in Alsace, and Mr. de Bonald. – Mr. Michelet's sentence against the Jews, with this ending: "Of Bellows by bellows, there they are, on the throne of the world. – Terrifying excuse of wear and tear. – In the Jew, it is the fruit of his belief religious. – Mr. Toussenel and the Jews. – King-Citizen Louis-Philip and the Jews. – Moral of this chapter.

The man to whom you say, "You are only a Jew!" shouts to the insult, and raise your hand to your cheek-for, if in the In the business world, usury and theft are two aspects of a The same crime, Jew and usury are, rightly or wrongly, two words linked to each other by a cohesive force twenty

No one could overcome that force!

But what does prejudice matter to us? Prejudices are not...
They point to monsters who declare themselves indomitable until Under the avenging arm of Hercules? The Jew usurer! Who then?
Who will have the audacity to uphold this glaring paradox? Because the Jew does not
It may be; how then could it be? And we take

Digitized by Google

160

LKS JEWS.

Firstly, the Israelite Bedar- witnessed this impossibility ride, the interpreter of the words of the great Synod of the year 1806.

"Usury cannot be authorized by the law of MoUe, which
"He's only ever heard of a legal interest." We Let us then call upon one of the major organs of the Ju-Daism, the Israeli Archives, where we read: In the year 1807, "the great Sanhedrin wishing to dispel the error which attributes to the Israelites the ability to practice usury with those who are not of their religion, as being left to them by this religion, and confirmed by their Talmudic doctors distes, declares that the text which authorizes lending at interest with The foreign can and should only be understood in relation to nations foreign countries with which trade was conducted, and which they themselves lent money to the Israelites*.

"Every Israelite," we are told elsewhere, "is obligated towards those who observe the Noahides', whatever their ail-their religion, to love them as brothers, to visit their sick, to bury their dead, to assist their poor like those of Israel, and there is no work of charity, mercy which he can dispense with towards them. "

The great Sanhedrin therefore draws its language "from the
"the letter and the spirit of Holy Scripture." He repeats this saying From Deuteronomy: "You shall not lend interest to your brother
"Neither money, nor grain, nor anything else."
He orders everyone finally "as a religious precept, and in in particular those from France, to make no distinction in the future, with regard to lending, between fellow citizens and coreligionists 'Gionnaires'.

Paris, 1861. Always the law of Moses! While the law of the Jew is,
On the contrary, Talraud.

^Archives Israélites, p. 35; January 1, 1867.

^ Herachin, ch. vu. The Noahides are the precepts given to Noah, stated above, Arch. isr., XVIII, p. 832.

But by what right does he give orders? What is his religious authority?
11 has none, and especially against Talraud, supreme authority (supro).

5 Archives israélites, XVII, p. 830 to 835, September 15, 1867.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FIVE. 161

And such, according to the same Jewish authority, was virtue of this recommendation, which the Jews are not today no more or less disreputable than Protestants or Catholics laws, and that, for example, convictions for usury would be "less numerous in Alsace and Lorraine than in certain departments of central France where no one resides
"Not an Israelite."

We will have to determine later whether the declarations rations from the Talmud, if those of history and statistics general are in accordance with or contrary to those of the authorities that we felt it necessary to put online in support of Is-Raël. But first, when it comes to forming an opinion-serious association with the Jews, how to repeat enough tones that it is also pleasant to hear him give us
His religious law, the law of Moses, which he would be eager to hear,
In Japan, a heretic, because he is a Christian, gives for its law the decrees of the ecumenical councils of the Church?
Once again, the Talmud, there you have it, except for one insignificant point.
that was the exception, for many centuries and until-that to him, the law of the Jew; that is his faith, that is the rule of conduct of "the indestructible core of the nation," and the Pharisaic traditions of this code, transmitted by the rabbis bins not only dominate, but erase and repel
The precepts of the divine lawgiver are rendered meaningless.

Let us therefore engrave deeply in our memory this inalienable axiom of Jewish orthodoxy: "Those Those who violate the precepts of the scribes must be punished more severely.
seriously than those who violate the law of Moses; the infr-A transgressor of the Law of Moses may be absolved, but a violator of the precepts of the rabbis—that is, of the Talmud—must

'Archives Israélites, II, p. 81-2, January 16, 1867.

^f. H., l. III, ord. i, leaflet. 4, dist. 10, p. 297, extracts from the Pronwta Bibl. by Lucius Ferrari. Laurent, Syria, t. II, p. 394; 1846. Id., Drach, first letter, p. 74; 1826. – Id., Rohrbacher, Hist. univ. de V Eglise, XV, p. 483, etc.; Paris, 1861.

11

Digitized by Google

46Î THE JEWS.

But riiisloirc, if we consult her, will she hold us?
a language that is close to the idea that the Jew of the Sanhedrin-God teaches us about his duties, which are clear? A few Rapid steps through the centuries will give us on this not even a beginning of an answer; and first of all, an author contemporary who does not profess Christianity, because,
"According to the very words of the Israelite Universe, it is "A purebred philosopher," Mr. Delaunay refers us back to the the fall of Jerusalem, and tells us; "As everywhere, as Throughout history, and even now, Jews have practiced
"Alexandria, traffic and wear and tear"

This generalization is never without value under a such a pen; we are content with it for these re- eras abutments, and, being the speed we are, we want to cross leap forward several centuries, in order to fix our gaze on the France cl to deliver to us for a sufficient period at nn examination of some importance.

A prodigious phenomenon, which demonstrates what an inimagi-
To a considerable degree rises the absorbing power of this people:
King Philip I expelled the Jews from France in the year 1096, we says the monumental Treatise on the Police, "and all the others princes did the same, each in his own states," to such an extent These rapacious men had made themselves intolerable. However-dant, "their recovery took place in France a few years after... k conditions which seemed (acceptable k their surereté, but which greatly increased the burden of their servitude.
They became tributaries, and the king divided them among the ]»princes and the other lords of his court. Under this pro-taction, they truly continued their business; cl upon payment of the agreed sum, the remainder of their property, Unr ■ap-was leaving; but they were so attached to their lord that he considered them as part of his domain... Us

They were sold, they were claimed, they were mortgaged.

^L'Univers israélite, p. 71, October 1867. In Alexandria, and in throughout Africa neighboring Judea, their numbers were enormous.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FIVE. 463

SCS creditors, and there was a complaint action against the people who disturbed its possession.

Let us imagine a people who have preserved something self-respect, a people to whom the world is open. if we except a few Christian states, and which, for as-succumbing to his greed, he willingly submits to the humiliation. or rather, who is requesting these exorbitant laws? as a favor; and will we be able to understand that he them accepts without ever being crushed.^ Alil if we com-Let's take it, it's that we've made ourselves a very poor and quite a misconception about the resources of Jewish genius. Indeed, "things," continues the author of the Treatise on Police, remained in this state during the reigns of Louis the Fat and of Louis the Younger*, and that was enough to enrich with new-calf the Jews. The excessive lusts they exercised had placed under their control the goods and fortunes of the most a large part of Christians*.

So here are the free men of France in the process of

%

to become the property and possessions of those they have just con-to establish their serfs! Behold, from the depths of this servitude, is born and emerges the domination of the inevitable and terrible customs riers, against whom the famous abbot of Cluny, Pierre le Venerable, address to King Louis VII (H37 to 1180) his re-a quest with a holy and masculine freedom. For restraint is not no longer possible. He therefore rises up vigorously against the inima-ginables invasions of this race which concentrates in scs mains all the treasures of France-, this same race of which the great doctor of the Church, Saint Bernard, had does the charitable defender, but whose Christian charity, who could not allow the victim to perish in fear of striking the executioner, he judged it urgent to repress. audacity.

11 It is time for justice to be done, and far be it from me to-"So much so that the thought 'we should put them to death,' he exclaimed

'Louis VI, from 1108 to 1137; Louis VII, from 1137 to 1180.

* Delamare, 1. 1", p. 181; Paris, 1703, in-fol.

11.

Digitized by Google

164 LKS JEWS.

Pierre, but what I'm asking is that they be punished.

"In a measure proportionate to their perfidy. And what kind of a more suitable punishment than one which is both a condemnation of iniquity and a satisfaction given to the Charity? What could be more just than to strip them of this Did they accumulate through fraud? They plundered and stole as thieves; and, what's more, like seasoned thieves To this day, impunity reigns! What I'm saying is common knowledge. public, n

"It is neither through simple agricultural work, nor through regular service in the armed forces, nor through the exercise of honest and useful functions, that they make the cereals abound in their shops, wine in their cellars, gold and silver money in their coffers. Why didn't they amass it everywhere? what their cunning allowed them to wrest from the Christians, and by everything they bought furtively and cheaply at thieves, accustomed to passing so many objects through their hands They are dear to us! If a thief were to steal from night of censers, crosses, and consecrated chalices, it escapes persecution by Christians by resorting to the Jews-, and, finding among the men of this race a misfortune- reuse security, not only is it preparing for new misdeeds, but he delivers to the Synagogue of Satan all that he knows how to strip our churches of their sacredness... Then, the perversity of Jews make them use these heavenly vessels for purposes which are a disgrace to us and to Jesus Christ himself. same. >1

Finally, what can be said when this highly criminal trade takes refuge? with security under the protection of such an ancient law that diabolical, and yet which princes wore Christians? This law states that when a sacred object of any kind- conch shell is caught in the hands of the Jew, or that the Jew conceals a SACTwé^e flight, no one can force him to return it, no one has right to compel him to name the thief whose money he stole maintains the industry! Thus, a de- testable sacrilege, that the Christian, if he is guilty of it.

CHAPTER FIVE.

^ atones by the punishment of the rope! For that is the privilege-light of the latter!

As soon as Philip Augustus sat on the throne, The general outcry against the Jews resounded once again. They accuses, and the accusations are precise, "of having ruined the petty by their wear and tear, by having made themselves unjust by this means masters of an infinite number of considerable lands, and of almost half the houses in Paris; having received as wages the sacred vessels, the treasures of the churches, and having profaned them born. It is added that they have reduced several poor Christians to insist on becoming slaves, and that they finally crucify them all the years on Good Friday. » {See below in this volume.)

Already "ecclesiastical laws had deprived them of all public charges, because those who had suffered there—"The authorities had abused their authority against the Christians"; and already The Church had urged the princes to "compel the Jews to to cease their wear and tear, and to return those they had exi-Christians' grievances." 11 then became more urgent than ever-gent d'aviser.

Philip Augustus, "finally convinced of the malignancy of Jews, therefore, expelled them from his states in the year 1182; confiscated all their property, with the exception of their furniture;... restored his subjects in the possession of the inheritances they had alienated, and discharged them from all the sums they owed. were going, paying him only one-fifth*; » for the public law, in those barbaric centuries, had not yet been adopted the liberal principle, so dear to people of plunder, of respect for the fait accompli; neither opinion nor power

'This discourse can be found in greater detail in The Church and the Synagogue,' pp. 111-147; Paris, 1859. These same criminal habits of the Jews are amply described in the treatise De perfidia Judeeorum, Sim. Maioli Episcopi, p. 810, col. 2, p. 841, etc.; 1615. We do not reproduce We are not referring to the passage by this author, which we have already quoted, because that it seems to us to be a copy of the first, despite the centuries that have passed between separate.

2 Ibid., Treatise on the Police, vol. 1, p. 281. Protection costs the power; it needs agents, and without money, there are no agents.

THE JEWS.

guaranteed the plunderer possession of the goods that the ^ Cunning and violence had brought it under his control. What The thief who took it, did it belong to him, or to someone else? And the
Is the fruit of usury the fruit of theft or not? These are the questions then raised no doubt, and the leaders of the company, by seizing the Jew's ill-gotten wealth, they limited themselves to take back the property, a part of the property including its wear and tear had stripped the Christian.

We say a part of the good, for, despite its laments strident cries of grievances, the Jews, Ultimately, they had the advantage over the Christians^ and, badly-despite the persecutions – marked with the seal of justice – what they criticized the government for was an incomparable interest in them brought them back and tied them up in the midst of their persecutors!
Their safety there was quite good, when they didn't arouse against them the fury of some storms, for that all their efforts were to return to the kingdoms objects of their exactions and calumnies; it would be necessary for them to-Milk, so little time to devour a people, and if their fate would not have been more favorable and gentle among Christians than among Muslims and idolaters, who would have implicated them?
sins of settling once and for all among these barbarians
and to establish their dwelling there?

The Jew's actions, constantly contradicting his words were spoken once again after this execution, that the friends and followers of the Jews will judge today so cruel. Animated by the most ardent desire to return to the kingdom of France, they "indeed requested their restoration-bliss, and offered large sums to obtain it. needs of the State, to support the wars against the An-
The English and the Flemish, were a favorable opportunity, and their Offers were accepted (H98).

However, fourteen years after the re-establishment of the Jews in
In France, Innocent III wrote about their crimes and their ingratitude towards Christians "this excellent letter from the year 1212 which has deserved to be included among the laws that we read in canon law." And, by "a In another brief from the year 1213, he exhorted all the powers temporal h to force the Jews to hand over to the Christians the Mures with which they had charged them, if not to forbid them

"All commerce."

It is therefore wrong for historians, whether superficial or not, to Those who have been accused of any wrongdoing and greed are accused of this.
these princes, who are and must be the leaders and protectors leaders of their people, since, most of the time, from
If we look closely, we see that they do not give way that at the urgent cry of justice, and to surrender only to the sup-complications of him who, representing Christ on earth, is the father of peoples, the most reliable advisor to kings, the guardian
God and the keystone of Christian civilization.

Let us now turn to a page that we collect all fresh, and which had just yesterday come out still alive from the treasure of our Archives, tell us what it was like in those barbaric ages ^ the vigilant solicitude of the vicars of Christ; what was their zeal, not only to demand justice for the inimagiunacceptable excesses of Jewish usury, but also to repress the excesses of Christian reaction, to maintain to preserve the religious freedom of the Jews, to finally guarantee the security of their legitimate claims.

Many people will no doubt be surprised, wrote in 1865.
learned archivist of the Aube, "to find among the people recommended to our Counts by the Popes, the Jews of Champagne, who, having sent their grievances until-that to the throne of the successor of Saint Peter, obtained a bull addressed to Thibaut IV inviting him to make pay by the Christians the sums owed to the Jews, and to prevent the Christians to give Jews blows instead of money (year 1247). A papal bull from the previous year had had the purpose of the purpose of appealing to Thibaut's concern for the interests of Jews of Navarre, and had begged him to intervene to prevent

'Delamare, Treatise on the police, 4 vols. in-folio, t. !<'■, p. !80 to 282; Paris, 1705 to 1738.

THE JEWS.

that children should not be forcibly baptized. Let us remember, however that innocent HI had written k Blanche of Navarre, for the in-Avoid suppressing the audacity of the Jews. This letter, and a a similar address was sent at the same time to Philip Augustus, may have provoked the famous order that forbade to the Jews to take more than two denarii per pound of interest weekly, that is to say more than 43 francs 45 centimes per percent annual interest*. Was this modest interest or not wear and tear? But let's continue on our way and leaf-Let us return to this same work, the basis of which consists of authentic charters.

Jacob de Dampierre, master of the Jews of Troyes in 1222, His brothers were the Jews Haquin, Jacob, and Sonet. the latter owned, in the Jewish quarter of Troyes, a plot of land that they sold k Hier de la Brosse, and Yaalin, their father, He was one of the leading bankers in Troyes. He made loans. Eudes, Duke of Burgundy, who, "to ensure him a refuge-The next stock market transaction, he relinquished to him the immediate enjoyment of The abbey of Saint-Bénigne of Dijon was around the same time in a great embarrassment; she had, in 1196, borrowed k Yaalin a sum of 1,700 pounds, worth 34,448 francs 50 cents, at power of 172,242. The stipulated interest rate was three deniers per pound per week, that is to say 65 francs. 62 cents per year! The abbey went eleven years without paying, so that the original debt, increased by interest, reaches gnit, without compounding, the enormous figure of 9,825 pounds 11 under the Odeniers, worth 199,103 francs 95 cent., at the pou-See 995,519 francs 75 cents, very close to a million! For To free themselves, the monks were forced to sell their land de Morains * »

1 We will have a word later about the famous Mortara affair.

History of the Dukes and Counts of Champagne, by Arbois de Jubain-town, archivist of Aube, vol. IV, t. ii, p. 598; Paris, 4865.

* Ibid., d'Arbois de Jubainville, archivist of the Aube, vol. IV, p. 8!8 830. The Jew Pinon, having struck a cleric of the diocese of Boissons, was, by arbitration, expulsion from this diocese... Ibid., p. 832.

Digitized by Google

It was quite clear that the Jewish lenders knew how to take their securities, to secure, in addition to pledges, compensation in case of accident, and that "the loan k usury was for for them a source of immense benefit*. Today, this year, or at least the quarter, is the period that serves as the basis for the Calculation of the interest rate. The Christian bankers of Champagne used a shorter period; the interval that separated the payment terms of each of the six fairs; it therefore lasted, on average, two months." But "For Jewish bankers, the period was the week. Plus—Several acts of our Counts prohibit Christian bankers "Hold on to the loan for the week," because it was not lawful at Christian to act like a Jew, and, as the Archives* say Israelite* themselves, it was found that there was something to be found in the Jews "a damned corporation in advance, which could take charge of the "A profession for outcasts!"

"After demanding three denarii a week, the Jews were forced to be content with two, that is to say 13 fr. 75 c. percent per annum, the interest on the non-interest understood. This reform was due to an order issued by concert by Philippe Auguste, Blanche de Navarre and Guy of Dampierre, in 1206.

* D'Arbois, ibid., p. 834.

* Archives Israélites, XXtV, p. 1113; December 13, 1867.

^ Ibid., d'Arbois de Jubainville, vol. IV, p. 834. The Jews, as well as As we stated earlier, "were serfs, that is to say, slaves" "They were at their mercy," adds this learned archivist. "Their lord could demand..." of them, by the liter, whatever sum he pleased; thus, basically, It was the lord who profited from the acts of usury committed by the Jews. while in the eyes of the people, the Jew bore the brunt of all the odiousness. Ibid., p. 834.

Error! Error of fact, if not of law. The Jews have never only They very slightly pulled chestnuts out of the fire for others. Their fortune astounding, as evidenced by the very example of Vaalin, of Jacob of Troyes and their children, passed from father to son; and although their wear and tear provoked numerous and terrible reprisals against them, they did not venture into these monstrous loans without having a ceremonial attitude of immense and definitive gains. That is what the result demonstrates.

According to the text of the Police Treaty that we quoted, the Jews

THE JEWS.

But the Church had to and wanted to attend to the salvation of society Christian, and the last canons of the qualriènae concile gé-General of the Lateran, which concern the Jews, had "as their aim to suppress their usury and insolence. It is ordered therein that they will wear some mark on their clothing, for the distinguishing Christians, as was already the practice in some provinces, and it is forbidden to confer upon them public offices, "because they abused their authority" against Christians

A breed of public wrongdoers will therefore henceforth be able to clearly marked, and this mark, this sign, will tell of the part of the Church what will be said in the very liberal era of the regency of the hard man of Orléans, the attorney general of the kingdom, who will call these men "the monsters of civil society!"

The Talmudist, the Jew who is an enemy of the Christian by duty and out of self-interest, he will not be able to administer it, judge it, or command it. on the battlefields, to be its legislator, for the Church and common sense rises up against these absurdities.

However, and despite this relentless struggle of all social powers against Jewish tyranny, no act of Repression does not tire the Jews, and soon an ordinance of King Philip the Fair, dated 1299, punished with new-

would have been, generally at least, not subject to arbitrary taxation, but tri-goals, and paying a sum agreed in advance

The insurance premium forms one of the essential elements of the interest-"The loan," said economist JB Say. However, "the insurance premium formed the the greater part of what was called interest, or usury; and the in-The real interest, the rent for the use of capital, was reduced to very little of a thing. » That is what they did not hesitate to print in 1867, the Archives Israélites, VIII, p. 371. And it was this small thing that made the infamous Jews, according to the same excavation 1 (XXIV, p. 1113; 1867). This is what made this nation, "charged with the "A profession for outcasts!" This is what the Church, echoing the conscience publicly condemned it in formal terms!

- Uohrbacher, Universal History of the Church, vol. XVII, p. 441; 1851.
- Treatise on the Police, vol. I, p. 280. – Art of verifying dates: qua-Third council, year 1216.

- The register of the Chamber of Accounts, entitled Judasi, says Delamarc, a door which they entrusted to the care of their Christian friends, Homage to Christian probity! Ibid., pp. 282-3. — Th. Haliez, Des Jews in France, p. 81, etc., 1845.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FIVE. 171

calf their usurious acts. It has, because of the excesses of usury, of which it is in their custom to be guilty, that the sole capital of their loans must be repaid to their wax, and that any subsequent stipulation is waived. But the implementation of this law remains so weak, and the concert of The complaints that arise against the Jews become so formidable, that in the year 1306 Philip the Fair expelled them from the kingdom and confiscates all their property. Any request to call back these damned people no longer found in this monarchical as a deaf ear; and yet, towards (India his reign, he granted them the power to pursue the recovery— [This refers to] assets not included in the confiscation, and [it pushes] the condescension to the point of appointing commissioners to them to find out about it'.

One of the first acts of the reign of Louis the Quarrelsome, son and successor to Philip the Fair, it was however the recall Jews. These financial potentates financed; and, in the treaty that reopened the kingdom's gates to them, he was stipulated that they would be allowed to demand from their loans" twelve deniers per pound per week. "It was further said that, "of thirteen years that were granted to them, they would use the last k withdraw k at their leisure, and in complete safety, from "in the hands of their debtors, everything that would be owed to them," but "that they would not lend on bloody pledges, or wet, etc., etc."

This monarch's decree was too favorable to Jews so as not to stir up against them a swift and bloody reaction. It erupted without much delay; but "the chroniclers who report to us with dreadful details of the torture and banishment of the Jews, do not say —Hâtiez, avocat, Des Juifs en France, etc., p. 51, etc.; Paris, 1845. Although the grandson of Saint Louis was often unworthy of his ancestor, the Franco owes him at least the deliverance from two formidable scourges: the Jews and the Templars. The documents from the trial of these treacherous knights, published by Mr. Michelet, the pre-phobe, allow us to maintain this lan-pledge; and we leave aside the Jewish school of the Saint-Simonians, which pre-is valid nowadays in the teaching of political economy, defends dre, sil lu iplaft, the system of usury and Israelite usurers.

THE JEWS.

nothing about their return to France. It is likely that this Once, as almost always, chased away with a flourish, they re-came without a sound—for for every ten orders of exile one encounters h barely a reminder order, and most commonly it is It is by reading the law that bans them that we learn of their return in the country" because it is in the nature of the French to let to slumber and fall asleep any measure of rigor and ex-reception 1

However, adds the same writer, whose zeal is more generous and enlightened, he attempts to rehabilitate the Jews.
"the crimes and abominations <u'ih committed every day"
They compelled Charles VI to outlaw them. His letters patent of September 17, 1394, therefore, they banished them in perpetuity from its states. They forbid them to remain there under penalty of life*, and this expulsion differs from previous ones by its character no less than by its results, said the same advocate for the Jewish cause. Her motive was neither "neither the love of profit nor the spirit of plunder; and, what The proof is that all their claims had to be made to them.

paid France was going to return under Charles VU in an era of grandeur, order, and prosperity where it could-could be self-sufficient, without being obliged to ban and

'to call back the Jews alternately to fill the treasury.'

* Halicz, ibid., pp. 53-58.

Delamare, eyelash loco. — Hallez, ib., p. 63.

3 Hallez, ibid., pp. 64-65. — 4. During the Renaissance, the Jew is exac-the atrocious usurer of previous centuries. Here is the portrait that We are shown a learned bishop;

"Ex variis ipsorummet commerciorum eorumdenique usurariorum, ac furlivorum generibus, quæ omnia et singula in præsentissimu christianorum damniiri vergunt, quorum illi succum et sangiiin ualuralemque adeo vigorem planed exhauriunt. Atque ut in specie dicam: usuras a debitoribus deposcunt una cum donariis extraordinariis iniquissimas; in pecuniæ mulalione, adullerinas oblriidunt debitoribus monelas, easque in sunimo valore et prelio; neque tamon bis satiali,

grapho quam commodato acceperunt, iibi vol maxime exce|)tionem no numerata pecuniæ locum habere par esset. Margarilas spurias, clinodias (jewelry) fallaces, fucosas ctobsoletas merccs magno incautis atque indiscretis insudlant pretio. Furibus. nebulonibus, and proslibulis, etc., etc., etc... De per/idia Judoeorum, S. Maioli episcop. Vulturariansis,

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FIVE. 473

It is true that, faithful to the habits they find-of immense interest, the Jews are trying to return to France surreptitiously, and later Louis XIII, thus
As we have stated, this issues a ban.
against those who manage to infiltrate the kingdom.
The Jews of Metz alone possess the art of exempting themselves from this sensetence, as well as those of Lorraine and Alsace, regions were consumed by their wear and tear. "It is therefore well established that at the time of the Revolution there was no community Jewish, or, as Delamare says, of Jewishness, that in these provinces. But as for individuals, they spread out by-everything, and history has preserved the memory of the opulent banker Samuel Bernard ', ' the Rothschild of the reign of Louis XIV.

We'll take a look at Alsace in a little while;
But we will begin by stating that the very liberal Duke Leopold issued an edict in Lorraine, on the date of the year 1728, where they declare "harmful to all notes and acts under private agreements that would be made for the benefit of the Jews, both for money lent only for the sale of goods or other purposes pledges. » It was also stated in this edict that the Jews found guilty of usury or theft against ca- subjects Catholics would be punished "by the loss of their claims, required to pay double to their debtors, and obliged in in addition to a fine of five hundred pounds payable to the prince, without these penalties being able to be remitted or moderated by the judges*.

These rigors of justice under all ancient powers and modern, Christian or indifferent to the Christian faith, we indicate in fairly clear terms what the excesses of A wrong committed by these tireless Talmudic scholars. Let us add that in France, a moment before the time when Leopold surrendered 1645. Moguntiae, p. 810, col. 2; read ib., p. 844 to 850. This book is in full agreement with the two major works: Annales ecclesiast., by Cardinal Baronius, and the Treatise on Police, 4 vols. in folio; Paris, 1705-4758.

^ Archives israélites, 111, p. 449; 4867.

Digitized by Google

474

THE JEWS.

his edict, that is to say, dated June 19, 1717, – under the regency of the Duke of Orléans, so unchristian and so immoral – Notaries and tabellions were forbidden to pass obligatory passage to the benefit of the Jews, other than on account of money and delivered in their presence. The Attorney General^ in re-requesting this ruling, he said; that, informed from all sides of the customs – res that insatiable Jews exercised their power over Christians who in their needs they addressed themselves to them, he is in an obligation the urgent and indispensable need to reveal its principle in the eyes of the council, and to seek in his authority the means of exterminating outside its jurisdiction such a crime inhuman and so detestable; having made accurate inquiries to find out the source of this pernicious evil, he had found that it's in money lending..., where cunning and that the second trap he had noticed was in re-constantly renewing the obligations on the statements of account false and impious, where these monsters of civil society converted – "They both feel their illicit gain is the main issue."

Jewish fraud is practiced and increases every day, etc.

One of the exceptional points of the kingdom of France where The authorities tolerated the Jews; that was Alsace, we were all saying. on time. Now, here is what this old woman reports, and if important province a writer of Jewish race, whose goal was to bring his blood brothers back to the path of probité. "The war procured half of Alsace for the Jews; it is

'Ordinance of Alsace, 1, 488. – These reproaches, adds Mr. Hallcz, whose benevolence towards Jews is quite well known, are the same that he can still collect every day from the shield of all the ha-Alsatian hills (4,845). We must understand the importance that we Let us, in the interest of history, focus on drawing our main documents comments among the friends of the Jews or among the Jews themselves, rather than

11. There exists today, even in Alsace, "a habit; that is that creditors who do not want to strictly exercise the rights that the law confers upon them, cede their claim to some Jew, strange and b'â- A terrible compromise between humanity and self-interest. Every act of this kind is, one might say, an encouragement given to the Jews to persevere- to enter professions where the profits are immense for them, but harmful to society, and condemned by all legislation." Haliez, Jews in France, pp. 124 and 278; Paris, 4845.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FIVE. <75

the great scourge of our time. Wear and tear is getting stuck in our campaigns with as much impudence as impunity; the small ' The property is being devoured by this canker, which eats away at everything. It would take a whole volume to list all the shameful and per- methods! Jides employed by the Jews to attract all the par- / those of 'land which excite their covetousness -, and we ignor- | we will see if it can be found within the spirit of our modern laws ' some fairly strong measures to stop the progress of ' This problem will only worsen when we are forced to refer it to the legislature! It is no longer the Jews who cover themselves with the sackcloth of dou- For them, it is the peasants of our countryside who are in mourning. the iniquities of Israel.

"He did so in this way, among the Jews of Germany" Magne, considerable fortunes, which most of them spend felt magnificently. For the German Jew is vain and proud, arrogant, and vindictive; he has lost none of his flaws of his fathers.

This page, for sure, will hardly surprise us when we will have reviewed the ordinance of May 30, 1806, which the "Convener of the Great Sanhedrin, Napoleon I," this iwlit interested in mitigating the wrongs done to the Jews, of whom he dared to make French citizens, begin with these words:

"Based on the account we received, in several northern departments of our empire, some Jews, practicing no other profession than that of usury, have, by the ac-j accumulation of the most immoderate interests, put a lot of j of farmers of this j)ays clans nn state of great dé-j braid... etc., etc.

During the restoration of the illustrious and forever glorious House of Bourbon, whose politics and sword made this France, in front of which, even after and almost immediately

Europe remains silent, the pen of one of the most eminent publishers

'A. Cerfberr of Medelsheim, their history, customs, etc.,

(I. 39; Paris, 1847.

llailez, >6., Des Juifs, p. 297; 184a.

Digitized by Google

176

THE JEWS.

Cists of Catholicism, member of the Chamber of Peers,
let the Alsatian side of the question run free.
Judaic, his sentence quick and strong. This man of state... trained in the Christian world at the time when the liberal school more advanced, the philosophers and friends of the Jewish nation, have exposed society to the dangers that arise from the emancipa tioii of Israel. Let us read and meditate on his word:
"One finds everywhere men whose /perfidious"^ aid
'cause the ruin of those who are weak enough to resort to it,' but nowhere else but in Alsace can we see it – the only a province of France, roughly, which was handed over to the Jews, –

A portion of the population specifically devoted to this tiny money laundering, setting traps of all kinds 'at the good 'faith, it credulity, inexperience; offering fatal facease to the one who wants to borrow to get out of a slight predicament Barras, and not leaving the unfortunate man, once he had committed, only when his entire fortune is invaded/ Those who They saw Alsace with its beautiful culture and lovely villages,
Its superb population will be astonished by the picture you have drawn the author of a brochure entitled Some Ideas on L'üSunE of /u>/s</'A/*ace. One would not believe most of the facts contained in this brochure, if one did not have the advice as an authority generals of the two departments, and the testimony of their MPs—it seems that nothing less than nothing is at stake of a total upheaval of property ownership in Alsace, if all the
The Jews' debts were becoming due! The assembly constituent assembly itself, despite the fervor of its liberalism, rendered, in a much less urgent circumstance, a de-cret, the execution of which was prevented by the disaster of the times, for to force the Jews of Alsace to provide information about their claims and for a ruling to be made as required by law by the body Legislative, on the wisest method of liquidation. A decree of the enforceability of the other M's"

'Pp. 25J-256; read especially pages 257-272 afterwards. "We know how the Jews of Alsace proceed, etc... » Finally, Mr. Lacretelle did

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FIVE. 177

A thoroughly anti-Catholic and revolutionary writer Mr. Michelet, the naire, thus concluding the list of these denunciators historical tions, he could therefore truthfully exclaim; 4 Au~ Middle Ages, the one who knows where the gold is, the true alchemist, the The real sorcerer is the Jew/or the half-Jew, the Lombard; the Jew, filthy man: the man who cannot touch den- no woman should be burned; the man of outrage, on whom everyone spits on; it is to him that one must address oneself ser!... Dirty and prolific nation! But they resolved the pro- The problem of making wealth disappear. Freed by the letter of They have changed; now they are free, they are masters! of bellows "With bellows, there they are, on the throne of the world."

Now, after browsing these pages taken in somewhat randomly, and detached from a mountain of authentic documents, let us lend, once again, our patient ear 'to the Israelite Bédarride, whose word is rising calm and impassive in the face of the history of all peoples of world, and against the history of the Church, reminds us of the "Unperturbed responses from the Grand Sanhedrin to Napoleon I":

"No! Our law cannot authorize usury," and, for on this point, we see "no difference between the Jew and the foreigner." What am I saying? "The Jews are required to look The French like brothers! Our duty is to exercise towards Christians acts of charity, "and charity we sometimes make it our duty to lend without interest to the one who is in need." Our law repels, "by its spirit and by its terms, the prejudices of which it was the object. » Thus it appears today « under its true day, vigorously avenged, which causes loss at the Persecution is no excuse!

"

a picture, as true as it is vivid, of baseness and vices reproaches against the Jews, for whom he wisely and moderately pleads, "The humanity of governments, etc." From Ronald, Peer of France, Literary, political and philosophical miscellany, vol. 11, p. 274; Paris, 1819, vol. XI of the works, Adrien Le Clère.

'Cited in Hallez, friend of the Jews, ibid. The Jews, etc., pp. 37–38; etc., Paris, 1845.

– Bédarride, ibid., pp. 401–405, second edition, Paris, 1861. "The 12

Digitized by Google

178

THE JEWS.

Hey, you were told about the Jew who was a usurer, you
You called him the king of usury, the demon of usury! But there
So you thought, Christian friend?...

Answer: Faced with this placid and cold negation of wear and tear, where audacity and originality mingle (the word effron(terie will be banished from our sentence), we limit ourselves—we will repeat an apology, and consequently a recognition the occurrence of this error that we recorded some pages above. She is a bit unusual, no doubt.
but we choose it with all the more confidence that it escapes from a Jewish pen to which, already,
We had to make some costly confessions... If the Jews "dealt in silver, which is why it was reputed Infamous, and forbidden to Christians by religious law.
probably found it good and convenient to have a sort of A doomed corporation, f/wi took charge of this business.
of reprobate'. » The Jews therefore admit that they were lending themselves with all my heart, and for usurious profits, to all the in-families which any other man would have refused to cover himself with.
How to give truth, against oneself, these angles
Sharp, those incisive and piercing weapons!

Let us believe it, and let human actions teach us of a good or bad education: at all times, in all In this place, the customs of man were a consequence of its laws. The histories of all peoples tell us that The first laws were dictated from above; divine laws were therefore the principle and the key to liumaiiic morality.

Those who deserve, or are considered to deserve, this liter, are therefore still the source of customs among peoples who,

Jewish deputies, more concerned with their own well-being than with the law of the Siial, concealed the inflexible conditions of their religious faith, and in sacrificed several fundamental points, so as not to alienate the well-
The Emperor's vigilance. Thus, etc., etc. The Jewish Question, p. S, by the RP'Th. Ratisbonne, 4868. See what the assertions of the were worth Sanhedrin in the ancient rabbi Drach, second letter, p. 300; 1817.

- Archives israélites, XXIV, p. 4143; 4867.

Digitized by Google

179

CHAPTER FIVE.

similar to Israel, place or placed yesterday their religion above all interests or rights; how therefore, look elsewhere than in the religious code of Jew, you are different from your law of Mdüe, the reason and morality of Wear and tear? Now, according to this code, that is to say, according to the tra-Talmudic editions that regulate all orthodox conscience, six hundred and thirteen |)recepts exist of the law of God. TheH one hundred and ninety-eighth and one hundred and eighty-fifth who first command usury from non-Jews; *
the second, to exterminate without mercy the idols and the idolaters, among whom is the Christian, whom usury exterminates more surely than iron.

However, in the eyes of the rabbis, usury is a sin.
serious and detestable, which allows them to condemn her in vague speeches; but she is not at fault for them than a Jew. He who is neither of Jewish blood nor of Jewish faith.

Not being a man, he could not be a brother. The Sum theological, Shulhhanharuhh, by Rabbi Joseph Karo, establishes So, lending money at usury to this non-Jew is permissible! And this Summa is the inseparable code of the rabbis; it is the rule of all their decisions'.

We know, says the Talmud, that it is permitted to approach

What a non-Jew has lost is the ability to render himself unworthy of forgiveness. of God*. He who would restore to the non-Jew his lost possessions would commit a sin; for it would strengthen the hand of the impious, and the miscalculation he makes is to his disadvantage is in the same situation as what he loses*. This moral of the The flight is cloudless, it seems to us, and we see that it was always admirably practiced.

The rabbis further say: "Since the life of the idollatra, – and such is the Christian in their eyes, – is the dis-

* Article 159, § 1, i.

* Treatise Baba-Koummah, fol. 29 v"; treatise Sanhédrin, fol. 76 v®.

Maimonides, Treatise on Plunder and Lost Things, ch. 11

Digitized by Google

180 THE JEWS.

crélioiii (lu Jew, to the greater reason his property'! «The possessions-
The teachings of the Christians, according to the Talmudic texts of Bava-Batra, are or should be considered as a desert, or as the sand of the sea –, the first occupant will be the true pro-owner*. » Such is therefore his money that usury brings to The only legitimate home he could have: the sons' vault of Jacob.

And the Talmud, continuing along this line of thought, adds to these things: "You have been taught this: When an Israelite and a If non-Jews have a trial, you will rule in favor of your brother, and you shall say to the non-Jew: This is what our code says. If the laws of the nations of the world are favorable to Israel Lite, you will still give him the upper hand, and you will tell the Non-Jew: This is how your own code reads. But if none of these
If that's not the case, you have to harass him with petty arguments until...
The Israelite* still wins the case.

In short, "good ordered the Jews to remove the goods"
Christians in whatever way that may be, either by cunning and force, either by usury and theft: quovis modo, sive dolo, iive vi, sive mura, sive furto*. Wear is therefore For the follower of the Talmud, an act of holiness, the act of which the practicality brings it closer most usefully, for the time and eternity, from the faithfulness of his fathers.

Perhaps these few passages will already make our a very excusable shock when we find ourselves face to face tolerance and ignorance of Christians towards Jews;

against the obscurantism and barbarity of the centuries that bef-

< Foundation of Faith, by R. Joseph Albo, third part, ch. xxv.

2 Pfefferkorn, Dissert, philolog., p. 11; Church and Synagogue, p. 30.

3 Talmud, tractate Baba-Kummah, fol. 113 r. Therefore, give an Israelite-
A truly orthodox litany for judging a Christian!

* L. Ferrari, Prompta Library. Thalm., ord. 1, leaflet. 1, dist. 4.

Let us be told where this great prosperity of the Jews in Damascus comes from.
(1840), "and it will be demonstrated that this is only wear and tear, at 24, 30 and 33 for cciit, which forms the basis of this wealth, so consistent moreover to the prescriptions of the Talmud. » Baudin, interpreter, chancellor of the French Consulate, Damascus; L., ib., 2. Laurent, pp. 293-4.

Digitized by Google

CIIAPITNE FIFTH. 181

these pleiads of doctors, so justly concerned, were brought to the Church awestruck as the glory of their time, as the light ages of robust faith, and like the living clarity of Christianity: Albertus Magnus, Peter Lombard, the Bonaventuriire, the Thomas Aquinas, the Bernards,... noble descendants of the school of Alcuin founded by the great emperor of the West, and whose noblest offspring never ceased, while fighting the enormities of Judaism, to extend over the children of Israel a protective and charitable arm.

The insights of the spiritual and savvy author of The Jews Kings of The era did not extend much in that direction; but he had followed with a curious eye by the constant outpouring of Talmudic piety widespread doctrine in the Acts of Israel 3 and, however partial that they had to return it to the economic principles of that nation
His socialist ideas had left him unable to control his indignation.
before these princes of usury. Therefore, uniting his word with
"Fourier's," he exclaimed at the top of his lungs:
"Back! Oh you, back! You scum of usurers, burdened with the burden of the human-Manitated since the beginning of time, and who drag throughout the globe your hatred of other peoples and your in-"Correctable pride." Back! For, "all deceit is against you."
commendable when it comes to deceiving those who do not practice it.
your religion'.

Less harsh than these myriad dissimilar witnesses of all centuries was, however, for the Jews, of whom he became showed the comforting angel, the citizen-king Louis-Philippe, this

The Revolution delivered the throne for a few years, and that Some of his flatterers called the last of the Vol-Tairians; for history, the Israelite Bedarrides tells us, must record the magnificent words that this head of state does not he did not hesitate to address the president of the consistory, to the occasion of January 1st: "As well as the falling water Drop by drop, it eventually pierces the hardest rock,

* Toussenel, Les Juifs rois de l'époque, p. xii, ib. i ; Paris, 1847;
and read Fourier, Nouveau monde, p. 421, section riiition.

Digitized by Google

182

THE JEWS.

Even Vinjuite's prejudice that pursues you will vanish before him.
the progress of human reason and philosophy.'

We were just hearing from the Attorney General from one of the ancestors of this same Prince, the Regent, that no one accuses of being one of the saints of the Church, calling the Jews in one of his indictments; "the monsters of society
"Civil!" From the Regency period to that of Louis-Philippe, Driven from the throne by the progressives of 1848, human reason
And so philosophy had made great progress!

The entire answer to this question is in the liter itself.
from the work we have just named: The Jews Kings of That era. The Jews were then, as they now constantly are—kings of the time will hardly exist, and the custom is to flatter Kings. But who made them the powers of this world?
money, that is to say usury, usury that draws on education
Talmudic interpretation of his glorious and sacred life!

So, if the voice of this chapter were to be the moral of this chapter, then, would it be.. truth can prevail there over that of progress, which, since the
With the fall of Jerusalem, the Jews once again became the foremost among the pastoral peoples; no longer simply herders of flocks, following the example of their ancestors established by Joseph, under one of the Pharaohs, in the land of Gessen, but shepherds of coins, endowed with the magical power to devour among the peoples who Do they shelter the greenery and the fat of the earth?
The history of the Jews, those men whose inexhaustible genius puts himself at the service of the Revolution to exploit the people half-heartedly agree with those who overthrow thrones, y whose chasms have constantly swallowed up gold, often

The honor of families, that's what would make a good sequel natural of this prelude; that is what would make appear to our eyes 'in all the grandeur of their majesty the scandals of wear and tear. But we leave the honor to other writers of this task; we confine ourselves to giving to the baptisms following the mission to confirm the current chapter, where

'Bédarride, Les Juifs en France, etc., p. 430, second edition, 1861.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER FIVE. 183

Mr. Bédarride had the heroic courage to tell us; "No,
The Jew does not practice usury, for he cannot do so; but where the
The facts tell us a completely different story. And we don't
This is hardly surprising, because we know two men
For whom the impossible is just a game: the Frenchman on the battlefields, and the Jew everywhere.

NOTE.

Foreign Correspondence of Le Monde, March 27, 1866. "... On this occasion—Sion, it is still useful to publicize the fraud committed against of the state in the Příbram silver mines, in Bohemia. A worker who he worked for a Jewish goldsmith in Prague and revealed to the police that his master was going to send Leipzig a crate of silver ingots, of which The origin was suspicious. The weapon was found and seized, and the Jew arrested.
His statement led to the discovery of a very serious theft.
considerable continued over a long series of years. The state was thus deprived of several million florins. The money was embezzled.
by miners and sold to Jews... (Read more).

"Undoubtedly, the discovery of this theft contributed greatly to making the—bordering on the bad mood that the working-class population of Bohemia had long harbored resentment against the Jews. The cry of *<n'6ro (silver) has become the watchword in the recent persecutions against the Jews in many parts of this country, and who have taken a extension such that the government found itself in the need to re—rush to take decisive action...

"Make no mistake. Ever since the freedom of industry was admitted in Austria, aversion towards Jews increased among the Christian workers, not only in Bohemia, but also in the other provinces where this nation provides a large contingent to the population.
Even in the capital of the empire, where the people are more civilized than In the provinces, one can very often hear artisans

And then they add ironically: "Let the Bohemians chase them away, to In Vienna, they will be received with open arms.

"Indeed, the Jews, who own the capital, are now mingling" of everything and make huge profits. They leave the small artisans, in turn, Vancha, barely enough to live on. However, the excesses committed in Bohemia had, in addition to this general cause, special motives which derive more directly from the conduct of the Jews in places where the de- The sordid things began. It was precisely in the Hostomic district. where a zealous Catholic priest, Father Kahout, seeing the misery in the- as the inhabitants of this region gradually fell, who are almost all of them nail makers, had founded an association to improve their plight. This association aims to provide for these poor artisans. cheap iron, and selling nails at a higher profit.

Digitized by Google

184

THE JEWS.

The Jewish merchants plotted so much against this association, and They hindered her operations in such a way that she could never obtain to achieve the results toward which Father Kahout's efforts were directed. These The hostilities cost them dearly. On this occasion, the Catholic Church- Lique has given another example of its tolerance. This is especially true among Catholic priests whom persecuted Jews found refuge. His Eminence. The Cardinal Archbishop of Prague even sent a circular to clergy of his diocese, in which he urges them to make every effort to prevent further unrest." And Romania, etc., etc.

CHAPTER SIX.

l'aSS.4SSINAT talmüdiöe.

Assassinations, or sacrifices of Christians, ordered in some cases by the Talmud, which is the reversal of the Decalogue. - This crime magical idolatry and cannibalism, as reported in the Bible, is traditional. - These crimes disappear in the centers of civilization- sation; they have been present at all times and in all places among the Talmudists saints. - The Jew denies them with his characteristic aplomb. - Examples and authorities. - The highest magistracy of Christians is not com- posed, according to the Jew, by ignorant people and executioners. - Document authentic which shows us the Jews committing this crime in broad daylight open, because they imagine they have a legal guarantee. - The princes constantly forced to take action against them. - One of these crimes, of which Pore Thomas was a victim in 1840. – The Church pronounces on these sacred crimes, like the secular magistracy. – The Jews They call themselves a people with tender hearts! – Parallel story to the previous one; as The religious assassination of Father Thomas and his servant. – Menus Details, interrogations, official reports, unspeakable horrors. Jewish intrigues against justice and against the French consul. Deputation and pressure from European Jews on the ruler of Egypt. – Gold. – Justice halted: its retreat after the conviction of assassins. – Denial of the crime by all the Jews of the earth, evil-despite the abundance and precision of the details. – Words of the so-Verain of Egypt and firman. – Silence of justice obtained. – The Jew's fury and resentment against Mr. Thiers, because this minister Louis-Philippe dared to praise the conduct of the consul from the tribune. France against the assassins. – This worthy representative of France He is stopped neither by millions nor by threats. – The coins from the trial, from which we draw, deposited at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs manages. – These religious crimes bear such a striking resemblance, despite the centuries that separate them, the thought of distinct dates gives way to the nature of the facts. – Conclusion. – Note.

"The horrific assassination of Father Thonaas cannot be ignored" put only to his awful murderers, and no serious man believes today that in no country in the world are Jews may believe themselves authorized by Iqur religion to immolate the Christians. Such was the case at the Catholic Congress of Mechelen (1865), in which we had the honor of playing our small part, the language of Father Bonaventure of Maine, of the order of the Conventual Minors', and the discourse of this learned and A worthy religious figure is a living proof of the charity of Catholicism is the place of the Jews. History, which owes everything Can she, knowing and saying everything, ratify this language?

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER SIX. 185

The Talmud, and we will no doubt not have forgotten it, is the conscience of the Orthodox Jew, and the Kabbalah., "this mother of the occult sciences, whose dogma is that of the High magic*, is the soul of Tajmud. 11 will suffice from this double a memory to dispel the objections raised by them even the enormities of this chapter, and, on the way towards the truth, we will remember that if, since the death of Christ, the Jew, engages in certain acts of religious ferocity and the bloodthirsty fanaticism for which history reproaches him, the The Jew merely continues what his fathers did; he bound to perpetuate the crime of magical idolatry and anthropo-sacred popophagy, the imitations of which his ancestors had become the imi-

A painting of these horrors is preserved for us in the book par excellence, in the Bible, that is to say in the book of which The Jew was, throughout the ages, the most conservative, and whose truth, constantly attacked, defies more than ever any criticism!

Having said these things, in order to prepare for certain monstrous-

'Volume 1 of this congress, p. 110.

* Ragon, Macmn. occult, p. 78; Paris, 1853. - Eliphas Lévi, Hi*- (Theory of Magic, p. 23; Paris, 1860.

* Bible, Book of Wisdom, chapter xii, etc., etc. "The ancients ha-the people of Canaan performed detestable works through enchantment ments and impious sacrifices, because they mercilessly killed their their own children, that they devoured the flesh, the entrails of men and their blood, against your sacred law, etc." Ch. xii and xiii, v. 4, S, etc...
After having been the destroyers of these impious people, the Jews became The imitators. Read Kings, Book III, Chapter XI, etc., etc., the Paralipomena and the prophets, passim... See the following chapter for quotations.

Digitized by Google

486 THE JEWS8.

sites the reader's mind, would someone be entitled to re-to take the one who would hold this language in Israel: The doctrine religious, that is to say the Talmudic doctrine of the French Jew-
The orthodox approach, with regard to the Christian, is that of usury.
of theft, plunder, abduction and homicide; in one In short, it is the opposite of natural law, it is the renverse of the Decalogue that Israel received from the hands of Moses And that the Church inherited the Synagogue? The man who is not Should he, then, be surprised to be mourning his honor?
to commit atrocious assassinations, religious assassinations that the
The Muslim world and the civilized world reproach the Jew for All eras? And doesn't history repeat itself, as soon as a
A breath stirs its pages, that there is neither century nor place nor country that does not expose the legions to the full light of day of incriminating facts?

Today, however, under the Jew's roof, in the centers of European civilization, this odious quality of crime, murder for reasons of religion, disappears and ceases to be named. We have no doubt whatsoever about this progress, and we would affirm it if necessary, despite the number, more considerable than one might imagine, of men, of women,
of children, who, in certain large cities of our Europe,

astonishment of those around them, they said everything.
But. We are not unaware of the role that the chapter of strange accidents, those of particular acts of revenge, or the criminal consequences of debauchery, nor the needs of the blood of reborn magic and close ally of superstitions Talmudic teachings', nor the revolutionary judgments that |) They boast of executing corporate courts secrets that underlie the current world, and of which the Jews,
– if one denies that they are its head and council, – parta-
gent at least with ardor and devotion the incessant Iravaux. We will therefore remain silent on the things that concern us.
are unknown, but without forgetting what just consequences
'Proofs elsewhere.'

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER SIX.

187

quences must be born and emerge from those we have learned. And, so as not to set our steps on any ground where the movement cannot cause any fall, we wish-Let's limit ourselves to just a few minutes, after a quick look at the duration of the lightning bolt cast into the depths of times past, to point out a region where the documents we submit-
The reader's critical tone confirms that the practice of this crime was yesterday still what it was once seen elsewhere '.

The Jew is not unaware of any of these documents, but he
He should be careful not to become upset when these objections are raised, and To each of them, here is his response: The word of the Church and the word of history are not, in the entire course of centuries, which slander, when they accuse the Jew of prati-Regarding wear and tear-well, all the more reason why they are only slander when they accuse him of murdering Christians to obey the vow of his cult.

But shh, shh! And yet let us not fear lend an ear to the story for a moment. A Jew rides, and, on his way, he sees a three-year-old child-no one
He observes him, the blow is struck, he removes it, and the father arrives tearfully: – Are you looking for your (they? some tell him) less unnoticed during the abduction; it will be easy for you to find it-, Follow this path, look, we've seen it, we have. Raphael Levi rode by on horseback a little while ago and kept him locked up in his coat These words put the researchers on the traces of the child; but, alas! what good is it? for, when one

He was discovered; all that was left was a corpse lying in the woods of (ilatigny -, it was not far from the place where the Raphael was kidnapped.

The examination of the body showed that the child had not been not at all torn apart by the bleats, as the Jews stubbornlywere trying to support it, but that the hand of man had

French and English Jews, to their credit, work all their efforts to uproot these atrocious superstitions in the East Talmud.

Digitized by Google

188 THE JEWS.

'committed the crime.' And not just the incriminating evidence
The most violent attacks were directed against Raphael, but more Later, a note fell into the hands of the city lieutenant.
written by the murderer himself at the Metz synagogue, and we submit the text to the reader; "I will suffer the died like a child of Israel, and I will sanctify the name of God. I threw myself into the misfortune I am in to to serve the community; the great God seated me-^ tera ' . »/

i Now, regarding this crime and some accusations of
'of the same nature, Mr. Bédarride, the Jewish lawyer, goes back up the course years and speaks to us in this way: "The misfortune of the times forced King John to ask a great deal of his subjects, and, Therefore, to grant much to the Jews. The people
He must have looked with envy upon receiving so many favors! Also Were complaints being raised against them from all sides?
he did not limit himself to reproaching them for their wear and tear, but he was not
There was no fable that could not be invented to make them odious.
Those that reproduced most often were proto wither the consecrated hosts, to kill a child on Good Friday, finally to poison the fountains. These ridiculous, invented tales through malice, repeated then through ignorance, flnis-were known to be regarded as truths-and such was the faith that was added to it, that there is not a single historian of these time that did not reproduce them by presenting them as positives * . D

Finally, U in the seventeenth century, at a time when, in
In all states, justice had been served against the absurd accusations.

in the parliament of Metz islands magistrates arranged by add faith: A serious ruling by this parliament condemned several Jewish gentlemen to be burned for having slaughtered a child of the village of Glatigny on the occasion of Easter. A stop too
"For the time, it dispensed with all reflection," it does quite well.

' D. Calmet, History of Lorraine^ t. tll, p. 751.

Bédarride, p. 245. Ib., ùL, 130-t. Ibid., Des Juifs, M6i.

Digitized by Gocjgle

CHAPTER SIX. 189

to know what the public spirit was like in the seventeenth century regarding the Jews of Alsace

The esteemed magistrates of our parliaments are judges frivolous, unjust, executioners, and the Jews, innocent devoted to torture 1 First conclusion to be drawn from these words, which the Jews invariably repeat in the same circumstances, and which carry with them their morality. But Let's not dwell on this detail, and let's go back to our throughout the ages; for a piece too important, and emerging from an overconfident pen, it comes to strike our hand for that we, who have made ourselves soldiers of truth, we We hesitated to bring it into the open. She rejects us in the depths of the distant, but what does it matter to us distance? For if, until the present day, the Jew was unchanging in its doctrine and in its morals, as we affirm with one voice the enemies and the patrons of the Ju- race
In secularism, there is no noticeable difference in beliefs and actions.
can exist from one era k to another among the sons of Jacob.
In short, when it comes to these men, the most recent must reflect with meticulous accuracy the phymoral and religious siono of the most remote century.

We cannot attribute k to the Countess of Champagne, Marie de France, wife of Count Henry II, tells us in
In 1865, the learned archivist of Aube, "a fact which had
It took place in 1192 on the lands of one of his vassals.
Jews of Brazier having crowned a Christian with thorns, the pro-
They led him through the streets, flogging him, and then crucified him;
all with the permission of Agnes, Lady of Braisne, com-Countess Agnes of Dreux had abandoned this Christian to them.

yours, under the pretext that he was convicted of homicide and of flight. "

– half-brother of the Countess of Champagne, Marie, – and newly arrived from the Holy Land, went to

' Bédarride, il., p. 373.

Digitized by Google

190

THE JEWS.

The person in Braisne, and, as a reprisal, had someone burned there.
eighty Jews

Atrocious justice, or barbaric vengeance, but vengeance nonetheless of a crime that authentically reveals faith, the
The religious conscience of the guilty! Agnès claims to be innocent-center because the one she abandons to these fanatics is a scoundrel—and these wretches take pleasure in giving in publicly to the vow of their worship by renewing the scenes of the Passion on a Christian, because (] his death, According to their calculations, no cha- should fall upon their heads timent, since it is legally delivered to them. Nothing this time, they think, it doesn't force them to restrain themselves, and they let themselves to see in its natural state. Is it, we ask quite simply-cited, a more precise and conclusive historical document?

King Philip Augustus was therefore experiencing great aversion sion jK) on the Jews and testified to it, whatever they might be.
soldiers in his kingdom, and especially in Paris.
For this prince, under whose reign this characteristic crime took place... teristic, had heard from the lords who had been raised with him, that every year, on Holy Thursday, or some other On Holy Week, Jews sacrificed a Christian.
In the time of his father the king, they had often been con-defeated by this religious act and had atoned for it. It was neither on fables, nor on mere popular rumors that the judges pronounced their sentence 5 and nothing seems to us more unworthy of people who haven't lost all common sense than to accuse everyone of atrocious passions and pre-deemed fools the entire magistracy of the great nations, while a peaceful study of the facts would oblige the accusers-these magistrates are forced to confess that they alone have yielded under the weight of opposing prejudices, which they alone have... made a series of errors that are barely excusable in blind people.

* History of the Dukes and Counts of Champagne, vol. IV, part 1, p. 72;

yours, and which includes the Academy of Grand Priest Inscriptions\ Gobert.
– Sensible but clandestine facts, in Rohrbacher, Universal History verselle de l'Eglise, l. XIX, p. 247, etc.; Paris, 1851.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER SIX.

191

Indeed, from all sides, if we listen to history... toire, we hear the same cry resounding. The Abbot of Saint-Michel pushes it in the year 1171, and Count Thibaut of Chartres repeats this by sending several Jews to the stake.
Blois, found guilty of having chosen Easter time for the crucifixion of a child. Then succumbs at the gate of In Paris, in Pontoise, another victim as famous as the young William of England in the splendors of martyrdom-Roman lodge; for England, separated from France by the
The sea, echoing back his cries against the Jew, sends back the same sound.
crimes horrify and exasperate him; his annals seem to be a copy of ours, and the Church, for its part, confirms the facts which these two hostile countries transmit to us to remember, by establishing (|uc of numerous and uncontesta-Miracles are performed on the tombs where the dead rest rent the relics of these victims'.

No authority in the scholarly world equals, on the terrain of history, the authority of the Bollandists; and these powerful investigators conquered, through the merit of their rigorous and inflexible criticism, the admiration of serious men who They campaigned in the most opposing camps. That is why most of the facts of this nature that we have chosen are based on this remarkable testimony, corroborated by that of serious writers, and sometimes even skeptical writers.

At the time, therefore, when it shone in all its splendor splendor, a constellation of the greatest doctors of the Church, who remain to this day the princes of Christian philosophy yours, in April of the year 1287, – the Bollandists, – a young Christian from the diocese of Trier
He fell at Wesel under the Jews' knife. He was a poor man.
A fourteen-year-old laborer named Verner. The faithful

'Robert do Monte, year 1171; Jean Brompton, Chronicle. Gervas., 1181; Pagi, ann. 1179, n° 17, and ann. 1181, n° 15; Bollandistes, Acta SS., 27 Mari. Rohrbacher, Universal History of the Church, vol. XVI, pp. 405-6;

Judæi, etc. Id., Lnfanl nailed to the wall, and whose side was pierced by a Lance, in Zaragoza, in 1250. Blanca, Comment, rer. Aray., in Jacob, I, ib., XVIII, p. 683, etc., etc.

Digitized by Google

19Î THE JEWS.

They took it from the Talmud by the day, and employed it k re- to turn the earth of a cellar—his hostess, worried to see him assigned to this task, he said to him: Beware of the Jews, Verner, for Here comes Good Friday! — Bah! I have faith "I had God," replied the young man; "and, on Holy Thursday, he received the Passover communion. — The Jews immediately from the atti- to go down to the cellar, and to gag him to stifle his cries; The next moment, they tied him upside down to a post, hoping to make him return the host and seize it rer. But their attempts were unsuccessful. They began from then on, to tear apart with whips this poor worshipper of Christ. They then slit his wrists with a knife; They pressed them to extract all the blood; and, while For three whole days, they left the body hanging there. by the head, and sometimes by the feet, until he had ceased to give his blood'.

A little less than two centuries later, the Bollandists they offer us the account of the martyrdom of Andrew the Tyrolean, put to death in the vicinity of Bolsano. The Jews, struck by the They had taken away the beauty of this child, circumcised him, and covered him. of injuries, then they had extracted all the blood from his body, and they had tied him to a tree in a cross shape, blaspheming his name of Jesus...

Voltaire's contemporary, one of the greatest illustrators scientific operations of his century, Benedict XIV, after having reported this fact, followed by another similar one, in his tulle Beatus And;cas, mentions the martyrdom of Saint Laurent (Lorenzino) put to death by the Jews in the Vicenza region, and accompanies it with that of Saint Ursula, a young girl equally a victim of the barbarians of the Synagogue.

Few crimes, however, astonished the people less that these frequent enormities, for the reason that the knowledge— The teachings of the Talmud were then a vulgar thing among Christians. gaire, and that no race remained more immutable in its

' Bollandists, Acta SS., <April 9. — Godescard, i6., 18. — We We are far from reporting all similar incidents!

CHAPTER SIX.

193

religious practices of the Jewish race. The Jews a Once known, it seems that we must know them at all times.
never; and, such were they seen in those distant times, such in Indeed, we found them yesterday at our door; an assertion which
This is self-evident if we bring one of them closer to the den.
two episodes separated by nearly four centuries, and which seemblent, from a religious and moral point of view, demanding a one and the same date! The second, still resounding under The name of Father Thomas has passed away in our time, and the elecampane 14.75 forms the year of the first, by which it matters to begin our story.

The city walls of Trent, which the last council ecumenical made famous in the annals of the Church, ren-closed three Jewish families whose heads were named Tobias, Angelus, and Samuel; and, at the latter's house, lived a An old man with a long beard named Moses. On Tuesday of the Holy Week, that is to say April 21, 1475, these Israelites they gathered in Samuel's house, part of which for-
He led the synagogue. And, as they conversed together, Ange suddenly exclaimed: "We lack nothing for Passover, truly, if it is not one thing, only one! – And "Which one then?" They looked at each other and understood!... This What was missing was a Christian child that the Jews had the habit of "slaughtering in contempt of Our Lord, and whose blood they ate mixed with their unleavened bread... »

The victim was found without difficulty; but in what place?
To accomplish this most meritorious sacrifice in Israel? At Tobias's house?
At Ange's? No; they refused; their houses, too narrow, they hardly allowed for stealing from the servants such a serious and protracted action. We would be better off and more surely at Samuel's. – "Lazarus," said Samuel, "is his servant, if you have the address to steal a little Christian from me
"Here, I'll give you two ducats right now." – But Lazarus
He was afraid, took his clothes, and fled to a foreign land.
manages.

On Thursday, the Jews said in the synagogue, "Tobit, who prayed..."

THE JEWS.

medicine was ticking; "No one better than you can tell us to serve, for you live in close proximity to Christians; you will be generously... » The peril was great; Tobias refused. But the community dedicated his head to the execrations, and He was forever forbidden to enter the synagogue if he hesitated to do so. He vowed. The promises coupled with the threats swayed him; He obeyed, and it was agreed that, until the execution of this command plot, the doors of the Jews would not be locked, in order to make it easier for the doctor to abduct the child.

So Tobias went out towards evening; he read about the encounter with a little boy of twenty-nine months, of perfect beauty, and whose name was Simon. The child was lured in, caressed, then abducted and carefully hidden; because the parents and the population had immediately taken the alarm; What became of him? Who then committed this kidnapping? We must look for him among the Jews!

The Jews must have stolen him to crucify him. So it was said.

he; but night fell.

A profound silence reigned. The Jews led the enfan in a vestibule; and one of them, Moses, who was passing by to know the time of the Messiah's coming, he received it on his knees. That was the rack for torture. Samuel squeezed him. the neck of her handkerchief, to stifle her cries; others They held the hands, others the feet and head, while •Moses, armed with a knife, circumcised him. Immediately afterwards, he [uita to torn him apart and tear off his flesh, including a cut received the shreds; then each in turn did what Moses had done it, and the blood that flowed was collected in eclairs. But the handkerchief wrapped around Simon's neck It relaxed, and the rattle coming from the throat was almost free, This worried the Jews. With their hands, they placed them on his mouth. They hastened to blow him out, and the child appeared half death. Moses, then, the implacable old man, sat Samuel down at his left; these two men violently extended in shape crosses were placed on the victim's arms, and the Jews, armed with fists... lessons, eager to pierce him with blows, from the top of the

CHAPTER SIX.

19b

Head to toe. "That's it, that's how we killed
Jesus, the God of Christians! So be it forever confounded!
"We owe our enemies!..." And the child breathed his last.
after enduring this atrocious torture for over an hour...
The Jews immediately washed the blood from his body, and, from They sprinkled this water on their houses, each feeling happy to be able to wash my hands and face

But we feel we must interrupt the course for a moment.
from this story by a reflection that the modern Pharisees they are addressing us today, in order to make us oflito know heavenly what they are, just as the Pharisee-
His own Gospel believed he should make it known to God.
when, standing proudly, he addressed her with this la-A pledge! "My God, I thank you that I am not point like the rest of men, who are thieves, unjust-
"Your adulterous affairs-nor even like that tax collector!" While that "the publican, on the contrary, keeping his distance, did not dare
He didn't even look up at the sky, but beat his chest.
and said, 'My God, have mercy on me, a sinner.'

The successors and apologists of the Pharisees tell us
So they said, in September 1867: "Harshness and cruelty are found only among pagans; but the descendants
Abraham's descendants, the Israelites, to whom God revealed his doctrine-
The Trinity, so perfect and prescribed such just laws, are animated of kindness towards all creatures. God, to whom we give
We should strive to resemble each other, isn't it merciful-gods?... That is, in her, the dominant characteristic in Israel;
And, if they have been described as a 'stiff-necked people', one can, with No less truthfully, to call them a people with tender hearts. Scs vices are perfectly redeemed by its qualities, which remain-

'Evang. S. Luke, ch. xviii, v.11, 13.

The Lord said to Moses, "This people is stubborn, and not..."
nape of the neck, which would be absurd: the opulus durae ccrvicis es; Exodus, ch. 33, V. 3-b; 32, 9: 34, 9. The Gospel becomes even better Understand: It is because of the hardness of your heart that Moses has allowed to dismiss your women; "ad duritiara cordisvestri. » S. Matth., Chapter XIX, Verse 8. The facts tell us whether Moses and the Gospel depict more precisely the Jews as they portray themselves.

I.KS JEWS.

roui until recent centuries as a testimony in its favor. Yes, this Israel was deeply imbued with the senses of

"The signs of human fraternity, etc., etc."

However, we repeat once again that this is in no way—in these pages of the Israelite observant of the law of Moses. 11 In truth, for us it is only the Jew who gives for the man "with a tender heart, and filled with the senses" signs of human fraternity "5 but who yields to the vows of his religious law when he believes that his duty is to slaughter—to take in a Christian, a defenseless child, and to appropriate him blood. Now, this Jew who will soon be pursued by Muslim justice and by the indignation of the representative so much from France, for having immolated Father Thomas (in 1840), this Jew is exactly the one who hears himself accused of having (had 1475) martyred the young Simon whose disappearance—sudden tion alarm and makes Christians tremble.

We also see the magistrates of Trent who are looking for him—Chant, accompanied by his father and mother, will give himself up active searches, and is Samuel's house... The house was searched from top to bottom; but no eye could find the body. of the little martyr, trapped as he is under the straw in a gre—deny. In this man, however, and in all the others Jews on whom suspicion may fall, the agitation of—things are getting extreme. Justice, at any moment, will put "Hand on the victim," people say, "and report it to the authorities." The guilty parties are publicly exposed. We exhaust ourselves with futile advice; a One resolution succeeds another, and the party finally takes throw the corpse into the canal. — They throw it in. But no efforts to keep it at the bottom of the water were unsuccessful, and this te—The less accusatory tone keeps coming back to the surface.

Beside themselves, and out of ideas, the assassins They then imagine they are demonstrating skill by denouncing them. the first, 'to the bishop, the discovery of the child that the Christians continued to search. So here he is! We're getting... press near the corpse; or collect it, examine it;

CHAPTER SIX.

197

but, at the sight of the hideous wounds covering his limbs bres, a cry of pain and indignation escapes from the poi-Bishop's trinity: Ah! Lord! This crime cannot have was committed only by an enemy of the Christian faith.

The renown of every man is his halo, or his shadow. The public's accusation therefore falls on the Jews.
They are separated from one another, they are questioned; their
All the answers have the discrepancies of the lie and their

Their faces betrayed the cruel fluctuations of their souls.

The judiciary does not want to neglect any clue; and, curious to find out more about the Based on the reasons for this popular opinion, he brings in a certain Jean, who, seven years before the perpetration of this crime, was became a Christian Jew.

"It's a Jewish custom," said Jean, "on Wednesday of the Holy Week, to make unleavened bread and mix in the blood of a Christian child. On Thursdays and Fridays, they mingle-Slow this blood to wine. When they bless their table, they add curses against Christ, against the faith Christians, and pray to God to bring down upon Christians the plagues with which he struck Egypt.' I remember, in During my youth, I often heard my father say that,
In the town of Tougres, the Jews had conspired forty years earlier, and that they had slaughtered a Christian child to use their blood at their Passover. But their iniquity had finally revealed itself, and the confession of their crime had led forty-five in the flames. My father, who managed to escaped with a few others, and had the chance to be able to to settle in this country..... »

These words gave the judicial investigations a increased activity. The Jews, in order to counter the blow, had They resorted to cunning and used treacherous denunciations.
but without managing to deflect suspicion. Their brothers from

' Id., fiaronius. Annal. ecclL, ann. 1320, XXVI. Curses quonibus, etc.

Digitized by Google

198

THE JEWS.

foreign countries then tried, but in vain, to "do it shining like heaps of gold in the eyes of the judges, in the eyes of the bishop himself and Prince Sigismund of Austria. The world, as in the case of Father Thomas, / "r stirred by their intrigues, and the most skillful jurists put h their service, their science, and their cunning. But God did not permit Not impunity for such a heinous crime. They were condemned. They were broken on the wheel and burned alive. Two of the less guilty ones asked They received baptism and were simply beheaded.

The princes of historical certainty, the Rolandists, oqt reported this tragedy with a profusion of detail, the most high interest, but the need for brevity compels us to omit. Today, about four sii'iclcs sc are cou-injured since the date of this crime - but we note the main features, and we find the motive in part-currently some of the pieces that are offered to us, and which makes up the tragic and recent history of Father Thomas of Damascus, and his servant.

The Orient is the land of immobility; it is the homeland of the Jewish nation and the Talmud. Nothing changes, or rather, nothing nothing had changed just yesterday; for, only today, the Bossuet's word begins h to extend h this part of the The world we see becoming similar to the rest of the land, where "the law of the land is the very law of change!" This is because God marks the end of certain things with particular signs.

* We will, however, add to this fact an argument which those who know- The prudence of the high councils of Catholicism will know us well: it is because of the multitude of miracles that occurred on the relics of the innocent man whom the Jews had martyred, engaged on his side the Pope Gregory XIII to inscribe the following lines in the sanctuary Church cr«'s: «At Trent, passion of Saint Simon, little innocent, Christ was slaughtered by the Jews in hatred of Christ, and then He shone with many miracles. The greatest man of his century, Sixtus V, the only man that Elizabeth of England had deigned to be to give as a husband, if he could have married; this great pope, we say,

Thirty, to celebrate the saint's feast day in his diocese, attaching to it a proper mass and a special office. Bollandists, Acta 'SS., 24 Mar.

– Hist. univ. of f Church, t. XXII, p. 260; Paris, 1832. – Church and Syn., see p. 119, 294, and from 269 to 296, a multitude of similar facts.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER SIX. 199

wools of the eras and the beginning of some others.

Now, the steam, which attaches to our ships and our chariots wings of the bird, and relitricitc, by which the flight of lightning becomes in the fields of space the very flight of our

Traveling thought, that's both the instruments and the signs of an era in which the East, and the Jew himself, will to feel drawn into the paths of a strange progress*. But

The year 1840 is the date on which we make our stop; the

The Jewish race was then in the East what it had been seen in the centuries we have just gone through, and the opinion that–

The Republic showed itself there in its regard to him as it had been in previous eras the most remote of the Christian era. It will therefore seem to us

It is quite natural to read in the work entitled Egypt under

Mehemet Ali, Paris, 1843, that "the tragic end of Father

Thomas did not cause any astonishment in Egypt, because the

The inhabitants are convinced of this, and all share this conviction that Jews sometimes slaughter Christian slaves whose

"They take the blood to mix with the unleavened bread." And one members of the Oriental Society, Mr. Achille Laurent, repeats this thought in another form when he exclaims:

"Is he a traveler who has journeyed through Anatolia, the Archipelago,

Asia Minor, Thessaloniki, Smyrna and Constantinople, which had not heard the account of assassinations similar to that of Damascus?

Quanth us, giving in to the need to be quick, but yet to present the account of events of such importance that under the cover of a serious authority, and which consists of herself from several others, we begin with ex–

* A cvêqno who lived in Chaldea, Mesopotamia, told us yesterday that no change is yet noticeable among the Jews in these regions; but tomorrow, yesterday may be a long time ago!

2 T. I•'^ 1. II, ch. III, Jews. Quod ab omnibus, semper et ubi– that: characteristics of the prescription of the true!

3 A. Laurent, Affaires de Syrie, etc., vol. II, p. 264; Paris, 1846. This Interesting books have become rare. We asked the publisher and... more than twenty booksellers before one of them could get it. He disappearance.

Digitized by Google

ÎÜ0

THE JEWS.

to draw from the great history of the Church of Rohrbacher a brief reflection, followed by a summary of a few lines from The horrific tragedy in Damascus.

"The Talmud, this historian tells us in the year of grace 1851- nothing, not only permits the Jew, but commands him and He recommends that he deceive and kill the Christian, when he finds the opportunity. It's an undeniable f-xit , and one that merits, the full attention of the people and kings.

V- Example: We have seen, the same historian continues twelve volumes after this sixteenth, that's K-dirc after having given the time for reflection, "that, according to the principles- pes from their Talmud and the teaching so consistent with their Doctors, Jews cannot and should not make themselves scruples about deceiving and killing Christians, especially the Christians These converts from Judaism, let them have no remorse and repentance for having killed Christ." And "may such still be the The secret teachings of the Synagogue, a horrifying fact has come to reveal it in our time: the assassination of Father Thomas, Capuchin, by the principal Jews of Damascus » assassination committed "by those who were considered good men, and which, for several years, had filled this religious man with politeness and courtesy*. Now, here are some documents other than those of the historian of Syrian affairs, what So things happened.

On February 5, 1840, this Father was called to a house Jewish woman, under the pretext of vaccinating a child, an operation in which he excels; but denying is sick, and the Father is on the verge of retiring. He nevertheless accepts the invitation urgent to enter the neighboring house, "that of D^ *, the most pious of the Jews of Damascus! a Jew whom the Christians they themselves regard him as an honest man, and that the

> Rohrb., t. XVI, p. 406; Ex. XVIII, 683-4-5, Paris, 185t.

* Ih,, t. XXVIII, p. 683; 1852.

Let us remove as much as possible when an accusation is attached to it: such is our horror for personalities. It is easy for anyone who wants to knowledge.

Digitized by Google

201

CHAPTER SIX.

Father Tltomas is among his friends. » In the evening com-beginning: it is welcomed with affection, and soon things happen
the two brothers from one of their uncles, and two Jews who are among the most prominent in Damascus. All Suddenly, Father Thomas was seized by these people unexpectedly.
is gagged, garroted, then removed, transported in a apartment away from the street, and there one waits for the end of the Day. Night falls, and with it comes a rabbi, accompanying accompanied by the barber-butcher upon whom the sacrificers were important for the completion of their project. – "Come on,
"S, slit that man's throat, we've been waiting for you." – But
The barber turned pale, his heart failed him, and he refused.
SacriGants, disappointed in their hope, decide to extend Father Thomas, the most pious of the Jews of Damascus, Honest D, making the best of a bad situation, resigns herself k sawed his throat himself with a knife. The hand Tremble, though! Soon even his brother A will have to... replaces him, while the barber simply holds the Father's beard, whose blood is collected in a vessel for to be sent later to the chief rabbi. The next step is to to erase all traces of this murder. The officers
They then burned the victim's clothes, including the
The meat is chopped into small pieces and the bones are broken.
under the pestle; after which this human paste is thrown into a cesspool.

However, the searches begun by the servant
Father Thomas's actions alarmed the Jews, and seven of the most prominent figures...
The tables of Damascus, between which three rabbis decree
The urgency of making this man disappear. They are watching him.
seize it, the sacriGenl, in the same way that they have They sacrificed their master, and retained nothing of his person except exactly what their Talmudic faith coveted: his blood!

Déjk, "several of these various attacks," the same historian tells us, Torians, although known and proven, had remained unpunished.
on the part of justice, because of the preponderance of this^
"Jewish people in the government." But, this time, justice.

THE JEWS.

informed by the French consul, obtained after "the proceedings" ordinary and legal hardships of the country," and on the debris The victims' confessions were almost smoking hot, the guilty parties' confessions.

Upon this shocking news, "the Jews of Europe they raise a great outcry, not against the guilty, but against the victim; but against the French consul, but against the justice. Worthy of the noble country he represents, the consul France "courageously did his duty despite their" "Offer," we their promises and their threats. The Jews demand that his government brand him and remove him from office tion... They simultaneously offer enormous sums to French consulate employees to remove the documents of the procedure';... » but the truth will not be revealed To stifle her, she will defy all their efforts.

Having extracted from such a serious history of the Church this In this summary account and these general features, we believe we must to go into some of the characteristic details of this monstrosity, which the Jews never denied with a a bolder unanimity than in the present era; and, without The bias we want to be, we will draw our documents ments to the very sources of justice, and under the guarantee by Mr. Laurent, who published the trial documents.

The first interrogation, and that's where we enter. In our subject, the barber is the one. He is in a hurry to questions, he decides, "after many evasions and obvious hesitations, frankly admitting what follows:)i

"D summoned me; I went to his house, and there I found the kbakam (rabbi), etc., etc., and Father Thomas who was bound. D*^, and his brother A, told me: "Slaughter this priest." I replied that I couldn't. "Wait," they told me, And they brought a knife. I threw the Father to the ground, and, Holding him with one of the assistants, I placed his neck above from a large basin. D seized the knife, slit its throat, and

' Bolirbacher, Universal History of the Church, book XXVIII, p. 683; Paris, 18.'i2.

CHAPTER SIX. 10.1

A finished him off. The blood was collected in the basin, without that a drop was lost—after which, the corpse was dragged from the murder room into the wood room.

Lh, we stripped him of his clothes, which were burned—, then arrived the servant M, » and the seven above— Those appointed told us to "dismember the priest." We asked— Ladies, how do we get rid of the mor— ceaux; they replied to us, "Throw them down the drains." We butchered them; we put the remains in a bag, and, little by little, we went and threw them into the conduits, then we returned to Operation Ter— Mined, they said they would marry the servant to their expenses, and that they would give me money. So I left At my house. "

...Very well, but the bones could betray you; What did you do with those bones? "We broke them on the stone, with the pestle of the mortar." — And with the head? — "We We also broke it with the same instrument. — You Did you pay something? — I was promised money, telling me that if I spoke, they would declare it was me who killed him. As for the servant, he was promised to "To marry, as I just said."

— And what was the bag like that you put the Debris? — "Like all coffee bags, made of packaging canvas, and grey in color. — ... What did you do with the entrails? — "We cut them, we put them in the bag, and we threw them down the drain. — The bag didn't he let the substances contained in the entrails? — A coffee sack, when it's wet, isn't The subject, he let what it contains drip out... — You were wearing it— You alone? — The servant and I helped each other, we carried it around. — "When you have butchered Father, how many of you were there? How many knives did you have? And what kind of knives were they? — The servant and We were butchering it, and the other seven were pointing us out the way I went about it. Sometimes I cut, and sometimes

THE JEWS.

it was the servant*, we took turns when one or
The other was tired. The knife was like those of the butchers.
Dear friends, it was the same one that had been used in the murder...
– On what paving stone did you break the bones? – On the paving stone between the two rooms. – But by breaking the head, the cer-How did she have to get out? – We transported her with the "bones..." – At what time, approximately, did the murder take place?
and how much time passed until the completion Bloodshed?... – I believe the murder took place around the lick. "The Father remained over the basin" until the blood had completely flowed, in the space of half a an hour or two-thirds of an hour... When we had terminated all /'opêrorion, it could be about eight o'clock, more or less."

The servant M was in turn questioned, and his answers
concordant t exactly with those of , with the answers of the other defendants, and with all the facts of the investigation*. The justice then set about verifying the place where the Jews had thrown away the debris: the paste of bone and flesh of their old Father Thomas, my friend. "The canal was discovered, and we found At the entrance, traces of blood and strands of flesh... The workers who went down into the conduit pulled several-several fragments of flesh, a kneecap, a piece of the heart, skull fragments, other bone pieces and parts They tied the Father's skullcap. They put everything in a basket, and he entrusted these fragments to the French consul for examination.

to be examined by doctors, after the pasha had seen them.
that he had shown them to the accused and had them verified nature'... "

'Examination of the authentic documents, which are deposited in the middle-Ministry of Foreign Affairs, in Paris, and, consequently, easy to Check. Vol. II, pp. 24-31, ibid., 399; Historical Account of Affairs of Syria, from 1840 to 1842, and complete procedure directed in 1840 against the Jews of Damascus, etc., etc., by Achille Laurent, member of the Oriental Society; 2 vols., Paris, Gaume frères, 1846. Work Disappeared. See above.

2 Read next, vol. II, ibid.

» Ibid., pp. 37, 38.

CHAPTER SIX.

However, after the assassination of Father Thomas, he

it had been decided among the Jews to get rid of his domestic, whose investigations were becoming compromised—aunts—, and this servant disappeared. The reader will know, by the documents that Mr. Laurent collected and that he shared with us, the minor details of the Jewish plot whose execution put Gn to the first terrors of the Jews. We will limit ourselves to h to relate some parts of the interrogations which concern the second act of this tragedy. Thus, for example, one The accused, M, pressed with questions, and fearing to To compromise, address this request: "Has anyone confessed before me? — Certainly, confessions were made; Tell the truth in your turn. — M: When I returned At my master's house, he asked me: Have you given your opinion on the Servant? I answered yes; whereupon he said to me: Go back, go to see if they took it or not, and what to do with it. — I was going at M's, I found the door locked; I knocked; The male M came to open the door for me: — We have him; "Do you want to come in, or leave?" — "I'll come in and see," I told him. I went in, and I found 1*^* and A S'; they were busy to tie the patient's hands behind their back with their handkerchief, after having "bandaged his mouth with a white cloth." something was happening on the small sofa which is in the small outer courtyard, where the latrines are located, and it is in these latrines where flesh and bones were thrown. The latrines had been barricaded. door with a beam; and, after I^ P^ and A They had tied his hands behind his back, and he was thrown to the ground. by F and F son of ir", etc., » that is to say by the seven who were present at the operation. There were some among them who were watching the others. A tinned copper basin; they placed his neck over this basin, and F^^ slit his throat with his own hands. Y, M, F and I were holding his head. A, Gis de R, and They held the feet and were sitting on them. A S and the others held the body firmly, to prevent it to move, until the blood had stopped flowing. I de—

Digitized by Google

I died for another fifteen minutes, waiting until he was well dead. So I left them and went to my master, to whom I gave notice of what had happened.

"Did any of these seven individuals leave pen- while you were still there? – Nobody before he was slaughtered and the blood drained. "By what means of expe-

Did they bring in the servant? – I already said that I understood from Y's words that they were gathered five in the street, near the door; that the servant came to ask about his master, and YM^ replied: Your master lingered at our house; U vaccinates a child; if you I want to wait for him, come in, go find him. He entered by this means, and "What happened is what I said." – "What has been done with the "Blood, and who took it?" – After some hesitation The accused replies: "The truth is that A^ shed blood in the bottle he was holding in his hand. They used a new tin funnel, like those used by the oil merchants. It was M F who took the base- sine to pour it into the bottle. After she was rem- fold, A^ S the con0a to A" '. »

Perhaps it would be difficult to imagine an abundance and a precision of detail more remarkable than those which escape from the mouths of the depositors. In any case, we We will leave it to the trial documents, which may be sought the reader, the care taken to enlighten him on numerous particulars- rituals that we are removing, and we will put it in all simplicity on the path of facts that would make him understand the reason for the protests against the conviction Juvi struck the Jews.

When Israel began searching for ways to pro- He found himself tested against the accusations leveled against him. that one of the accomplices in the crime, the Jew P, was subject to Austria, a fortunate turn of events that later benefited him. Mer- Lato, the Austrian consul, the opportunity to intervene in the debate, which was not at all a topic of discussion at first.

'Ib,, t. II, pp. 148 to 15â.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER SIX.

Because, the endtnaiiii of the discovery of the remains of the 1'. Thomas,

The French consul, accompanied by Mr. Beaudin*, of the religious of the Holy Land, Father François, Capuchin, and of the Mr. Salina, a doctor, had gone to visit Mr. Mcrlato.

The conversation had been revolving around the double standard the entire time. assassination of Father Thomas and his servant, Mr. Merlato,... raising the word so that it may be heard by all, had said: "that he truly believed that, for the greatest number, a feeling of fanaticism had inspired the crime; but that he thought that, for some of them, their co- The operation may have been motivated by the idea of trafficking on the blood. Then, turning to the French consul...: "It's based on this conviction, I had Sharif Pasha pray, - Governor-General of Syria, - to have P^ spied on, and, if necessary, to have his house searched*.

On this page, we need to add an important section d(^a letter that Mr. Pierre Laurella, Austrian consul k [Beirut, addressed to Mr. Joseph Bellier, consular agent i from the same nation in Latakiah: "I don't know if you knew ' the horrible assassination carried out by the Jews of Damascus on the per- The bell of Father Thomas, Capuchin, and his servant.

I am sending you a copy of what Mr. Merlato, consul, wrote to me. Austrian. However, it should not be made into a public-cited (c); you probably understand why ^

Now, here is what Mr. Merlato's letter read: "Damascus, February 1840. - Would you believe it? In the house of 3 committed the horrible assassination of Father Thomas! These infamous men, three brothers in number, from an uncle of A*^^, a barber and a servant, slaughtered

* Chancellor of the French consulate, and merchant in Damascus.

'^Jb., t. II, p. 207. Mr. Merlato having received orders from the consul general-ral of Austria in Alexandria, as well as the directions of Mr. E P, Austrian consul general in Aleppo, "who imposed on him a new Mr. Laurent, in his way of seeing things in this matter, became the advocate for Jews. » Laurent, ibid., pp. 216-217. Diplomatic demands l'o- Did they react to this change of attitude? We do not judge that; and Our sole pursuit is the truth regarding the main fact.

* Ibid., pp. 288-9.

THE GAMES.

Rinforluné vieillard, el mont collecte le sang. Then, having he tore the corpse into tiny pieces and smashed the skull and the bones, they threw everything into a conduit of the quarter-Jewish third party. The aforementioned barber and servant declare the everything, and four others, so far, have also confessed. These men are among the accomplices. the remains of the deceased were found at the location indicated by the declarants, three of whom say that the crime results from the principles religious. People are now trying to discover where he was hidden. The blood. The whereabouts of the murdered servant are still unknown. but it is assumed that he met the same end somewhere else house of these brigands,... etc.'.

This assumption was quite correct, because it wasn't long before this was discovered. (which Consul Merlalo was unaware of at that time. Soon, in Indeed, the suspicions that had been formed had turned into certainty. and, on April 22nd, Count Ratti Menton, consul of France in Damascus, the generous man whose conduct in that deplorable affair received in the House of Representatives France's supporters deserved such a just tribute of official praise*, wrote said to Chérif Pasha: "I must add new information-tions on the intrigues practiced by the Jews, and on the the movements they make... I therefore present to Your Excellence that a Jew, as an intermediary between his coreligionists, requested, through the protégé of another consulate that mine, to speak with Mr. C, and to meet The three of them were there to discuss an important matter. This meeting-The meeting took place with my consent, in order to know the * but of the Jewish intermediary. He formulated four propositions. The first stipulates the "cessation of all production of Jewish books, because, he said, it was a humi-"Link for the nation" The second corroborates the first.

'lb,, t. H, p. 289-390.

June 2, on the occasion of Chapter III of the Foreign Affairs section, Chamber Members of Parliament.

3. The news received by the authorities is that the viceroy has given the order to stand firm against the Jews; and the sensible people among them They have no hope of refuting what has been proven against them.

The third is an "intervention with me to obtain from Your Excellency the release of the male R F.)) The fourth, finally, "requests the adoption of 'measure of own kind to obtain a less severe judgment in favor of convicts, through the commutation of the death sentence to any other punishment.

Having obtained these four points, one paid five hundred thousand piastres: namely, "one hundred and fifty thousand counting at the time of the ratification, and the remaining three hundred and fifty thousand after everything was over. C remained free to share the total sum with whomever he sees fit.

Mr. C asked the Jew where they would get the five hundred thousand piastres in question... the Jew replied that "this sum was not to be taken from anyone, but that it was ready in the synagogue's cash box, appealing to the cause of the poor!" Signed: Count of Ratti-Menton.

As for K P, this protégé of Austria whom his consul had initially yielded to the demands of legality. He constantly sought, through his bold attitude, to... prevail in the name of the Austrian government and that from his superiors, to impose on Egyptian justice and encourage his co-defendants." His response is, moreover, "based on that which Mr. Merlato and Mr. de Ratti-Menton towards on March 7th, when a conflict arose between these two consuls relative to the competence of Sharif-Pasha. The consul of Austria, who had readily agreed to the incarceration of P in the local government jail, declared to the French consul, during his about-face, that he should not let himself be judged by the Egyptian authority, but that he would see the tribunal of his superiors. He did not explain if it was assistance in the translation of their books, done by some of them to the Pasha, and which proves that the blood of all those who work the Sabbath day (Christians or Muslims) belongs to them." /b., II, p. V.

• Laurent, ibid., vol. II, pp. 88-90. Under this name of Poor People's Fund. Therefore, there exists a national fund similar to the fund in Porrele of Jansenism, to those of occult societies, and committed to good care of the Synagogue.

"See p. 74.

Jewish Island.

to his superiors in Aleppo, Alexandria, and Constantinople
"From Vienna!"

However, the French consul remained unwavering in the ways of duty and honor. His conduct was therefore attacked by the Jews and their protectors. "For to defend the Jews, says Mr. Ilamont, the consuls of Au-Cheating has attacked the reputation of a French magistrate!
It's a strange way, but it doesn't lessen the accusation. which weighs heavily on those under Austrian protection. We have taken place
It is surprising that an Austrian consul general, a man educated, versed in the customs of the Orient, had asked that the case be examined in special forms.

What are the Jews of Damascus, then, that we should treat them like this?
favor an exception to the general rule? Ruthless customs riers, hungry leeches, shameless traffickers, like all those who live in the East*.

But, alas! as soon as "one examines carefully what has been published on the disappearance of Father Thomas, one feels an agonizing feeling. An honorable magistrate, the representative-feeling for France, he insists to Mé-'s lieutenants Hemet-Ali so that justice may be done; and what happens? The European Jews cry murder, "He's the assassin!" They slander him.

Mr. de Ratti-Menton; the communion of the Jews, which protects the Austrian consulate, is issuing cries of distress and,

because children of Israel went (to Egypt, a A thick veil was drawn over this scene of bloodshed," and the justicetice has suspended its course.

"The Jews of Damascus offered gold to Mr. de Ratti-Menton, and the gold was refused*; » but this irresistible agent, sprung from the national thigh, as Mr. Consul calls it from France, took up the campaign, and the Hebrew cause has

* I.auren1, ibid., t. II, p. 119.

2 Haraont, Egypt under Juehemet-Ali, 2 vols. in-8", t. I", p. 375;
Paris, 1843.

* Representatives of Western Judaism; see below, Ilamont.
Egypt under Mehemet-AU, p. 171; Paris, 1843. Laurent, vol. II, p. 338.

CHAPTER SIX

211

found defenders! The member of the Oriental Society which throws the stunning and complete procedure of this case, Mr. Achille Laurent, tells us that these defenders "were for the most part bought widely" and, for his part, one of the men who have the best grasp of the Jewish world and the Talmud, The former rabbi Drach pronounced this damning sentence; "Father Thomas's assassins, convicted of their crime, were spared the vengeance of the law by the united efforts Jews from all countries. Money played the main role.

in this case ' . y>/'

But this denial of justice, this suspension of the laws of the State are or are not the result of the work of this gold and the As a result of political demands, is there therefore nothing wrong with that? changed in the nature of the documents, the confessions, and the judgment which give this crime such a brutal emphasis, a A face so sharp and so harsh? We are content, For any response, to place before the investigator the authorities who are personally accountable for their words and of their actions; this cowardly thing once fulfilled, we leave Each reader, if they so choose, is free to judge for themselves! But what we need to state is that, in the camp enemies of the Church and occult societies, the decrees those favorable to Israel and insulting to France did not We will hardly have to wait, and we will distinguish between the patterns of these Jews whom our indignant consul, the worthy friend, was persecuting of Mr. de Cavour, Maxime d'Aieglio, whose science and thn- This partiality is summarized in the following words:

"The accusations of cruelty, of murdering children, of magic, perpetrated against the Israelites in less civilized times read, feel fables that cannot find credence in a an era as enlightened as our own. The sad fact that it happened

'Laurent, t. II, p. *66. Journal de Toulouse, July 10, 1810.

Harmony between the Church and the Synagogue, vol. 1", p. 79; Paris, 1841.

même langage, l. XXVIII, p. 684, èl XXIX, p. 217, ec. ; Paris, 186*

U.

Digitized by Google

212 THE JEWS.

Damascus* in 1840, whose truth was revealed and justice obtained—naked by Sir Moses Montefiore and by the jurist Cré-
'better', shows precisely that such extravagances can only have supporters in a large—
"serious and ignorant*."

All of them, seemingly imbued with audacity and ignorance, are We will be careful not to neglect such words*, and we will ask ourselves how it happened that at the time decisive, Injustice, after having spoken so frankly, has deceived universal expectations and suspended its last vin-Dictates? Here it is:

Back in Cairo, Sharif Pasha, the supreme magistrate and the Governor-General of Syria kept telling
"To anyone who would listen, he revealed the circumstances of the murder."
asserted that the Jews had murdered the Christians in order to
"to have the blood*." And no one more than this high magistrate could—should feel entitled to voice his convictions tions, because he had meticulously surrounded himself with all the investigative means that the extent made available to him without limits to his discretionary power. His conduct ((having been constantly guided by feelings of loyalty," this eminent official considered it an honor that he it was impossible "to suspect his feelings even a single one"
"instant," and the outcome of the case he directed.
had been that, of the sixteen Jews involved in the assassination of Father Thomas and his servant, two had died in During the course of the proceedings, four had been granted clemency.
for having made revelations, and ten had been sentenced to dead

The execution of the condemned was to follow, and would have been immediate—the pronouncement of the sentence was followed, if the consul of

'Grand maltra of the Masonic order, and Israelite.

2 The Church and the Synagogue, p. 266, etc., 1889; same discourse in the mouth of Sir Robert Peel; for politics and the occult world have their mysteries, which are all too often the same.

♦Laurent, ibid., t. II, p. 223. See. their names, ibid., t. II, p. 250, etc.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER SIX. 213

France, Mr. de Ratti-Menton, having the rather singular idea to give this ruling the sanction of the most solemn, had it not been for the sending of the proceedings to the son of Mehmet Ali, Ibrahim Pasha, commander-in-chief of the troops Egyptian women in Syria. This delay changed everything. saved the lives of condemned men, and appeared, in the eyes of the people foreigners in the East, questioning the justice of the arrest; for it was the precise moment when the delegates of the Jews of Europe, where the representatives of the all-powerful Judah—that in the West arrived in Egypt. These skilled men and enterprising, they immediately addressed their plea to Mehmet Ali requested a review of the procedure, and... tended with this sovereign, and when they presented themselves k In the audience, this prince said to them: "The prisoners are free; the widest protection will be granted to your brothers; that is Better, I think, than your revision and the surveys! The trip to Damascus is not safe today; reopening the trial, moreover— Their aim is to awaken hatreds between Christians and Jews that I want to turn off the light. I will tell the consuls my will; this evening. I will even address my orders to Sharif Pasha.... I like the Jews; they are submissive and industrious; I gladly agree "k their delegates this proof of sympathy."

Here, however, are the terms of the firman of Mehemel, which The Jews were reduced to being content with: "By the exposition and the request from Messrs. Mosès-Montcœur and Crémieux, who have who came to us as delegates of all Europeans who profess the religion of Moses, we have recognized that they desire the release and safety of those Jews who are being held and those who have fled regarding the examination of the case of Father Thomas, monk He and his servant Ibrahim disappeared from Damascus. And because of such a large population, it would not be It is appropriate to refuse their request; we order that...

'Pp. 251 to 254. The months of grace, guilt, and innocence furent avoided in the ûrman; this act of high and supreme will nullified the legal condemnation of criminals.

^ But whose remains were found.

THE JEWS.

to free the Jewish prisoners, and to give the fugitives safety for their return, etc., etc.'"

What the Jews were asking for, and their wildest hopes—The rances could not rise any higher, Meheniet-Ali the concedes to Jewish omnipotence; it was the freedom of the Convicted and the jurisdiction of the justice system. Reopen the investigation It would have been madness on their part; for then France, represented in the East by its consul, would have been seen, even under the governor Louis-Philippe's government, so unscrupulous, was forced to keep all these f nailed under the gaze of the whole world Jews, heads bowed, eyes and beards in the blood of victims 1 And these condemned men, subjected to the shame of a se—a second investigation that the whole of France would have followed, had they could make a move without splashing their blood tall and numerous protectors!

Silence, among European Israelites, was a momentary This exceptional favor would have been the ultimate honor! But it was Ih what the Jews, eager to make all the echoes of resound Europe, with its noisy innocence of condemned prisoners, They never had the tact to feel. Their main lawyer,

Mr. Crémieux, it is true, had the merit of protesting with a a generous voice against the detestable and ferocious superstitions tions of his Orthodox coreligionists; but his happiness, we cannot describe his triumph in this unfortunate The affair was not modest; the Jews, no doubt, would not have... They don't allow it yet! They don't allow it yet, and the the pressure they exert on those who serve them is irre- irresistible. One day, in fact, not so long ago, and it was in the middle Jewish assembly, in the year of grace 50 AD, this orator, who He knows the weakness of his own people and the illusions of their pride, suddenly returns to these painful, humiliating accusations binding, and thundering in his loudest voice; Back at last, he exclaimed, the prejudices "of this country where had re-vigil twenty years earlier, against the Jews, this fool and abominable calumny which represents them as molded-'Laurent, ibid., vol. 11, p. 1'M to 255. Legal documents.

at the Passover feasts the unleavened bread with the blood of Christians; slander that, in the name of the Jews of the whole world, – he added, – Sir Moses Montefiore and I have abolished de- before the tribunal of this great Muhammad Ali, whose spirit "equaled courage!"

Blinder than their lawyer, and with an audacity that we we would not dare to call, the most orthodox writers of Judaism, French daism dared yesterday to allow itself, k the en- The right of the minister, a historian who glorified before the Chamber deputies criticized the vigor of the French consul against the Jews from Damascus, a joke that, out of respect for our readers eurs, we would apologize for reporting if the taste and the style, if Jewish blindness and obstinacy do not pei- they were characterized by inimitable traits:

"A curious fact! On the days of Kosch Haschana, we have sounded the shofar in the M hotel, which is next to Mr. Thiers. The great man was surprised, taken aback, frightened of these strange and gloomy sounds. 11 perhaps believed that the The day of judgment had arrived, that the God of the Jmfs would... to hold accountable his deplorable conduct in the matter of Damascus, and that the victims of the Jesuits, soliciting in vain the The French consul, a protégé of Mr. Thiers, was coming out of the rescue operation. "Bloody from their graves to cry out for vengeance."

And indeed, if modesty had only allowed one to give a sign of interest in these wretches, which would not have been shown in favor of the Jews of Damascus the government of the sovereign who, in one of his liberal outbursts, had told them In open court: "Just as falling water drips A drop eventually pierces the hardest rock, likewise the in- The prejudice that haunts you will vanish in the face of pro- "The sandstone of human reason and philosophy!"

'Archives israélites, a religious, moral and literary collection..., vol. XXV, p. 519, in-8°; Paris, 1864.

^ The Israelite Universe. H, p. 52, October 1866. This is the tone and the author dace of these journals, where the name of Father Thomas constantly reappears. and little Mortara.

^ Bédarride, ibid., On the Jews, p. 430. – One of our friends was charged by

THE JEWS.

But the monarch whose minister Mr. Thiers was had in his hands something more irrefutable and more louder than the clamor of Judah; for, as the serious author tells us from V Universal History of the Church, "all the documents of the trial were sent to the French court.

They were sent there, and if the dominant influence in revolutions, in which Jews have always played a huge part, has not made them disappear, they are still there; for the book which reproduced them four years before the upheavalthe ment of 1848, that is to say four years before the time when The Israelite Crémieux was one of the provisional rulers of the France, ends with this notice to the reader that we report-tones for the second time;

"All documents relating to the proceedings against the Jews of Damascus, accused of the double assassination of Father Thomas and his servant Ibrahim-Amurah, being de-placed at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, it will be easy to observe-to verify the accuracy of the minutes, notes and legal documents who are leading this third and final part*. »

The reader will therefore find it very easy to learn; and perhaps-Will these words of Mr. Hamont then seem to him?
those of a sensible man. "If in our France, – country the government of ^ 830 of an important mission to the States of Méhéraet. We even believe that the main goal of this mission was to learn about this prince, and the principal figures initiated into the the conduct of this dreadful trial, the positive facts and the circumstances decisive in this heinous affair. As much as his duties to dis-creation allowed him to do so, this very conscientious character replied In response to our questions, he went into some detail and assured us that no one, In the East, no one doubted this assassination. This serious man, whom we must refrain from naming, is still full of life; it He could speak up and perhaps do better!

In the presence of a few friends, we received an ana-a logue from a senile traveler, a senator of the Empire, and that His investigations had kept him in Damascus for some time. My domestique, he further tells us, almost suffered the same fate as Father Thomas; He only escaped thanks to his muscular strength and a rare • Rohrbacher, t. XXVIU, p. 684; Paris, 1852.

^ Ach. Laurent, member of the Oriental Society. Historical account Affairs of Syria since 4840, etc., etc., vol. II, p. 399.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER SIX.

217

of rectitude but of generosity so often thoughtless, – the
The mass of the nation cannot accept the reasons that have made To assassinate Father Thomas is conceivable; but it is per-assigned to men who had spent some time in the East, to the men who have frequented the Jutfs, and finally to all those who lived among the Eastern peoples, to think differently-
"lying," and we will, in a moment, once again, to see the cause.

CONCLUSION.

These immolations carried out by Jews frankly Orthodox beliefs have existed for all ages. – The religious law of the
The Talmud makes it both a duty and a singular merit for them.
We see them on a beautiful day, during the reign of Philip Auguste, lift the mask and perpetrate this in the open air Talmudic work–because impunity, this time, seems to them legally acquired, but they counted without their boot.
Their habit, based on the laws of prudence, is to to deny with the poise, the inexpressible poise that characterizes in their book any offense against the truth, this act which does not ceased to arouse against them the unanimous disapproval of the few Ples. But human justice has caught them in the act a thousand times.
The most irrefutable pages of history, the rulings of the most eminent and unassailable secular courts Church records will be kept until the end of the time for the Jew's audacious denials.

And, something as natural as it is noteworthy, these facts that result from the same inspiration, the same idea religious figures, they resemble each other with such striking resemblance, that the internal passage of several centuries could not alter their physiognomy, to modify their character. That is why, if we scan with our eyes the acts relating to the martyrdom of young Simon and the acts of the proceedings of Father Thomas,

The idea of two distinct dates fades before nature

'Hamont, ibid., p. 373, Egypt under Mehemet-AU; 2 vols. in-8", 1843. Laurent, vol. II, p. 339.

Digitized by Google

218 I,ES JEWS.

facts; one is the exact repetition of the other, and we

we believe we are witnessing the same tragedy.

By making himself guilty of these religious crimes, this people, who valued nothing more than their traditions, were limited to... their, as the following chapter will tell us, to repeat this ([UC, even before Christ, had made his fathers, devoted to savage practices of idolatry, and fanatical anthropo-Phages, if the Bible is a history book!

In any case, let's not forget the word that re-Listen to the sons of Jacob; "The Israelites, who God has revealed his doctrine and prescribed such just laws, are animated by kindness towards all creatures. – That is the dominant character in Israel; it can be called the people of "Tender heart!" Ameill

'Archives israélites, XVIII, p. 845; 1867.

IMPORTANT NOTE

ON THE CONBTlltF, DÜ CONSUL DK FRANCE.

In their reports, JLM.  allow themselves to insult the honor-Mr. de Hatti-Menion, with a seventeen-year administrative career And the most brilliant services were supposed to shield him from reproach, But "if his zeal and impartiality in the procedure are not recognized" (>by a few jealous enemies, France, religion and the populations entire regions of Egypt and Syria will take him into account, as well as A Cherif-Pasha, of their impartial conduct. 11 It is true that Mr. de Ratti-Menton refused the most brilliant offers, and his soul is not venal like that of several of his adversaries; he, at least, is not not a slave trader; and his name, in our lands, is not the synonymous with ignominy! He rejected with disgust the millions that were offered, and it was with indignation that we saw him treat "of inquisitor by Mr. Crémieux*."

"From the discussion that took place in the (French) rostrum, the following resulted" a commendable circumstance... The President of the Council took with the consul's defense, which is recommended by both long and useful services and the most honorable personal character.' The words The statements made by the Minister of Foreign Affairs have fully confirmed what several press outlets, very accurately informed I més, had already published on the representative's active steps

'Laur, , ih,, t. Il, p. .Vlài-D. Letter inserted on July 10, 1840 in the Journal de Toulouse, May 15th. .Alexaudrie.

Digitized by Google

219

CHAPTER: SIXTH.

of some German states which, yielding to the 'iftstanoe d» pItMteurs ^ Jewish banking houses joined forces to fight against the French consul, distort the facts of this deplorable affair, and equally- 'thus changing opinion on the true cause of this double assassination'.

Read all the pieces in Achille Laurent, including the letter from Mr. Barker, former British consul in Aleppo, and now living in Suedieh, ■ April 1841, an admirable letter of courage, clarity, and precision. Ih., ' t. II, p. 302, etc.

Among these numerous traits of Christians sacrificed by the Jews, one The most beautiful is that which the victim herself, torn from their hands, had been recounted many times by Mr. M, from whom he had heard it, Mr. the Baror de Kalte, a Prussian officer. This is the story of a merchant's wife. a stranger, abducted a few steps from her husband, and discovered at the mo- critical ment by the most singular happiness. Already the ceremony com- She was lying. Stripped to the waist, and placed before two rabbis who had been reading over her for a few moments the formulas of the ritual he- Braic, they had just told him: You are going to die. However, mad

Filled with worry and terror, her husband searched everywhere for her: "Be careful!" tion, a friend had just reminded him, that in some cases the Jews abduct Christians to be sacrificed... etc., etc. Read this very interesting relation and the letter from Baron de Kalte, Alexandria, February 6, 1841, Lau- , rent, t'6., pp. 307-313. y*

^ 5 jiMD 1840. Laorent^ tp 3556.

CHAPTER SEVEN.

FIRST DIVISION. - MORALITY TALML'DLOUË. .ANTTOULTÈS

Always drawn towards polytheism, the Jew, from the earliest times ancients, indulges in the vile and atrocious practices of the Kabbalists Sabaeistea, that is to say, the first worshippers of the stars. – This
What are these idolaters? – The Bible lists their crimes, which neither the Neither law nor prophets can stop it. – This dreadful idol-
The temple was established with its staff and furnishings even in the palace.
lays of kings, even in the temple. – His supreme acts are the human sacrifices, and sacred anti-phagy, the eating of the Human flesh. – The Bible gives us the story and the key to understanding.
superstitions, which the Talmudic tradition passed down to descendants of these corrupt Jews.

. Kn veriic, the relifjion of Israel, aeulc, avrr his hor-
Fear of blood and its celestial sweetness, is capable of saving "The world of the harbane!" Israelite Universe, XI, p. 400, 1866.

Eli, what! The Jews, the true Orthodox of Judaism, are to hold guilty of the cowardly assassinations that history has just

Digitized by Google

220

THE JEWS.

to report us. But what good are these perfidious acts? Why?
This blood? Why Christian blood? May the voice of the past Whether it's the one told to us or that of contemporaries, the re-
The answer remains the same and cannot change: it is that such is the vow of worship.

What! Of worship? Could a religion then be... to condone these detestable crimes, to demand this tribute of human blood hand? – Yes, if this religion is nothing more than a disgusting a mixture of absurd beliefs and odious practices, where the Kabbalistic superstitions of the Talmud intersect with those of certain peoples among whom the sons of Israel. And, from then on, the stupid ferocity of man has
There is no longer any reason to be surprised, since, in every human being, Belief is the rule of action. Even under the rod of Moses and Aaion, this people, whom Christ reproaches for his sacrilegious inventions and its false traditions, mixed with those which are part of divine law, fall and fall again and again in the shameful superstitions of the foreigners who surround him rent. And not only does he worship the golden calf up to his feet wicked abominations. He testifies against himself,

 And this testimony is eternal, for it is that of the books that Its dispersion has spread among the peoples. What if it
 We are pleased to open this story, the page that describes us His inconsistency and the Jew's enormities will be repeated without ceases, and we will find almost every era Israel equal and identical to k itself, that is to say escaping, slipping-healing from the hands of God. On this point, nothing changes; Nothing will ever change him, except Christ, and perhaps
 Is the day of this radical change beginning to dawn?
 Until now, if in former times its legislators, if its divine and pure law, if his divine government, if his priesthood could not embto sin by staggering and falling from abyss to abyss, What naiveté would there be to be surprised that, weaned from these legislators, of this government, of this priesthood, of this Divine and pure law transformed into sacrilegious and adulterous law,

Digitized by Google

GUAPITHË SliPTlÈMË.

221

SC lingers in the abyss from which once the paternal arm of his Did God constantly lift him up?

Blood! Blood! He knew how to spill it in torrents at the feet of* Gods of gentleness, this people of learned trills
 They painted him as if possessed by the spirit of monotheism. Yes, blood, and which was to cost him a little more than that of the Christian because it had to come from his veins; it had to be the
 The blood of his own children! And his fury for this crime... gieux was extreme, since so many pages of Scripture repeating God's terrible threats against this crime (^habit, that is to say against the acts of an idolasorting which, in its ritual, summarizes all the monstrosities of magical sabbaths; the vice of the cursed cities of the Dead Sea and to the deik: homicide and cannibalism. We address ourselves-sounds k of readers, some of whom will definitely remain k with their mouths agape as they listened to us, they will ask us taking into account our words. We should not be surprised by their astonishment, and since the Jew's hands are the writing desk of the Bible, above which he placed the Talmud, de-Let's take a chance on this first book and see, when we open it, if the threads Israel's traditions degenerated when, faithful to their traditions, they... ballistics, and scrupulous observers of the transmitted rites by the great masters of the rabbinate, they taste and savor '

"Children of Israel," said the Lord, "you never cease to indulge in the idolatrous practices of all peoples who surround you; therefore, beware of following their example. Give your children to be consecrated to the idol of Moloch: Beware of these abominations, which the text of my law explains. Walk before me in your uprightness, or "Fear my just vengeance!"

'Nec polluamini omnibus quibus contaminatae sunt universae gentes. De semine tuo non dabis ut secretur idolo Moloch. Cum massculo, etc., etc., etc., quia abominalio est. Cum omni pecore, etc., etc., nec maculaberis cum eo; mulier non succumbet, etc., etc., quia scelus est. Leviticus, Bible, xviii, 24 to 25.

Moloch, Melchizedek, Baal, etc., etc., are the same sun-god, or lu-

Digitized by Google

THE JEWS.

¶¶¶

However, Israel's audacious actions compel the Lord to return continually, through the mouth of Moses and prophets, on prohibitions and threats. Listen-tones, and if we want to penetrate the cruel mysteries of Judaism, let us not miss a single one of these biblical words.

"Strike, strike," said the Lord, "if you do not fear al- Light my anger, strike dead the man in Israel who 'gives one of his children to the idol of Moloch'. Ah! you You laugh at my defenses, and, far from rejecting any alliance with the inhabitants of the land of Canaan, and to overthrow their altars, you do evil in my face, you marry the children and the sons of these idolaters; you prostitute yourselves to their gods, you worship them: Israel makes itself the servant of fiaal and of Astarolh, he worships abominationsM

"Yes, you dare to build right up to the walls of Jerusalem." the high places of Tophelh, in the valley of the lils of Eunom, to consume in the fire your daughters and your sons olforts 'a Mo- Loch! That is why* I will overthrow Jerusalem, because You made this place famous by sacrificing to the gods there. foreigners, by burning your children there, by offering them as holo~ Caustic to Daal, soaking the earth with the blood of the innocent. It is why I would make this city an object of astonishment and the cruellest mockery of men, no one will pass through without to sit, and I will feed its inhabitants with the flesh of their sons and their daughters*.

first male and female; Dianus-Diana, etc., etc. See our book God and your gods, in a multitude of chapters, and dissertations on Moloch, Chamos, fleelphegor. Bible Venet. D., t. 111, p. 40 to 73, Si^e ed., Paris, 1829. – In the Chalhtii-Sabi cult, sometimes the per- its sacred stone through the fire, sometimes it was roasted there, sometimes its blood and they devoured his flesh. Vuir/ôid. Bible, Wisdom, ch. xii, v. 6, etc.

'Ib., Bible, Lévil., ch, xx, v. 2 to 6.

– Ibid., Bible, Judges, ii, v. 2, t1, 17; – iii, 6, 7, etc.; id., IV Kings, ch. XVII, V. U a 13, 16, 17: "... et coluerunt immunditias. »

Bible, Jeremiah, ch. seen, v. 31-32; xxxii, 35, etc. « Ædiûcaverunt excelsa Topheth, ut iicenderent filios suos, et filias suas igni..."

♦Bible, ib., Jeremiah, ch. xix, v. 3, etc. "Ponam civitatem in stuporem et in sibilum, cibabo eos carnibus Hliorum suorum et filiarum suarum, et unusquisque carnem amici sui comedet in obsidione. »

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER SEVEN. 1*3

O house of Israel, who would believe it? dëjb, even in the desert, barely out of Egypt, under the dreadful gaze of Moses, the light of the miraculous cloud that protected you, amidst the wonders with which the Most High filled you, already, instead of offering me hosts and sacrifices during These forty years of waiting, weren't you wearing the robe of my ark of the covenant the tabernacle of seeing Motech has a head of calf? the image of your murderous deities? the star of your God Rempham? That's why I'll transport you later. beyond Babylon! Blessed, therefore, be among your kings the King Josiah, because he ordered the pontiff Ilelcias to throw outside the temple and Lord the vessels that were used in worship of Baal and all the stars of heaven*. Blessed is this king, for he... reduced to ashes; he exterminated the augurs established by your kings to sacrifice on the high places in the cities of Judah; he put to death those whose incense was burning in honor of the Sun, the Moon, the twelve signs, and all the stars of the sky; he overturned the small houses that had been built in the very temple of the Lord, the use of the infamous who served as instruments for this vile cult, and for which The women's fingers were practicing sacred works! 11 desecrated the high places, where the priests of

Topheth, so that no one would dedicate their son or their daughter k Molüch by fire; he took away the horses given to the Soldl |)ar the kings of Judah, and burned the chariots of this god; He destroyed the altars erected by the kings of Judah on the dome from the chamber of Ahaz, and those that Manasseh had built in the two courts of the temple of the Lord; he profaned the

' Bible, Ames, chPv, 25, etc., Dis-sert. on Moloch, i6., Disserl. on idolatry in the desert. Vonce D. Bible, Book XVII, p. 170; Paris, 4829. Et portastis tabernaculum Moloch veslro... sidus Dei vestri. – Ibid., Acts of the Apostles, ch. 7, vv. 39–44, etc. – Leviticus, ch. 17, V. 7. Immolabunt hoslias dæmonibus (pilosus) cum quibus fornicati Sunt. Levit. ch. xvii, v. 7.

Sabaism and Kabbalah, or Chaldean astrology taught by the sons of Ham. The Jews were, among all peoples, the princes of ma-Kabbalistic theory and astrology; see below, ch. Kabbalah.

Digitized by Google

îî4

THE JEWS.

high places to the right of Scandal Mountain, raised by Solomon and Astarte, goddess of the Sidonians, at Chamos the scan-to Moab, and to Moloch the abomination of the Ammonites; finally he killed the priests devoted to the altars of the high places; He exterminated those inspired by a spirit of Python, and made dis-to appear from the midst of the people, everything that drove him to vile and abominable acts'. However, alas! k pain Had the abomination been driven out of the house of Israel? that she was returning with a new violence, pushing the vigorous shoots that grow from the plant that grows in its favorite terrain, and all imaginable monstrosities inter-mingled in the practices of this adulterous cult, so full bait for the multitude and for the princes of Israel!

But, let us be fully convinced, before the sacred text, of the ferocity of this murderous and vile religion, of which the magic preserved the abominable rites, and that, always ready In the face of revolt, Israel preferred to worship its god: The veils Therefore, Lord, these peoples of the land of Canaan that "you abhorred, that you had wanted to lose by the the hand of our fathers," and which our fathers have constantly imitated the abominations 1 Look at these detestable works, these crimes of superstition and idolatry, these infamous debaucheries, compassion for their own children; they eat, and these are the

the entrails of men; they drink, and it is the blood of the victims human beings »

Voilk, voilk then, despite God's threats, the idol-the atrocities that Israel delights in making its models; here is the fabric of crimes against nature that have become the great acts of his religion 1 Aided by the reeking advice of the priesthood

V

> Immunditias et abominationes quæ fugitive in terra Judah and Jerusalem
Salem, etc. Kings, book JV, all of chapter XXIII, etc., etc.

2 Léviliquo, ch. xvni, v. SI, SS, S3. – Kings, book. IV, ch. xxni, v. 7,
It, 1S, etc., etc.

3 Et filionim suorum necatores sine misericordia, etcomestores vis-cerum hotninum, and devoratores Sanguinis! Bible, Wisdom, chap. xii, V. 3, etc.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER SEVEN.

!25

doctrine and oracles of idolatry, human wisdom me-taken, it rejects the tutelage of the divine priesthood; it perverts the holy ideas of expiation and sacrifice, and said to herself, k she-same: This human flesh that man eats, this blood
The human being he drinks is the law of sacrifice in its most profound form.
High and perfect design. For he who prevails, he
He who commits sin, crime, is he not the being endowed Of reason? Isn't that man? The human person must therefore atone for the sin. The victim will therefore not Not an animal without reason, but man himself. And Purification only occurs to the extent that the one who sacrifices identifies with the victim, as much as he makes her become this that he is himself, that is to say, his own flesh and his own blood. But only eating accomplishes this work.
The religious man must therefore sacrifice and eat his soulblable*. And that's how, both stemming from the cabal.
$abéûte, the pagan idolatry of old, and the idolatry of the tra-Talmudic editions* up to the present day, seize upon eternal truths to corrupt them, to pervert them, and to reverse its meaning.

'She perverts the holy notions of charity, and says to herself: The re-seeks man through man, which has become the vow of worship (Bible, Reg., 1. IV, ch. xxiii, V. 7: Efieminat, etc., etc.), it is the symbol of the great brotherhood of men; this is the lofty inspiration of love celestial, so superior, as Plato teaches in his Symposium, to vulgar and wretched instincts of natural love. The humble search—The transformation of the brute by man is the transformation of the brute into man; It is the communion of the staggered kingdoms of nature. Man uniting, raising up to himself so many things through eating and through a-death, recomposes the great whole, which is constantly dividing, and ends by to rise himself up to the gods; and they reward him for it. wind in a visible way by taking on, in order to unite with it, this form of the beast! Our book on the high phenomena of magic does more especially to know and understand this subject.

2. Cannibalism was among almost all peoples of the earth a religious crime. See the chapter on Anthropophagy in our book. God and the gods, 1854.

^ Important note. We understand in the religion of the Jew frankly orthodox, that is to say within Talmudic idolatry, the rabbinic or Pharisaical traditions that we have mentioned, in another chapter, no longer to be found in the Talmud, but which is trans-put orally, and which are part of the practical faith of the Talmud. sayings.

15

Digitized by Google

226

THE JEWS.

But everything here below changes, even what carries the the seal of divine law, superstitions themselves do not must be able to exempt themselves from suliiir dam their forms this The need for change. Let us therefore seek, by questioning the superstitious beliefs of the Jew, including the holy Writings The structures themselves have just given us the story and the key, Let us see if anything justifies our thinking; that is to say—to say whether the religion of the Talmudic orthodox, similar to that of the Jew, once infected with idolatry, demands, by limiting himself to vary the form of sacrifice, the death of human victims, and commands anthropophagy, the eating of flesh or Blood!

SECOND DIVISION. – OF THE S.iNG, AND WHAT.

True Talmudic scholars only mourn Christian lilies in order to gather their Blood; authentic examples. – Sacred uses of this blood, and which vary, like error, according to time and place; but necessity to eat this blood, which represents man and is called his life. – Its virtues, its inestimable value. – It heals, it sanctifies, it saves. – Developments and proofs. – Eternal denials of Jewish. – .\wishes of one of the most famous rabbis in full exercise of functions. – Color of Jewish Reviews against this celebrity nationale accused of being a false priest. – Legitimate indignation of the Jews de-Talmudicized. – Conclusion.

It was just demonstrated to us that some Jews Talmudic scholars sacrifice Christians and collect their blood with scrupulous greed. This is what, century by century century, several orthodox members of Judaism recognized And, as for me, one of the Israelites who represent In the East, I was one of their rabbis; I know their mys-my father, and I kept them secret; but, reborn by grace of baptism, and clothed in monastic habit, I renounce it, And I publish them based on solid evidence. Let's listen.

The mystery of blood is not known to all Jews. Only rabbis, or kliakhams, the learned men, are initiated into it. and the Pharisees, whom they call Liasseideni. These have are the faithful guardians, and three reasons should give us the intelligence of sacred homicides; i® implacable hatred that they harbor against Christians, and which makes them meritorious the assassination of these enemies; 2° works of superstition and magic familiar to the Jews, and for which this blood is necessary; 3* the fear felt by the rabbis that Jesus, the son of Mary, is not the true Messiah! for they then conceive the superstitious hope of saving themselves by sprinkling themselves with Christian blood.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER SEVEN.

227

Trying to demonstrate the Jew's atrocious hatred for the Christian, it would truly be a waste of time to want to show the obvious. But the Jewish superstitions of which Numerous changes are less well known than this hatred. However, whatever immunities contribute to temperament Israel possesses an exceptional temperament, and that we Nitrons to describe. God covered the Jews with scabies, ulcers and of characteristic ailments, for which they are convinced that "anointing oneself with the blood of a Christian is a remedy" "Effective!" It is therefore customary that on the evening of a Israelite marriage, after the strict fasting of the future spouses, The rabbi presents each of them with a cooked egg. In this egg, he used the ashes of a burnt cloth instead of salt; and This canvas was soaked in the blood of a fallen Christian under the knife. The rabbi, while the bride and groom eat The egg of the blood, recites a few verses whose effectiveness is to to give them the power to deceive Christians, by fattening themselves- health of their substance.

Upon the death of a Jew, the khakham or rabbi takes the white from an egg, mix in a few drops of a Christian's blood martyred, sprinkles it on the heart of the dead man, and pronounces these Ezekiel's words: I will pour clean water on you, and You will be purified. Likewise on July 9th, your anniversary.

'It is unnecessary to repeat how broadly we want to admit the exceptions, while recalling what it is, even in the midst of the peoples civilized people, the tyranny of hereditary superstitions.

4th.

Digitized by Google

228

THE JEWS.

From the ruin of Jerusalem, the Jews go to the front the ashes of the cloth soaked in Christian blood, and eat a salted egg made from this ash. This dish is called: Seida-amphseihās. Finally, when the day of Passover returns..., each Israelite, after having largely given his tongue to the most hideous blasphemies against Christ and against all the Saints are required to eat a piece of unleavened bread. the size of an olive; and this bread, which is called ephi-Koimon is prepared with the blood of a Christian martyr. Furthermore, and at the time of the Purim festival, on the 14th of Adar (February), the Israelites plot to kill a Christian in favorably, the rabbi kneaded the mixture with the blood of the murdered Christian, and honey, some triangular loaves of bread. "And if The rabbi has Christian friends, and he sends them this bread!

The shipment is called tnesloî-monnès.

These are their usual practices, and we must observe that, on the night of this Purim festival, you
You will hardly ever meet a Jew who is self-possessed, and who is master of himself. They are fanatics in whom the Moses' curse: The Lord will strike you blind.
of madness, dementia, and terror. In this circumstance,
They try to abduct Christian children, and hold them locked up until their Easter, which comes after the festival of the Pourim, in order to have the blood of martyred Christians. The form
The triangular shape of the breads used during the Purim period has as its basis.
The reason for the Christians' belief in the Holy Trinity, and their blood, which the Jew mixes into it, is an insult to this mystery, symbolized by the triangle*.

• Ruin of the Hebrew religion, third ed., in Naples by Roumanie, 1834; a pamphlet by a rabbi. It is especially for the Oriental Jews. that is to say, to those who have changed the least, the par-roles of this rabbi. These, which are not enveloped by the atmosphere of the Christian civilization, they are obviously the backward ones! Printed in 1803, published in Greek in 1834. Laurent, 1846, vol. II, p. 378, etc. Maigri'
In its triple edition, this work is rare; it is believed to be among the of those whom the Jews make disappear. In ancient witchcraft, the black-colored hosts, intended for the celebration of the Sabbath mass, was also triangular.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER SEVEN. S29

We have just stated this strange fact that, for the Jew,
The third reason for the use of Christian blood is the suspicion held among the rabbis "that Jesus Christ could to be the true Messiah;" and this suspicion arises for a great number at the level of a genuine belief-, but an individual-Pride targets, represses, and compresses this faith in their hearts.
which pursues them in the manner of remorse. Also, during the Circumcision of a child, does the khakham mix in a glass of wine, a drop of the child's blood, a drop of blood Christian, which he puts into the mouth of the circumcised. According to their bizarre interpretation of some of the prophets' sayings,
They imagine that, if circumcision is ineffective, "the fall
An unbaptized person can be saved by means of the blood of this Christian.
your martyred one, who received baptism, and whose blood has
"It was poured out like Christ's, amidst tortures!"

"I have demonstrated with numerous proofs," said the rabbi who had become monk, the errors of the Jews, and I publish "mysteries" which are not found in any of their books." Indeed, this practice of killing Christians and collecting their blood It is nowhere to be found. "The fathers and rabbis in commun- They break the prescription orally, and by tradition, their children, whom they conjure up with the threat of the greatest curses for keeping the secret, even for their wives. at the risk of the most terrible punishments and the greatest dangers.

At the age of thirteen, Jews place on the heads of their son of a horn, called tiphilm, symbol of strength. "My Father, by placing it on my head, revealed the mystery to me. blood. When you are married, regardless of the number of Your children, you will only reveal this mystery to one of them, at most wise,... most unwavering in his religion. Beware Never reveal it to any woman! And that, on earth, You will find no refuge, my son, if you divulge this mystery. Even if you converted to Christianity. Woe! k you if you reveal it! Now, having adopted Our- Lord, and for the sake of our holy Church, I do con-

- Ibid.

Digitized by Google

130 THE JEWS.

to bring forth the truth in all the places where its do-Maine'. 0

And what this rabbi so didactically tells us-veri, is and has been confirmed to us from all times and of everywhere. It is a proven fact that every year, as was written long ago Thomas de Catimpré, the Jews draw lots in some provinces, to decide which city or village to inhabit through them, must provide Christian blood to their coreligion- from other countries. A very learned Jew, and a convert from- Then, a little later, he told me that one of his coreligionists, on the "Not to die," he had made this prediction to the Jews;

"Know that you will not be able to cure yourself of the shameful illness from which you suffer, that by the use of Christian blood "Here!" – You only need to listen to them one after the other, and you will hear everyone describe you in detail, according to superstition. local to the country he inhabits, the marvelous virtue of this blood; It stops the bleeding, it revives the affection of the spouses-, It delivers women (who drink it) from the discomforts of their sex; it facilitates childbirth; it protects them from the evil-

a universal panacea, and he who pours it down while killing a Christian tien, fulfills one of the great precepts of the law of the sacristans files *.

Finally, among the Jews, these superstitions {radùionne/tei se blend with the teachings of magic, whose dogma had the Kabbalistic doctrine prevalent in the Talmud, and which without He ceaselessly demands the blood of man. Lord Giles of Raiz collected the iridescent film that formed on the blood

'Ruin of the Hebrew religion, Laurent, vol. II, pp. 378-393; t816.

-Thomas de Catimpré, De vita instituendu, lib. III, cap. xxix, art. 23.

^ Read The Church and the Synagogue, p. 314, etc.; Rohrbacher, History Universal Church, Book XXIII, p. 261; 1832. - The characteristic odor Is prejudice against the Jew a prejudice or not? The Jew is of noble blood, our friend Dr. Bouilin, former president of the Anthropological Society, smells like a bedbug. - See a curious passage in the Annals about their odor.
of Baroniis; Cum eorum corporibus fñm gravis fætñr inhæserit. E\ eoenira etnomen suntassecuti ut/'æfen/es Judæi nomicdicerentur,etc.
T. t'-^ p. 677 (72, XXXI).

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER SEVEN.

331

of his victims, then he subjected this film to various fermentations, and put the product to digest in the egg phi-
"The philosopher of the Athanor." Now, such is the reputation of the sons of Jacob, who are truly our fathers in science occult, affirms the Kabbalist Eliphas, that it was said "this recipe taken from those old Hebrew grimoires which would have been sufü, ^they would have been known for dedicating the Jews to the execration of the whole earth*.

But, if these facts are not blatant lies, and if they
They have a language, what they tell us in fairly clear terms, it is that, constantly and always, in the Jew of the pure orthodoxy, in the case of someone whom Christian civilization has not not yet begun, the demands of Talmudic dogma and those of superstition bring back the necessity of assassination Sinat, which procures this blood of Christians. The official documents the interrogation of Father Thomas's assassins reveal Iniquity. – What do we do with the blood? asks the consul of France h the accused – It is used for the fath-ir (the (Feast of Unleavened Bread) – How do you know it should be served For the unleavened bread? – I asked what purpose it was for. It caused blood to flow, and they told me it was for the celebration. unleavened bread*.

Elsewhere, the pasha, addressing the Jew O": "In what "But did you kill Father Thomas?" – D'*': "For having His blood. We collected it in a white bottle. or khalabiehs, which we have placed at the khakham blood being necessary 'for the fulfillment of our Religious duties. – What is the purpose of blood in your religion? – It is used on unleavened bread. – Is this distributed? Blood for the believers? – Ostensibly, no; it is given to principal khakham. – Why didn't you keep it at your place? – Custom dictates that the blood stays with the kba-

' Read the anti-Catholic Eliphaz Lévi, Hist. of magic, p. 889; 1860. Execration formulated in the Quran, v. 1, p. 454; 3, p. 18, 1775.

2 Laurent, t. II, p, 34-5.

Digitized by Google

332

THE JDIFS.

khams (the rabbis). New request k D: "For- Why did you kill this Father? – For the blood-because that we need it for the celebration of our worship. » Ask the khakham; «Who handed over the blood in your hands? – The khakham had started I agree with the A and the others, to have a bottle of human blood-after which, the said khakham me He advised. The A^ promised him that, even if it cost them A hundred scholarships, they would get it for him... I was then informed by them that they had brought a person "for to slaughter it and collect the blood, and they said to me; Since You are the most reasonable, take it to Khakham Y.

– Have you inquired with Khakham Y'^^* if he Sends to other places? – "The khakham informed me that he was supposed to send some to Baghdad. – Did he come from Baghdad? Letters that asked for them? – "The khakham Y me he said so. – Is it true that the barber held the Father while that S and the servant, in slitting his throat, were

"Very pleased, given that it was a religious act!"
Was the plan to kill a priest, or something else?
Christian?

... The khakham Y^ "tells us, every seven of us, that we needed human blood for the Feast of Unleavened Bread; and that, since Father Thomas was still in the neighborhood, he
He had to be brought in under some pretext, his throat slit, and in
"to take the blood."

"And why is blood necessary?" the authority asks.
judicial matter to Rabbi A-, is it placed in unleavened bread, and Does everyone eat this bread?" – The rabbi: "The custom is that the blood put in the unleavened bread is not for the people, but for zealous individuals. The Khakham Y remains in the oven the day before the Feast of Unleavened Bread. Lk, the per-

Ibid. Interrog., continued, vol. II, pp. 34–49; translation by M. Beaudin, Laurent, interpreter and chancellor of the French consulate in Damascus, ibid.
t. II, p. 299–300.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER SEVEN. S33

Zealous sons send him the flour from which he makes bread; he he kneads the dough himself, without anyone knowing that he is puts some tang, and he sends the bread to those to whom it belonged.
flour!

– Your answer did not make us sufficiently understand– to explain how the use of a person's blood can be Permission? – That's the secret of the great khakhams; they con-
"This affair arose, and the method of using blood..."
What we do know is the method of this employment varies; it is because it is multiple; it is, moreover, that in the unleavened bread, blood is not always kneaded with flour;
that we sometimes simply put some on the bread "a layer, a coating," as if to gild it. That is what will help us to grasp some words of Ben-Noud, Jewish known far and wide; words that we are about to hear, and which are confirmed by the testimony of one of our most distinguished travelers in the Orient, Count de Durfort-Civrac. We encourage the reader to peruse his letter in-tière, k the address of the incorruptible French consul, M.de Ratli-Menton, and we read these words there:

The Jewish woman Ben-Noud, daughter of Mourad, a native of Aleppo, told us claims to "perfectly remember having seen, at the age of six k seven years, in the city of Antioch, and in the house where she "It housed two children suspended from the ceiling by their feet." She ran in terror to warn her aunt; the aunt replied that It was a punishment inflicted on children, and he made her leave, in order to to divert his attention. "Upon his return, the bodies had disappeared, but she saw the blood in one of the vases which the Arabs call laghen, and which they use for 'wash the laundry.'

Eight years later, in 1834, she was still living in Tripoli at a relative's house, and witnessed in that city a hor- a terrible scene, not a single detail of which escaped his memory. From atop a terrace where she was unseen, she saw a

' Read ibid. Interrogation, etc., t. II, p. 45, 58, 353, 319.

Digitized by Google

S34 THE JEWS.

Christian, old man with a white beard, invited by the Jews, with which he trafficked, to come and eat oranges in a small courtyard adjoining the synagogue. He was offered the hookah- leh, the life-cause, the coffee, then, at the moment when he saw himself To shower them with politeness, four or five Jews threw themselves upon They bandaged his mouth with a handkerchief, and garroted him. rent and hung him by his feet. >> Thus he was left to- then from nine o'clock in the morning until noon; for it was a matter of "to make him expel through his nose and mouth the water which Evacuation is necessary for the blood to acquire the the degree of purity required for its intended use. At the moment when the old man was about to expire, moment that it is important to watch over him with great care, "the Jews him cut off the throat with one of those knives that the rabbis use them to slit the victims' throats, and the body remained suspended hung until all the blood had fallen into a bas- sine. «

Three years later, Ben-Noud came to Latakia to visit one of his uncles-,... and, for the duration of his stay, they sent them regularly from Aleppo the unleavened bread needed for Passover. Now, there are two kinds, she said: "The massa, and the 'massa guesira'. » Similar to the first, the second contains in addition a coating of human blood, but of a quantity too small to communicate a strong taste to the dough. "The Jews eat these unleavened breads during the seven days of their Passover; they only use the massa when

"During the night before their Passover, there are very few of Jewish families who did not crucify a rooster. They nailed him wings to the wall, and in the torment of so many ways; Each of the assistants comes to pierce it with an iron point. to mock the Passion of Jesus Christ, and by consequently, to wholeheartedly support it; "all this is done with "Big bursts of laughter."

Last year, this barbaric ceremony took place in
* Guesira means, dil-on, to slaughter, in Syriac.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER SEVEN. J38

Mr. Bélrier's house, where the husband's family was staying Ben-Noud and a rabbi. "Ab! How much would the Jews smile, she said, the possibility of sacrificing a Christian instead of a rooster! They have two festivals in which they load the Christians of imprecations; and the Jews who appear the most Those who display fear in all these horrors are those who are truly fearful. the most relentless and cruel treatment"

Faced with these hideous acts, the smallest details of which have with frightening precision, we see the intention remain the even that the victim claimed by the Orthodox cult and traditional is found to be a Christian, a rooster, a lamb, or that it be any other animal. In other words, the The vow of the cult is homicide, the death of a Christian, the man-education of his blood; and the ligature of the sacrifice is not accepted by the one sacrificing it, if it becomes impossible for him to attain it- To face reality. Hence these words that seem to be repeated here. of themselves; "The tragic end of Father Thomas" caused astonishment in Egypt. The inhabitants are convinced, and they all have this conviction, that Jews sometimes slaughter Christian slaves, including Ut, take the tang to mix it with unleavened bread. If the descendants of the men who believed- The anointed Jesus Christ cannot buy children born in Christianity, say the Egyptians, they choose a a fat sheep, and they stab it one after the other, in thus alluding to 'the death of the Savior of the world'

However, if these words are clear, if these facts are countless, if they are from all eras and all country, and if history seems, by its precision and prodiga- the level of its details, wanting to reveal them to us in some way

'Count of Durfort-Civrac, vol. II, see pp. 320-325. Feasts and insults'

Europe; see the great Treatise on the Police, vol. 1, p. 280, etc.; Paris, 1703; and Imprecations: Baronius, Annales: Abusiones fere innumera- biles, etc., ann. 1320, I. XXVI, and p. 139.

^ Hammonl, Egypt under the Hememet-Ali, p. 367; Paris, 1813. — That Anyone who wants to know more, said Laurent, only has to read the chapter xxxiii of the work of the mtklccin Paolo, concerning the hatred of the Jews con- between Christians, and the assassinations of Christian children, vol. II, p. 382.

Digitized by Google

336

THE JEWS.

The photographs, the Jew denies them; he denies them with the terrifying with the composure whose wear and tear he had just now denied; with the composure which compels him to deny so many facts that the rest of men have filed away as self-evident. And this man, who [read] the Talmud It is a merit to deny to the Christian that what does he oppose to these mountains of testimonies and evidence that the world? — 11 opposes his word as a Jew. Is that enough? In In any case, it is our duty to let this word resound. and to deliver it to the critic, who will place it, if he finds a any weight, in one of the pans of his balance. Let's listen:

"Among so many alleged* abductions of Christians by the Israelites, and "often reported in the East by the cla- public death during the last two centuries; in the middle of severe prosecutions which, as a result of formal accusations, there had always been exercised by both the Maho- authorities Metanes than those of the local Christian communities, as well as by the consuls of the Western powers residing there dant in this country;... it has never been possible to establish, either legally, nor EVEN BY LEGAL PRESUMPTIONS, none of the murders very committed by Israelites. On the contrary, there was a thousand circumstances and a thousand historical facts that have shown clearly demonstrated that it was a despicable slander. bent against this unfortunate people, either through malice premeditated, either by blind fanaticism, to cover up, by this presumption, generally accepted in the East, "other crimes that were actually committed there."

"Even today, this is sometimes repeated." error; that we need Christian blood for the celebration of our Easter. We have not forgotten the sad affair of intended to prove that the Israelites use blood in their Easter ceremonies, was spread in Russia in order to strengthen the judges' wavering convictions. Finally, we still remember that, in an election which is not

- Archives Israélites, XIX, p. 890-1; 1867.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER SEVEN. 137

separated from us by only a few years, an obscure lawyer dared to throw us face-first into a departmental press organ. This old slander is a mental fabrication. Therefore, we do not have the right to believe it annihilated; perhaps it is only asleep—My daughter, and will she ever wake up? That's why we must "To fight it again"

"Every year, as the Jewish Passover holidays approach" And Greeks, the Israelites were subjected to evil treatments by the Greek populace, which adds a blind faith in the use of Christian blood for manufacturing unleavened breads.

"In 1861, however, when the Israelites of Smyrna suffered more than usual from this systematic persecution thematic, Bishop Sopbronios, who was then sitting on the throne patriarchal, intervened energetically, and published an encyclo—that as a result of which Easter was no longer celebrated wheat to this day.

N But, if this absurd prejudice has been abandoned, it suffices now to invent some slander whatsoever; and, whatever However improbable it may seem, it provides a certain class of people, friends of disorder, the opportunity to foment the hatred and discord between Christians and Jews.'

My words were words to my fellow believers sacred, adds the Jewish lawyer in a solemn setting Crémieux, because they were those of the man "who had just obtained from Muhammad Ali the release of our brothers, so slanderously accused of having kneaded their bread "Unleavened bread with the blood of Father Thomas" Ah! really, "If there is a people unhappy on earth, it is certain—the Jewish people. For almost eighteen centuries since it has Scattered across the globe, it is not a persecut—tion, not an indignity, not a torture that was not systematically inflicted upon him tematically inflicted.

^Archives israéliles, XVI, p. 738; 1867.

3 Archives israéliles, I, p. 16; 1867. The reader will judge, for he comes to read the trial documents, the words and the firman of Mehemet.

Digitized by Google

33g

THE JEWS.

"However, the revolution of 1789 dealt a fatal blow to the barbaric prejudices; and, by proclaiming equality among all 'men', she put an end to the miserable situation of the Jewish nation.

"All the peoples of Europe followed this example; alone, a few fanatics, the shame of our century and of the civilization, continue h ... to become the instrument of the most odious persecutions." And let us not fear ourselves repeat; "ParmHes fables put into circulation to entre- to maintain hatred against the Jews, the most absurd, the most ridiculous- the slut, if she weren't so odious, is undoubtedly the one who consists of accusing them of using the blood of a Christian child "Here's something for making unleavened bread!"

Such is the eternal denial of the Jew, and we leave him- its sounds all their reverberation against the strongest, against the most unanimous authorities in history, that is to say against the rulings of human magistracy, and against certainty The philosophical dimension that human testimony engenders. All The man who speaks of Jewish things has lied, he tells us. Jew, if not the Jew and the Jew's advocate. Never a fact, and Better still, never was "my legal presumption" established against the Jew, the place of Christian blood in the unleavened bread; and to doubt this assertion of Israel, That's declaring oneself a fanatic!

This is something we wholeheartedly accept, that is because of the odious and countless calumnies that are attached to the pursuit of the Jew, and we could not to be astonished by the injustices he suffered, for his invincible au- Dace, his characteristic obstinacy in denying all crimes, In the face of all the evidence, and with usury as the primary crime, Isn't it especially this that has so miserably provoked them? What, CCS unjust suspicions and these calumnies have consequences?

Did she proclaim moral equality? The equality of the Talmudic scholar and of the follower of the Gospel, which would imply the equality of the Gospel and the Talmudl... In any case, what does it matter to us, and what does it matter to reason? what the Revolution was able to proclaim?

'^L'Univers Israélite, I, p. 34-.5, September 1867.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER SEVEN.

t39

Disastrous? Let the critic indulge in a instant at his assessments, and we give for first Israel's response, that Israel itself, represented by one of its most illustrious rabbis:

A Jewish preacher, a rabbi in the midst of performing his duties... tions, we say the Jewish Uniaert, engages in "a violent exit slow against religious fanaticism, in the midst of the Jewish people /uiV even; then, telling us "the most heinous and the most absurd, attributed to the Israelites of a great and famous community of Galicia, he adds: "We have lamentations about the persecutions that the Jews suffered to support; but I praise in advance the man who...

will show the horrific picture of Jewish fanaticism.

"And this accusing, denouncing, and slanderous rabbi" of his brothers, provoking hatred and contempt against them of peoples," what is it? It is, and "we experience a "Very painful to say," – the famous doctor Adolphe Jellinek Preacher B, Vienna! How, alas! can we to complain again about foreign attacks and persecution, when we see a speaker from our tanctuahr, a pastor In Israel, to strike "the flock with all weapons" in this way poisoned and deadly denunciation and Slander?

"Fortunately, the people, who see our conduct and our works, recognize the falsehood of these hideous insinuations from a fake Jewish priest, and do not believe in the murder of Christian children for the needs of our pâqne qn'b the persecution by ourselves of our pious rabbins and our men of science"

The Jewish organ that lashes out against the minister of his cult, against the illustrious rabbi whose eloquence reproaches to the Jews the heinous crimes of their fanaticism, he affirms (|that people no longer believe in the murders of children by

< Israelite Universe, VI, p. Si1-3; 4868. Note that this rabbi... He speaks of what he sees, of what happens before his eyes; and that F Uni- towards Israelite denies what he does not know

Digitized by Google

THE JEWS.

no

the men of the Talmud for the needs of their Passover; But he forgets that in that very moment he comes, as well as his colleague from the Archives* ûraélUet, to confirm the con- to milk, and to accuse the entire Orient of being unable to purge of this belief! Would she have stood ten- eight centuries in the most famous* and most civilized* places* of the earth, this belief, without ever having had any other The foundation of the imagination of peoples? But only to the Jew The merit or the crime of these acts, according to pure orthodoxy. which the Jews repudiate with legitimate indignation mudified from the most civilized parts of Europe.

CONCLUSION.

When, if we believe him himself, nourished during forty years of miracles in the desert-when, living for centuries in the Holy Land of a life that made him Miliasizes with the miracle, Israel succumbs to the prestige of the false gods, worships the most shameful deities, indulges in tur- pity which the Bible, its history, has not even accused Sodom - when it sacrifices and burns its own Fans eat the flesh of human victims and drink their *aug ', he commits, by indulging in these monstrous acts, a crime of a different nature than when after death and the In his triumph over Christ, he sacrifices the Christians he abhors, and mixes their blood with the loaves of bread that his religious code, tainted Does magic give him the title of sacred bread? No, without Doubt! But furthermore, Israel, by engaging in this religious crime... gieux:, does he do anything other than what his fathers did? No, certainly not; no, a thousand times over! Therefore, when Israel denies, against the human race that accedes to it Cuse, these latter crimes, rarer and less complicated of horrors and depravities than those he once committed and of his

How to avoid recognizing in one's pre-first confession, in *a biblical confession, supported by the self-'See the beginning of this chapter.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER SEVEN.

n\

modern rules that we have put online, the dismantling
What is the moral of his current denials?

Or, in other words, if the religious crimes of Jewish acts were so vulgar and so public during a over the course of fifteen centuries, and while the Synagogue professed The Law of Moses, still in its purity, what can be said? And for What is the reason for these same crimes, or rather crimes of same nature, but rarer and of a lesser quality—line, cusscnt-ils tout k coup cesse de se arriver chez les sons of these same Jews? Who then would have corrected the meaning Of these men? Who would have put them back on the right path? This is certainly not their religion, which, far from maintaining itself to maintain its purity since Christ, has lost its priesthood and which, passing through Christian civilization, has become complicated new traditions of these pbarisaical rabbis whose doctrines were those of the Kabbalah, the soul of idolatry and of the magic altered throughout the centuries of the blood of 'men!'

'Read about this thirst for blood in the pamphlet by our friend, Dr. Boudin, chief physician of the Army of the Alps and Italy, etc., etc.: Human Sacrifices, 1862; and our book God and the Gods, 1854, or—Out of print, (we don't have time to reprint yet) our taste.

Digitized by Google

PART THREE

CHAPTER EIGHT.

FIRST D1TI810N. — THE JEW'S MARCH. ORTHODOXY

11. It is being shouted everywhere that the Jew is on the march, that his morals are changing. What a greater wonder! – So his belief has changed? This is the shining sign of a new era. – The Indestructible The core of Judaism remains formed by the Orthodox Talmudists; naive, Below these are the new orthodox, the reformists and the Jewish freethinker. – Furies of the new orthodoxes contain the adversaries of fanaticism and immutability talmudical. – Attacks on Israelite fanaticism by the illustrious rabbi Jellinek. – Bitter replies from the Israelite Universe, organ of the gold-Methodism. – Judaism is no longer a religion, it is a thing death, etc. – A great schism thus separates Judah into various parts ties, but, oh wonder! without separating them if necessary. – Example. – Reason and cunning of reforms; it fails. – Grievances. – Wounds of Judaism. – Hypocrisy of the elders who tear each other apart; it They are reproached for it by their younger siblings. – Proselytism and change of role between the two parties. – How is orthodoxy judged? by the Jews of our lands? – The facts. – The illustrious Grand Rabbi-bin Klein and Mr. Isidor. – This doryman is elected chief rabbi of France. – Curious and conclusive debates. – The Jewish family of-generates morality, and falls into complete decadence; such is 1st cry from the Jewish newspaper Neuzeit.

From all regions of civilized Europe it is cried out, – and this phenomenon is from yesterday – it is being shouted that the acts of Jews are beginning to show a noticeable improvement in moral; that the Jew changes, that he transforms and metamorphoses. Phrase 1 To what extent does the thing then have any Reality? We'll see along the way; but whatever What will this change teach us? It will teach us that a proportional change has taken place in the faith of Jewish; that rabbinical traditions have fallen into the discredit, and that a moral miracle gives the world the most sudden and most unexpected of spectacles, that of the

Digitized by Google

CIIAPTRK EIGHTH. 113

made (the Jew. For, from a religious point of view, and by consequence initially, the Jew was immobile, his belief was immutable; the Talmudic dogma, in short, more solid that the Divinity was found, according to the word of the rabbis, and behold, all of a sudden, After eighteen centuries* of unwavering stability, everything changes, everything It stirs, everything moves; a striking sign of a new era. a new and harbinger of grand events 1

To point out for the moment, these are not the consequences
This unprecedented fact is the fact itself; it is the change enormous, the incredible revolution that a few brief years brought them into the Jew's belief; it is the path that suddenly it distanced him from the Talmudic source from which he drew his faith; uneven progress, it is true, in diverse countries that populate the sons of Jacob; for, scarcely perceptible in in the regions of the East, it is of such prodigious speed in certain western regions, which we cannot better to compare its pace to the hurried pace of routs.

So it is up to us today, since they have marched, to sato see what the Jews are and what became of these men whose religion, until recently, alone constituted the nation-nature; for isn't it a strange, prodigious thing, that of
To see such a people disintegrate in the blink of an eye, and, conserving in its most irreducible core its primitive orthodoxytive, to suddenly form into bastard orthodox, into believers enamored with progress, as free-thinking philosophers, that is to say, in members among whom the religious place is broken leaves no other attachment than that of race.
of kinship, of blood.

Below the indissoluble core of pure Talmudic scholars, this primitive and ancient category which formerly constituted exclusively concerned the Jewish body, therefore we need today, put away the new school unbelievers and the new believers; but first those who, in the States the most civilized in Europe, are keen to keep the name 16.

Digitized by Google

THE JEWS.

of Orthodox Christians, despite the distance, despite the abyss that separates them parish of the Jews of the true orthodox; these valiant of the Pharisaic traditions, which our chapters have discussed at length - already reproduced the words and actions. Yesterday in-core, before our very eyes (1827-1844), these faithful Talmudic scholars who populated our large cities treated women in to be tiny; they mercilessly chased the professioner rather irreverently delicate to refuse to initiate her young students exposed to the monstrous obscenities of the Talmud; and These children, obedient to their fathers' teachings, were waiting eagerly awaiting the arrival of the Messiah, ready to deliver to the pill-lage, to celebrate its arrival, the shops of the city of seems to us to be more deserving of the renown of ancient orthodoxy, May she receive our sincere congratulations! But, in the fe-demanding that it cease to be, stick us to for-sea a precise idea of the physiognomy under which it appears to us; then will we be given the power to weigh in fairly fair balances of poverty and its merit!

X the indefinable scandal of the Israelite Universe^ organ of this mitigated orthodoxy, but which retains its pretensions tions to the scrupulous purity of doctrines, the illustrious rabbi Jellinek, who seems to have stung her with this remark, he exclaimed from the top of his throat: "In this single century he is almost not a single man, wanting to improve education youth ministry, highlighting the forms of divine service, to spread the culture of civilization, to advance progress for the good of the Jews, who have not felt the sharp edges of fanaticism iui/. [We have lamentations over the persecutions that The Jews had to endure, at the hands of other peoples,
But the elegy recounts how members of Judaism
They cowardly humiliated and sought to destroy the noblest among us.
(men of their people, who had devoted themselves to his education-
; lion and to its elevation all their strength, this elegy is not Not yet composed./... Religious fury... takes hold

'See below, chap. Messiah; 1817.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER EIGHT. 245

with the naked sword before the door of instruction and of the conversion, inaccessible like any other religious fanaticism
"Gieux, any calm discussion..."

Such are the words that wound the ancient heart and the new orthodoxy and which we denounce throughout the bitterness of his language the Israeli universe, frightened by progress whose course threatens to overwhelm it, and which, itself-even though, it started moving!

The truth is, times are changing, and even for Israel, oh wonder! In the past, Talmudic authority had triumphed of the authority of Moses, and the Talmud had erased the Bible.
Now, the men of the pro-
Jewish sandstone, behold, the effluvia of freedom drive away Before them, the clouds of immovable orthodoxy... Well better, "those who are called reformers want, on the one hand
In one fell swoop, get rid of all the obstacles, and the Talmud, which since its appearance had enjoyed an authority in-sand of past sufferings... of the Jewish nation; finally

It is to him that the famous word applies, by turning it around.
de Sieyès: "What has it been? Everything! What should it be? Good."
Ah! That's not enough now, really, if we don't deny the Jewish faith; but also what measure to observe*?

None, reason tells us; for as soon as a book is presented as divine, a single stain, a single error, and the slightest thing one discovers there signals weakness in him human or the lie, and kills him. He must die from it; and the organ of the lame orthodoxy of Judaism, the Universe Israelite, by entrusting his lamentations, only formulates the just consequences of Enormous things finally spotted, and pointed out by sons even of Israel in the Talmud. No wonder, then, that According to the words of the new Orthodox themselves, "the affair-gradual disintegration of religious consciousness makes disappear-

'We give the textual words; VI, p. 242, 4868.

* Read Archives israélites, XII, p. 242, etc.; 4867.

Digitized by Google

246 I.ES JEWS.

raître an defkns de la communauté toute vie israélite , et
It is said, both publicly and privately, that Judaism is no longer a religion.
but a simple archaeological study, an outdated thing, me, a dead thing, I am

That is why Judaism is now nothing but a corpse, and Is vainly Israel trying to revive him with the stove?
He is deprived of his old love. Ambition prevails at home over faith, and among the divided brothers you hear the one who retains a vestige of orthodoxy, which is criticized in bitter terms.
to the men of progress that, "contrary to the simplest Loyalty, the most vulgar good faith, one gets oneself appointed chief and prince of Judaism when one shows for all its laws a blatant disdain; when one tramples underfoot the flag of his proper regiment; "when finally, being guardian of Jerusalem, we live "in the pagan camp 'I'"

The newspaper La Croix therefore limits itself to putting on a self-evident truth when he expresses, in civilized countries read, "the little idea we have of the energy required for to remain an Orthodox Israelite*.

It is well known, in fact, that in the most liberal regions and the strictly orthodox Talraud are no longer to the liking of the majority," but that the very simulacra of orthodoxy offend countless Israelites. That's saying something, this... It seems that "a great schism has arisen between the reformers" Muslims and Orthodox Christians of all stripes*. Far from it. However, this profound dissidence, that one had deemed an unforgivable crime a few years ago, em- Fishing today is the goal for the two parties to reach an agreement on other issues. points and to fraternize. For the reformists and the ortho-

'Israelite Universe, XII, p. 5.18-39; 1866; id. supra.

The Jewish magazine responds with a witty remark about "that one also has little idea of the robust goodwill required to "To remain a Christian while denying Christ!" Israelite Universe, V, p. 196; 1867. For, today, most of the ministers of the Protestant-Ithacas deny the divinity of Christ!

3 Archives Israélites, p. 563; 1866.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER eight. m

doxcs de lout échelle also burn with zeal to hold high e(feripc the national banner of Judaism, It is for- what we see them doing when necessary, gathering their resources and their forces in a common interest, and, for example, u for- see together with liberality to the funds necessary to I erect- tion of a magnificent temple k Pesth. » {Ibid.) (1 it is true that, whitewashed sepulchre, the temple will contain only the yide, that the corruption of the divine law-, but the magic of its outside will proclaim the wealth and strength of the chosen people; And if God is glorified, at least glory will shine forth. of Israel.

These two thrilling sections of the Hebrew people's history are therefore unite in the desire to give the cult an appearance rence; and the reformers to seize upon this desire for to complete the ruin of the bastard orthodoxy whose presence This odious wound hurts both national interests and the bop seps human- This convocation of an Israelite synod was in con- sequence one of the lures they used to attract and to gather the new Orthodox Christians on board. But the flair of these lame champions of the Talmud uncovered the trap: A What good is your synod, brothers? "A merger would be desirable, Absolutely! And no one will dispute that point. But perhaps- Will it happen? Here, we hesitate; for one could well

"More embittered than before the meeting."

Indeed, there are "two extreme parties present:

First, the ultra-progressives, those who reject any cerebral law-monielle,,,,. quitraient de vetilles et minuties les prescrip-the teachings of the Synagogue, and declare them good at most

"For infants, for children at the breast!"

However, any reform, as long as it is only partial, tielle will never satisfy the former, the men of the progress, and will always alienate the latter, those who continue-dare not offer any further resistance to the rapists of orthodoxy. The synod would therefore have held its sessions in "pure perdol" Let's say the word, and not forget it: what

Digitized by Google

S48

THE JEWS.

is in the wishes of the reformers, "it is an abolition of the Traditional Judaism; abolition decreed in due form by its authorized leaders. A partial victory would not that increasing their ambition, without satisfying their desires; and Don't think we're exaggerating!

No one is unaware of the merger for which our men of progress affects such fine zeal "is but a trap set for the public's good faith." But what they want is the "abolition of food laws and pro-Sabbath inhibitions..., etc., etc. Who knows? Maybe they will until he flattered himself, in private, that circumcision, this divine seal that we carry on our flesh, according to the expressive poetics the sion of the Talmud, will be erased by a stroke of the pen of Messrs.
speakers. Such are the hopes that the party that is pushing for the synod, and that thinks it is so much in control of the notion that he exposes them to the light of day.'

Woe, woe to Israel! they reply to these words Jews of the Middle Reformation, those who strive to remain in a certain milieu among these brothers of the little ortho-Doxie and the freethinking Jews-woe, since our
The kingdom is divided! For "to some we are levelers devoted to the cult of free thought, and the others
They see us as incomplete and inconsistent liberals.
a large number of Israelites, to merge more In modern society, they find any voice unwelcome.

false orthodox, who benefit from the defense of the obscure-rancism, after having started by attacking it, regrets not to see us point out their offensive personalities*. >»

While the Talmud is a scourge for Israel, orthodoxy is more nuanced. that is to say false or bastard, is no less than the reform She herself is a real scourge for Judaism. And what he "There is certainty," affirms Rev. Father Ratis-good, priest of Israelite blood, is that "the men of this

'Israelite Universe, VIII, p. 358-59; 1868.

2 Israelite Archives, XX, p. 915; 1867,

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER EIGHT. 249

Their category is decreasing every day; because they are not recruiting. hardly among young people, and there are many among them "Ignorance and hypocrisy."

"They proudly call themselves Orthodox," they continue. the Israelite Archives, and their sole merit lies in following blindly, and without thinking, sometimes even without good faith, the practices good or bad that the means The age has bequeathed them to us: it is of them that the prophet said: Us "They have eyes, but they do not see!"

The men of the bastard orthodoxy of the West, born of yesterday and decrepit today, are moreover the first themselves addressing each other with cruel words, and which subdivide them into hostile factions. Also, The Israeli universe tells us, "and everyone knows it," Rabbi Hildesheimer is Orthodox. But as this The expression is very elastic and it is often misused. I feel I should add: Mr. Hildesheimer is orthodox in the most obscure meaning of the word. It is a true and generous Philanthropist; doing good is a need for him... Through this, he distinguishes itself from the orthodox school of Pressburg, which does not are and remain orthodox only insofar as their orthodoxy does not conflict with their cAcs me; who, fearfully cautious, they diplomatically put each of their words and each of their actions on the scales, for to ensure that no harm can result for them - justice*.

But they themselves, and in a multitude of circumstances which it would be tedious to list, the orthodox according to the 'Jewish Question, p. <2; <868.

^ Israelite Archives, X, p. 446; < 867. a Much less, adds this sheet, Will we still concern ourselves with those who consider themselves reformers or moderns, and who observe no other religion than that of their good pleasure or their conveniences; who listen only to the voice of their Passions, they accept no restraint as long as fortune smiles upon them.
timid and superstitious to the point of cowardice when misfortune strikes them,* or when age and illness have bent their vain pride. » Ibid.

^ Israelite Universe, IV, p. <76; <866,

Digitized by Google

"0 THE JEWS."

frank orthodoxy? Does this taliqu- remain orthodox, in fact?
saying that those who do not study cease to see a simple and mis-preservable burns in the being with a human face, foreign to blood of Israel, but who calls him his brother, and who supports without shudder, - how could such words be allowed to reach the ears of a true rabbi: - "that virtuous men of "All confessions will enjoy eternal salvation!" Remains-the orthodox eye, this Talniuisant who despises the interests of his God, who rejects the Pharisaic tradition, and who, miseflattering talisman of the century's incredulity, proudly straightens the head, proclaiming himself the opponent of proselytism', tan-say that the Jewish Reformer, - perhaps guilty of some distraction, and seizing the role that orthodoxist
"Give up," he cried in a generous voice; "Your observadvances ^urannéct prevent Judaism from doing so a-accept, and thus cause us to fail in the profelytism that we
"We must try" Is he finally the representative of an ortho-
Admissible doxie, this vain Talmudic scholar who gave to the world
Christian, the spectacle of the greed characteristic of his race
For the noble titles and honorary distinctions? Listen-the;s-le therefore sound the trumpets of fame* for to draw the public's attention to her bizarrely multicolored chest decorations and crosses that symbolize the mysteries of Christianity, and which bear the names of its saints! Would anyone know-
He will tell us which precepts of almud allow us to
To parade around under these emblems of the Christian faith?... And However, we are only raising important questions.
minimal to the Orthodox Jew! But what we

'Univers (Israelite, II, p. 84; <866; see also Israelite Archives, ITI, p. 102; 18H8.

who travel throughout the earth and the lands to make a single proselyte; and, When you do that, you make him worthy of hell twice over. than you. » St. Matthew, ch. xxiii, v. 14-15,' Read Kohrbacher, Hist. universe, of the Church, vol. XIX, p. 245; 1851; "They strive to attract Christians to their sect, etc. » Proselytism is of the essence
• of a religion that believes itself to be true.

* Archives israélites, X, p. 448; 1867.

♦ Read Jewish magazines.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER EIGHT. 15<

vauloQÇ signaler à l'observation de tout hoioiQe judicious, These are not words, – despite our habit of to seize them from the very mouth of the Jew, these are the acts which teach us how the Israelites of VQçci–
They judge and welcome the bastard orthodoxy that appeals to the tribunal of their conscience, as well as to a
With a supplicating hand, she pleads for their vote:
The position of Chief Rabbi of France is vacant.
to raise a candidate there, and two competitors who represent– maintain to the highest degree the Occitan orthodoxy and the re–
In Jewish form, they stand before the ballot box. The pre– Mier is the Chief Rabbi of Colmar, Salomon Klein. Who does not know (in Israel) "the one who was the ornament of Judaism" of the Haut-Rhin and of all of France, one could say of the "Jewish family of the whole world?" Chief Rabbi of |a the capital of the empire, and progressive, the second is called Isidor. Which of these two champions will prevail?
his rival? A decisive, moving, and thrilling battle... to break all hearts, such is the Homeric stature of the capdidaî of orthodoxy!

And, whoever is talking about this magnificent athlete, could he be sex?
To exalt its value? Let's listen; "Is it a matter of philosophy?
Is this about theology? Klein is a Talmudic scholar. Is this about Science? Klein is a classical scholar. Also, how many, by
For this reason, even if his adversaries had loved to conquer him!
And Klein, rising above by the height of his character of the plebeian school of thought, is not one of those who humble themselves would "conform to the Torah (divine law) atuc ideas of the
On the contrary, he wants to conform "the ideas of the Time for the Torah. We are sick from the lack of such things.
"Men!" Let us then humble ourselves before them, and all–
We would be happy if they deigned to accept our votes.

the supporters of the Reformation are demanding at the CNVI: "Any candidate-

* Israelite Universe, IV, p. 1867,

2 Israelite Universe, V, p. 406; 4868.

Digitized by Google

THE JEWS.

Xùì

(iatate which would take us back to the old system of narrow casuistry, and which would claim to immobilize Talmudic errors, would hinder the future of Judaism, and must be rejected."

"So then," the orthodox reply, their hearts heavy with grief, the most serious objection arises, stands against the Chief Rabbi of Colmar: he is a man of orthodoxy; he lacks the merit, surpassing all other merits, of having deserted; and the reproach that excludes her without return is to have maintained his religious fidelity, "his incorruptibility;

Let's call it what it is, his fanaticism! He made a mistake.

Unforgivable: he refused to answer, contrary to his conscience to Colonel Cerfberr (that is to say to the president of the consistory), who had the incredible idea of catechizing him to serve, and to question him about his religious principles. But all Wouldn't a man of heart call him a hypocrite and a... Any rabbi who lies in order to be appointed would be cowardly. his faith, and would he seek to please with ambiguous answers?

However, despite this orthodoxy, which the innovators commits a crime against the one who is the candidate, what is Not to mention the pleasant manners of this doctor! For, among the rabbis from his district, he certainly met with adversaries; and, however, "by the gentleness of his character, through his love of peace and his extreme tolerance, he is having managed to win everyone's hearts. » Better still, « the Judaism in the Upper Rhine, under his strong and holy leadership, is one of the most prosperous in France and the entire world*!

We will therefore think before we vote. We will therefore consider the point, the urgency of raising such a man to the office supreme! We think about it indeed; a few months pass, and "the election which had been a concern for eighteen months" The French Synagogue project is now complete. The vote

What is his verdict? He is the one who "our number of the November 15th announced in fairly explicit terms: Mr. Isi-

'Archives israélites, XII, p. 533; 1868.

"Israelite Universe, III, p. 138; 1866.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER EIGHT. 283

Dor, the chief rabbi of Paris (and a reformist), was called to functions of Chief Rabbi of France by twenty-two votes out of twenty-five voters » Bastard orthodoxy, daughter of the pure orthodoxy, already rejected, therefore no longer appears in the elective councils of Judah than in the proportion of three At twenty-two. Oh disaster!

So, if we're not mistaken, this is the whole story—Vanity! That's the opinion that translates into a tangible act. Eloquence. Yes, such are the deeds that are accomplished in heaven opened in the very heart of our France, at the same at the time, in the ancient capital of the German Empire, to Vienna, a Jewish newspaper, the Veuzzeit, not content with criticizing that this Orthodox cult violently attacks "Jewish life—entire lite, the Taltnud, the Schoulchan Arouch, the traditions, religious ceremonies of the domestic home, etc., etc.

And, not only does this Jewish organ "deliver Judaism" practice and Talmudic teachings ridiculed by the public Jewish and Christian," but he insinuates "that the Israelite family degenerates morally, shows a visible weakening of the

A sense of honor, a complete decadence! She speaks like missionaries, traffickers of souls, who they say to our brothers; The law of Moses condemns you; you "If you cannot accomplish it, then you must desert it!"

Before these diverse and numerous apostles of the Reformation, that is to say, progress. Salomon Klein can therefore have all wisdom, all knowledge, and much more than morality the great King Solomon, his namesake; but what does it matter to Western Judaism: this accumulation of merits? A fact Unforgivable condemns him: the Jew steeped in civilization sees in him the man of the Pharisaic tradition, the apostle of Talmud, the doctor who, under the nineteenth-century sun century, dares to cloak itself in orthodoxy! And although this or—Western methodology, singularly collapsed upon itself—

'>lrch»m Israelites, XXII, p. 1017; 1866.

2 Israelite Universe, IV, p. 152; 1866.

Digitized by Google

THE JEWS.

lukewarm to m nahsanre, Western Judaism rejects it.
Orthodoxy! Ah! That word reminds him of the cause of his anti-"These sufferings; this word makes him swoon and disgusts him..."
They disgusted us!

That is why, we say, and we want to repeat it:
Salomon Klein, "the ornament of the Israelite family during the
the whole world," is requesting the pontificate from French Judaism supreme, and three out of twenty-five voices cried out; Amen, Amen, Amen! No one is more worthy than you to such functions and such honor. But before this man-An eager magician, twenty-two other voices join in at the most resounding unison to shout at him: Back! O glory of the rahbi-Nat! We know what it's worth in clo-rncmc and what we Valut rorlhodoxie! Farewell forever to the rather retro- rabbi
A grade for daring to call oneself orthodox!

11TH DIVISION. – THE REFORMERS.

What do the reformists want? – To unite the present with the past; but con-Menl? – They reject the Talmud, and the Bible is just a book to them.
of myths. – A religion (religare.) is, especially for them, a something that should not bind man. – Folly to attribute to Morse and to Jesus what appeared to those who preceded them or followed them.
slow, to the progress of time, to rimmanity. – Can call itself Israelite whoever embraces the unity of God, the immortality of God and of the soul, and interprets everything according to his own meaning. – From the extent of this freedom will Universal religion, without disturbing any conscience. – Three curious examples of this practical tolerance. – The third is from Dr. Sée, professor at the Paris School of Medicine, accused of materialism and atheism. – The central consistory, council of the preme of the religious and social interests of Judaism, does not believe less having to admit it into its fold. – Curious revelations. –
A large number of Israelites seek to conceal their beliefs.
– This sort of homage they pay to their faith is more convenient than that of martyrdom.

(read the Jews portray themselves in our pages, that their pro-near pencils we learn to know them, and not

These traits, that's one of the essential points of our plan. It's [why, continuing to mingle with them and to draw

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER EIGHT.

296

our science in their words and in their lives, we their will ask what (|U are in Israel the people we come from to see the title of insult rejected, the name of orthodoxists, and we will learn from their own lips what characterizes the Judaism, those whom we hear called men of Reform and progress. These newcomers do not Are they merely weak-minded, mere men of... teeth k imagine that a divine religion can and should proto progress and improve itself; that it must submit by consequent k the ordering wisdom of man the God who is its author; that it can, in a word, last and grow in subjecting his beliefs to the whims of events,
to the tyrannical and fickle demands of temporal interests,
an order of some skilled maneuverers h diri-
How to manage its evolution? But instead of giving us the latest information wild hypotheses, let's listen carefully to those that it is important for us to know, and let us listen to them before to judge them. - No, no, cry their tumultuous voices, we want to walk, we want to move forward, we don't know->
Let us be "for this blissful and unintelligent status quo of which he E.Viste still has coryphaeus!^ Immobility is not, in this
At this moment, above all, neither the right nor the advantage of anyone. Uniting the past in the present, in a way that prepares the future through useful
The improvements made regarding this are the secret to longevity.
for a belief. For half a century, despite the cries and protests from what calls itself orthodoxy, rearead a number of advantageous taxed changes k the origin of subversive and impious. We will cite ten of them, one for each:
religious initiation, the education of young girls, the prediction of cation in the national language, etc., etc.;....; and one is not at the end of this fruitful transformation. 11 We must persevererer, whatever those who say that the law may think religious authority being above rabbis and consistories, as above us all, they owe it no more that none of us change anything.

'Archix>«s Israélites, XIX, p. 836; 1866.

THE JEWS.

Here, the reformers are very careful to remain silent on the reforms that deal a mortal blow to the Jewish faith—but We have already seen the Talmud, the root of this faith, not more, in their view, than an archaeological relic, a venerated rable breastplate. However, this religious code, once relegated to cabinets of curiosities and placed under anti-glass cases Quaire, what remains for Israel in terms of holy book milk? — The Bible, that marvelous work of which they were until our Days, the faithful and incorruptible guardians! — No, we We know the opposite, and besides, here is their language: "For For us Israelites, the Bible is neither a book of science nor even always a history book. » For example the The story of "Adam and Eve, of Cain and Hebel, was not born-incessantly the narrative of an external history that has past on our earth;... this story may well be a his-figurative language*. The Bible and truth thus become two Distinct things! How to express it more clearly that no sacred book, no belief, no positive law bound to the word that a God had revealed to him the people who claims to be elected? We nevertheless pay tribute to this ab-without any ambiguity, and we thank our initiators the development that the following lines give to their belief: "A religion is, in our eyes, neither a rigid mold-flexible,... nor an inert material that lends itself to incessant experiences; it is a living, perfectible being, having in the past roots that must not be cut, and renewing themselves with a necessary slowness*. » Yet, never more than our days "religious thought in general has not exercised in the world, despite certain appearances to the contrary, a more considerable influence,... and Judaism could not stand in outside of this current. Not having, by a fortunate privilege of its organization, neither mysteries nor priestly caste to be revealed

1 j4rc/»i>es israélites, XIV, p. 613, and rails other passages; <866.

2 Archives israélites, XX, p. 879; <866.

3 Nothing could be further from the truth! But could there be a more enormous absurdity than that of a religion without mysteries, that is to say, consequently, where it It would be given to man to penetrate and understand God. Understand—split-, basing his teachings on reason and able to to invoke, in support of its highly moral character, the qualities of the race that practiced it, the Mosaic belief must take into account the religious activity of our time

a place that rightfully belongs to him*.

She will therefore take over this position, but without offending rival religions, and will tell us the only way to bring about the reconciliation between hostile cults; for it is unknown, and the Here it is: it is "that what is no longer attributed to Moses and Jesus is what belongs to predecessors, successors, progress of time, or of all humanity. It is above all... indispensable to clearly separate morality, which belongs to everyone, from particular religious dogmas of each belief*. » But whatever our profession of faith, our words and our actions, "we are always judged externally with habits" of an established and official Church which Christianity offers us the model*. We are, on the contrary, the most absolute religious democracy, and each of us is the judge supreme of your faith * .

To contain is to contain; man, that is to say the finite, would contain the infinite.
if he understood God, which is equivalent to saying that the scale of the buffalo tree...
It could contain the ocean, and far beyond!

* Which is unreasonable in the way we understand it, if there are mysteries;
for these mysteries require faith, as reason accepts it: Eationabile sit obsequium... Now the religion of Moses is filled with the mysterious God tère, which imposed a priestly lineage upon him. Those who hold the lan-the pledge that we are presenting cannot therefore, without an unspeakable infirmity
"In spirit, I would claim to be a Mosaic believer." But these progressives, as foreign to the rules of faith as to those of reason, dare to say:
An enlightened faith is no longer faith; a faith that reasons no longer exists.
Archives israélites, XI, p. 497; 1867.

^Archives israélites, XXI, p. 4059; 4867.

3 Archives israélites, XI, p. 504; 4867. As if morality, which is a code of morals, did not derive from religious law 1 As if The Gospel and the Talmud, therefore, did not each give rise to their opposing morals!

* The model offered to you by the Judaism of Moses, and which you have endeavored to restore by the rabbinate, etc., etc. See the chapter above.

^ Israelite Archives, XV, p. 677; 4867. The last of the fools or of ignorant people are therefore equal in your country to the most eminent of doctors, and th seems to be the case for all doctors? Monstrous absurdity that constitutes and ravaged Protestantism, a scourge previously unknown to the Synagogue. ffar~ monie, t. 1, p. 62-3.

Digitized by Google

258

THE JEWS.

In short, what is enough to be and to call oneself reli-Israelite, we hope to adopt it as a pro-lei;ù.iii of faith by a preparatory synod composed of rabbins and secularists whose humanitarian mission and duty will be "to constitute any progress while avoiding loutschismel"
And the sufficient points are reduced to three dogmas: "unity of God, the immortality of God, and the immortality of the soul.
We will declare, relying "on the spirit of the BiWe and on the text of the Talmud (Horaioth, fol. 8), that which-"Whoever admits them is in fact Israelite." After which we we will proclaim "three essential principles derived from the natural laws" turmoil: free will, fraternity, and freedom of inter-service.

"By means of this principle, which is superior to tolerance-since it embraces the diversity of interpretation in the same worship'; by means of this freedom, each, according his conscience, will retain the practices of the worship rendered to The one and immaterial God, they will be reformed according to the principles of a liberal and humanitarian Israelitisrae. » Thanks to the extent of this "practical freedom,... progress will spring forth, and Universal religion will emerge without any conscience was truly troubled!

It is indeed all too easy to imagine to what extent-
The tolerance of a religion must extend to this matter, a religion which, far from to bind to God and to unite his believers with one another, the afl'rancbit of all ties, of all obligations, except that to govern themselves, each according to their own meaning, while this meaning of Each one continues to call itself the common faith, while waiting that he should seize the nobler name of Catholic faith or universal!

But perhaps this convenient and liberal way of en-

'The Jews, fallen into the depths of confusion, cannot SC understand themselves; otherwise they would see that they are establishing as much of cults, within the same religion, that there are individuals. It is believed to dream-ver by glancing at these lucubrations!

'^Israelite Archives, 111, p. 418-9; 4868.

"Religio comes from religare, to bind.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER EIGHT.

359

Does the practice of religion lead its followers to a tolerant-rancidity bordering on indilation or contempt: a thought that we will limit ourselves to three examples, in the delivering to the reader.

First example. The premise of a syna- administration gogalc ligure tout let ant dans let procetdon» cathoUquet. 11 thus pays a brilliant and public tribute to the sym-boles of a foreign cult," while, to complete the construction of this spectacle, "the secretary of the community-Nature escorts the canopy under which the image of the Trinity (tic!)". This fact, as stated, will appear without doubt quite strongly. But who then, after having absorbed the the doctrine of the Jewish reformists, would consider being indignant at these outrages against the feelings and faith of Israel, if not a champion of orthodoxy 'P

Second example. The Gousistoire de Paris address k Mr. Ia)W, chief rabbi of Szegedin, and of eminent learning, a letter of congratulations on the articles he published in favor of the fusion of rites in the leaves of the Denrchatui-No. Now, a voice accuses him: This eminent doctor in Israel declares itself in favor of the trends "that have ou-green the abyss beneath modern Judaism... 11 denies the obligation of our religious practices; it deposes the most illustrious self-rites in Israel that the Synagogue has recognized since long centuries. Are these the lofty considerations of which "The Consistory of Paris is deeply affected?" Yes, without a doubt. doubt, and by what right to find it bad if the talent of this Does the rabbi shed any light on his doctrines? For thus demanded by the interests of reformist Judaism-and which It will surprise, if not outright victory, that he is a champion of orthodoxy?

Third example. We read in the very sheet which jKJse and practice k at the same time the precepts of tolerance reform-miste: "We are accused of promoting materialism, the Nihilism, and why? Because our coreligionist,

'Israeli Universe, XI, p. 498; 4866.

^ Israeli Universe, XII, p. 54i; 4866.

17.

Digitized by Google

160 THE JEWS.

Dr. Sée, – one of the professors at the School of Parisian medical school, accused of materialism and atheism. and whose name has just been revealed in parliamentary debates to the echoes of the tribune, – “was recently attached to the Uraelite Commission of Paris. » Ah, really, let's leave Therefore, “leaving aside the doctrines of Doctor Sée, which do not...” look at the point and do not in any way involve our worship; but observe – tons that this distinguished doctor was called not to the Consistory the Paris administration, but to the Central Consistory. This administration The organization brings together notables, but to be admitted does not imply that one is involved in worship, or that one is versed in it. “Israelite questions!”

This is the language of the moderate reformers, that the Jews a more frank liberalism is called for by incomplete liberals And yet the Central Consistory, where these liberations take place The supreme council responsible for the administration of appointments is the supreme court Management of the religious and social interests of Judaism! Not being nothing else but that, the atheists and the materialists Lists do not seem out of place in his household at all!

That is why a wise enemy is better than such a friend. that you, shouts the spelling champion from the top of his throat Doxie has these champions of reform! Yes, indeed, the license is a bit strong; but “we would be the first to laugh the paving stone that has just been thrown at the head of the Central Consistory, if we were not deeply saddened by the cold-bloodedness with which a publication that claims to be Jewish comes to talk about duties and mission of our first religious administration “Geographic!” For our part, we expressed “our sensitivity” timent on such an appointment, and we have unfortunately – Fortunately, nothing to reply to in the Catholic newspapers, which They are rightly astonished by the choice that has just been made... » And What! Son of Jacob, “you believed that the Consistory cent-

'I forgive many things... but I abhor al-haze,' Materialistic. How do you expect me to have anything in common? with a man who believes he is a “piece of mud”? Napoleon III, Feelings about Christianity, p. 77.

^ Archives israélites, IX, p. 389; 4868.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER EIGHT. 161

Irai was to be in charge of worship and religious matters.
Israelites? A profound error, and at most forgivable.
Orthodox Christians!

The orthodoxy's leaflet, despite this generous outburst,
However, it is important to inform us that Mr. Sée, the learned professor of the School of Medicine, is worth a little better than his reputation or his scientific professions of faith tistics; that he is, in short, neither the materialist nor a cert-
The public applauded, nor did the antagonist of the belief in God; and as proof: "A rabbi from the Upper Rhine affirms-She sends us information which shows, according to him, Mr. Sée's feelings of piety, his faith in immortality of the soul," and, what will surpass all belief, "to fefficaeffectiveness of prayers; » but what is better, « prayers of the Synagogue! And much more, of the very same kind that rise up in support of the dead!

Our language is serious—because it's been almost two years since we last spoke.
that he had the misfortune of losing his daughter, the said rabbi is charged by him to pray for the repose of the deceased's soul, of to recite Katüscherabanan; and, before this sad event-
The rabbi often met with the eminent doctor at Schelestadt cemetery, visiting the graves of its pious parents, and reciting the customary prayers with deep emotion and MU holy recollection*. »

If that's the case, what do you expect? The tolerance described by the Jewish Archives allows each Jewish conscience to interpret his religion and his duties as he sees fit. Free.
Therefore, each person, in this path, either publicly denies or... to hide his belief from prying eyes, to draw a curtain on his faith, but without ceasing, for so little, to believe and to be an Israelite. These new religious customs also have-Their precious advantage is to unite minds into a single group.
the most dissident, which makes them popular in Israel; because the 'Israelite Universe, X, p. 410; 1868. Catholics are n^{ureraieot}-

They are the councils of the Church, composed of professional unbelievers!

2 Ib., Univers israélite, X, p. 476; 1868.

THE JEWS.

The reformist paper hastens to inform us that, of our days, "a large number of Israelites seek to conceal
"Or to let them ignore the belief into which they were born!"

For our part, we will not wish them any ill will.
They are grateful to pay this kind of tribute to their faith. Perhaps However, spoiled as we are by reading Life saints, we might be tempted to exclaim: But in
In truth, what is a religion that is ashamed of itself?
Same? What is a reform that manifests itself in the world?
not through affirmation, but through the negation of his beliefs, by the opposite of a patent profession of faith and of the neck-Affirmative rage of the martyr?

Among the men of the orthodoxy that we have named bastard, because it is both the beginning and the denial of reform, and the singular champions of a reform that distorts Judaism by laying hands on Let whoever dares choose its dogmas; and if progress leaves any room for it time I

'Archives israélites, XV, p. 675; 1867.

THIRD DIVISION. – THE FREETHINKER JDIF.

Transition from Reform Jew to Freethinking Jew. – Kisses from Lamou-rette between the three GIs of the Bible placed face to face by the Israelite Hippolyte Rodri^e. – A single temple will contain all cults merged, under the banners of Reason and Philosophy of eighteenth century. – This temple is the Universal Israelite Alliance, open to all humankind, under the supreme leadership of Israel.

– The deed accomplished, she annihilated fanaticism and founded the great fraternity-nity.–What this alliance is.– Words of Mr. Crémieux, his pre-resident, one of the illustrations of Freemasonry and Judaism.

– She is preparing the Messianism of the new days; a "Jerusalem" of a new order substituted for the dual city of the Caesars and the Popes;"
For "Israel is the greatness of God." She is the protector of all.
the cults, even if "against the laws still in force." – The peoples extend their hands to Israel and ask for forgiveness for the past. – He has not-
It no longer had a center, but everything has changed. – Episode, – Example

- A great rabbi, a fearless defender of free thought. – A story.
- One can "become a freethinker and remain an Israelite." – Same faith.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER EIGHT. 163

the same aspirations animating the Jew, the Freemason and the freethinker sister or the one in solidarity. – Quirx>nque enters into occult societies is the Jew's ally. – His newfound love for liberty does not mis- He only knows the Catholic faith. – Eckert's word.

The prodigious and phantasmagorical precepts of the re-
The Jewish form leads us, through a captivating and irresistible slope, no longer subject to the precepts of a religion Anyway, it's more of a simulacrum of religion, but skeptical and avowed philosophy of the eighteenth century, that we are indeed seeing today the establishment of a single-level in Judaism. In the light cast by these doctrines, we bear witness that every critic of a positive religion-tive meets with the reformist Jew, a natural ally, a auxiliary, a brother, another self. And, if we take the effort of climbing, by raising ourselves into the void, a new rung of the ladder whose base lies in our Western world on the false and powdery granite of Jewish orthodoxy,
A simple glance will reveal us in a clearer light.
still the extreme point where all faith perishes in Israel. But not let us progress only with wise slowness, and contemplate k we were pleased with the scope and variety of this spectacle.

K Convinced that in religious matters the spirit is everything and the form of little thing, – the Israelite Hippolyte Rodrigue – addresses successively the three daughters of the Bible: at Judaism, Christianity, and Islamism." In his voice the most pathetic he exhorts and implores them "to put setting aside the outward forms of worship that separate them', and to unite on the ground that is common to them, of unity of God and universal brotherhood.

"That temples may be erected everywhere, receiving in their impregnates all men, without distinction of religious origin Joyful! May all hearts be filled with the same sentiments of love, poured out before the same God, father of all beings. May all be nourished by the same principles of

- The mysteries and sacraments will be trained for this doctor in Israel I

THE JEWS.

virtue, morality and religion, and sectarian hatreds disappear—
will reign, and harmony will reign on earth, and teshuvah—
"The evils foretold by the prophets of Israel will be fulfilled."

In these resounding appeals of religious sentimentality giving, the Revue du judaïsme réformiste admires a grandeur, an elevation and a generosity of ideas all the more admirable and contagious, the author presents them with a warmth, conviction, and enthusiasm that are contagious and remove the reader.' And, as the times are finally where facts hasten to answer words, the larger, the most wonderful of temples, a temple whose
The stones are alive and endowed with thought, rises to receive in its elastic enclosure, under the banner never sacred of reason and philosophy, all that Humankind contains within itself generous souls.
hostile to mystery and ignorance, true sons of the light and freedom. This temple will therefore house the religion Jewish, which survives everything and is unshaken by anything; a broadened religion and made worthy of all humanity, he exclaims to Tumultuous applause from his brothers, one of the princes of Israel. And, it's not from within Judaism, it's from the France, our homeland, from which springs the liberating idea, the idea that it merges all beliefs and all cults; it is of our beloved France "which regenerated the world, and received with happiness, your holy and generous maxims of the philosophy of eighteenth century*.

But let us abandon all forms of discourse. This temple com-
Made of living stones, what is it, if not the most vast association which should never astonish humanity by the number and prodigious diversity of its members! Born From yesterday, this association dates back to the year 1860, with the title

* Archives Israélites, XIV, p. 628-9; 1866.

* Archives israélites, XXIV, p. 1074; 1866. Cosmopolitan Philosophy, who renounces all patriotism, all duty, all partisan affection whether personal or positive, to dedicate oneself to the love of humanity, and who said to the religion of Christ, after it had civilized the world: You are not What lies and what darkness!

CHAPTER EIGHT. 165

the Universal Alliance; for dogmas, those that the large and most active Freemason associations Occult societies have so far only taught in the shadow. Open to all humankind, all the high direction (t Israel, it attracts our attention with its services) distinguished in their support of equality and the moral progress of our coreligionists." And his works resound from one end to the other side of the earth; because the Alliance program does not It does not consist of empty phrases. It is the great work of humanity, the annihilation of error and fanaticism, the union of human society in a solid brotherhood and faithful; and this program has become a fait accompli at Morocco and in Persia, in Syria and in Greece, in the principal-Danube valleys and in Sweden, that is to say to the north and to south, in icy areas and in those where the fires of a devouring sun.

We hear it, and who would believe it? This language that sorts Israel under the banner of philosophical incredulity of eighteenth century, is offered to our admiration by the Jewish newspaper that presents itself as one of the boulevards of Orthodoxy! But let's turn a deaf ear to his words for the open those of the great Alliance, eager to us to display his titles through the very mouth of his illustrious predecessor resident, one of the glories of modern Judaism, and, by a almost as a strict consequence, one of the coryphae of the as-Masonic society:

"Our century readily acknowledges this fact, that the fa- Religious nativism has disappeared among us. But,... "let us the courage to admit it, what dominates... is, - outside of an excessive love for material well-being, - the huffé-Reticel II, there's a kind of slow poison that has seeped in. in the depths of our hearts: religious indifference, indifference-moral deference, indifference to everything that makes the strings vibrate elevated by our nature. All of this is covered by a species (Official hypocrisy that doesn't dare admit it to itself.)

' Israitite Universe, Vhl, p. .357; 1867.

THE JEWS.

However, in this way, Jesus "authoritatively substituted himself for the gods" established and found its highest manifestation in the breast from Rome—such a Uetsianism of the new days must emerge and to develop—such as a new, holy Jerusalem—seated between East and West, must replace the 'a dual city of Caesars and Popes'. Now, I make no secret of it, For many years I have not nurtured any other thought— I am certain that the future of this work will be secure. As much as my strength allows, I was able to allow it, I raised the flag—it will not be long. to float efficiently in hands younger than the mine*.

"The Universal Israelite Alliance begins with difficulty, and already..." Its beneficial influence is felt far and wide... It does not stop— It is not limited to our religion alone, it is addressed to all religions. She wants to penetrate all religions as she penetrates in all lands. How many nations are disappearing here— basî... How many religions vanish in their turn! Israel does not It will never end. This small tribe, that is your greatness, God! The religion of Israel will not perish; this religion is unity. of God!

"There it is, this law which will one day be the law of the universe." All revealed religions took it from this small people... The Bible is everywhere. Its morality becomes the morality of all. peoples. The Jewish religion is the mother of religions which re— during civilization. Also, to the extent that philosophy emancipates the human spirit, religious aversions against the Jewish people are disappearing. One wonders why this odious persecution!... Well then. Gentlemen, let us continue our mis— glorious sion. May enlightened men, without distinction of worship, unite in this Universal Israelite Association of which

* a new power of which Israel would be the soul and the leader, of which the The mission would be to overthrow all political and religious powers. external to himself. Now, this leader, this Messiah, to what Idea does he respond?

* Archives Israélites, XXV, p. 600, 651; tS6t.

3/tid., p. 514–5,

■' Why? Because Talmudic traditions, and not the Bible, were the law, the conscience of the Jew.

The goal is so noble, so broadly civilizing. To destroy within the Jews, the prejudices they have acquired in Persia—cution, which breeds ignorance; to found in the north, in the south, To the east, to the west, numerous schools; to put in relations with the authorities of all countries these populations Jewish women so neglected, when they are not treated as in-enemies; the first news of an attack against a cult.
 of a violence incited by religious hatreds, we rise up like a single man, and to demand the support of all; to do—to raise our voices in the offices of ministers, and just—that to the ears of princes, whatever the religion which is misunderstood, persecuted and attacked, even by det mmire" written in roofs still in force, but rejected by the lights of our time; to join us to all those who protest, and act with all our might; give a friendly hand to all those men who, born into a religion other than the ours, extend their fraternal hand to us, grateful that all religions whose basis is morality, including God is the summit, they are sisters and must be friends with each other them; thus breaking down the barriers that separate what/should to bring you together/one day; there, gentlemen, is the beautiful, the great mission of our Alliance—itraitite-unwerteUe.., Let's march firm^ and resolute in the path laid out for us. I call upon you ASSOCIATION not brother* of all faiths; that they come to we;... with what eagerness we will go to them! We They extend a fraternal hand to us. They ask for our forgiveness.
 past; the time has come to build on an indestructible foundation
 tible an immortal association*. »

These words were followed by prolonged applause, which must seem astonishing to anyone unfamiliar with the

'Which morality? That of the Talmud? Of the Quran? etc., etc. And the Alliance'
 Is Israelite showing any signs of life today, in Italy, in Russia, in Spain, against the people who, by decree, demolish churches, and to in the name of religious freedom, they expel the religious, abolish the so-charitable societies of Saint Vincent de Paul, to the applause of liberal writers and pro-Jewish political newspapers... etc., etc.

^ Ibid., p. i m.

Digitized by Google

the current course of the world is based on circumscribed relationships. But it was natural for the Israelite people to bear witness to high-temperament his favour k « the institution which so highly upholds the dra-skin of Israel," and which, recalling the idiom associated by Liberalism, with its prophetic destinies, "has become in a little of time, in his own words, the beacon of salvation of his oppressed brothers.

Earlier, "Israel dispersed for eighteen centuries" on the surface of the globe, no longer had a center, no longer represented Sentimental, more defenders of common interests. Mainte- Everything has changed! A thriving society, and one that finds access to the most powerful thrones, is Ih, always ready to claim our rights, to fight these men who are all at once the enemies of our race and those of the Light and freedom!

Thus speaks the president of the Alliance! And, among the appro- From the beaters and the echoes of his words, some want to believe Orthodox Christians, while others mock Orthodoxy, but, all together, these followers of the most atrociously exclusive, as history has shown us, all Together these Talmudists of yesterday proclaim themselves lovers sows the threads of eighteenth-century philosophy! And see them applauding the revolutions that are turning upside down sense the beliefs and the empires; see them weaving crowns to the Voltaires, the Volneys, the Grégoires, to the Joseph II, to the Garibaldi family, to the Michelet family ^ Their language is quite explicit, no doubt! and carries with it the lu-first; however, it did not equal the striking words which come from the mouth of the Chief Rabbi of Belgium. In truth, one could not give more life than he did this pastor in Israel with the painting that represents sincerity the philosophical nature of a Judaism that had become eclipsed its faith, the refuge for those who renounce their worship and their faith. But pre-

' jtrcWües israélites, XIV, p. 655; 1867.

* See, directly or indirectly, throughout the cited journals, and for example, Archives isrttéliles, X, p. 463; 1867.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER IITH. 169

Let us prepare the reader's mind with a few more lines. surprise :

to close our eyes on Belgian soil, and to open them to the light from the other world. Charged by a newspaper to which he lent the assistance of his pen to give him, in the form of a parody, the account of a jubilee procession of Notre-Dame, Bérend had freely given free rein to his eloquence sarcastic and sacrilegious; but a few moments after these insults to Catholicism, cholera caught him by surprise at the theatre and made him feel its devastating effects.

expired.

The time for the funeral having arrived, his fellow believers of Ui libre peruée carried them to the Israelite cemetery, where, turning its back on the pompous and liberal maxims of respect for all faiths proclaimed by the Israelite Alliance universal litany, Mr. Chief Rabbi of Belgium Aristide Astruc delivered the panegyric of this man over the gaping tomb. insulting the religion professed by Belgians. The newspaper from Orthodox Judaism, from which we borrow the narrative of This fact, he attempts to demonstrate through foreign quotations. the eminent merits of the free thinker, whose prudence does not allows him to rent in direct terms, and reports the The text of this speech without adding a single word of criticism:

"My brothers," cried the chief rabbi in sorrow. affected,... I cannot let this premature grave close... opened wide, without paying a just tribute of regret and esteem; and allow me to tell you that the pain that I feel is mixed with a feeling of profound sadness personal; because Michel Bérend, whom I am going to, on behalf of the religion, blessing the departure from this world, greeted a few

Just days after my entry into the bosom of this great quoted.

"You all knew the energy of his convictions, and the an indomitable force that he used to ensure their triumph. A passionate lover of freedom, Bérend has always fought

Digitized by CoogLe

S70

THE JEWS.

persecuted, he put his honor on every occasion to raise—towards the flag of Israel, which is that of religious freedom.
Farewell then, Bérend; be blessed! Like the young hero of the 'Bible, you died fighting'.

But this language is incomplete, and we must to complete it. The Monitor of Solidarity, free newspaper
The examination, startled by this religious display, dealt with mis-
the taking or inconsistency of the intervention of any cult on the grave of a freethinker. However, isolating from Judaism the Free thought was to offend the religion of the chief rabbi, who he immediately retorted: "You claim that the intervention of the cult that I represented was not present on this sad occasion that it was a misunderstanding... Allow me to tell you, sir, qnc you are mistaken... Bérend was a member of the free thought, we knew that. Judaism excludes no one from its temples during life, nor its cemeteries after the dead. Not only does he admit it in some and in others Others include the Israelites who have ceased to practice its rites, but he also receives foreigners there, without asking them On the threshold, no formula of confession. He calls them all, without distinction, fraternity here below, and immortality talité in life k venir.

"That's why Bérend was able to become a free thinker in res-
So much so that Freemasonry, so Israelite, is why, finally, and also free thought, were able to intervene without obstacle k on the Jewish side, at the tomb of a brother, a friend, "one coreligionist that all, Israelites, Freemasons and free thinkers—their sisters also regret it*.

Intimate union, equality, and parity therefore reign in our days, in the sense of rabbinic theology, between these three

'Univers israi'Ute, II, p. 85–6; 1866. To dare to say that the flag of those for whom Talniud is the code is the flag of religious freedom, and to make this freedom that of the free thinker, how many times is it not point exceeding the bounds of audacity 1

– /trdiiues israélües, XXI, pp. 927–928; 1866. This discourse is, of a
From beginning to end, the denial of the Talmud, of true Judaism.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER EIGHT. S71

expressions of the same faith, of the same aspiration: the
A Jew, a Freemason, and a freethinker, to whom Belgium liberal Judaism begins, openly, to no longer be than the philosophy of revolutionary sects!

Indeed, we have known for a long time, the learned man tells us Protestant Eckert, that in the symbols of these lodges, the Freemasonry, which includes among its initiates the most a large part of the Protestant clergy, "dedicates the worship of materialism, and that it preaches an abominable doctrine there-nable, a monstrous mixture of philosophy, Judaism and of Christianity, which ultimately resolves itself to 'the crudest deism'.

A large part of the Protestant sects, recruited in the ranks of eighteenth-century philosophy and occult societies, in fact, hardly form any connection with the mem-branches of occultism than a single, unique family. But This family only becomes complete when it actually merges into one.
and often at heart with Judaism, and especially with the members of this cult, which Israel calls its reformists and sects free thinkers, that is to say, with the majority of the Jews who were... dental. And, curiously enough, we see the holders of the bastard orthodoxy that makes up these regions minority of Jacob's sons, share with fervor otherwise the opinions, or at least the sentiments of this jumble of a thousand names of representatives of free thought.

In other words, if our eyes rest on the philosophers eighteenth-century sophists, on the men of the protos-Tantism, hence the arid filth of modern philosophy completely eradicates all religious ideas, and focuses on the followers occult societies arising from corrupt humors Christian blood, the simple observation of things... recognized, apart from any Masonic data,
a single, unified spirit that predestines them, by penetrating them,

'Ed. Eckert, lawyer in Dresden, Freemasonry, etc., etc., vol. I',
p. 123, etc.; Liège, ISS4; book which is becoming rare.

Digitized by Google

272

THE JEWS.

They may be the shameful or blatant auxiliaries of the Jew driven like them, becoming a free thinker since he became citizen, and reduced to retaining this title, either to mutilate, or

CHAPTER NINTH.

FIRST DIVISION. – NEW MORALITY, NEWS MORALITIES.

Social qualities of the Jew, half-freed from the Talmud, and judged according to Representatives of the Jewish press. – Observations limited to These two points: truthfulness, benevolence towards the Christian. – The simple destruction of Talmudic orthodoxy sulTit-cllo to the regeneration-Social status of the Jew? – What are the feelings of today? Jews for the Christian? – Protection granted to them by the emperors The Popes and the upper classes. – Universal ingratitude. – Would this ingratitude still be the same, and although the Jew Does it become de-Metalmudic? – Example. – Death cry of the Jew against Rome, which had always been his most inviolable refuge. – Pretext and word The universal order. – The Mortara affair. – A word on this affair and comparisons. – Reason for the feigned fury of the Jews. Their pro-pre example. – Excessive intolerance, hateful lies and slander-accusations against the Archbishop of Algiers. – The admirable letter of this pre-Latin, and the Jew. – Enormous facts. – The texts. – Deep traces of belief in actions, even after belief has disappeared. – Notes. – Pius IX and European diplomacy advocating in favor of the Jew. – Mr. Mirès to his fellow Israelites. – Russia and the Jews...

The spectacle of Talmudic customs will be shown later. astonished our eyes; a spectacle no less interesting, and more varied would be that of the customs of the Jew for whom the Talmud is now nothing more than a dead or dying letter, a shroud from which Israel must finish extricating its members if it does not want to be Tower after tower, the horror and the laughingstock of the people. Eyes fixed on these Jews whose march will in a moment provoke our attention, and whose confused multitude has occupied since from the highest to the lowest degrees of the scale As for moral progress, we will limit ourselves to considering them in their relationship with Christians from the simple point of view of these two social qualities: recognition and truthfulness, because we do not want to extend the scope of our observations. In this way, we will learn if the distance-a lie that suddenly manifested itself in the Western Jew For Talmudic ofthodosis, this is sufficient for the regeneration of this Jew, who continues to be one with the Talmudic faithful;

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER NINTH. J73

Judaism will offer us some useful lessons.
It is more important than ever to admit on this ground the happy exceptions, and to admit them in the majority large measure.

Well, these Jews whom we see moving away from the degrees
so different from one another, absurd or hateful precepts
Those who study the Talmud, do they finally feel capable of something recognition for the services the world renders them Christian, for the blessings with which he fills them? And, without... to hold Christian society guilty of excessive naiveté will she now have to rely on the language that escapes from the mouth of Israel, or which sometimes seems to be an overflowdemented by his heart! This language, damn certain eras filled of tenderness and effusion for the Church; Israel would therefore have, k
In his regard, contracted from time to time some debt sa-Created? Let's consult two or three pages of history on this subject.

A modern assembly, and one that deals with a rare and delicate kindness regarding Jewish matters, he told us:
"In general, although the Jews have always shown themselves extremely hostile to Christianity, never, from that day forward where the Gospel establishes its dominion in the world, never nor Neither the Church nor Christian governments dealt with the Jews with the same severity as the pagans had done!...
Emperors and Popes protected their synagogues, they forbade anyone from disturbing them in the exercise of their worship and the celebration of their festivals, that they should be disturbed in their property and their persons, and they never consent-they are trying to force them to be baptized against their will!

' Cf. JH Bæhmer, Jus eccles. protest. ad. bed. From Judeeis, 1. V, ül. IV, §41.

18

Digitized by Google

27»

THE JEWS.

The Jews, and it is important for us to have this right, given their history... history was distorted by historians of origin or tendency Jewish^ n The Jews were protected by the upper classes; and the riots that broke out against them, just like those that The events that took place at the origin of the crusades were brutal.

and the clergy disapproved and stopped it with all their power.'

This is the general truth, which is validated in all respects by... against the exceptions whose very purpose is to confirm the rule, but that treacherous people or false spirits exploit them with a success that is all too often regrettable. Jews, however, those implacable enemies of the law of Christ despite their singular eagerness for marked distinctions at the sign of the Savior^ everywhere they showed themselves to be enemies of upper classes and the clergy, that is to say, those whom their position made the instruments and columns of the Civilisation. Any feeling of recognition and respect for the truth, therefore, froze and died in the heart of Jew; as soon as justice demanded it, in favor of the Christian. But let us allow words to give way to facts on this point; and, since it is our duty to judge in Israel those whose Orthodoxy has allowed itself to be defeated; let us not take as witnesses this truth, repeated a thousand times by history, that the facts of the present era, the one in which the Jew is becoming less like the Talmud.

Today, the spirit of revolution is unleashed and stirs up On all sides at once its waves and its foam against the walls of the Eternal City, against the seat of apostolic, which is assailed by both the most brutal and the most Hypocritical fury: a magnificent opportunity for Judaism^

'Encyclopedic Dictionary of Catholic Theology, by the most learned professors and doctors of theology from Germany, translated by Goschler, vol. XII, pp. 410-450, in-8°; Paris, 1861. See also the large Treatise on the police, Delamare, t. P'', p. 279, etc.; 4703.

Crosses, orders, and honorary and noble distinctions. In practice... Looking at Jewish journals from two or three years ago, one can see with what Lured by vanity, despite their horror of the Crucified, the Jews adorn themselves of our crosses and of the Orders which bear the name of our saints and of our mysteries.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER NINTH. 175

the primitive essence of heresies, the eternal soul of revolts against the principles of Christian society, to rise up against The tiara, if Judaism is ungrateful... Ah! yes, may it finally perish, May Rome perish forever! This cry, Ibrcene, is repeated from mouth to mouth. in the mouth like the death cry of Calvary—but it was necessary b Israel tin motif, and any of them, b this new brilliance.

The motive was an act by Israel, puffed up with its old ways.

winds of the sky, so this is the title of attack by the freedom of the conscience. Thus he cried out, his publicists who, full of errors and widespread prejudices nurtured within states themselves controlled by the rulers and the allies of the Jewish nation, never let more than a day pass without tiring of this eternal
'A constant repetition, echoes from all over the world.' It is therefore a matter of justice for us to know what was hardly said except by hostile mouths, and we will say it again in a quick word.

A Christian woman was a servant in a Jewish household; and, in its wisdom, Roman law formally forbids a Jew, who can only violate it at his own risk and peril, to have for a Christian servant. The servant believed, wrongly or not for reason, duty to baptize by the article of death the child of this Jew whose name is Mortara. Now, everyone in Rome knows that every baptized child falls, for the maintenance of the vows. Baptism, under the tutelage of Roman law. That is the fact; and pure courtesy compels us to allow Judaism freedom of plenary session to give it the most fantastical accompaniments. Given that we are positioned from an exclusively pro-As a fan of legality, we will limit ourselves to saying to the Jew: The law, this law that you accepted in your capacity of an inhabitant of Rome, whether harsh or not [dura lex, sed lex], was not treacherous. She warned you; and yet, he... rather than defying it; the consequence of the offense is therefore your

'Read the Jewish journals, and see the note at the end of this first one chapter division.

2 This prohibition was once universal in Catholicism. See the great Treatise on Police, 1. 1^{re}, p. 179, etc.; Paris, 1705.

there.

Digitized by Google

276

THE JEWS.

work. To you, a foreigner by birth, whom Rome knows to be Rome, the implacable enemy of his cult, was willing to open her breast each time you were rejected elsewhere; but this was not without setting its precise conditions for this reception. By what right do you vent your gloomy complaints against her? because you were happy to accept them and break them! And what state in the world would allow foreigners to violate it?

From time to time, it escapes the Jew to teach us than thousands of facts, not similar, but well otherwise cruel, are carried out to the detriment of his faith either in the vast and silent empire of the Russics, or in the heretical Stables. Its own leaves cannot to open up without multiplying the evidence that, even in these
In recent times, the Christians and converts of his nation
They accuse him of acts of proselytism and intolerance.
more numerous and more serious than those he dares to criticize to Rome; and the story of the truly incredible persecutions of the Church in Protestant States* testifies to what is, at

* Archives israélites, XXIV, p. <21 ; 45 December <867.

^ Sweden, Germany, Great Britain, etc... Read, as a prodigious a fine sample, political, social and religious Ireland, by Mr. Gustave Tave de Beaumont, former deputy, collaborator of Mr. de Tocqueville, grandson of General Lafayette.

The outcry from the liberals of Vienna, concerning some Jewish women refugees in convents, give rise to the Gazeta Narodowa of Lemberg to publish the following information (October <867];

"In all their speeches, German liberals insist specifically on element on freedom of conscience, and in every law they introduce the paragraph that everyone is free to change their religion. But If a Jewish woman wants to exercise this right, they call it an act of violence, because, as in the cases presented to the Reichstag, the
, the people in question had preferred Catholic baptism to baptism-even Protestants and had taken refuge in Catholic convents.
German liberals do not seem to know why the Jewish women want to be baptized and take refuge in convents. We wish-Let's make sure we tell them that.

1) It has happened very often in our country that elderly Jewish women, who wished to were changing their religion and believed they were hiding in some established place well-closed, were forcibly taken by fanatical Jews and have disappeared forever. Two years ago, upon returning from a pilgrimage, a A Jewish woman from the Czarlkow circle, who wanted to convert, was attacked and abducted by the Jews; she was taken to a Jewish inn or voi-

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER NINTH. 577

the very point of view chosen by Israel, relative benignity of Rome with regard to the Jews. But let us admit, if necessary to please the Jew, a certain intolerance on the part of the its indecisive brushes, is a fruit that all produce Religions and all latitudes. Well, statistics.

 Do they not tell us in this case that Rome, if we the Suppose he is guilty, he is a thousand times less so than the regions Where does the Talmud, heresy, or schism prevail? Why?
 However, does the cup of the Jew's fury overflow soon—that without sharing on the only State for which, h certain hours so easily erased from his memories, he felt he should
 To profess such fervent gratitude? — Ah! Rome is the seat Catholicism, whose existence exasperates Judah; more than Rome is never weak; more than ever she is surrounded ruthless conspirators who are just waiting for the last
 The moment of his agony. The enigma whose solution we seek.
 The word thus opens its depths to the light, and the city of The vicars of Christ are accused by the Jews only because they want to give themselves the right to encourage and incite their shouts those who call for his death.

Perhaps more keenly than others, do the Jews feel even today the need to eliminate vices from religious ignorance, the children that their parents want to leave it to rot. Their zeal is often, in this respect, that that they reproach the most zealous Christians for, and the spirit of proselytism, which characterized the Pharisees, their forefathers * pierce each page the cover of words in the text of •■iinage, where she was strangled before the door could be forced open from the room where the murderers had locked themselves in with her. Why the Didn't Dr. Muhlfeld then question the minister about the investigation?

 Open on this subject and on the punishment of the guilty?

"Here in Galicia, there is no need to hire Jewish women." to be baptized. The position of women in Jewish society, especially—Everything about the Orthodox Jews of Galicia was enough to convince them to
 "To adopt Christianity..."

* See note A, at the end of this division.

^ S. Maltb., Evang., cap. xxiii, 45.

Digitized by Google

THE JEWS.

278

In their journals, it is difficult, in any case, to display and... proclaim the rights of the Jew over the men of his blood

This is a city where, according to their language, one must see "True miracles" performed by their own hands, and this city is Venice. Almost all the Jews there belong to the last social classes—but these are distinguished by an invincibility—targeted idleness, and by a disgusting ignorance combined with the more indecent audacity. Here, then, Israel tells us, "it It wasn't just a matter of providing aid... it was also about educating. the children and stealing them, so to speak, from their parents, in order to to move them along other routes. What struggles!

To hold on to that! What obstacles to overcome! And yet "We were able to overcome everything."

These words certainly mean something, but above all in the mouth of the Jew. And if the Jew, about whom it matters to us to appreciate the truth by the touchstone—if the Jew, who tears at his throat, making the world resound with his stories, Mor-Tara sets an example of taking action, even resorting to crime, against those who share his faith, when the cry of conscience so—means to change it; if the Jew makes it his duty to remove, "To steal, so to speak, children from their fathers," in order to to pull them out of their ignorance, and especially out of their ignorance religious, with what audacity does this same Jew dare, disfiguring all truth, insulting 'obviously, throw the reproach to delight the orphans of Algeria, their heads still covered the corpses of their mothers, the face of this archbishop who He does not steal from them, he who does not violate them, he who He doesn't use any art to attract them into his arms, but who is limited to tearing them away from prostitution and death? What! These rescued children, they're victims! You... Call them Mortaral. Your compassion drowns them in its Tears! But what is the cause of your grievances? What is the reason for your despair? Could it be because at

'Israelite Universe, XI, p. 630; 1867.

This same Jew is the writer of the same magazines.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER NINTH. m

middle of the French people, whose Christian civilization pro—Keep the Jew, these orphans run the risk of not growing fat the number of Muslims who, however, only yesterday, treated They treated the Jew, even in our Algeria, as they treat him there. the vilest animals? Could it be because these children, which no one would dare to turn into Jews, risk growing larger The number of Christians? However, behind all appearances, the Jew's mouth, for he observes, besides his love for the truth, his respect and his gratitude for these Christians hold to which he owes both what he is and what he has; that is the what our nineteenth century ignores of an ignorance-rancid, which one might call marvelous! The Jew speaks, silence :

Thus, Your Grace the Archbishop, "because you have Give the orphans a piece of bread, their souls... belong as if they had sold them to the prince of "Darkness, at midnight, for a piece of gold..." Yes, The Archbishop of Algiers, Mgr de Lavignerie, wrote to the Marshal governor of Algeria, and, "no longer placing any restraint He criticizes the government for your unbridled intolerance. to help build mosques, to grant subsidies k of Arab schools, to tolerate religious gatherings, of to facilitate pilgrimages to Mecca, to give, true-Incredibly, in the name of France, intelligence from the Coran k the Algerian youth, etc. But this is deplorable declamations, which reveal the most ardent religious hatred, the fiery apostle, if he does not yet have them on his lips and Under the pen, he undoubtedly also has them in his heart against 'Jews and Protestants, guilty of the same crimes, he, the public official, who takes an oath of obedience-sion and loyalty to the law of the State proclaiming freedom re-religious and the equality of worship. - Ah! that heaven and good

Our settlers and soldiers remember the time when the Muslim he would kick the Jew, or spit on him, as he pleased, when he encountered him on his path.

Digitized by Google

880

THE JEWS.

The star of France will forever preserve us from the "Domination by those people!"

Thus speaks Judaism among us, and such is its style! Let's place, as our only response, next to your text the the bishop's text, and let everyone see for themselves whether it is true 'Judaic respects or outrages the spirit and the letter'.

And firstly, that in the presence of this brief episode, no

What, then, could this possibly have in common with the study of the Jew?
a fragment of the Algerian religious question! For no inci-Perhaps a tooth doesn't give a more vivid notion of the mind who, even today, and on the very soil that we gave him offer to trample, animates the Jew against the principles of the Christian civilization. Let us therefore hasten to return to this African land, on the ground where, in their pela mix of believers and unbelievers, the men of Judah
They are the avowed auxiliaries of the Quran against Christ.

His Grace the Archbishop of Algiers addresses Mr. Marshal-Governor of Algeria: "Algiers, April 23, 1868. – Mon-Marshal, let octet, here, give to my words a
A comment far more eloquent than any speech. Tell me-
I, Marshal, at this moment, am attracting the Arabs near him, despite the dangers of their proximity? Who welcomes them into its seminaries, its asylums, its their own home? Who cares for them? Who provides shelter for their Widows, to their children? Who will spare their lives for them?
priests, of his nuns? And, on the contrary, who re-

- Univert israélite, pp. 436-7; 4868. – The Jewish rabbi, salaried by The State can call itself a public official; but the Christian clergy does not have no privilege of salary; he receives from the State only what he receives from it a rentier, the interest on capital; that is to say, by virtue of the Concordat, a minimal compensation for his property, which the State saw fit to seize.

A left-wing MP, Mr. Ollivier, had the integrity to point out
This observation was made towards the end of the session of the Legislative Body, sitting from July 1868.

2 This letter, worthy of the Church Fathers, is too long for
We were not referring to excerpts. Le Monde reproduced it on May 1.7, 1868.

^ Bonus pastor vitam dat pro ovibus suis.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER NINTH. 281

A crowd like human herds?... You know it; and I know that too!

Better than anyone, you know what this odious thing is all about.
insinuations, which Your Excellency does not fear to renew-to follow an anti-Christian press: what I want to do to pay, through the sacrifice of their religion, to these poor Arabs, the bread that Catholic charity distributes to them through my hands

Bishop! I have not said, nor allowed to be said, a single word to that effect. to the Arabs whom I am helping. I did not want to, and I declared to you highly, that only one of the twelve hundred children taken in by I was baptized in a different way than at the moment of death; and Again, at the moment of death, I only allowed it for Those who were not yet old enough to understand. I wanted, I want that they retain in this respect all their freedom; and, if they prefer- will make them remain Muslims when they are old enough to take to make a reasoned decision, I will not continue them any less my paternal devotion and support.

"I will teach them, it is true, that it is better to help each other." oneself through work against the blows of fortune that to fall asleep in death by invoking fate; that he is It's better to have a family than to live, under the pretext of divorce or polygamy, in a perpetual and shameful debauchery; that it is better to love and help all men, whatever race they belong to, than to kill the Christian dogs. (Oh, the fiery apostle!)... That's what I I will teach them. Who would dare to find fault with that?

"Better than anyone else, Marshal, you you know that I live in solitude, in the most pro- I founded myself, fleeing the world, concerning myself only with my duties. and my works as bishop. If, therefore, as you explain to me- nose, the Algerian population huddles even closer around What's important to me is that she considers the ideas and principles that I support it as its safe harbor after so many storms!

"These are my flock, Marshal; these are the souls of whom I am the pastor; and you reproach them for their con-

Digitized by Google

THE JEWS.

58 2

Fiance en naoi! And you reproach me for loving them, for cher- Dear H, save them! And you're making me understand that if I don't Don't separate me from them, I'm not Caesar's friend!

"I know the Emperor!... The duty of every honest man man, in the face of the crisis that illuminates our questions Algerian women of a sinister day, it is to tell him with as much Out of respect and courage, he was deceived. He was deceived. Your Excellency yourself ' . .

and it is to the very origin of the conquest that the system I'm talking about. Because Bishop Pavy, the successor of Bishop Dupuch, the first bishop of Algiers, "was no more was publicly threatened with prison, and with hard labor. even*, for having collected some from the mud of Algiers little or; t>/i</windigèiies which U wanted to make into men!

The venerable superior of his major seminary was happy.

"And -while they were thus denied all freedom of apostolate, my two venerable predecessors had the pain of seeing raised at great expense of nitrates, the most tou- useless winds; to see them encouraged by subsidies schools, religious gatherings where the Fatiaism of*s was exalted natives to see the pilgrimage to Mecca made easier, carried out at the expense of the State by the Muslims of Algeria; to finally see something truly in the name of France given Incredible! Teaching the Quran to those who don't They had never known it, like the inhabitants of Kabylia. I I was supposed to see the same trials continue... »

Also, "despite the authorization I had obtained of an august benevolence, I could not succeed, because of the stubborn resistance that was put up against me, to establish my

'Monsignor of Algiers testifies loudly, moreover, and rightly so, What sincere esteem is Mr. Marshal worthy of?

* Which led to the Arab revolt and the massacre of Christians here 1

< * To which the world owed a longer and more cruel retelling of the Asian cholera.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER NINTH. 183

fresh, in Kahylie, even from imptee maUons of Sister. for distribute medicines to the natives who requested them. ments and alms!

When a terrible famine struck Algeria of corpse*' spread its ravages, I wanted to use demon right and to fulfill my duty as bishop by collecting the native orphans. I did it, but soon I heard Around me, worrying words about the future of my

who made it the sole province of Algiers, for the widows and Arab orphans, a relief four or five times more costly than my concerns were soon confirmed by the fact that the State's situation was more complex than studies. But all doubt ceased for me when I learned that you said, at the time of the installation of the Ben- brothers Akuoun, that their work would only be transitory, that the orphans* would be claimed after the harvest by their* tribe* respectively, and that they could not be refused them; adding that, in a few months, the orphanage would be closed.

"That is to say, Marshal, that these children sans* father, an mother, abandoned* all, and delivered* to death, but regathered by me thanks to the charity of the bishops, the priests very, Christians of France, watched over, cared for at the perils of their days by our Nuns, of whom more than twenty have taken typhus among them, of which [several have already succumbed] victims of their charity, we would not have saved them, and They were saved at this price, only to have them delivered after a few months. "So much protection, so much defense, without a parent," boy* and girl," to the "beial" passions of their coreligionists! It would have been better It would have been a thousand times better to let them perish...

"To their fathers, to their mothers, I would have returned them without

1. Tolerance! Freedom of worship! Religious freedom!

2 This famine killed two hundred and seventeen thousand Arabs, and caused the death of four one and a half million head of cattle. Speech by Mr. Le Hon, after the Îrlande inquiry in Algeria, session of April 13, 1869, to the Legislative Body active.

^ Passions too well known to anyone who knows a Muslim, It fsviltfé du The Quran, this book that we took the trouble to read.

Digitized by Google

THE JEWS.

S8i

difficulty; but I am the father and protector of all those of these children whose fathers, whose mothers do not exist more. They belong to me, because of the life that animates them And yet, it was I who preserved it for them. It's strength alone. who will drag them from their refuge; and, if she drags them from it, I I will find in my heart as a bishop such sentiments that they will raise up against the perpetrators of such attacks all those who

Christians.

So, if we repeat the verbatim words of the Uni-towards Israel, the Bishop of Algiers – words that seem to have been uttered addressed to a prince of the witches' sabbath, – that is "the a piece of bread" at the price of which the "souls of orphans" belong (to the bishop) as if they had sold them to the prince of darkness, at the hour of midnight, for one play of gold I » This father of orphans rescued by him from death, and who, if they so choose, remain disciples of the Quran among his hands, "will nonetheless continue his devotion to them and his paternal care," what is it, according to the Jewish text-What? 11 is "the fiery apostle who no longer puts any a check on his unbridled intolerance;" and the dictated words through the spirit of counsel, wisdom, and strength, the words of this bishop around whom, according to the words of Mr. the marshal-chal, the entire colony presses forward, here are "the declaimersactions that reveal the most ardent religious hatred! But this fiery apostle, this Christian monster, could it not be Christ acting in the guise of a bishop?.... Yes, without Without a doubt, and Judaism has recognized it, it is Christ, it is him-even; for this tireless cry of the Jew resounded at his sight:
May this man not reign over us! Ah! "May heaven and France's lucky star will forever protect us from the domination of these people! Finally, the kidnappings of little ones Mortara, according to the Jewish expression, would they be the bishop here?
May the voice of our Jews be cursed, the pastor who gives

* Solwnushuncregnaresupernos. – Israelite Universe, X, p. 36-7, June 1868.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER NINTH. 285

his life for his sheep, white or black, or else the ravishedthose with whom Israel associates him, those who would come to snatchdear to the hands of the apostle the abandoned whom he has won on death and debauchery at the price of the blood of his priests
Very? This question, which poses itself before us in its simplicity,
And, since we were ignoring the moral qualities of Israel, we Let us pray that anyone other than a Jew will resolve it by adding this what he thinks of truthfulness, kindness, and gratitude Jewish studies.

Each religious belief is therefore recognized by its works verses, which characterize it. In other words, and we re-We will fart incessantly, one of the most important truths in this world, but which is always forgotten, is this:

Supported by the sword, the religion of Muhammad, despite the splendid maxims with which the Quran adorns itself, is the religion of a breeding ground of pride and libertinism! Considered in its fruits, What does it show us? A rampant license of morals, a homicidal fatalism that undermines the laws of common sense and pro-social sandstone; a fierce despotism, a savage contempt for the life of man; contempt for the subject, contempt for the weak, contemptuous of the one she enslaves; contempt especially for the infidel, for this dog with a human face, a Jew, idolater or Christian, who refuses to submit his life to the law of the prophet; extermination of this dog wherever it is found profit a le faire (See note B at the end of this division), wherever his dominion threatens that of the prophet's child; contempt still for women, soulless beings, and not the companion but also the servant of man, one of his instruments of debauchery! impossible civilization, in a word, barbaric. Doctrinal and practical baria!

However, the same spectacle can be seen among the Jew of strict orthodoxy. Talmudic. Its religious law is a law of exclusion and of hatred; but he will not flee from you; no, for he lives by You. His eye absorbs you and his wisdom devours you; you are his fat. Theft, usury, plunder, are one of his

Digitized by Google

186

THE JEWS.

Religious right over the Christian; for the non-Jew is not before his face that a simple, unskilled brute possesses; and, For the Jew, the property that this brute unties is the Theft. No law requires him to respect property, no respect for the life of this infidel, and often it is even the 'contrary'. Whether you call him or push him away, You can always count on having him as a neighbor; but that you persecute him or let him bend under the weight of your kindness, you will never have him as your neighbor; he will never be your will stand for his equal! In short, the anti-doctrine social. The Talmudic scholar is the death of Christian civilization. yours, and these pages show only too clearly in what an insufficient measure, even the second one from the one who Talmud differs, in her affections and sympathies, from her Father! Such is the depth of the traces left in the nature of peoples, the habits of their religious faith.

The Christian law, on the contrary, is a law of union. of love and brotherhood. She makes pride a crime for him. hatred is a crime; and humility, the source of its virtues, pitiless, holds the one it penetrates within reach of the last of the men. Every man, regardless of what he believes, regardless Whatever he may be, he is his neighbor, which means his brother; and his religious life is a life of devotion that places him at service of all his possessions, his knowledge, his intelligence, his heart and his life;

It is true that not every sincere Christian has perfection. of his law, of his rule of life, just like any orthodox Jew doxe, and tara t'en faut, ne charge pas ses actes des enormities of the Talmud; but every serious Christian applies each day to bring its daily deviations closer to the supreme rectitude of his rule of faith; and great men of Christianity, its saints, heroes of devotion to the most of them are a true marvel of moral beauty, the uni- What a marvel that Heaven could envy Earth. Their faith They are what they are, and nothing should seem more natural.

* See above and below.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER NINTH.

281

because no one could imagine a principle of ehirilization which n'emanc de la loi trétieuiJe, heir de la ldi de Moïse.

But after allowing ourselves to follow for a few
Let's not dwell on thoughts that stray from our topic; let's hurry.
to go back in.

NOTE.

The Jews themselves gave us documents which would become valuable in a serious investigation. Thus we read these words in use of their reviews, concerning Morlara the father, accused of having made Ekretian:

What! Mr. Mortara, – "he who called upon your protection, to the sympathy of universal Judaism, and traveled to Paris, London, where he obtained from noble and generous coreligionists

Crime of Bologna; Mr. Morlara, having thus, in the name of his evil-
He, exploiting the charity and holy brotherhood of the Israelites, would have committed
A shameful betrayal? No, we don't believe it, we don't want Not believing it 1 Human perversity has not yet reached this far-there I » Israelite Universe, VU, p. 294-S; 1867.

"The universal Israelite Alliance, the Israelite churches tell us, has received a legacy of 25,000 francs from Sir Scott, whose executor is Baron Arthur de Rothschild, in London." Now, this lord, this gentleman-man, was a pseudonym; he was simply a Jew named Blumenthal, who "fought under Garibaldi, received a wound, which
This earned him the rank of officer, along with the decoration of the Italian order.
(cross of Saint Maurice, etc.); he was a zealous Israelite, an ardent defender of our cause. During Garibaldi's expedition in 1860, he had de-asked the general for permission to go to Rome, with some companions Men disguised as Capuchin friars, to kidnap young Mortara. It was by Due to an unforeseen departure, this attempt could not take place. Sir Scott (that Jew) liked to do good under the veil of anonymity... Ra-Nowadays, one doesn't flaunt one's name in such circumstances.
stances. » (Sic, for we do not correct this style!) Israeli Archives-lites, p. 394-2, May 4, 1867. – See in a thousand places the cries of Hatred of the Jew against Rome. Ibid., Arch. isr., p. 9, 44, 45, etc., 4 Janvier 4869.

NOTE.

Let me sum up. Marshal. Basically, Your Excellency
He levels two accusations at me, and both will be the greatest honor.
of my life. One is having raised the first one, and a little too much, according to

Digitized by Google

288

•the Jews.

you, the funereal veil that hid from the eyes of France the misfortunes of Algeria. If it's a crime, it's mine, etc." – Read more, and what We omitted from this admirable letter. The system followed up to this day, and which was so favorable to the Quran, did it have a political result? Re-Answer: "You were telling me that in the event of a European war we wouldn't be able to one cannot count here on the loyalty of twenty natives, in the presence of a insurrection. What to make of this result? – Morally, they have taken our vices, without acquiring any of our qualities, etc., etc."

Bishop de Lavigerie also wrote to the Gazette du Midi on May 11th, a letter made public, in which we read, among other things, this sentence:

Otia society; unanimous wishes of the settlers of my diocese, and which I desire with them the modification of a system that stifles all life by suppressing—"stifling all initiative and all freedom." – Following this letter, we Let us read in the Gazette du Midi: "It is time to know who is in charge" in our colony? Is it the public authority, or a power-occult activity? Is it the head of state?... or is it this deployment? a centralized area populated by former Saint-Simonians, and by Turks disguised as Frenchmen, led by a tenebrous influence... breuse, but predominant, a man who had converted to Islam, and whom the Algerian press refers to as the Renegade. We know too well well in Algeria all that this active and multifaceted influence... has done to paralyze the hoped-for results of the Emperor's last voyage-reur, etc. » f. Roux, and Monde, May 15, 4868.

'Among them, some very eonuus Jews.

NOTE A.

If we place some faith in the word of a Pope, who speaks in In broad daylight, in the midst of a whole people witnessing his actions, we We shall judge by the following address what Pius IX had to suffer from interference from the diplomacy of certain governments led by the Jews. And what would these governments say if the Pope, in the name of the justice, and no longer an arbitrary liberalism, placed itself in their States, through their diplomats, are leading the reforms. more legitimate?

11 This is a circumstance in which the young Edgard Mortara himself he steps forward at the head of his seminary classmates, who have delegated him to offer Pius IX the homage of a small gift. The Pope accepts it, and, without making the slightest allusion against the Jews, instigators of All the diplomatic commotion he is about to report, he reminds the young baptized himself, the incessant calumnies of which his Christian upbringing Yours became the pretext: "You are very dear to me, my son, because that I acquired for you for Christ at a very great price. – You You cost me a hefty ransom! – Because of you, a riot! universal hatred has erupted against me and against this Apostolic See.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER NINTH.

289

gcuvernemeiits and peoples, the powerful of this world and the day- The nationalists, who are also the powerful figures of our time, have declared war on me.

to have their ministers write diplomatic notes. All this because do you. I'll leave out the kings. I only want to mention the insults, slander, and your curses uttered by a crowd countless ordinary people who seemed indignant at this that God has given you the gift of his true faith by drawing you out of the darkness of death, in which your family is still plunged. – We complained especially the fate that would have befallen your parents because you had You have been regenerated by holy Baptism, and you have received instruction That which it pleased God to grant you. – And no one, however – and do not complain of me, I, the Father of all the faithful, to whom the schism snatches thousands of children from Poland, or seeks to corrupt them by its pernicious teaching. – The peoples, as well as the governments fall silent as I cry out, moaning about fate. of this part of the flock of Jesus Christ, ravaged by thieves in broad daylight. – No one moves to run to the father's aid and "of her children!" (At Sainte-Agnès, April 12, 1867.)

More far-sighted and more loyal than his blind coreligionists, the The famous financier Mires gave the Israelites, his brothers, some advice that wisdom and genius had dictated to him. It was to declare himself haughty, not the unjust and implacable accusers, but the grateful and generous defenders of the Sovereign Pontiff, reduced to hoist the flag of alarm and distress on the ship of the Church. "In my opinion," he shouted at them, "the emancipation of the Jews in France..." creates duties that they cannot break without harming their own safety; these duties are dictated by patriotism, for this patriotism corresponds to the general interest."

"The republicans of 1848 had perfectly understood that extended political power became the property of the proletariat for everyone. For me, universal suffrage in permanent form is the strength legalized; and I cannot forget that, on the day when force commands, the right has perished. It is this dominant feeling in my mind that has attached to the temporal power of the Pope, although belonging to the Jewish community! Also, by defending the right represented by the temporal power of the Popes, do I presume to defend at the same time time society and my coreligionists j>

"I consider this power to be the last bulwark of societies modern. And if, by the will of the proletariat, decorated with this great name With universal suffrage, it becomes lawful to wrest from the papacy its possessions ten centuries old, this same right, this very legality, will necessarily extend to all properties, as soon as the interest of the most a large number will demand it, that is to say, as soon as it is claimed that it demands it

- Israeli Archives, IX, p. 390. May 1868.

^ Mr. Mirés does not feel the Israelite opinion, but malticur to those who imitate him! Read rUn mers israél., VI, p. 286, February 1867.

*90

THE JEWS.

Woe then to the minorities! Whether these minorities are civil or religious...
"Greedy, they will all succumb."

And Jews are a minority everywhere.

The despotism with ten thousand heads will treat them like slaves elsewhere
One-headed despotism. Let's link one example, among thousands, of the latter.

A letter was written to Nouvelle Presse libri on July 20, 1868:
The Russian government continues to work in Lithuania, and Even in Poland, there was the extirpation of Catholicism. He was trained in this.
effect of the commissions intended to transform Catholic churches in schismatic churches, and to convert the population with the knout, as needed. However, Russian fire is not content with the persecut of a single confession, and it now attacks another religion widely represented in the country, that is to say the religion of jifive.
All Russian newspapers are filled with the most violent invectives.
whose sound is as follows: "Throughout all of Russia, it is necessary that all the inhabitants should be Russians. A true Russian can only be schism-matic, Leaving aside the fact that Jews are distinguished from Russians because of their detestable and impious religion, they must, for others reasons, to be considered enemies of Russia

"On the other hand, Jews are very dangerous for us in Poland," and even more dangerous than the Poles, because they possess the most of the capital, because they are in their hands the future economic development of the country, and finally because they show more attachment to the Poles than to us. That one So let's drive them out of Poland! We must relegate the Jews to the the most remote provinces, in the midst of the pure Russian lands of the empire, beyond Moscow, Kazan, for example, and that one attracts Russian merchants to Poland and Lithuania instead of Jews. In the event that this proves difficult, or impossible, then one should force the Jews to give up commerce, and transform them into workers and as farmers. The Russian newspaper of Saint Petersburg, Viedomosti, is the most moderate of all, and he expresses himself thus; "We can and We must hate and despise the Jews. We must reject this "Brood of the world, but how?"

"Meanwhile, the Jews of Wiliia have fallen into such a pau-

Russians (Wiedomosti, Wiestnik, Golos, etc.) rejoice in such facts and they cry out; "The Jews will perish on their own if, little by little, they are..." take away their possessions and belongings. They must be made into beggars; In this way we can be certain that they will Russify themselves.

"These are the true aims of the Mongols. We will stop there; this What we have said is enough to build the world on tolerance Russian. – Don't the Jews find [a lesson in these lines] a lesson? tolerance and justice?

* The cure of M, Mii'cn to Ai. Cuclicvai-Clariyii, dat^{lc^tl} in chief of the Press, 9 iioveni)>rc 1806.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER NINTH. 2^4

NOTE B.

B In Europe, there is too much of a tendency to ignore ingrained hatred Muslims against all those who do not share their religion, and especially against Christians. Today, the power lies with Christianity. They feel they would be ostracized and stripped of all benefits. of the law of nations, if they did not conceal the spirit that animates them; and when their ferocity is occasionally reflected in a few These acts that horrify Europe (the massacres in Syria, etc.), They hasten to disavow them, and public opinion explains them too easily by this tendency towards cruelty which unfortunately persists—secularization deep within the most civilized races. When we have surprised the Muslim in his private life; when we saw him act when he believed beyond the reach of the European public opinion that weighs upon him, obsesses him, and in fact this cunning, shrewd, disdainful, lavish being and arrogant, who misleads so many of our fellow believers, and the lured by the hope of their transformation, we are convinced that its Even the smallest acts are inspired by an implacable fanaticism, and one does not is more surprised that, in this struggle without witnesses, in the center of Africa that he dared to attempt to erase Christianity by stopping the generation throughout a whole country populated by so many millions of men," that is to say, that he introduced the custom of "practicing eviration on "The enemy on the ground," (Pouze ans dans la haut Ethiopie, par M. Arnauld) d'Abbadie, l. 1", p. 224; Paris 1868. Excellent and very remarkable a work written by one of our most seasoned travelers and investigators eminent.)

According to the Quran for the Muslim, and according to the Talmud for the The Jew, the Christian, is a brute whom it is meritorious to get rid of. The Quran is therefore the greatest imaginable obstacle to civilization. to the fusion of races, to the union of the Arab with the Frenchman, with the Christian I is the sword; his paradise on earth and in heaven is possession pleasures; in other words, his happiness lies in these words; Divorce, polygamy, atrocious and murderous debauchery. – In short, the supreme principle with which the Quran fills the mind and heart of His disciple is met with contempt, hatred, and death to anyone who refuses to be with Muhammad. The result of his policy, within the empires that They created his immense conquests for him; it was a deadly thickness of ignorance, a vile degradation, the scoundrel, the extermination (of our days even in Syria) and the depopulation of flourishing regions channeled in deserts. Therefore, wherever the Quran has reigned, our eyes... demonstrate that his follower has become not a civilized man read, but a destroyer of civilization, a barbarian; and, to favor the doctrine, belief, which makes this man what he is, is to favor barbarity. -- That is why, in the session of July 16-17, 1868 of the Legislative Body, one of the most progressive men in the opposition, Mr. Favre said to the Minister of State: "You must not make yourself

19.

Digitized by Google

292

THE JEWS.

"Preaching Rio religion, and especially the Muslim religion!" Words of High reason! And yet the minister let it fall from the top of the French tribune, this frigid response:

The Honorable Mr. Jules Favre is convinced that children raised in Muslims study the Quran and draw lessons from it. morality and respect, which are written there in lofty words and in great thoughts. Societies that are not founded on grand principles moral principles would not last long, and Muslim society has occupied a large part of the earth. We must not have such disdain; and when I am interrupted to be told that I must teach the Muslim populations civilization, allow me to respond to say that societies do not transform in a few days, under the the more or less vehement words of some orators, and that it is necessary to Time, labor, daily effort, for a nation that is sunk in granite within its institutions, it can be gradually merged, transformed and absorbed by a new civilization. (That's true! – Very good! Very good!

A new civilization, we are told. The law of the sword and of fate. So, was Islam the law of a civilization? Islam and civilisation had, until that day, continued to mistake itself for both

Algeria has been denuding for almost forty years, because, under the regime of freedom of conscience, we are finally beginning to allow to the civilizers of Christianity "daily labor and effort" necessary to transform these granite barbarians into living members of an honest civilization. Undoubtedly driven by excellent intentions, Mr. Minister of State, this man endowed with such great intelligence, would speak in a completely different language, and would not have the Jews as auxiliaires, if he knew the Quran a little better, the little catechism of Catholics, the history of European civilization, and history so badly and so little known to the Church.

SECOND DIVISION. – NEW MORALITY, NEWS MORALITIES.

Continued. – Social qualities of the Jew. – Recognition. – Mr. Mirés; his advice to the Jews not to touch the gold of the Church, and to him To show some gratitude. – A clever reply, and fury. Bitter reproaches about the appalling tyranny that marred them Tyre's rise in the ghettos. – A work intended to convey all the Jews out of the abominable city of Rome; results. – What is the Ghetto? – Refutation of the Jew by the descriptions tions or the words of Mr. Thiers, former minister; – of Mr. Sauzet, former president of the Chamber of Deputies; – of the anti-Catholic Mr. Renan, of the Institute; – from Mr. Bail, patron of the Jewish cause. – Refutation of the Jew by the most remarkable declaration of their most large assembly in modern times. – What the Jew owes to The Church; a curious and admirable piece. – The Jew's ease, even freed from the constraints of the Talmud, to deny the word of his representatives sentiments. – This word was for him nothing but a ruse of war, he owes nothing but hatred to the Church and the papacy. – Acts of the Popes and of the Roman clergy, selfless defenders and protectors of the Jew; They guarantee him a freedom for his worship that so many governments... ments refuse even to Catholics today. – The most impla- Will the enemy cable of the Jew paint us any better than he does himself? Even today, his horror of any truth that hurts him, his Hereditary hatred for the Christian? – The Jew who paints himself in his pages, such as we quote them, is there a man that civilization can confess? – Exceptions. – Notes. – The Avignon Ghetto. – The ghetto (tre ghetti); that of Rome.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER NINTH. 293

We have just exhibited without staging or display. of sentences, that is to say, quite simply, what is, in In 1868, the Jew's stance in the face of historical evidence: his of Christian virtue—let us now ask the reader to—perhaps arrived a little less naive, a little less liberal the place of the Jew, to declare to us to what extent approximate time he judges that the spirit of gratitude na-turel to civilized peoples must eventually heat up and rani-sea the heart of this man. But in order to facilitate the blow From the observer's point of view, let's focus their gaze on the wall.

of the Roman Ghetto, let us first recall a fact;

After offering the Jews the advice that his high intelligence, to no longer be blind destroyers but the conservatives of papal power, Mr. Mirés, continuing to advocate for the recognition and prudence, urged the Jewish bank to put a stop to his ardent desires, and to refuse the plunderers the clergy of Ilalia the support of its financial industry and its power. Respect yourself; respect your nation; do not soil your hands with this gold....

From this gold? What! Us? Us? replied emphatically Judaism, soiling our hands by touching gold of the Christian priesthood, on the gold of the Church? Thus, "according to this unexpected champion of Israel's security,... all of Israel—
He would be required to remain uninvolved in the financial operation.

Digitized by Google

THE JEWS.

m

candle concerning a government that papal Rome treats as an enemy...; Mr. Mirès to defend... against the bankers Israelites, the interests of the Jews, "to remind them of the injustice and centuries-old disapproval of which we have been victims, for to encourage them not to give it any further hold! There is something there—
What a farcical thing... Recognition, said Mr. Mirés,
It links us to the Popes, to Pius IX, who abolished the Ghetto.
That's what people aren't afraid to say after the scandal of The Mortara affair!.... »

Recognition? Oh! Oh! Those who hold this lan-They forget that "the benefits have been counterbalanced by"
the persecutions; they speak of the Ghetto, but the Ghetto Doesn't it still exist in Rome*?... a

Indulging his sarcastic wit against the Israelite who dares that the Revolution offers him, and proclaim aloud the debt of Israel's recognition of the Sovereign Pontiffs, the Jewish Review, before her this cry of alarm and horror reurs: Can you hear it? "An Israelite pleads the case of our deadliest enemies! Ah! what Mr. Mirés wants, "ap-belonging to the Jewish community, it is the perpetuation of maintenance-

The horrific tyranny of the Roman Ghetto on our poor brothers, their unspeakable suffering, their hu-Militia, their martyrdom. That is what an Israelite pen dares to write. defend it in the face of Israel and the civilized world! Ah! Mr. Mi-res, if you were treated in Paris the way our people are treated under the rule of the Roman priests!... if, instead of a A splendid house, you were given a tiny room as your dwelling.
miserable and harmful, sunless and airless, on the edges infected and cursed of the Tiber,... if we made your children living corpses, doomed from birth to misfortune and In times of decline, you might sing less of glory.
persecutors of your brothers*.*

' .^Irc/iees Israélites, XI, p. 489, June 1867.

"Archives israélites, II, p. Si, January 15, 1867.

* Israelite Universe, IV, pp. 149-159; 1866. This song in praise of the

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER NINTH.

*95

To desert Rome, to flee Babylon which devours him, that is So, now, if we were to believe the word of the Jew, there is runic hope, there is the imperious preoccupation passion of panting Judaism; and in its most strident voice
He denounces her to the world; he is astonished by her grievances, he Hey, ÉlouUrdit, he's sharing the echoes of Europe; he goes further: the care, the duty to tear oneself away from this odious SejouUf becomes his dream, his work; and this work which could be viable Because what despair and desolation the Roman Jew had been... hand, born amidst an agitation as violent as it is factice. .But let us listen to the Jew himself, and let knowledge Some things precede our judgment:
Our project to gather the necessary resources for that the Israelites of Rome could leave this territory abo-Minablé was favorably received everywhere. Subscriptions Isolated, opened up by newspapers, would produce very little.

But let the Universal Israelite Alliance get to work, and Success is not in doubt. However, it will be necessary to send two competent men in Rome to study the situation to establish the statistics and calculations, to stop the routes and means, and to ensure that when the time comes all our coreligions-Roman soldiers, without exception, will emerge from this sinister city. Without missing the fish of the Tiber! This will be the event! "most glorious in modern Jewish history"

And while thus [tarlail the conservative leaf of the jupersecutors is in fact just the advice not to get their hands dirty of gold stolen from its masters. And those foul and cursed banks of the river of the Eternal City, where the royal people lived so proudly. Who will you there? chained? And this appalling tyranny that makes your children from Living dead, who forces you to endure it? But why your Would Plume commit herself to more justice and truthfulness towards your The great Pontiffs of Christianity, who earlier addressed the ark-Bishop of Algiers, the apostle of Algeria? See examples of this unleashed-Current movement of the Jews against the Pope, fb.. Israelite Universe, XII, p. 554; 1867, etc., etc.

'L'Univers israélite, 20th year, p. 5.5; September 1864. - These The lyrics already tell us what an effect machine this work is, and this who will emerge from this bloating.

Digitized by Google

i96 THE JEWS.

Daism, that of progress, spoke to us in this way: "The proposal that we made in our issue of September, to put an end to the situation really intolerable for the Israelites who were still papal subjects, he found It resonated with generous hearts. It earned us letters and observations... such as the following: "I app-fully proves your idea of a universal subscription for mass expatriation... »

To get Israel out of the Ghetto, out of the papal prison, out of the cloister-Roman, that's the word; that's it, those who virtue would say The Jew should not be left without suspicion, the setup for to astonish the simple and to cause outrage against the Holy See... But "this event, the most glorious in Israelite history "modern" was bound to lead to abortion... We knew it. This was the desired outcome in the Jewish camp, and the Archives Israelites of September 15, 1864, told us; "The recent convention that is of great concern to all of Europe at this time phante) will probably render the execution of the project useless that we have conceived. We will congratulate ourselves on it; but we must 'Wait before making a decision.'

Israel will therefore remain in this Rome, which its mouth... said, which inspires only anger and blasphemy in writers Jewish, but that would be his terror and desolation to hear himself proscribed. It will remain in the Ghetto, if he does not pre-attach another part of the city to this enclosure, morally and legally removed, although its wall continues. like Rome itself, standing tall. But what is it, After all, the Ghetto, that place of curse and dead; this name before which Israel, raising its voice, wants to shame the Israelite who pleads in favor of Roman pontiffs, the recognition of his brothers?

' PS'is-g. - And already, the following month, this urgent subscription, universal, an enterprise "to do great things," rises- amounted to the redeeming figure of three hundred and forty-three francs... of <iuoi transport and appalrier ailleurs tiuelque cho.se comme un quart of a Jew! P. 913.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER NINTH. 297

One word says it all: the Ghetto is a district of Rome. and its very special purpose is to be inhabited by the Jews. No Christian has the right to settle there, and no In ancient Rome, Jews had no right to settle elsewhere.

Ultimately, it was a kind of feudal stronghold. or rather pregnant. Affected abroad of Jewish race habitu- both the city of Rome, that is to say, to the Roman Jew. Each evening, and whenever a sedition seemed to be feared, The door to this place closed and protected the Jew from the anger, often very justified, of the Christian, at the same time that she was protecting the Christian against his incursions and his nighttime industries. Such is the mystery of the Ghetto-, and it- was on the condition of accepting this neighborhood as a residence enclosed, subject to some of the easements of our places of war, which foreigners of Jewish race obtained right of residence in states where the interest of the Christian, where The interests of the Jew and public order dictated to the government government the establishment of these enclosures!

But the emancipated Jew is not content with simply breaking... foot of the Ghetto wall. Once he is the equal of the Christian, he wants, and we will see, attain the object of his desires, become his puts power; and when, already victorious, he puts himself in march towards new conquests, woe to man of a state which, in order to stop its momentum, rejects the Jewish word—than through the language of experience and through the words of history. If our testimony is rejected, let us remain silent.

we, and, true to our habit of letting people do it to know for themselves, let us call upon our help the Jew's quivering mouth. Eager to open, it tells us;

Mr. Tbiers also spoke about freedom of worship in the Roman states, saying that there is a synagogue in Rome.
How can a man of good faith, a historian, a man who spent part of his life in Italy, and who saw the horror—
The table of the martyrs of the Ghetto, can it produce such a sad

Digitized by Google

2Ü8

THE JEWS.

argument, against which his conscience should have been cleared "Outrage!"

"We noted in our midst the absence in the Senate <Cun Israelite who could have responded to the incredible altermalions from several prelates regarding the unfortunate Israelites of Rome. But there are several of our own in the Legislative Body—
"Tif; what did they want from Mr. Thierry?" — Nothing! That is to say everything that needed to be answered in an assembly which several members have, as is said of Mr. Tliiér's,
"spent part of their lives in Italy" and without seeing this that the Jews see there. But one of the former presidents of our legislative assemblies, one of those famous jurists which made Rome both a second homeland and the object
a special section on comparative studies, succeeds the history torieii legislator; let's listen;

"Oii complained of a harassing and inquisitorial police force;
It is its softness, and sometimes its inertia, that one could accuse. One should be particularly astonished by the forbearance with which she suffered the schemes and the scandalous hiring—the changes of the Piernontais merchants, sheltering under pro—diplomatic actions to openly incite the subjects
The Pope revolted and his soldiers deserted.

True, enlightened, practiced tolerance, the kind that professes not the carelessness of polishing principles, but the benevolence for the personals. is potisée a Home jitsqu'ou ses dernieres limits. Everyone freely follows their beliefs and practices them accordingly. his eultet Rome was from time immemorial the tefuj of the Jews, and they the florinèrenl eux-mèiites leur pàtadis, aU moyen âge, alors que the barbarities of rigiioraiee persecuted them mercilessly— Rome still offers today an impressive This people, in their faith, has a protective shelter, a people enmity in their faith. Home itself, a synagogue and a neighborhood where he can force the owners of the houses to receive him; and yet he has the freedom (tell him to go out and live in the rest of the city. He then held himself

'Israetile Universe, p. 416; November 1864.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER NINTH. SW

qu'k observe the general rules of the religious police of the city, from which he is free as long as he remains in the fiiübourgq which forms its domain^ It is the use of the numerous blends of Pius IX that the abolition of several obstacles, VMiHi loüt-dts however, those which still weighed on the Jews beginning of this century, at the center of the civilizations tattoos. If he was able to stay at the bottom (the certain laws some vestiges of former severity; which still survive in cer— certain times to the very texts that have been destroyed, or can rely on the benevolent wisdom that did the work {turn to complete it generously. Nothing will be refused of what will reconcile civil liberty rights with respect for independence "the weak and vital of the Catholic faith"

What can be said, amidst these mournful howls of the Jew Against the appalling tyranny that Rome exercises over its brothers, the martyrs of the Ghetto, subjected to unspeakable suffering, and CeS calm, serious, and even more explicit statements than those of Mt Thiers; and that he does not hesitate to develop k the face of the world, one of the most independent men France, one of the most respected men in Europe From the dual perspective of intellectual and moral merit! What To say? To remain silent, we who also know this city Rome, which everyone knows today, and leave to speak; after Mr. Thiers and Mr. Sauzet; one of the most valiant auxiliaries of the Jew, one of those writers of whom the Jew has declared the admirer, for the perfectly natural reason that his The deicide feather attacks the very divinity of Christ: A stranger everywhere, as Mr. Renan rightly said, without a homeland, with no other interest than that of his sect, the Talmudic Jew (that is—fate brought it about. And if one wishes to know it, "one should consider to the Eastern Jew, etc., wicked when he is persecuted, arrogant and insolent as soon as he feels protected!... No doubt the,

'Protestants can also praise enlightened politics' of the Roman court. » Itome before Europe, by Mr. Paul Sauzel, former president of the Chamber of Deputies, pp. 301 to 308, 3rd ed. in-12, J. Lecoffre; Paris, 1866.

Digitized by Google

300 THE JEWS.

'the detestable social organization of the Orient, since the second half of the Middle Ages, is the primary cause of this evil; but The spirit, which I would readily call Talmudic, is also there For many, the Ghetto regime remains a disastrous one. However, the practices of Pharisaism and Talmudism made "This regime of confinement is a necessity for the Jewish people!"

One of the lawyers for the Jewish cause, Mr. Bail, whose school is so different from ours, therefore, only a few years ago still born, lacking in sincerity, if, in his book written in favor of the Jews, he would not have spoken in this way: in Rome moreover The latter offers a remarkable spectacle... She sets an example gentleness and fairness, and the Jews of Italy demand themselves, his mediation with the utmost confidence. In Throughout history, the Roman states were their refuge, and the The Popes were the first to teach the tolerance of which they are the apostles*.

Perhaps we are already cruelly abusing the obvious?

One word, however, remains for us to say; for, when it comes to the gratitude that the Jews owe to the Roman Pontiff, that they overwhelm with their most bloody and crude calumny Denied ever since misfortune befell Rome, not a word could not be equivalent to that of the largest Jewish assembly modern times addressed in official terms not only— It lies to the papacy, but to the Christian priesthood. What the The Jews themselves will confirm it to us; they will not deny it. No doubt! But, who knows?... But, they open the mouth, it is up to us to be silent and to gather the words of representatives of Judaism:

"The deputies of the French Empire and the Kingdom" from Italy to the Hebrew Synod decreed on May 30, 1806, filled with gratitude for the successive blessings of the clergy

* .Archives israélites, XII, p. 534, June 15, 1868. The jlrcl'ues cite this passage while fighting it, of course!

Jews in the Nineteenth Century, p. 123, Or Considerations on their civil status, 2nd ed.; Paris, 1816. See note A, at the end of the chap.

Digitized by Google

301

CHAPTER NINTH.

various states of Europe; full of gratitude for the welcome that various Pontiffs (Popes) and several others Church officials have done this to the Israelites at different times. from various countries, while barbarity, prejudice and ignorance The united French persecuted and expelled the Jews from the region. companies; stop the expression of these feelings will be recorded in today's minutes, so that it remains forever as an authentic testimony of the grace-, study of the Israelites of this assembly for the benefits that) the generations that preceded them received from the eccle-j siastics from various European countries. They also stop,/ that a copy of these sentiments will be sent to His Excellency,^ the Minister of Religious Affairs.

This ruling was adopted following a very remarkable speech. <|uablcl of Mr. Avigdor (Isaac Samuel), deputy in the assembly Israelite by the Alpes-Maritimes. We extract from it the Next passage - "The most famous Christian moralists" defended the persecutions, professed tolerance, and preached fraternal charity. Saint Athanasius, book 1", says;

"It is a despicable heresy to want to draw oneself by force, through beatings, through imprisonments, those whom we could not convince through reason." - "Nothing is more contrary to religion, says Saint Justin Martyr, that the con- train. (Book V.) Etc., etc., etc.

"It is as a result of these sacred principles of morality that, At different times, the Roman pontiffs protected AND WELCOMED IN THEIR STATES the persecuted and expelled Jews from various parts of Europe, and that the clergy of all countries have often defended them in several states of this part of the world. Around the middle of the seventh century, Saint Gregory defended the Jews and protected them throughout the Christian world. In the tenth century, the bishops of Spain the minutes of the sessions of the French Assembly of Deputies.

practicing the Jewish religion, p. 169 et seq. At Desenne's, 1 vol. in-8°. Paris, 1806.

Digitized by Google

302

THE JEWS.

opposed the powerful energy to the people who wanted the to massacre. Pope Alexander II wrote to his bishops a letter full of congratulations for wise conduct that they had held on this subject; and, in the eleventh century, the Jews, in very large numbers in the dioceses of Uzès and of Clermont, were powerfully protected by the bishops.
Saint Bernard defended them, in the twelfth century, from the fury of the crusaders. Innocent II and Alexander III protected them also manage. In the thirteenth century, Gregory IX preserved, both in England and in France and Spain, of the great misfortunes with which they were threatened; he defended, under penalty of excommunication, to compel their conscience and to disrupt their celebrations. Clément Y did more than protect them, He further facilitated their means of instruction, and Clément VU granted them asylum in Avignon, while they were being persecuted throughout the rest of Enropc'.

"But the people of Israel, always unhappy and almost always oppressed, never had the means or the opportunity to to express gratitude for benefits; recognize—
His birth was all the sweeter to witness because he owed it to...
Selfless men, and doubly respectable. Since eighteen centuries, the circumstance in which we find ourselves is the only one who came forward to publicize the feelings—elements with which our hearts are filled This great and fortunate—fortunate circumstance, which we owe to our august and Immortal Emperor, is also the most suitable, the most beautiful, like the most glorious, to express to the philanthropists troops from all countries, and nolanmenl to the clergy.
Our complete gratitude to them and to their predecessors.
Let us therefore hasten, gentlemen, to take advantage of this memorable era; and let us pay them this just tribute of re-knowledge that we owe them; let us resound in this pregnant with the expression of our gratitude, and let us show them
With solemnity, we offer our sincere thanks for the benefits

The Jews, their benefactors, because of

CHAPTER NINTH. 303

"tucctttif" which they have filled the generations that all have preceded. U

Thus speaks the most honorable orator, and the trial-
The verbal agreement ends with the words: "The assembly applauded."
to Mr. Avigdor's speech: she deliberated on its inclusion in full in the minutes, as well as the printout, and has adopted the following decree; "Such is the expression of the as-"Assembly, the official organ of the Jewish nation." Session of the Sfe-February 1807.

Here, then, is a language as noble and clear as it is aulbentic.

Honor to the loyal and numerous men, no doubt, who They held it, honor to those who maintain it! Now, this that these Israelites of yesterday affirm to us in such a generous voice will the main organs of Black Judaism dare to
To deny it today. Why not? And who knows? we said.
It was only a moment ago. If, however, someone imagines
Since we are being excessive, let us leave it to the Israelite Bedarrides.
the task of clearing the cloudy spot, j v-. T

..... "When all of Europe was utopian, Rome j' <• ■ preached charity and gave examples of gentleness' ( towards those who were outside the fold of the Church. This 'i.' t It's not that the Holy See has ever proclaimed liberty.
religious practices. The Popes welcomed Jews into their states, but it was always with the back-pcnséc to convert them to Christianity. In this respect, Rome is today what that it was in the Middle Ages; it tolerates Jews in under the breast, but only so that they can serve as evidence living from the truth of Christianity'; which led to saying that, if the Popes want to convert the Jews, they have an interest to leave a few of them*.

'There would therefore be proof of this truth, in the eyes of the Jews!

® The Jews in France, in Italy, etc., p. 423, 2nd ed.; Paris, 1864.
J. Podarride, former president of the bar association, Imperial Court of Mont-Pellier, Knight of the Legion of Honour, Mayor of Aix, etc. See his eulogy by Mr. Borély, former Attorney General at the Court of Aix, his

Digitized by Google

304

THE JEWS.

To leave a few Jews standing, and to preserve a t'rhanthe foundation of the Jewish nation, such was, according to the language of Israel, the purpose of the Church's apparent benevolence; and the well-deeds of these Popes, which the solemn assembly just now the Sanhedrin thanked in such vivid terms, they did not extend This is a point at the heart of the limits of this religious selfishness! We let us see how easily recognition is denied in the Jew himself who broke free from the bonds of orthodoxy Talmudic; we see with what ease he denies his own word: the official word of those to whom he affirms, if necessary
Let the mouth express its thoughts, the wish of its heart!
This, in short, is the kind of man who was one of the eminent men.
Judaism measures the heart and the charity of the Popes.

But let's not imagine we're done with it, with such appreciators, for words of such cruel drynessresse-, let us not imagine that this language is the only one that would cause the calculations of ingratitude to resound against the Church:
No, and these sentiments are erupting from all sides in Israel.
hateful towards the representatives of the Savior of mankind, against those leaders of the Christian priesthood who were in the throughout the ages, the protectors and saviors of the nation Jewish. One of the French organs of this nation returns 'a the charge on the same point, and we will follow it with an attentive-sustained tion, because each of these traits is a character trait-Jewish territory.

It is said that "Israel owes gratitude to the Papacy."
for having welcomed him when so many depopulated peoples had banished him.
Nousniom this recognition. The Popes tolerated, desired the Jews in Rome, to have living trophies within them and eternal, to show, in their abjection and their evil-hours, a striking proof of triumphant Christianity; for to teach princes and peoples that we do not have the need to treat Jews like other men, and that the Divine law: Love your neighbor as yourself, it is not for them
Not applicable. Because if the Popes had acted out of humanity.

CHAPTER NINTH.

305 out of religious or social duty, would they have dealt with or left

"To treat Jews with such cruelty and violence?"

"The Jews owe no more gratitude to the Papacy, that the prisoner owes nothing to his jailer. No doubt the meeting of prominent Jewish figures in Paris in 1807, a demonstration in praise of several Popes, and recalled their benevolence towards the Jews; but wasn't it unique—how to determine Catholics worldwide to to stop oppressing our brothers, and not to proclaim facts whose authenticity is so questionable?

"The demonstration by the notables was a political act"
of great skill'... »

What? It's the Jews themselves who want us to compel 'to see in the act of justice and recognition—session which we honor to the representatives of their nation, but an act of cunning and deceit! Their word is No doubt about it, definitely. Well, after lending it to them the ear, let us allow two acts of the Papacy to tell us with some developments if there is more accuracy in the sad and ignominious interpretation of these Jews that in the simple and noble declaration of the great Hebrew synod.
We will choose, in order to give pride of place to the friends of the Jewish nation, two periods considered barbaric.

The Jews, during the first three crusades, "had had to fear or to suffer; in the fourth, they were tranbowling pins. Pope Innocent III took them into consideration in the year 1216.
an order... which shows us his conviction on the genuine relations between Jews and Christians. They are in Indeed, he said, the living witnesses of the true Christian faith yours. But the Christian must not exterminate them, nor even oppress them, so that he himself does not lose the knowledge of the law... Although they prefer to persist in the hardening of their hearts, rather than seeking k to understand the secrets of their law, and to achieve the con-
The birth of Christ, they nonetheless have a right to our pro-

'Israelite Universe. Vit, p. 193–1; 1867.

e*

Digitized by Coogl

306

THE JEWS.

Uction. Thus, as they call for our help, we... let us take under the aegis of our protection... And, according to ks traces of our predecessors of happy memory: of Calixte, of Eugene, Alexander, Clement, and Celeslin, we Let us forbid anyone to force a Jew into baptism, for He who is forced into it is not supposed to have faith. But, if he consents to receive it, provided no one obstructs it.
No Christian should allow themselves to commit acts of violence against with regard to them', nor to seize their property, or to change Their customs without legal judgment. Let no one... disturbance during their holidays, either by hitting them, or by throwing stones at them; and that no one impose pen-in these days works that they can do in other times * .

'Assault and insults were and still are common practice against the Jew in a large part of the vast states where the Quran reigns.
We have abolished these heinous abuses in Algeria.

The Church therefore respects their religious days more than they do.
themselves, for they no longer even observe the Sabbath day.
Christians who insulted Jews in this way were, moreover, only doing their return the favor. Read the following as an example: when the Jews "met those among them who had converted, they insulted them, and often even chased them away with stones.
to assassinate them." Constantine, I. i, Cod. Th. De Judrris. – "... De-Jews are forbidden to mix anything in their festivals and entertainments.
comments that were offensive to the Christian religion and especially burning

"to erect a cross at their feast of Mardorhea." Law of 40a, Honorins and Theodosc. – On the prohibition "of Jews appearing in public, nor of opening the doors and windows of their houses on Good Friday and in the Easter time, because they were accustomed, at that time, to insulting to the piety of Christians." The profits from usury had "made them insolent. They affected, in order to insult Christians, to look at them, the Holy Week, more magnificently dressed than usual, and of the
to spend time celebrating; and on the contrary, they appeared sad and to cease this scandal by a (saying of the year 33), which forbade the Jews from to pray in public during the holy season of Passiontide and at Easter. II They also forbade having any Christian servants or slaves... * Pope Innocent III wrote "that he was informed that suffering was taking place in France, where Jews had their children fed by women Christians, and that these unfortunate people took advantage of this to commit— This is a huge crime against our holy religion. Every time that these women received the body of Our Lord Jesus Christ, At Easter, they made them do it for the three days following the holidays. to express their milk in the latrines before breastfeeding their children children. That they committed several other abominations that it was im— Despite his efforts to put a stop to it, he finally concluded his letter with very strong

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER NINTH. 307

Those who would violate these prohibitions will be excommunicated.
equipped M »

More than a century and a half passed, and the most dreadful of scourges, the plague and its desolate procession of ills, have struck down upon the world. The plague is the element of poison; the air is poisoned, the waters are poisoned, and the poison— It's the Jews! It's these implacable enemies of the clerics; that is the cry of blind fury, the cry of murderous despair; and the Jews go out, immolated by the thousands. But above the sacred sheets that vainly greedy— Of this odious storm, there is one that dominates it; And that head, that powerful voice that soothes him, that's the head, It is the voice of the Sovereign Pontiff: "Forbidden!" cries Cle— Section VI, prohibits any Christian from attributing to the Jews crimes of which they are not guilty; prohibition against attacking their lives; prohibition against harming their property; prohibition against exercising No violence against them, no twisting, and the judges' sentence. legitimate, it is forbidden to force them to receive baptism.

The fury of the populace, momentarily calmed, reignites with the scourge; but Clement, a second time, rises*: No, the guilty parties are not the Jews; there is no proof. Their crime, but your murders are despicable. If you If caught in the act, let your courts render justice; Otherwise, let every bishop rise up, and, in the name of the Holy— From the seat, he hurls the thunderbolts of excommunication against anyone dares to harass a Jew.

Thus spoke the Church; but such were the exasperations of evil, and such had been the savage customs of Israel,

The Pope speaks as a sovereign, that is to say, outside of Avignon and express.s to Christian women to serve the Jews, either as wet nurses of their children, or otherwise, under pain of excommunication. Extract from this excellent letter of t213, which deserved to be included among the laws we read in Canon Law. » Great Treatise on the Police, vol. 1, pp. 279-250; Paria, 175.

'Innocent, Book II, Letter 302, Rohrbacher, Histoire unicerselh' de The Church, vol. XVII, plo7; Paris, 1831.

2 Halles, U'', July 4; 2', September 26, 1348.

20.

Digitized by Google

308

THE JEWS.

from the Comlat Venaissin, the murderous and vengeful furies peoples followed their course for far too long

Braving the flood of all threats, the Popes, we see seen by their words and deeds, do not limit themselves to to want to preserve safe and sound a sample of Judaism. It is not even enough for them to meet in the nation the entire Jewish community, a living witness to the truth of the Writers Catholic practices, which horrify Israel when it considers itself himself! If, as they wish, as he wished and the The Church will always want this, while respecting the laws from each Christian state that welcomes them, the freed Jews from all worry, enjoy in peace the protection of the more ample, and the serene fullness of their religious freedom-gilded; this freedom which even today most of the gu-Christian governments refuse, in the name of the principles of liberalism, to their Catholic subjects.

But the Jew posed before us; he painted himself in his word; he was not afraid to open up to us or to develop us his soul; he has, with his own hand, given us the measure of his social qualities. We will refrain from insulting him, from To qualify, and, as a simple historian, it suffices for us to pose this question: Question: Could even the most implacable enemies find... ver, to describe to us his brutal contempt for the truths that wound, his audacious war on the very truths he has words that fall back upon his flesh in sharper strokes and more cruelly soaked than those that have just formed—'sea in his mouth and to soak it in his saliva'.

In short, the nineteenth-century Jew, the one who does not

* Read the great Treatise on the Police, ibid., vol. 1, p. 280, etc. — Id. Rohr-Bacher, Universal History of Etymology, vol. XX, p. 330, etc., 1831.

2 "When the winds of the age turn to unbelief, to the persecution of the Church, as today, the Jew, forgetting the oppression under the—that he had lived so long, and the generous hand that was extended to him the Church, becomes arrogant, insolent, hateful; it fills the world with his grievances; he associates himself with all the actions hostile to the Church, and becomes, through his revolutionary intolerance, the most inconsistent of sectarians. » (Goschler, Jew by origin, German Encyclopedia, suprà, —

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER NINTH. 309

respects the Talmud, or that which comes from it, more than halfway turning their backs, but still subject to the yoke of habit national doctrines drawn from his own, is he a man who What can civilization confess? The feelings that drive it in the presence of the most obvious historical truths, or under the influence of the blessings with which he is filled, are they those of a being whose soul has been expanded and softened by civilization The heart?

Others will answer these questions if they see fit. that the facts have established. Let a portion be made, however, and as broad as possible, with exceptions, but especially in our lands; such is our invariable rule, and no habit—Our tude is no longer sweet to us.

(I. 453; 4861.) Each time the Church has its Palm Sunday, Let us then allow him to throw his clothes beneath the feet of the triumphant general and to make the echoes of her hosanna resound. But every time she takes The road to Calvary, let us be on our guard, and not be surprised no point if he spits in her face, if he hits her on the head, if he charges at her his cross, and whether he prefers Barabbas or Garibaldi. — Read jps Reviews Jewish issues concerning Garibaldi, etc.

• NOTE ON THE GHETTO.

The Church "has strongly condemned, through the Pontiffs, the furies of these cruel enmities, even though they were

did not merely wrest them from popular passions; she also... opened inviolable sanctuaries where they found safety. This is Rome who set the example of this protective charity; she conceded to Jews were given a separate quarter, and several other cities imitated the initiative.
Roman Pontiffs. Thanks to the places of refuge, the Jews lived together around their Synagogue, in accordance with their laws, under the authority of their spiritual leaders, and they had full enjoyment and the entirety of the exercise of their religion. Hence the Ghettos, whose origin is linked to a hospital-like thought that has been too often forgotten, too often slandered nowadays. Philanthropy paints a bleak picture, and laments it.
Rightly so, they are dilapidated and filthy. But we forget that they are old.
from a time when generally all cities had the same appearance.
In the Middle Ages, Christian civilization did not take pride in to transform the fragile dwellings of this world into palaces. If, with

Thanks to the progress of the century, the cities of exile have been remarkably beautified
On earth, it is not surprising that the Jews did not follow this

Digitized by Google

310

THE JEWS.

j movement.'^The ghettos remained stationary like the popu-
The practices that remained there. These were maintained by the Jews.
in their current state; it even appears that some dwellings Their dilapidated state does not displease them; for even today they prefer to others. Since the beginning of his reign, Pius I.
They placed all the districts of Rome at their disposal, and yet, they
They stubbornly refuse to leave the Ghetto, and they remain there voluntarily.
attached. The Israelites are obviously committing an injustice and a ingratitude when they rebel today against an institution
"Who saved them long ago."

* The Jewish Question, by Father Ratnbonne, a converted Israeli, pp. 16-17; Paris, 1868.
31 ps{' ,es.

< /

THIRD DIVISION. NEW MORAL, NEW

MORALITIES.

Continued. – Tolerance of the Jew; his presumptions, his presumption arising from his pride is wounded when he compares what he has been like since he stopped to believe, in what has become of Christian peoples since they lose faith. — 11 considers himself insulted by the freedoms of worship Christian. — Curious examples. — Appeals to the principles of our Revolution. — Its weights and measures were always different for him than for others. — His atrocious way of understanding freedom of religion. — His mission. — For him, freedom of worship is the destruction of Christian worship. — Loyal protests of some Israelites against this fanaticism. — A cry from Germany against savage despotism of the Jew. — Equality is no longer enough for him; he demands equality and respect. exceptional. — A curious and unprecedented example — Another example: Israel's insolence against the Emperor himself, which a moment before He called upon his angel, and why? — Another example: Christians threatened even in the heart of their ancient solemnities. — The same right would allow him to demand the closure of churches, and the suppression of the Christian name. — What the Jew is, and what he was Yesterday; immense progress, a word from Mr. Crémieux. — Duty of the Israelite to turn the very study of theology against the Church, and of the to agree with Jewish philosophy, which is that of the tenth century. — Man or idea, the Jewish Messiah is near, The peoples must fall at his feet. — "Jerusalem, city of the future." — The rationalist Klüber on the Jew, in his book On law of the German Confederation. — The theologians of Germany Magne on the Jew. — Summary of the chapter, and conclusion.

At a time when morality is declining and seems to be failing — the spiritual that the Ebrelan drew from his faith, when the faith Christian life was flourishing, the Jew felt the growing within him

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER NINTH.

year

sense of one's social value, which is rising, seeks the light and develops as the Talmudic faith dies out within him. that, a source of antisocial morality. That is why we let us see his pride grow and surpass all limits during — that he finds himself comparing what he has been like since he stopped believe, what becomes of the Catholic populations <fc — since they lose faith; since, through a just conse — As a consequence of this loss, they raise their level this a man who, day by day, makes himself their moral equal. This feeling of complacency in itself, which multiplies the The forces of the Jew, do not assert themselves or display themselves in our midst that in a way that is too sensitive; and, however little we follow — Let us keep a watchful eye on this being whose perseverance knows no bounds.

so many of his claims rise, grow, surge, and strike, by shaking it on all its shores, the ancient rock of the ci-Christian village.

A group of a few randomly chosen examples will be for us the thermometer of brutal demands which begin to take shape and become more pronounced in the camp Jewish, and which will soon astonish us too late. Yesterday
The Jew, humble and crawling, still pretended to tremble.
for the freedom of his worship, so widely respected in our kingdom; today this same Jew, the upstart of the day, he considers himself insulted by the freedom of ours. Thus,
For example, the Corpus Christi processions continue,
as in the old days, to follow their ordinary course in the city of Marseille: these Christian processions that the sultan allows them to freely develop their pious families in the streets of Constantinople. And suddenly, here is, in front of Their peaceful banners, the Jew feels threatened, rises up, rises up in protest, and in a thundering voice cries out; Halle-ik! Christian-Look! "These outward ceremonies of violent Catholicism" to our detriment the law; they often outrage and offend the senses times and even the persons of citizens belonging to k other cults." Go home then; go, seek the shade

Digitized by Google

312

THE JEWS.

of the churches, and leaves the entire width of the church free to the Jew
the public road, the pavement of your ancient most Christian kings.

Back ' 1

The law of Moses punishes with death anyone who violates the holy Sabbath day*, that is to say, whoever dares to steal from God the convert the day he has reserved into a working day
The Lord's Day. Well, this Jew we just made citizen, to make our equal, our peer, this Jew will deignwill it allow us to observe this day which must be If so sacred, *is the law of Moses his law? Will he allow the Christian-
It is important to respect this day, that liberal populations...
Protestants surrounded by such profound respect? Alas, for example, woe, on the free soil of England, to the au-daring, even if he were a prince, who, braving the public eye, would dare to desecrate through outdoor work or through revelry Worldly Sunday rest! The people, insulted in

But in France, the law that prohibits
The scandal of this work is a scandal for the Jew; it must be condemned and banished from our Codes if we want that The Jew remains silent. Thirty-eight million citizens, including
The French population comprises what is included in their ranks about seventy-four thousand Jews, of whom barely a quarter
'is concerned with observing Jewish law'. Well, of-Before this handful of men, Christian law must and

- The law of 18 Germinal, Year X, does not allow the local authority to prohibit to the Catholics the external ceremonies of worship that if some Disruption of public order is the likely consequence.
Exception, contrary example: On Sunday, June 6, 1869, in Paris, during of the Madeleine procession, at sunrise, one of the assistants braving the public, whose indignation was barely contained, he stood de-He stood at the end, his head covered, and refused to move away. A vigorous blow of his fist suddenly knocked out two of his teeth; what was this cham-
A pawn of the Holy Sacrament? A Jew, what brutality from this provocateur!
had exasperated. We admire not the swiftness of the act, but the noble movement which inspired him, and freedom of worship had on this day
An unexpected defender I – Read U World and the Law, etc., etc..., June 10, 1869.

* Exodus, XXXV, v. 2, etc.

® Read the Jewish Journals.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER NINTH. 313

French humiliates herself! To the pillory, to the stocks, this Sunday law!
"Oh!" cries Judah from the tribunes; for "our rights the most inviolable, those of our conscience and our free will as a religious minority, are violated if this law still stands!

Are we, members and, French citizens or not?
citizens of the Jewish nation? Yes, undoubtedly! Now, "if the con-freedoms in which citizens live today Today's are full and complete, how to reconcile with

"Do they believe in the existence of a law that is their living negation?"
And let no one come and tell us: But this law will be used "...with all imaginable restraint and moderation..."
– No: "there is no possible transaction or conciliation.
If we leave this law standing, it is permissible to say that the immortal principles which shine on the frontispiece of our revolution is subject to an exception, both under the rap-of equality*.

Such is the language of the man who crawled yesterday at our feet. Now, in the name of the principle of modern laws, Christian law must disappear. The Jew wants it, he demands it, because he sees it as an offense against his law religious, that very same one, he does not hesitate to tell us, that God gave it to him through the hands of Moses. It is up to us, therefore, to take a look at this day of rest among the Hebrews, to see if the Jew has the right to curse our legislation; to see what he dares in our midst, and, first, if he would find it good that the people among whom he receives the benefits of citizenship, allowing himself to be in his regard what he, a Jew, considered a duty to allow himself in his Jewish homeland, or against a man of his own race, either against the guest welcomed into the city of Moses.

The seventh day of the week, the legislator tells us

• Arch. Israel.. XVI, p. 733, 1867. – 76., XV, p. 717, 1867. – Id., Down with crucifixes in the courts, 16., XIX, p. 584, 1869.

* Archives Israélites, XVI, p. 708–9; 1866.

Digitized by Google

30 THE JEWS.

Hebrew, and we took care to remind everyone of it. the hour, "is the Sabbath day of your God. You shall not do in No work today, neither you, nor your son or daughter, nor Ion servant or your servants, nor the stranger (who has arrived) who will be within the walls of your cities. Observe my Sabbath, since he must be holy to you...; you will work during six days; but the seventh day is a Sabbath, and a day of rest consecrated to the Lord. Whoever (omnis) works this day– 'There, he will be punished with death'.

Death penalty at the seventh-day workday, that is your Faith, such is, rfi'M-eous, your law, which "is not susceptible, – and You add it today – no conversion or reform*. And, among Christians, it is you, men of the Talion, it is you who come to shout death to the dying law and so sweet, whose text is now nothing more than a mo– historical evidence of the respect the public showed yesterday still on the day of the Lord your God!* What can be said before these enormities, except that the Jew hears everything as His very particular way! Let's listen to him express himself. in all the candor of his language what should be, of worship:

"In Italy, we do not limit ourselves to practicing freedom of cults by isolated acts, unless one tramples it underfoot if the whim or self-interest demands it; it is proclaimed loudly; It forms the basis of government. The first laws that the prince regent published in the liberated provinces, have

'Bible, Exodus, 20, 10; ibid., 31, 11-15, etc., etc.

^ Israelite Archives, XVII, p. 801; 1867.

* Let us add that the Jew no longer observes, so to speak, either the laws of the ali- neither the Sabbath law, nor so many other religious laws without observing which there are no more Jews. See, in this work, the example of the violation given by those who should be ensuring the preservation of these laws: "The number of Sabbath observers is so minimal! » Israelite Universe, IV, p. 187, etc.; 1866. – Au.=si Did some in Israel try to imitate the work, unfortunately- if necessary among Christians, the observance of the day of Lord. Israelite Universe, IX, p. 388; 1867. Read /(J., 11, 1866; id., pp. 68-72, etc., etc., etc.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER NINTH.

315

The status, the suppression of religious corporations, the abo- The Concordat, the declaration of complete equality of citizens of all faiths... Following such improvements rations, it's easy to predict what our coreligionists from Veneto... They are even of the same ilk to demonstrate, immediately, that this is up to the new times, and they bring a valuable contingent to the Israelism of kingdom'.

Turning then to England, the organ of the liber- Jewish realism exclaims: "You say that humanity is "Has he reached manhood?" However, "we have not learned that London, which loves meetings, had requested the subscription Bible Society Edition*!...

And you, France, what is wearing down your courage? Because "the establishment of renegades (that is, converted Jews)" directed in Paris itself by abbots Ratisbonne and others public order. » How could it be! To leave standing in a country free from institutions that liberalism cannot acknowledge, and which horrify him! Well, we, "as long as the sun does not It doesn't shine, we cannot extinguish our torch... the The mission entrusted by God to Israel is far from over.*

Faced with such precise Jewish texts, the same question comes from a thousand mouths, and from a thousand sides at once, people say to each other; Freedom of worship, |K)le Juive, in the countries that welcome it- So, is this the slow destruction of Christian worship? It is therefore the subjection of populations to the laws of this Revolution that, in all kingdoms, his genius dominated

- Israeli Archives, XX, pp. 905-906; 1866. Instead of saying to Israelism, let's say the Judaization of the kingdom: a kind of - civilizing- tion undertaken by the secret societies, which are not only the instruction- the Jew's ment. The moral proof emerges from the fact that they do not think- They feel and only want what he thinks and what he wants.

If Morse's law were your law, would you wage war on the mis- Zionists of this law?

^ ArcA/i'es Israelites, VIII, p. 363; 1867. Let us repeat that our quotes The phrases in quotation marks are literal; what is found outside is, or the extract from passages that are too long, or what links the whole thing together - in our general sense.

Digitized by Google

316

THE JEWS.

A naturalist inspires and leads against Christian civilization? Houses of speculation and usury - houses of debauchery and of orgy, be it and that it arises everywhere -, the spec- There will be no shortage of those who can hold them, nor of those who can ensure them. the funds-but, from religious corporations, no! No, more retirement homes open to broken lives, to hearts grieved, desolate; no more houses destined for land clearing, 'a tenacious cultivation of the sciences, to the in-depth studies of theology, and to perfection of the Christian life. Christians out! Christians of all sects 'at the door of the sacred building of their inst- tutions, and that this edifice collapses on their heads. The texts are precise, and not at all rare! This, then, is the freedom that, among Christian peoples who assimilate it, deign had the audacity to be their equal.

These torches that the Jew threatens to extinguish only when the sun, or the light, shines—mystical terms for the use of the occult world, and which signify the doctrine revolutions—are these not the dreaded torches—Tables brandished by the regenerative philosophy of Israel? Is this not what, from the very mouths of wise men and Loyal Israelites, raise a resounding cry against Israel! of fanaticism? Isn't that the very scarecrow that forces us to to back down and withdraw from the leadership of Jewish organizations honorable members similar to the scholar of whom we Let's record the lyrics: "I do not hesitate to acknowledge with the difficulty that feelings of tolerance have not yet penetrated |)ammi our coreligionists as much as he would be desirable: I therefore believe it is in our interest "This work, as in the case of my dignity, requires me to withdraw." LS Koenig.swater, corresponding member of the Institute*.

'Univers Israélite, VII, p. 292, et alias; 1868.

2 Archives israélites, XIV, p. 105S, December 1, 1866. This into—Lérance breaks through and manifests itself with a certain brilliance in the style of some of these gentlemen, and this manifests itself even in their writings. where they set themselves up as professors of good taste: Example: The head of the con—

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER NINTH. 317

But let's look around us; are these the shapers of Christian civilization are not those who are already terrorizing Austria, and whose fierce entrain inspires the historical and political journals of Germany Magne this page qurí/meer* Israéliu reproduced in the cou—revealing his insults: "It's very difficult to make a name for oneself." an idea of the current situation of Jews in Vienna. If all the Bloodthirsty Jews who once surrounded Pilate's house shouting: Crucify him! Crucify him! They were suddenly transformed into journalists, while retaining their character of primitive ferocity, they could not manifest a hatred more savage against Christ than is currently the a group of Jews who dominate public opinion in the terro—laughing

"Since the Emperor's famous reply to the bishops, a veritable fury broke out among the Jews of that day—nationalism and terror. Infamous caricatures representing sensing the bishops, and especially the Cardinal of Vienna, in such a way against the clergy, that the pro- exaltation invoked in 1793 in Paris by the Voltaireans against the clergy French, seems almost child's play. The Jew reigns in Vienna, and he demonstrates this by pouring out his full cup of anger and fury against the Church, against the bishops and the clergy. Thanks to these newspapers, the misguided people are so central story raised the stick, etc., etc., over the head of one of these Israelites. Reaching him in the street, he walked over him, his gaze fixed on him. filled with sparks of hatred, and addressing him with vile threats,... formulated in hideous terms. These are the plaintiff's own words. which we report. Israelite Universe: V, pp. 196-7, 1867. And the month Next, he adds:

We are told that a Teuille, known for its extreme beyond- Cuidance, making no allusion to the scandal of December 5th, speaks of mud (sic). This is perfectly natural; there are so many of them on his toast editor-in-chief It is even one of the fruitful elements of his work valleys. Some heads, like barren fields, can do nothing

To produce without manure. But we, who write with a pen, and

Not with a stable broom, we don't want to get our hands dirty. to return to the said sheet what naturally belongs to it. Univ. Israel., VI, p. 279; 1867.

Digitized by Google

318 THE JEWS.

excited, that one hears him uttering invectives in the streets the most revolting things against the passing priest"

"The equality he has just acquired is no longer sufficient for the Jew: He wants to be preferred, to dominate. There is no end to it. talented and witty men among the Jews, who did not manifest- They celebrate this desire; and, with the utmost seriousness, they ask exceptional consideration for their people. When one shoots the smallest Jew, a little by the tip of the ear, all the Jews around the world are crying out against this treatment. of this brutal attack. When one allows oneself to observe that perhaps the little Jew only got what he deserved, We are accused of being reactionary and obscurantist. History The Jews can be summed up in these words: For fifteen centuries Christians mistreated the Jews; today "The Jews mistreated us*."

The Jews, who form a compact body, an association- national association, a family whose members support each other Jews, who possess gold, printing presses, (have genius, and whose (ptcL-ques-unes-for'.es têtes exercising such mysterious empire on Masonic affiliations; the Jews possess through this even to the highest degree the gift of making oneself counted, of to be feared, to be adored and showered with praise by the powerful earthly things, and we see them constantly wearing out and to abuse this gift. Positions, functions, privileges, honors, So they fall from all sides upon the head of Israel; and if we doubts about the prosperous streak that seems to follow him, our eyes, while browsing through the signed public documents of his name, should acknowledge the obvious. The Jew himself-even is therefore far from denying it, except at times when its bold demands give voice to the cry of ambition boundless and insatiably covetous. "Let us thank the Almighty, - he exclaimed in this noble land, - of having placed on the throne a prince who was the first, in his

Why? See our chapters.

^ Israelite Universe, p. 293-4; 1868.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER NINTH. 349

diplomatic reports, stated abroad that France contained only French people. It would seem, in truth, that Napoleon III undertook the generous task of consoling the the Jewish race of unspeakable suffering that it endured in the past, and which it still endures in many ways. "Very so-called civilized!" Ah! Glory and honor! our great and powerful sovereign, who places himself, as The Angel with the flaming sword, between murderous barbarity and our poor brothers." Elsewhere, on the contrary, "we see, at the Shame on our time, the persecutors, the plunderers, the ferocious beasts dressed as Christians and Europeans, mount in rank and retain ministerial portfolios'.

Let us also give thanks to the higher administration, which, Inspired by such noble thoughts, he has never ceased to give us evidence of his benevolent interest*, and, since the The circumstances lend themselves to it, let us eagerly yield to the voice of duty which calls us to recognize a true trait-the sweet and touching nature of this delicate solicitude, of this high and vigilant protection:

A young man of Jewish descent was assaulted in a college "by one of his classmates, who kept calling him of Jew at every opportunity. The father went to complain to the minister

he went immediately to the said college; he made a green a reprimand to the class teacher, who had not wanted intervened, and the professor had to write a letter of apology to the father of the family, wounded in his religion."

...So, one of those childish squabbles which,
From insulting to insulted, they end in completely different ways between students of French blood; one of those schoolboy pranks where superiors would only see clumsiness in their

• Arch. Israélites., \ll, p. 300; 1867.

Israelite Universe, V, p. 193; 1867.

9 Israelite Universe, X. p. 433; 1868.

■' Iraelite archives. Lives, p. 300; 1867.

9 Archives israélites, XXII, p. 991; 1866.

Digitized by Google

320 THE JEWS,

intervcnlion, and leave k the generosity of comrades the care for final justice, that is what immediately arises to the proportions of a staunch affair; this is what motivates the faskiller and immediate intervention of the highest representative of public authority, when it concerns... the son of a king?
No, the son of a Jew, whom one of his comrades dares to call a Jew, and who takes the four letters of his name for the more intolerable insults 'I

Others will shrug their shoulders at the ridiculousness that is condensed in this miserable incident—as for us, we there We find the immense merit of characterizing the high and the Jew's solid position among ordinary citizens the Empire—we admire its importance, its power persecuted! How then could we not finally beat hands to this distinguished demonstration, to this humble genu-bending before Israel, since it teaches us that the auda-
The Jew's exacting demands can no longer be restrained.
since it reveals to us that its irresistible grandeur develops as a direct result of the eagerness of the strong to
To satisfy him! And will we fear having said too much when we see him claiming that the State itself, that the per-even his own leader, the one he just called his comforter and his angel, bows down, humbles himself before him, and retracts his words as an imperial literary figure, as if they were an insult.

who, addressing a Christian people, seems to bear witness

* Thus, the tenderness of the Jews for Mr. DuVuy is without limit; Moreover, it doesn't stop at this single cause. Two lines, including We will be careful not to spoil the style, which will allow us to... judge:

"Just look at this fervor, this activity, this stirring of The French bishops and archbishops, witness the bitter war...

born that they make to Mr. Duruy, Minister of Public Instruction, to the occasion of his remarkable circular concerning education secondary school students; to the minister whom posterity will bless, as all progressive men and friends of light already admire it thanks for all the good and great things he has done in the field of public education I » Archive. Israel.. He, p. 68; 1868. – The The Jew's descendants will undoubtedly bless him, since the Jewish Archives commit to it

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER NINTH. 351

of a Christian belief... Someone might exclaim:
But you're dreaming! And some unhealthy vision haunts your eyes!
Well, the Jewish leader Crémieux agrees to take away our the floor and to take it; let's listen:

"My dear Guérault, I have just read the preface that Na-Poleon III places at the beginning of the Life of Julius Caesar. On the one hand, a system of fanaticism, albeit rather mitigated; on the other hand
Part of it, the duty to the people, quite greatly presented Moreover, to accept, depending on the era, Caesar's ideas, of Charlemagne, of Napoleon /•% had awakened all my Note that as I continued reading, I came to these Words: "Blessed are the people who understand them! Woe to them!"
Those who misunderstand and fight them! They

"Like the Jews, they crucified their Messiah." How Did Napoleon III write this sentence? Where did the historian write it?
Has he found historical evidence for this statement?
So clearly stated? "The Jews crucified their Messiah!"
The Jewish religion, which, in the lands where its followers enjoy civil and political rights, walk on equal footing with other religions—which, in the countries where these followers still suffer shameful contempt or odious persecution tions, maintains its immortal vitality with such courage,

"The Jewish religion awaits its Messiah."

"THE CATHOLIC RELIGION ALONE WANTS to have received this Messiah, mis-known to the Jews, was crucified by them.

"But to write Jules' preface from a Catholic point of view Caesar! To present a religious claim as an axiom, historic! How far we are from this broad thinking of Napoleon I*' adhering to the Jewish religion by the convocation of the great Sanhedrin, and by the organization of Israelite worship!

"We live in a time, in a country where religion and worship must be confined to consciences and move-to see in the temple. That a priest in a church, from above from the pulpit, support Vavénement cUi Messie and the blindness Jews who misunderstood and crucified him, I understand this ex-pressure from the Catholic faith, including the rabbi, in the synagogue

24

Digitized by Google

323

THE JEWS.

gogue, (read from the top of another pulpit, will prove the inanity. But that the leader of a vast empire throws into a page of history such dangerous words; that he again denounces the universes, in a book that is being translated into all languages
gues, which he denounces especially in France, where he concentrates
In his hands, supreme power, the blindness of the Jews guilty of having crucified their Messiah, when this Messiah is JESUS CHRIST; that he may revive this terrible and painful accusation.
sation, that the streams of Jewish blood that it caused to be shed seemblaent had been stifled within the nations enlightened by the torch of philosophy, it is a very unfortunate inspiration!

"Please, my dear Guérault, make way for my protests" tations in your newspaper (L'Opinion nationale). I en-See the expression of my old friendship. Paris, February 27, 1865.
— Ad. Crémieux.

One thing, Mr. Lechêne observes, struck us immediately.
first in this audacious challenge thrown at the Emperor's head
And the face of two hundred million Catholics, that's the the path that the Jews have taken in the world since the day where Christian societies have admitted them into their fold and vile and political. And since Mr. Crémieux cites the Sanhédrin assembled in 1807 by Napoleon I," that he take the trouble to reread the minutes of this Hebrew assembly, and that he compares the humility and gratitude of the Jews of that time with the outrageous claims of contemporary Judaism.'

'Indeed, when Napoleon I said to General Bertrand: * I am I know men, and I tell you that Jesus Christ was not a man;" when he pronounced, with an accent of conviction, this Deep fiarole, he was far from foreseeing that one day the Jews, rehabilitated-cited by him, would make it a crime for his successor to assert this child Truth. Zero power of gold!

"Mr. Crémieux, emancipated for fifty years, now demands that the Catholics, that the Emperor himself, keep their faith to themselves deep in their consciences; he forbids this faith to be manifested outside of the temple... At the rate the Jews are going, what will become of the Christian society at the end of the first century

"Mr. Cremieux, for the success of his cause, even goes so far as to give

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER NINTH. 313

However, the flood of these enormous claims, before which Christianity must retreat from, this tide is growing and threatens to reach us, no longer even outside of our temples, but even under the cover of our meetings Christian, even in the heart of our ancient solemnities. One more step, and tomorrow, a defense will be made to preacher to preach the Passion of Christ; but, under under the pretext of public order, and from today the Jew us forbidden, according to the measure of his strength, from representing the mysteries.

If our words, after what we have just explained, may still have seemed excessive, let's open our eyes, Let us read and judge: "In the presence of high benevolence what the Emperor's government shows us,... we WE ARE SURPRISED that the higher authority tolerated the latter-relatively certain shows in both departments of Alsace. The newspapers of that province announced that the Bavarian Society of the Life and Passion of Our Lord Lord Jesus Christ, gave a long series of representations performances before a consistently large audience, in the city of Strasbourg, where she was even honored by the pre-presence of the highest dignitaries of the Church, as well as Performances were also given in Colmar. Such a show Isn't it likely to awaken religious intolerance?

perhaps the ancient fanaticism of the least enlightened populations plots against the Jews, let them be shown as the authors of your Death of the God of Christians? We have the right to be wary of 'This kind of exhibition.'

a denial to history. He argues that only Catholics recognize—are born Jesus Christ for their Messiah. Is he unaware that on this point the Are Protestants no different from Catholics?

(Sacred texts follow.)

B. Are other texts needed to convince Mr. Crémieux that the Jews, Blind and guilty, have they crucified their Messiah?

B Paris, March 2, 1865, published on the 5th. Adolphe Lechéne. b

'Israeli Universe, VIII, pp. 343–4; 1868. Strasbourg hears these Words of Tolerance I The city where Drach's classmates, our 21.

Digitized by Google

THE JEWS.

Tl ès-clairemenl said it, for sure! But this kind of exhibition—
Christian beliefs, which the Jew claims to prohibit in the country Christian, is repeated everywhere with the most solemn advertisement every time we are preached the Passion of Christ; each time the ceremonies of Holy Week bring back the public adoration of the cross; each time that the august solemnities of the Tomb are reborn, where each year the entire people prostrate themselves before the body of the Messiah whom the Jews pierced with their blows. And ever since centuries, in the days when this religious mourning stirs the mules—titudes, each faithful person joins in the prayers of the Church against those whom she publicly calls the perfidious enemies of the Savior (pro perfidis Judæis). What a great insult! to Judaism 1 How then, after the brilliance of these prodigious grievous grievances, how could the Jew refrain from re—to seek, in the name of honor and respect, that the Synagogue is entitled to demand from us the enclosure of our churches, the reform of our liturgies, the suppression of public worship and The abolition of the Christian name! For he who dares to call himself For the Jew, a Christian can only be an accomplice to a scoundrel, that worshipper of a trifle who renders him infamous

The Jew joins in the condemnation that his fathers have pronounced against this culprit. That is where, he tells us, regarding the representation of our mysteries, which he could not suffer if he is our equal; that is what he will not suffer, that is what that he should start to stop suffering!

Indeed, Mr. Crémieux, the illustrious president of the Alliance universal Israelite, and one of the high dignitaries of the ma-
This nonsense, this Jewish progress, this
The way things work, which already tends to make the one who wears the Christian name, even if he were a minister of an empire and even if he were emperor, so flexible, so considerate towards the Jew! Far from the ignorance-old acquaintance, was waiting for the coming of the Messiah to stumble upon Christians and the Pillars. Second letter from a converted rabbi.

p. 3<9; Paris, 1817.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER NINTH. 325

He proclaims it, he glories in it, and we insist on repeating his words, for they become a monument of history;
"How everything has changed for us. Gentlemen, in so little of time! When I was a child... I couldn't cross the streets of my hometown without receiving any insults. How many battles I've fought with my fists! Yes, I tell you I say it. Gentlemen, I am proud of the Jews, and it is necessary I beg your pardon for this feeling of vanity; for when I was "As a child, they considered me worthless..."

The Jew counted for nothing; whereas today it is necessary- from today that the States, that the powers of this world, that The sovereigns count on him and count on him humbly. But where does this sinister marvel come from? - It stems from the failings of the Christian faith. The relaxed Christian- He imagines a little too quickly that the Jew, because he denies the beliefs of his fathers, he is no longer a Jew. She comes to us again and rather, this sinister marvel of progress occult societies, filled with these apostate Christians who want what the Jew wants, that is to say, Jewish civilization- that which is given to us by our tutor and our teacher, The philosophical Jew, the Jew of the Universal Covenant. This civilization Jewish culture thus begins to openly take the the place of Christian civilization, and the Jew, consequently, to shout at us: Make way for the master! Make way for the one you follow- Reveal the doctrines and who has delivered you from the foolishness of the Christian faith; away with the faith that has had its day!

"It's starting to happen." There's not much left for the children. progress is achieved by kicking away a decaying religion, and The day of his downfall is drawing near. – "Inaugurated by the scholarly and speculative Germany, the renovation of studies theological ideas are taking root in France, which, thanks to its spirit generalizing and expansive, can be called k do for the religious synthesis what she once did for the reconstitu- civil and political organization of the world. And every Israelite must experience- 'Archives israélites, I, p. <3; <867.

Digitized by Google

326

THE JEWS.

to see the desire to cooperate in this work, in which his in- 'most sacred interests'.

It is necessary, as we can see, that it be recast as it was by the Revolutionizing law and history, Roman theology... The word must be in harmony with Jewish philosophy; Christian women should remain silent; those who owe lessons must From Judaism, so many lights, cease insulting the Jew by giving to Christ, the ignoble and vulgar victim, the name sacred to the Messiah; it is necessary that, on a soil where respect is due to the sons of Jacob as equals, the spectacle of the The cross of Calvary must disappear; the reason for each individual gives the world a God deemed reasonable by her; Language must banish the folly of an incarnate God. of a redeeming God who died on a gallows; it is necessary that, from a end h the other of the earth, no longer a stupid faith, but a belief hostile to the supernatural, that is to say, truly anti-Christian and worthy of the clarity of science which affects to call themselves modern*, binds and cements them together the members of the great human family^Man or idea, the Messiah whom the Jew awaits, this glorious enemy of the Savior- The Christians' leader has not yet come, but he is coming, his The day is approaching! And already they are beginning to bow before Is- Raël, the peoples led to his feet by the regional societies generators of progress and light!... May humanity entirely, docile to the philosophy of the Universal Alliance Israelite, therefore, let him follow without hesitation the Jew, this true people. cosmopolitan table, the only one that is and can be*, and which from today governs intelligence and interests loans from the most progressive nations; that this humanity finally turns its eyes towards the metropolis of the regenerated world;

• Israelite Universe, V, p. 23; 1867. The Jewish, or anti-Christian spirit This has crept into modern science, and has often corrupted it. admirable discoveries, but without diminishing a single one of the truths of Catholicism; that's what true scholars know.

^ We only know true science, without acceptance of date.

3 See below, ibid., for the Messiah.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER NINTH. 327

and that this metropolis be neither London, nor Paris, nor Rome, but Jerusalem rebuilt from its ruins, a Jerusalem new "called ^ of great destinies", and which is found to be "both the city of the past and of the future."

y

SUMMARY AND CONCLUSION

Of the two chapters: The Jew's March, and New Marks.

Such is, for some time now, the word that resound the Jew, and most of the details of the painting that this chapter and the previous one have just offered to the eyes summarize k pretty much on the page we're going to borrowing from master writers, before summarizing for ourselves ourselves.

A penetrating observer, the rationalist Kluber, tells us noted, in his book On the Law of the Confederation Germanic, "that for some time now, opposite the ju-Rabbinic Daism or Talmudic Judaism, it was formed, among a relatively small number of Jews, a JudaHume Reformed or non-rabbinic, prepared by Moses Mendeissohn who professed belief in God and natural morality, but freed itself from the yoke of ceremonial worship, from the laws dietary laws of Judaism, and the strict observance of Sabbath. – This Judaism will be transformed, according to all truth-resemblance, said Kluber, to a pure deism or to a reli-natural region, whose supporters will not need to appear-"To cling to the Jewish race!"

If, some time after these words of Kluber, our eyes focus on the Jews of France and Germany, already we Indeed, we see them breaking down into three essential groups. distinctly different: the Talmudists, the Reformers or pro-

The Talmudists, the most learned professors tell us of the theological faculty of Germany, of which the saint

'Isidore, Chief Rabbi of France. Archives israélites, XI, p. 495, 1868.

2 Kluber, 4th ed., § 516, note 4, Germanic Law.

Digitized by Google

THE JEWS.

311

Father Goschler, of Jewish origin, brought together the Enlightenment thinkers in bundle, "the Talmudic texts, composed of the old generation, country folk and those of the lowest class urban classes recognize the religious authority of the rabbis bins, the legislative authority of the Talmud, scrupulously observe-not your mosaic, but rabbinic law, do not they only mix with Christians for their own self-interest, and continue to be the traditional enemies of the Church.

"It is the indestructible blackness of the nation which will persist in the end in his stubbornness and in his loyalty to preserve the Scriptures.

"The reformers, enlightened, wealthy, and well-bred, shook up the yoke of the rabbis, the outdated forms of the Synagogue and the national customs of their ancestors. But not having the Christian faith, while still wanting to retain their historical name Toric and their fundamental dogmas, feeling the necessity dlun cult and the emptiness of rabbinical rituals, they have invented a reformed cult whose language is still the he-breu and whose ceremonies are those of tradition, but where they introduced order, decency, a more [respectable] song regular use of the organ, preaching, and a light-brilliant, etc., etc. Outside of religious gatherings, where The zealous go on the Sabbath day and on high days of celebration, the largest number only once a year, they do not pr-They observe absolutely no Jewish rites, and live as long as they can, and preferably with Christians.

The indifferent, whose ranks begin where they con-to merge with those of the free thinkers, similar to those
"Of all religions, they are not concerned with tradition, neither of the reform, nor of the rabbis, nor of the synagogues, nor of retain the name of Jews only out of human respect honorable... When the opportunity arises, they marry Christian women readily get baptized without hesitation. their children, and, "remarkable progress", practice in In this case, with regard to the religious beliefs of their family, a tolerance that could serve as an example to many Catholics name issues.

Digitized by Googic

CHAPTER NINTH. 329

"The complete emancipation of the Jews of France, by mixing all ranks of society, by making them participate per to their intu to all the bad deeds of Christianity, whether the Children receive education in public institutions. either the most intelligent and studious fill- It encompasses administrative, judicial, and industrial functions. sit on municipal councils, in assemblies legislative bodies, learned societies, or they serve in the army ranks; this civil and political emancipation, let us say, has done more for the religious conversion of Jews, for fifty years, have been subjected to persecution and exclusions of eighteen centuries! The Church has certainly received within its ranks for half a century, in France, more than 1- children of Israel whom she had never seen embrace the faith of- then its establishment in Gaul!

A little later, we see Reverend Father of Israelite blood We use the same language and are told: "The Synagogue is no longer what it was twenty or thirty years ago an*!... Renouncing its age-old rites, it covered a nudity, borrowing a few fragments from various cults Christians. The observances of the law have fallen into disuse- study; Talmudic translations are unknown to the general population. new ration, the administration of Judaism, modeled on that of Protestantism, is now nothing more than a civil constitution which varies and changes according to the whims of governments! And if we let us compare "this strange movement of modern Judaism with Vimnwbiüté where it has been held for over eighteen centuries, Can we not see some providential design? on the remains of Jacob?

'Encyclopedic Dictionary of Catholic Theology, by the most learned pro- professors and doctors of Germany, Goschier, l. XII, p. 453; 1861.

^ Notice on the congregation of the nuns of Our Lady of Sion, pp. 11-12; 1862. - Same thought in Question Juive, p. 3, etc.;

Israelite blood.

Digitized by Google

330

THE JEWS.

Thus, the Orthodox Israelite renders a complete and blind obedience to the Talmud, and this Talmudic form and will form in the Jewish world Vindeuruc/ible core of the nation But in our West, everywhere civilization Christian, everywhere even where the debased civilization of peoples who are in the process of becoming de-Christianized reach the Being Jewish, she forces him day after day to reject the obscenities. the absurdities and doctrinal horrors of this traditional code the supreme and fundamental aspect of the faith. Therefore, if Jewish orthodoxy finds some interest still in preserving his name in the Western kingdoms, it loses almost nothing there, and except for the the edge of Europe, its pharisaical substance, its ancient and forbidding physiognomy, the essential principle of his life. It is nothing more than a counterfeit of orthodoxy, or rather than a corpse whose warmth is fading, than re- they heat up and are vainly trying to revive some pitiful old men, the object of their insulting compassion son.

As a consequence of this abandonment of the Talmud and of the op- the Jew's blindness, Protestantism, this scourge of common sense that Israel ignored until yesterday and which it naively welcomes the reform movement, which saw a rise in the Synagogue its dawn... and already touches its sunset; for the march The reformer's role is nowadays that of the giant! Simple An archaeological relic, the Talmud still receives, it is true, a tip of the hat, but to receive immediately afterwards the a kick that signifies his downfall and the dawn of a new era of his humiliations. The Bible was no longer in his eyes. than a book of symbols or fables, and here now that his religion, leaving the celestial heights, is reduced to call it simply progress, the march forward in The ways of reason! In the name of liberty and equality, Each person then appropriates this reason equally, claims to house it entirely within himself, becomes the supreme interpreter of

Until the day of his conversion to Christianity.

/faith, and in whatever way each person reasons or derails—
This confused whole, this chaos, forms a shared faith.
if any remain in Israel! Free thought is confused with consequence in the Jew with religion, which is equivalent, in good French, to this absurdity: that freedom of thought is synonymous with thought submitted to faith.

And anyone who is a free thinker, that is to say anyone think what you want, even if it's twenty-four times the opposite in twenty-four hours, one can call oneself or remain an Israelite; he is recognized as a member of the great brotherhood, worthy of worship in the temples of Israel and to rest in its holy land—'
Thus proclaimed dogmatically the chief rabbi of one kingdoms of Europe.

So this is Israel, this people who only yesterday seemed everywhere—self-absorbed, reduced, as soon as he moves away from the Talmud without taking refuge in the Church of Christ, to proclaim liberal, philosopher, freethinker and religious all at once.
O miracle of the times! Here it is reduced to presenting itself as the center, under the name 'Universal Israelite Alliance', an association in which every man of every religion has the right to contribute, in order to form a common fund, all the beliefs and all the disbeliefs with which he falls in love!

It is true that this center, where his religion is drowning, makes him master. of a world where his beliefs, and consequently his customs, have now lost all stability, all compass, and (read its anti-Christian machinations have long been forming at its image. But this world we see today, the Jew sum—sea with arrogance to divest itself of the last vestiges of his faith, to throw himself into his arms and show him his admiration, sympathies, and respect; this world, which, Far from being indignant at his claims, he responds meekly to his voice is that of the great Revolution brought to light by the philosophy of the eighteenth century, of which we have just To see the Jew claiming glory; this is the world of the grand messianic idea, the world which, undermining the inst—
Christian traditions, calls on peoples to found together a humanitarian religion, where man, freed from a a God whom he cannot understand and whom he refuses to obey, becomes 'his own Messiah'.

NOTE referring to page 300 of this chapter.

Here is what the year 1771 tells us about the Avi Ghetto;>no, empty papal, historical and critical essays on the ancient Jews and Modern: o Jews are tolerated only in a part of France, but they live peacefully throughout the Comtat Venaissin (apparently (located in Rome). The Jewish quarter of Avignon is a district alleclc to Jews, who make their home there, and who are separated from the other inhabitants so many. The number of these Jews, men and women, amounts to six hundred.
about a hundred people, all filthy and disgusting. In the past, they didn't they did almost no other trade than that of silk;
but, for some time now, they have extended their views to objects more likely to foster their love of wealth. Under the guise of-rence of doing horse-trading and trading in fabrics and in canvases, they managed to bring an infini- under their control a group of honest people who had the misfortune to find at home the first resources, and they exercise with impunity over those who are subjected to a tyranny all the more appalling because they are more skilled at imposing the yoke gradually.

"The inhabitants of Avignon and those of the Comtat Venaissin are not not the only victims of the Jews, ' .those from the neighboring provinces, and sur-throughout Provence, their numbers are increasing. However, it is necessary that The Jews must be quite enterprising to dare to establish their empire in Provence, because the regulatory decrees of the Parliament of Aix ries 12 and May 20, 1660, May 8 and September 28, 1696, and September 11, 1697, their expressly forbid frequenting this province under penalty of the west*...»

When from the depths of their Jewish quarter, or their Ghetto, a handful
The smallest number of Jews can exercise such cruel despotism over the poputhe administration of several provinces, and defying the penalties with impunity more ignominious, on which side does tyranny lie, on which side
The martyrs? But the more these Jews strangle and oppress the Christians...
Their cries against Christian oppression tear through the air.
Quickly, then, seats in the Senate, seats in Parliament for these oppressed!

T. I<', first part, p, 204-20Ü; Lyon, 1771.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TEN.

FIRST DIVISION. – ACTION OF JOY ON THE MARCH OF THINGS, ORGANIZATION OF JUDAISM IN THE WORLD, SOCIAL EFFECTS.

The minutes of the Jewish council or synod of 1869. – The constitution The natural state of Judaism. – What the Jew can, wants, and dares. Thanks to the secret societies formed in his image, of which he is the soul, Each of its members is a living link in the immense network that encircles the world. – Role of the cronies of their trade who enthrall the globe. – This self-generated organization. – Necessity of the ability to supplement it later through artificial associations. – So, as a semi-licensed company, the Universal Israelite Alliance offers Jews a The link that unites them everywhere; a secret society, Freemasonry plays the same role in parallel. – Nothing escapes notice in the world social to this multiple network including the high cabals of Judaism are the masters. – A small core of true initiates. – The Jewish constitution of Freemasonry places it in the majority in his high councils of initiated and initiating Jews. – These societies have no other aim than the triumph of Judaic ideas, which are the Modern ideas. – Seductive aspects of these societies. – Betrayals and indiscretions that expose the Jew. – The Jew and the lodges. – Jewish lodges; this is where all the sons of all the revolutionary events brewing in Christian lodges. – Instruction. – Valuable confessions. – Same action judaico-masonic in the new world. – The Masonic mystery is indispensable to the Synagogue within even the most republics free. – Kluber's word. – Inevitable antagonism between the Judaism and Christian States. – The triumph of the Jew over civilization Christianization is the inevitable result of that struggle.

June 29, 1869, that is to say, the very year of the council ecumenical assembly convened by the Head of Christendom, the pre-The first council of Judaism opened in Leipzig, under the title of the Israelite synod. It sat for several days, under the pre-the residence of Professor Lazarus, of Uertin, and two vice-Presidents: Rabbi Geiger, from Frankfurt, and the Knight Joseph von Wertheimer, of Vienna. Two large fractions, The reformist and orthodox Jews held the balance in this council, which included representatives of Germany Magne, Russia, Turkey, Austria, An-England, France, the Netherlands, etc., etc.

We give as an epigraph to this chapter the words the following, to which we will often return the spirit of the reader.' They are part of a proposal made there by the doctor

Digitized by Google

THE JEWS.

/

I Philippson, from Bonn, who was recommended by the Chief Rabbi of Belgium Astruc, and which was adopted by the council by acclamation:

"The synod recognizes that development and realization—
The application of modern principles is more secure and guarantees the preservation of the
They are the future of Judaism and its members.
conditions Us more energetically vital for expansion— existence
sive and the highest development of Judaism.

I. Modern principles, in politics and in the 'science,' are those of revolutionary free thought and Masonic, including the Universal Israelite Alliance and Mr. the Chief Rabbi Astruc has just declared himself before us bosses because they Judaize the world, because they prepare the future of Judaism, that is to say the Mes— era Sianesque, which the Universal Alliance promises us, and which we
We will soon describe them. Mr. Kuhn, the publicist, has Therefore, there is reason to exclaim: "This demand for principles modern attitudes in favor of Judaism are most humiliating for our democrats, against whom the Jews stand now as the true leaders of progress. The domination of Jewish financiers over men of progress is thus explained and justified. » Kuhn, July 22, 1869.

Having said that, let's let our chapter speak.

If the Jew, while freeing himself from his faith, retains and maintains he jealously guards the banner of his religion, this last—deny refuge of his nationality; if he extends his hand on the world; if he continues to believe, — and his prin—
The principal organs confirm it to us — in Messianic times who will one day make him the sovereign people and the arbiter of peoples, there is enormous interest in knowing what they are, in the midst of Christian nations, nature and variety means of action that the Jew possesses on the course of events things, on the maintenance or transformation of the social order European, which, for the moment still, we find partial—based on the ancient and solid beliefs of our fathers.

Digitized by Google

So this is what we are going to ask, page by page. This chapter, and perhaps it will tell us what the Jew is capable of, wants and Ote, thanks to the strength that Israel enjoys in forming scattered members of his community a particular state in within each of the states of this world; thanks to the help that associations composed of men of all beliefs, or rather all unbeliefs im- ginables; thanks to the empire he wields over companies whose some of its leaders are its secret soul, and whose origin gine goes back to the most intimate traditions of occullism; thanks to the art, at which no one equals him, of making these companies work to its benefit; thanks to the ever-increasing immensity of its riches; thanks to the instinctive skill that characterizes him to know how to relieve all peoples of their gold; thanks to the levers that he forges from this gold to lift and move opinion'; thanks again to the prodigious flexibility of its abilities, thanks to the inflexibility of his will, to the impertur- his uncanny ability to maintain his mind, to the superiority of his intellect agency everywhere where religious questions do not pose any problems This Argus is a unique being whose eyes have the power to kill. the light; thanks finally to the singular and marvelous privileges the limitations of his physical nature, which make this man the man unique, designed to brave the most extreme climates with impunity opposites of the earth, and to create a homeland from every soil: that is- that is to say, to give in his person the unique sample of the human species that can, without lying to the scientific truth- tifique, to call oneself cosmopolitan, or a citizen of the whole world*.

An irresistible and mysterious breath penetrates today the education of the man we call liberal; and this breath, it is no longer that of the minister of religion who the founder, the restorer of civilization, Christ', he said; Go and teach all peoples. No! Far from it; This breath is the spirit of those who, whether instigators or flatterers of

'So often the queen of soils I

* See below in this chapter.

3 Establish oronia in Christ.

Digitized by Google

336 THE JEWS.

revolutions, they call themselves, by their own mouths, the priesthood of the press; docile instruments, or directors for the most, and in most European states, of the con- the circle of secret societies, including a council, where the Jew

However, education transforms the Christian into a faithful one.
large revolutionary community, – and perhaps the cha-
Would the preceding clown allow us to call it Jewish?
begins by instilling in him principles to which the modern means of communication have given the most incredible force of expansion.

Equality, these principles tell us, is the supreme law intelligent beings; she is the only one whom the just sens-their dignity allows them to accept without dis-chance. All men are ultimately equal;
They are all equal, and, consequently, a English should only be the equivalent of a Frenchman any other Frenchman, a member of the same family human, a brother to whom neither the law of nature nor the laws of Reason does not justify preferring a fellow countryman. Thus Will it be German, or Russian, or Asian? or of the Jew. For to love one's neighbor of the same country, to love one's next door under the same roof, loving one's province or homeland with a privileged love, it was the act of a narrow soul, of a An illiberal and ungrandiose spirit. The truly human being A man worthy of the name ceases today to see his homeland.
in a limited strip of land; he sees it in space without bounds of the habitable world; and those whom he calls his brothers, these are not merely the offspring of a simple branch of the human race, these are the men of humankind entire nation. Every country, every family, every people, will have the same right over his heart, and the only name by which he
He has nothing to boast about, the only one who should (lath his reason) is the one of cosmopolitan, that is to say, of citizen of the whole world!

* If all nations are brothers, as is said in a certain sense-shaped by the interests of the social order, the sacred Scripture does not exist on

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TEN.

337

This is, or is becoming, the dominant feature of modern thought.
amidst the chorus of liberal voices. And if the man, as the organs of the Revolution repeat on all sides the solution must be cosmopolitan; if the peoples gathered first as a nation, they must then unify and no longer form sea than a family, a universal and unique republic, which is born, which stems from these premises, and which does not follow us k pas; it's that man is, or that sooner or later he must to be and will be the subordinate, the subject of the Jew.

And why the subject? Ah! If this interrogative word is addressed, the eyes of the one questioning us are not still open, and, therefore, let us not be afraid to surprise the reader, by stating what we will only demonstrate, that all k the hour: it is that, alone among all peoples, the Jew is citizen of the whole world^ it is that, alone, he inscribes in all places of its birth without the earth having a latitude k la-that it is permissible to be a stepmother to her – is that, alone, he it mingles with all peoples without ever merging with them;
that, therefore, he alone represents a people who the same days in the midst of other peoples; it is, in a a word, which the Jewish nation, if it so pleased, could draw from its delegates Jewish people from all points of the horizon, and to form these elected officials, a vast congress, could, on its own, represent all interests, all languages, and all nationalities of the earth! And, in that sense, a perfect representative of the globe whole, she would show in each of hers a stitch living of the immense network which must, in realizing its hopesrancid, to one day encircle all men.

Covered by an invisible protection, which the Church and the Synagogues each have their own point of view, named mira-
In a squalid manner, the Jewish nation found itself preserved from the shipwreck that land that a single race, descended from the same father. Now, the liberal school-almost the entire rale supports the opposite, in its inconsistency-quence, in order to attack what is established by the biblical or divine word, that is to say, unity of the human race I 23

Digitized by Google

338 THE JEWS.

was to engulf it in the ceaselessly tormented waves of This sea that forms the multitude of peoples. The eternal the movement that tossed him there supported him in the midst of the populations exasperated by its national customs by-everywhere the Talmud remained its law. Bent for eighteen centuries during, under the weight of the bath and the contempt, these sons of the Dispersion therefore formed, as if by force of circumstance.
in a vast and compact society that takes care of its Hello, that the hopes inherent in his faith, discipline-
They were born under the strict law of secrecy. Maintaining the breast their scattered heads, reports of religion, business and nationality, which of each of the various countries inhabited by them, bound them together, these brothers, who had lost the title of Jewish citizens had they deviated from their faith Jewish, they watched with a shrewd and watchful eye for any incident suited to serving their fierce instincts, every event capable of enduring the long, tireless waiting of their race. The scale and ubiquity of their trade, the voracious and the secret activity of his cronies, who had become for them the only and infallible means of coordinating and acting, carried to each other, with the silence and speed of a bird nocturnal, the watchword whose magical power established-knows at once on all points of the world the thought com-'mune and collective action'. Thus, from the middle of the peoples who abhorred him, Israel groaning with weakness the kinship caused by its dispersion, did it cover the entire face from the globe of a family of brothers, of a sacred affiliation of which each member is a servant of every other member, drew its strength from the common trunk - a grandiose image of this giant polyp which, in the heart of the seas, delivers to the courants whose flow stirs and nourishes it, its countless tentacles and its inevitable suckers.

* The story of the abduction of the children of Drach, carried out in our time, and that we have reported, enough to give an idea of this organization natural and mysterious site of Israel.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TEN.

339

This organization of Judaism was born in a way of itself; it was of all ages, and seemed sufficient to those concerned Until the day when religious ties, in releasing, led to the loosening of the bonds of Jewish nationality. It was then that artificial means, created to help those who had trained in the the nature of things, demanded the serious attention of leaders or major figures of the nation; and societies of occultism, within which we will glimpse In an instant, the influence and action of the Jew were the The perfect means. One of them was organized in the half-sky open, and formed the most universal of links, that is to say a society of defense, attack, and propaganda of which we we glimpsed earlier, under the name 'Alliance Israélite', more militant than that of a dispersed people, this alliance at first glance appears to be nothing more than a useless variant, than an insignificant lining. But, open to • dreamers, deserters, and scorners of all cult figures, it has the merit of lending itself to more combinations vast, and to offer to the foreign elements for which it prepares and. achieves assimilation, frameworks of boundless elasticity. She helps the progressive men of Israel, skilled in preparing their faces, the engaging smiles of a political liberalism that and religious, to win over the naive masses; and, under under the pretext of serving both interests and consciences, it gently place the high-ranking directors of Judah on their heads^^ It finally brings together anyone of Jewish blood these Christians by birth who are, but unknowingly for most of them, the allies and subjects of the Jew, and whom she shapes in scs ranks k fraternally mingle their sympathies and their hatreds and those of the sons of Jacob, whose name was once Even that was, for them, the expression of supreme contempt.

It's this jumble of shades of gray and positions diverse, fueled by antisocial prejudices, indifferent to everything belief or driven by deep-seated hatred against Christianity 2î.

Digitized by Google

3i0

THE JEWS.

uismc, that Freemasonry, queen for the moment of societies of occulism, calls for or already counts and brings together within it: Freemasonry, this immense association including the rare initiates, that is to say, the real leaders, whom he One must be careful not to confuse them with nominal chiefs, vi- wind in a close and intimate alliance with the members militants of Judaism, princes and initiators of the high cabal ' 1 For it is important to repeat, this elite of the Order, these real leaders whom so few people know, and whom they do not most of them only know them by their nom de guerre*, operate within the profitable and secret dependence of Israeli Kabbalists. And this phenomenon is accomplished thanks to the habits of rigorous discretion to which the subject- weave terrible oaths and threats; thanks again to your majority of Jewish members that the mysterious constitu- the Freemasonry association sits in its sovereign council.

If something unpleasant-sounding offends the ear in

* Read below the chapter on Cabal.

The most important of the occult associations, the one which, before having allowed himself to be penetrated, committed so much havoc in the world, and that the seal of Judaism bears undeniable signs, a scholar An adept told us: it is "the great known Kabbalistic association "Nowadays in Europe, it is known as Freemasonry." Before wearing This very modern name, she, suddenly appears in the world at the moment when the great protest of the sixteenth century against the Church "It is dismantling Christian unity." It tolerates all beliefs because she recognizes none of them, "not professe qu'une seule philosophy » jEliphas Lévi, Hist. of magic, ibid., p. 399-400.), that of transcendent Protestantism. This philosophy of reason rebellious, which from the beginning was that of the high initiates of the Caba'e, is the very same one that the Israelite Alliance openly professes today. universal, open to the dissatisfied of all the cukes.

Anyone who deigns to scrutinize with some care the great association- "Canalisque cation" of Freemasonry, whoever studies at historical sources, its origin and principles, its organization and Its aim will see in it little more than a bold work of Judaism, an artificial Jewish community recruited from men foreign to the Jewish race, and especially Christians! Most of these Christians assume him to be a innocent but; but these are not the initiates, they are the decoys. – Kabbalistic Freemasonry still has one of its centers, and perhaps its original center, in Chaldea, the birthplace of the Kabbalah; It has one of its major capitals among the Druscs. – We have dealt Elsewhere these questions... See below, chapter Cabal.

* Such as Nubius and the Jew Piccolo-Tigre.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TEN. 311

Our words, a few lines, will suffice to calm minds. and especially the spirit of anyone who takes the trouble to observe that these occult societies do not have in deOnitive other serious purpose than that of the Jewish associations of which they are merely variants with a quasi-Christian appearance, because the thought that guides them is the same, and we knew it. before an accident had revealed the correspondence of Nubius and Piccolo-Tigre; for all their labor is limited, because all their activity is applied and used up by propagation, k the emergence of ideas and facts that must be annihilated the teaching of Christ's doctrine in Christian societies yours. In other words, the sole purpose of their efforts referred to as modern principles by Israel itself (at the beginning of this chapter), and whose consequence is the Mes- era Sianesque, whom his vows call. (See below.)

The flexibility characteristic of occultists allows them to do everything; the elasticity of their doctrines extend to the miraculous, and their insidious phra- Seology also knows how to skillfully caress Christ here, object of their muted and implacable hostilities, that the confounded Ik-bas. In short, the acts of secret societies whose apparent leaders bear Christian names, slip in through for this reason, and are received into our social environment with a favor which, under the name of the Jew, would turn into mistrust. And, under the cover of these honorable names, with close-eyed sure of the vulgar, far from grasping the anti-Christian reality of aspirations and works, let themselves be dazzled by the tapa- superficial appearances of real and sincere philanthropy in the vast majority of its members, but also false as deceptive among its great and true initiates, among its mysterious directors.

A few clumsy mistakes made under the watchful eyes of those who... threatened to open slightly, and at the moment when the certainty of The glimpsed successes spurred daring followers to... to hide; numerous indiscretions escaped by drunkenness

Digitized by GocJgle

342

THE JEWS.

of an impending triumph, and whose somber splendors some of their rays were already piercing through; Clear confessions, positive revelations, that's what we allowed, apart from our personal data, to establish a certain judgment on the mode and power of action of these high societies of occultism, where Christians come- They need to line up like flocks under the hand of the Jew. Enough of opinions thrown from the rooftops; enough scattered documents in this very work, will have awakened the eye and ear of public so that we limit ourselves to not reproducing in this at the moment that a few rare and brief confirmations of our pages

In this Germany, where Jews and auxiliary societies Jewish leaders have long since set their sights on iCunito kill later with ease, and in a single movement, at this form of government: that of the cosmopolitan republic, the historical and political sheets of Munich' published in the year of grace 1862, and on the occasion of Al-'s brochure Ban Stolz on Freemasonry, the grievances of a ma-Berlin court. These pages, it is claimed, passed under the King William's eyes; and the author, however attached he is in the Protestant faith, and is identified there as the greatest danger imminent for the throne and for the altar "the power that The Jews were able to acquire, through Freemasonry, "Rie, a power that would have reached its zenith today."

It exists in Germany, he tells us, – and we leave h Each person bears full responsibility for their words – "there exists a secret society with Masonic forms, which is subject to unknown leaders. The members of this association are for the most part i«raê/ire*; their ranks and systems have not of Christian rites and symbols, but only for form, and ser– The wind there all the better to cover their actions. The Jews they only use Christianity there in mockery or for

'Reproduced in the Brussels newspaper; iJ., in Le Monde, the November 6, 1862.

Digitized by Google.

CHAPTER TEN/ 3i3

to further conceal the obscurity of their plans and their intrigues. »

"These are by no means ridiculous calumnies to– What folly is alone, yet to add faith? No, and Criminals no longer remain in the shadows; they make their presence known. appear as if they were our brothers, and boast of the protection, even the alliance of German princes. Let us add that, in recent times, the Jews have been excluded from a number of lodges; but that, now, they are universally accepted in all lodges worldwide. Berlin, the Jews have arrived, since the death of the pious king Frederick William IV, 'to sneak into the boxes through the back doors. For this they got themselves admitted all– theirs, and they were then granted here centered.' '\now that ' No lodge is inaccessible to them anymore; there are others. lodges composed exclusively of Jews in which the Non-Jews have no access. In London, where it is located, as i

Merston, there are two Jewish lodges that never saw any j Christians cross their threshold. It is there that all the I son of all the revolutionary elements that are brewing in the lodges I 'Christian'.

These revealing words, without exactly repeating our paroles, are far, it seems to us, from diminishing their value.

In Italy, the members of the Supreme Sale were not known to the small number of superior followers to whom they dictated their orders only by nom de guerre. One of the most famous, Ic, companion of the famous Nubius, bore the name of Little Tiger (Piccolo-Tiger). Fearsome and atrocious chama pawn of Oceultism, this potentate of the Sales was a Jew*;

'Reproduced in the Brussels newspaper ;td., in Le Monde, the November 6th tS6î.

* The pseudonymous sycophant Nubius frequented in Rome whichsome of our friends, at the time we visited this city. This Consumed Bceli rat, who had the confidence of Mr. the Prince of Metter-Nich, prime minister to the Emperor of Austria, and thus pumped the Blat's secrets, he was poisoned by his own people after having done some terrible things.
vigils in favor of the anti-Christian revolution.

Digitized by Coogl

iii

THE JÜIKS.

and in the instructions that his pen conveyed to Senior agents of the Picmontais Sales, we read these lines, h the date of January 18, 1822:

"The main thing is to isolate the man from his family, and to
To make him lose your morals. .y. . He likes long conversations coffee, the idleness of shows. Eutrain him, extract him, Give it some importance, teach it to be discreethe was bored with his daily work, and, by this merry-go-round,... after showing him how tiresome they all are Homework, YOU instill in him the desire for another existence.
Man is born a rebel. Fan this desire for rebellion until-that the fire, but that the fire does not break out! It is a preparation for the great work you must begin.
When you have instilled in a few souls a disgust for family and your religion, drop certain words that

This vanity of the city dweller or the bourgeois to identify with the Freemasonry has something so banal and so unified about it.

Versel, whose stupidity I am always in awe of human. I'm surprised not to see the whole world striking-per at the door of all the Venerable Ones, and ask these Gentlemen, the honor of being one of the workers chosen for the Reconstruction of Solomon's Temple!

A lodge similar to the one we just reported in London, that is to say, entirely composed of Jews, and where all the threads of the revolutionary plots woven together in Christian lodges exist in Rome, where it is "the supreme Revolutionary tribunal. From there the other lodges are directed.

'And the circles! The easy life, the knowledge of the circles, where of so many loyal followers, placed under the skillful direction of the leaders of the occultism, unfold, while rubbing shoulders with them, the finest bloodhounds of the Police. Ah! If only mothers knew! But, being a member of such and such a circle, where so much tinsel mingles with so much pure gold, that So good at raising a young man!

2 This symbolic term, whose true meaning is known only to the high and invisible hierarchy of the Temple and Freemasonry, composed of Jewish cabalists, signifies the reconstitution of the power of Judaism. daecular on the ruins of Christianity.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TEN.

345

cornered by secret leaders, so that most of the revolutionaries Christian revolutionaries are nothing but blind puppets. set in motion by Jews through mystery.

"In Leipzig, on the occasion of the fair which brings about..." this city was home to some of the high-ranking Jewish and Christian merchants throughout Europe, the secret Jewish lodge is every time permanent, and no Christian Freemason is ever received there; that is what opened the eyes of more than one of us. In the Jewish lodges in Hamburg and Frankfurt, there are only emi^aires who have access. The name of the latter, Absa-lon aux trois orties, gives a glimpse of its political nature brû-lante {nomen et omenj. » ^

"May the Almighty soften the trials that are-their teeth on the powerful as a result of their carelessness, and their
to make clear what the masonry work requires to revolutionize and republicanize the people in the interest of Judaism! May they remember the prophecy.
of Napoleon I": In fifty years Europe will be republican Cossack came And this other one of/fiurke: A time ^ will come a time when princes will have to become tyrants, because;

that the subjects will have become rebels on principle!* J
If this language were not that of many faithful supporters of the pro-Testamentism, no doubt, would be somewhat suspect to us.
but struck as she was by the anathemas of the Church, the maconnerie includes within its ranks the vast majority of mi-ministers of the reform; the testimonies that reach us from This aspect therefore carries a truly impartial character outstanding.

Excited and facilitated by Israel, the revolutionary movement to whom this enterprising people owed the conquest of its rights the city never ceases and has never ceased to find in the part the stirring of Judaism, the most devoted agents, the propa-

'Where the Judarque ecumenical council of 1869 was held. See in head of this chapter.

^ Historical pages, as above dictated, except for two paragraphs which re-keep the circular from the Jew, the Little Tiger,

Digitized by Google

THE JEWS.

3i6

The most daring and rarest of skills. To be In a Christian country, the equal of a Christian is something dejb for the Jew - but that cannot satisfy the insatiable ambition of this admirable Macbiner; and he knows it all too well to owe its most incredible successes to the constant interplay of associations mysterious cations with which his hand covers the world as a network, to stop and fall asleep b this first stage of his triumph.

"Certainly," he told us himself for a moment.
before repeating with increasing boldness his profession of faith in his council of 1869, "the Israelite would show himself
How ungrateful he would be if he didn't recognize all that he owes to Luther, "has shaken, and for eighty years," that is to say—to say since the proclamation of the theories of 1789, "a ren-poured the old organization (the company. The harsh breath of Persecution no longer forces us to huddle together the others; we can walk alone, without fear

hostile attacks against our persons or our faith

We have observed these trends in modern society; we have seriously considered the consequences that they were to have for our worship," indissolubly linked to the interests of Jewish nationality, "and, far from it having found nothing that demonstrated to us the need to relax—Dear to the bond of community, we have, on the contrary, 'drawn new reasons to maintain and strengthen it'. However, one of the surest ways to strengthen it is to the addition and multiplication of auxiliary communities, of parallel societies, grafted onto that of Judaism, and of the way in which the parallel timbers intended to strengthen the Large beams are applied and riveted to their sides.

For it is not at the moment of victory that the conqueror—Rant relaxes his efforts and gives up both the means and to the benefits of conquest! Wherever the soil of habitable land, wherever its support lends itself to the feet

- Israelite Universe, III, p. 129; 1866.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TEN. 3*7

of the Christian, and in whatever variety of forms the gou—When events occur there, the Jew, more than ever, must therefore consolidate the links that bind one to the other the mem-members of your community; the Jew, more than ever, must besides tightening the bonds of secret societies that his ^ community treats them into obedient girls, and they function to his pro0t!

And the American continent was not to escape him. even this plan, or rather, these instinctive habits from Israel, we will therefore read without surprise the following lines in one of the most accredited organs of Judaism;

There has been frequent talk of the Israelite Cordate of | Beiii-Dérilh, that is to say, the sons of the covenant, which was created ' in the United States. As the importance of this order increases incessantly J and that it is very little known, it seems useful to us

"Wise man of the Grand Master of the Order, M' BF Peixolto."

"The Beni-Berith order sent to the Israelite victims" of cholera, in the East, near S, $000 (25,000 francs). j The Grand Master visits the lodges as often as possible. affiliated. This year, he visited those of eleven cities considered- bles. 11 opened conferences and delivered speeches there. to instruct them in their duties as sons of the king, to strengthen in them the feeling and love of objects superiors pursued by the Order, namely: advancement moral and intellectual of the family of Israel, and the most perfect among its members. This cowardice is all the more urgent 1 that the Israelite population of America having been formed of diverse races and nationalities, there must have been some ' divergences and antipathies that must be mitigated.' • ,

Masonic lodges, which the Christian Church condemns, * They therefore become indispensable substitutes for Israel. of the Synagogue; and, even within the heart of the republics With greater freedom, Judaism yields to the need to spread only to the shadow of mystery, and in the depths of the boxes, what he calls 'Archives Israélites, XX, p. 885-6; 1866.

Digitized by Google

348

THE JDIFS.

the intellectual and moral education of his family, "the love of* higher objectives pursued by the Order," and the rallying cry the thing that makes the adopted brothers march in step with brothers of the same blood.

Aided in all the kingdoms of the earth by the help mutual support that the members of their community; aided by the resources they draw from mixed associations and patents /txxAés by the relief and the protection that companies owe them and provide to them secret, where their position is the supreme position, and whose power- equal or dominant power today, citizens of their own nation and citizens of the nation that adopts, that is to say, twice a citizen, and twice splendid well protected in the homeland where every Christian does not there is only one, the Jews, whose cunning, whose audacity and Know-how has always been a proverbial thing, have on every native of the Christian states the most indisputable to increase an already considerable influence. Simple observation the source of the event, the cause of which he did not seem to be able to discern,

A man of wit of Israelite descent wrote, therefore, some time ago for some time, truthfully: The Jews "fulfill, pro-reserved portion, and thanks to their insistence, more jobs* than the other Catholic and Protestant denominations. Their disastrous influence is felt especially in the alternators who weigh most heavily on the country's fortunes / there is no one among-
No loan, of which the Jews do not have their large share.
no public that they do not monopolize, no disaster that they have not foreseen.
prepared and from which they do not benefit, they are therefore ill-advised to to complain, as they always do, they who have all the favors and who make all the profits!

In short, forces strong against each of us that lend them the laws of the States; strengthened by those that their
.gives to the midst of the mass of peoples the organization
. natural of the Jewish community; strong from those which they
. ■ * Cerfberr de Medelsheim, The Jews, p. 9; Paris, 4,847.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TEN. 349

borrowing from occult societies and alliances created by these societies according to the needs of the times and places,
The Jews, as Klubcr observes, form at within the Christian kingdoms a state within a state, k Of the Does it ever happen that Christian society remains worthy of its name?
and faithful to the defense of its rights, that an antagonism per-
"A conflict between the state and Judaism becomes inevitable," and that the triumph of the Jew is—that is—the upheaval of Christian states, or of Christian civilization, is the
An inevitable consequence of this struggle.

SECOND DIVISION. — MEANS OF INFLUENCE, VI MILITARY:

gold.

Gold is the master of the world; gold possesses us, and the Jew possesses-sed the gold. — Enormity of the power that the Jew owes to his gold, to his genius to make him sweat. — Never so much as nowadays Gold was not the sinews of war and peace, nor the desire of families.
the seasoning of all honor, the crowning of all glory and of all nobility. — The statesmen of Europe on their knees before the Jew. — Nothing without the Jew's consent; how he reigns under the forms or appearances of Christian kings. — Through gold, he governs
The occult societies that govern the world. — Power without

She dies, scorned by the Jew and his auxiliaries. – Only one remedy to this immense evil. – These facts, this power, astonish us; the astonishment felt by one of the prime ministers of the Great Brittany, and its saying that it would be madness to forget it. – Final note on one of the potentates of Judaism.

Between the auxiliaries of the Jew's power, based on the organization of occult societies which we have Given that his nation's type is the one we will refrain from It's good to forget about gold; gold, which paganism accused of to change and corrupt morals—the gold that Christ has cursed, because it softens the soul and hardens the heart; gold, the tempter of all consciences, and, in his cold mu-ism, the most irresistible of orators—, gold, the sovereign of

'A blow to the diplomatic deliberations of the Congress of Vienna,' t. III, p. 390; Kluber.

Digitized by Google

350

THE JEWS.

multitudes whose enumeration is beyond all Calculation! Simple metal, yet, but to whom 'out what can To be bought, sold, or surrendered. And who will tell us the truth? or the man who does not have his selling price list, apart from the atmosphere that envelops and protects man sincerely religious?

"Venest city!" cried Ingurtha Franchis in his fury. ing the threshold of Rome, that wretched Republic whose senators and generals, accustomed to looting all the provinces, had so often humbled their souls before gold that this formidable leader had offered them; venal city! that Is there no merchant rich enough to buy it? Today this merchant exists – he is everywhere.

Sovereign master and lord of gold, the Jew, who ever had no cause to lament this inadequacy, therefore, is the lord and the master of the powers of the earth. In other words, Gold owns the world, and the Jew owns gold!

But let's just take a quick look at a few of them. points relating to this chapter on gold; let's not consider anything beyond what is enough to reveal to us the immensity, the enor-

inimitable in making him sweat, through instinct, talent, and genius which he is gifted with the ability to raise above all heights credit, and to balance it in such a way that shaking it let's shake the world! Let's leave it at that, according to our
As usual, everyone is responsible for their own words, and let's do observe by producing the writers who had the rare gene-the audacity to grapple with the Jewish colossus, that if hyperbole happens to slip into certain menus details of their pages, their prodigious claims do not generally deserve no other criticism than that of exposing with inadequacy the truths of which they claim to be the revealers.
Finally, let us say that if the Jews are first and foremost, if they were Throughout history, the kings of finance, never more so than In our time, money was not the sinews of war and peace.
life, the soul of politics and industry, of commerce

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TEN.

351 and all human transactions, happiness and the family relief, seasoning of all distinctions, of all dignity, all honor, the crowning glory and of utmost nobility. Let us repeat this at the same time as never before.

that power, which in all ages had its abode or for the citadel, the Jew's safe, did not concentrate there in one in a manner as prodigious and formidable as in our time.

In Germany, "following the secularization of property and ecclesiastical principalities, financial difficulties of the nobility and loans contracted with the governors nineteenth-century Jews became a power before which the greatest men bow dCÉtat, and which, from time to time, has shaken thrones.
This iiiGuence, acquired by force of circumstances, by the efforts of the school of philosophical publicists who since the middle of the eighteenth century used every lever to overturning religion and Christian society, made eman-the corporatization of Jews, that is to say, the equality of civil rights and the policies of Jews and Christians, a real question vital to European politics

What if, turning our eyes away from Germany, we...
Let's turn our attention to two of the wealthiest countries in Europe, a strongly anti-Catholic writer, stopping them there with a gesture of of speech: "The workers who become exhausted, and die

k the penalty, on three-quarters of the globe's surface, work to enrich a few thousand nabobs fai-nothingness of Judah, Amsterdam and London*! »

Terrified by the boundless power that, under the au-

'Goschler, of Jewish origin, German Encyclopedic Dictionary, by the most learned prures and doctors of theology in Germany, .
t. XII, p. 451; 1861.

* Toussenel, The Jews, Kings of the Era, preface, p. v; 1847. – The An-England, that country where, when it happens that the Israeli banker marries one of his daughters, the Jewish press hurries, in rēpanouisseraenl de his pride, to make us observe the splendors of this marriage equal or even surpass the royal magnificence of the Universe Israelite, V, p. 139; 1867.

Digitized by Google

354 THE JEWS,

piccs of Vollairian philosophy, focused on finance,
the same economist, turning our attention back to France, he added, during the reign of Louis-Philippe d'Orléans: "The
The King may well appoint to the positions of officer and judge, to jobs whose holders enjoy a salary of twelve hundred to three thousand francs; but all the jobs high or lucrative in France, or even those of the magistrature, are at the Jew's appointment. It is the Jew who distributes the general revenues to his pious servants, and dismisses the general receivers who are hindering him. The Jew, excluded owner-sif of the transport administration throughout the kingdom,
"It will soon have more employees on its own than the state."

An enormous influence, an already formidable power emanates from it.
of the Jews and makes itself felt far and wide. The King himself, without Their cooperation, "does not make treaties. I defy the King and Les Chambers to make a customs alliance treaty, a treaty of cotton, coal, iron, which the Jews do not want!
Anzin did not want Belgium to join the France, and this meeting did not take place... Before the law had the railways been granted to the Jew, every traveler could-would circulate freely on the main road, on the cobblestones of the lioi'. Since all means of communication, railways, Canals, rivers, belong to the Jew; no one can pass through them anymore without to pay him tribute.

Oh you, passerby, would you be able to tell us "who holds the Arm of commerce? – The Jew. – Who has the monopoly on Gold and mercury? – The Jew. – Who will soon have the Monopoly of coal, salt and tobacco? – The Jew. – Who has a monopoly on advertisements? – The Saint-Simonian, the Jew's servant '... If air could be seized and sold, he "There would be a Jew to seize it and buy it..."

'See note A, at the end of this division.

2 The immoral and unhealthy sect of the Saint-Simonians, to whom we owe free trade, a prelude to the unification of peoples, to what extent a large number of Jews in its aristocracy.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TEN. 351

"Why, in the matter of sugars, have we crushed our maritime trade and our colonies'?... Because, In the sugar question, all national interests are in direct opposition to the interests of the raffia clique neurs, etc., etc., etc., – who are connected to high finance, and that the Chambers and the Power were only concerned with "One thing: to truly deserve the financial powers." Because Gold holds absolute power; gold is the overlord of kings. And this overlord is the instrument, the property of the Jew. He commands the world, and the Jew possesses it*! And besides, a council where Jews must sit in the majority does not Doesn't he settle the debt with the gold from the revolutionary contributions? the supreme agents of the occult flock to its coffers. ism? Doesn't he hold in his hands the threads of all these secret societies that govern the most powerful today Holy States of the earth? Nothing will therefore take away Mr. Cerfberr, writer of Jewish descent, the merit of having "one of the pre- • Miers opened their eyes to a power that strikes with terror men whose gaze is turned towards the future!

Because times have their signs, which are not easy to understand. to be mistaken. Also, in the scene where it pleases Mr. About to to shamefully drag a religious figure before the public who came to extend his charitable hand to a Jewish baron, will we have– we noticed these words of high insolence and sinister truth, which delights the eye of its readers:

"No one would be strong enough to demand expulsion" Jews, while Christians are petitioning today to get yours*, and they chase you away, we might add, in the very name of liberty, everywhere the Revolution reigns lution, whose principles are those professed by the Jew!

< Read this curious passage, and so many others from the Jews kings of the period, Toussenel, v. I, p. 19, etc.

^Toussenel, 1. 1, pp. 10-19-20; 1847. – Id., Cerfberr, the Jews, p. 1, 1847.

® Cerfberr, The Jews, p. 1; 4847.

* L'Univers israélite, p. 420; September 1864.

23

Digitized by Google

354

THE JEWS.

In short, then, the sinews of war and peace, the the lifeblood of every public service, every business, and every association, the nerve center of all power and all enjoyment,
In other words, the strength of a world where all Religious belief dies out, it's finance, it's gold, this
It is and can only be gold; gold that commands and commands
Tell me the idea: gold that forges and pays for iron, sword or machine, intended for the realization of the idea; the gold that reigns in souverain, and who expresses himself like a despot; the gold that humbleslies at the feet of him whose hand spreads it kings and nobles, ministers and subjects, philosophers and women, science and arts, laws and morals! Every day that passes, alas!
makes the brilliance of this truth all the more terrible, and makes us see,
Ultimately, gold is the Jew!

Yes, to name gold, or finance; to name a value any, or credit; it is, from one end to the other of our • globe, name the Jew, who possesses us by possessing him. Sou-colossal, exorbitant, implacable, constantly growing truth health, and without any imaginable control other than that of the laws Christian women, scorned today by the Jew, our supreme schoolteacher, and by his assistants.

To one of these Jews, a financial king, a character we reports that he let slip, by naming one of his Jewish rivals: Ah! If only this man and I could
If we understand each other, will there soon be anything else left for Christians?

But, in fact, what monarch, what state can today...
today to raise armies, to build fleets and roads,
to dig its canals, to distribute its jobs, its dignities,
to sleep peacefully, to arm for war, to stir, to function, to flinch, to breathe freely in a word, if he has no support the countersignature, the agreement, the good pleasure of his master, the Jewish?

The Jew holds us in his grip, he is our master, not only because we no longer possess gold, but, let us repeat constantly, because it is gold that possesses us; because

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TEN 366

pride, luxury, lust, thirst, rage of all power and all enjoyment have seized our souls. He will only let go in the face of the resurrection of education.
Christian teaching that inspires humility and moderation in man, honesty, sobriety, dedication, consideration and respect for the weak and poor. Until then, therefore, we must endure hardship.
to remain with the words that resounded a holy priest from of Israelite blood, and which summarize our last pages:

"Naturally skilled, ingenious, and possessed by in- '
Driven by a instinct for domination, the Jews gradually invaded all the avenues that lead to wealth and dignity and in power. Their spirit gradually infiltrated the modern civilization. They control the Stock Exchange, the press, the theatre, literature, administration, major roads I of communication on land and sea, and, by the ascendant 1 of their fortune and their genius, they hold tightly, to i at this time, as in a network, the whole of Christian society yours '. » }

Did we hear these words? Did we understand them?
Shots? No! Not yet! They seem to surprise us, and Our astonishment makes the prime minister smile with pity.
of the Kingdom of Great Britain, one of the princes of the modern politics, one of the valiant supporters of Protestantism Anglicanism, one of the sons of the Jewish race, and which, in the blossoming of Jewish pride, cries out: Truly,

"The world is governed by entirely different characters"
How can those whose eyes do not penetrate imagine it?
behind the scenes*!

® The world is governed by very different characters to what is imagined by those who are not behind the scene. — Disraeli in Coningsby, a book in which this statesman highlights the value of the Jews p. 184; Paris, 1844, in-8". . '

NOTE.

Mr. Baron de Rothschild, Grand Cross of the Legion of Honour, Knight of etc., etc., etc., Consul of Austria, left upon dying 13.

Digitized by Google

356

THE JEWS.

four sons, and something, he said to himself, like eight hundred million fortune. At the legal rate of five percent, eight hundred million produced sent per year eight hundred times fifty thousand francs, that is to say forty millions. What power in the hands of the owner of such an income!

Let us add that the five percent rate is only a flat interest rate. bourgeois, and that it is impossible for us to know to what degree the fertility of crowns rises under the hand of a banker, but above under the control of the high lords and princes of the Bank. What Everyone in Paris knows, and that saves us from going into detail, it's that, among certain classes of people in finance, computer language— The average of the product, we, does not qualify as usurers in any way; we Let's not say that the interest on money is twenty-five percent. For these financiers, eight hundred million would generate an income of two hundred million!

It is stated that in 1812 Mr. de Rothschild only owned a single million, and it is said that this banker gives to his eldest son, as a pre-existing inheritance, and, apart from that, his magnificent land of Ferrières, in Seine-et-Marne, in addition to the sum of two hundred million. Whatever his fortune, Mr. de Rothschild, not being French, if we are not mistaken, has the privilege, in France, of being the true owner of one's fortune. The state therefore cannot afford to test for itself. as he does for us, by taking care of our children. Mr. de Rothschild therefore makes his shares as he sees fit, in the interest of his house. France can thus cover itself with high and powerful lords, ground, and to their grace, the power to which we cannot lay claim, because we are only French there. In other words, a French, to acquire the privilege of being the true owner of his properties, must renounce his French citizenship and become stranger *.

A famous financier has just died, one of our leading figures tells us. and true economists, Mr. Coquille. Some attribute his fortune to eight hundred million, others with the fabulous figure of two billion (i.e., five hundred million in annuities with a yield of twenty-five percent). Several newspapers seized the opportunity to praise selflessness. of Mr. de Rothschild, and the services he rendered to France. R eût It would have been better if France had not needed these services. For it It is all too obvious that Mr. de Rothschild's fortune has not increased than by our financial disasters. Isn't it shameful that companies Are modern people always short of money? Nothing indicates that "Weakness of mind of our leaders."

And that's how Jews, even the most honest ones, become the suckers

1. Read the excellent work by Mr. Le Play, Senator, on these questions, etc.: The Re.-social form in France, Paris, Plon, 1864.

* Le Monde, November 23 and 24; irf., 1868. • – La Proviileuce, they say The Israelite Archives bestowed upon this family a fortune beyond princely proportions. VII, p. 213! 1869.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TEN. 357

and the fate of the peoples whom madness destines to fall under their scepter. Because wasteful governments are made in the image of certain Sons of wealthy families eager to enjoy themselves. The Jews are there to make them... more gracious advances; the ease of borrowing tempts these imprudent people; They succumb to it and are lost! And then, the fortune that the Jews have acquired, and perhaps through legal or accepted means that we Let's refrain from saying legitimate, but rather puts in their hands the means of action of the civilized world, whose study teaches us about usage I – They say enormous, monstrous, the gains that the revolution must bring to the Jewish Bank Italian, whose anti-Catholic character is quite prominent. Happy is revolutionary Italy meeting such financiers otherwise I

We are not familiar with Mr. de Roth-'s banking operations schild, nor the political views of this potentate; but we have not heard to speak well of the private man, and we bear witness to his numerous acts of charity, not only to his fellow believers, but to

One thing struck us: it was not seeing among the art objects no sculpture, no painting whose modesty might suffer. Com-
Many Christian homes could envy him this glory!

THIRD DIVISION. – THE PLEDGENT AND TEACHING WORD, THE PRESS.

Another power of which the Jew makes himself an auxiliary; his representatives Honorable, and not. – Services that the Jew admits to owing him. – She has not yet finished Judaizing the world, but patience I – The various categories of men in the press. – Despotism without limits of the master of a newspaper. – In many newspapers, what Is he a despot? – Mystery 1 – Characteristics of his position. – His merit lies in the sureness of his hand in choosing his stewards or of his literary workers. – Places teeming with these people of high and low pay. – Like all property, every newspaper constantly changing owners, tenants, and consequently of es-taken. – The Jew buys, exploits, or has exploited most of the important documents. – Its influence on opinion, on ideas religious, commercial, industrial, and political enterprises tics: the Jew, through them, deceives and leads governments and gu-Vernés. – Despite the large number of honest writers, the
The press is, by its very nature, essentially venal; harm is no longer in-
No one was more interested in buying it than the Jew, and no one had any more gold to pay
But does the press have any real value? – Example too Brilliant as it is sharp. – A government and a major newspaper, organ of financial stability. – Whatever the power
In newspapers, the Jew is, or is becoming, the master almost everywhere.
but without appearing. – More than any other country, Germany...
shows this power of the Jew. – Events in Europe depend on about ten men, Jews or auxiliaries of the Jew.

Digitized by Google

358

THE JEWS.

A frightening and prodigious word from the former Prime Minister of Great Britain Brittany, of Jewish Mng, Disraeli. – This word and that of Mr. the Prince Metternich confirms our pages. – Appendix. – Prodigi- depravity of the clergy at the triclinium, not long ago; it was the work-
v of Jansenism and the Jew. – Prodigious depravity of the senses moments of honor and patriotism, and by whom.

A second power is at the forefront of those that have press; perhaps naive, instead of using that term, Should we say public speech, vibrant speech?

of the speaker; the words of the professor of the great chairs who, within Germany, for example, are platforms of a strange resonance; the speech more serious, but more muted, from the political or religious writer, who barely reaches the ear except through weakened eardrums.
occupied by the crowd; finally, the words of the journalist whose daily cowardice is to give a noisy echo to each to comment on these other words, to distort them, to embellish them, to extinguish their brilliance, or to crown them with glory by helping them spread splendors in their wake of a radiant meteor.

The press, and we hasten to proclaim it, comjite in our France and within Europe many and very honorable representatives; but this reservation made, and the Justice demands it, we cannot hesitate to recognize that his Virtue too often is merely a suspect virtue, and such is the term that even the most polite in their language. For, from one part of Europe to another, Gold and the press are all too often accused of being among the...
to maintain secret and highly illegitimate relations with one another;
and if already the Jew holds "in a censal the Christian society-yours entirely," the crime is most often at seductive qualities that her hand makes sparkle in the eyes of the press, which became one of the most irresistible agents of his dominant genius nator. But the press—to sum up in itself all the the question of public speech — is it to the Jew of what kind?
What serious use would it have? Would it sell to the Jew? The Jew, in one word, could he buy, would he know how to build or maneuver, for the benefit of its interests and doctrines, the major War machines of the press?...

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TEN. 359

The services that the Jew owes to the press are depicted in the very words which the Jewish Archives tickle
The ears of Israel rejoiced, and these words are quite clear.
so that each of us can grasp its meaning and scope.
Because what the Jew calls intolerance and prejudice, fanaticism and barbarity, these are the very principles of belief and of Christian civilization; we know it, and we do not can we allow ourselves to be disappointed by this: "If prejudices diminish-Nuent, one of the major Jewish journals tells us, is that our words and our writings spread; it is that the close. » Nothing, in fact, is more effective, « for us to guarantee against a return to excesses, that development of our literary works'. » 11 There is no longer, it is true, "that rare countries where the rights of our brothers are protected" known. It can be said that intolerance and fanaticism are defeated, but prejudices are not, they still remain. days. They can be found in every country, in the most advanced—these are the same as in the most backward, and in all classes, "In the most enlightened as well as the most illiterate."

In short, the evil from which the Jew complains of suffering has conserved in the soil some roots; that is to say that the civilizing principles of Christianity still have some influence. life; that is to say, the Judaizing press, despite its brilliance and the immensity of the successes she acknowledges, has not been enough for us Judaized again! However, today, few people informed, and we must emphasize here the assertions of which the

'Almost no one, even among those most interested in knowing them, does not read overtly Jewish books and newspapers; the public knows barely exists. It is therefore clear that these books and these newspapers Israelites are those whom He inspires, to shape our minds and hearts, the governing body of Judaism, the one which, in its ecumenical council—The law of 1869 tells us which principles govern the affairs of the Jew. Ci—above, the first pages of this chapter x.

2 Israelite Archives, XIV, p. 607; 4866; ib., XVII, p. 750.

Digitized by Google

360

THE JEWS.

The public will be the supreme judge, unaware that, in our In Europe, the press allowed the... to pass into the hands of the Jew the most considerable part of its power

What! The press bowing to the yoke of Judah's sons?
Oh blasphemy! And what language could explain the phenomenon—leads to servility from a power that we know to be So proud? How could you! The most boisterous champions of the freedom, the most liberal representatives of the press European, would not govern the world, — if it is true that May your Jews be their rulers, — that under the pledges and the
The penis of a monarch who calls himself an outcast?

to add little to its transparency, and perhaps then Will any reasonable reason appear to conclude that the
The kings of finance are the rulers of a vast region in the field of journalism.

A few lines, and which no honest man... will hurt, we must remember here that, among the writers of The press, some of them are party people, but carried away by ardent and often generous passions, including their rise elevates them above the baseness of the writer who is sold; these, we pity them, and we are far away to despise them; many of them have conquered our confidence, and our hope is that their prejudices will drown
One day in the flood of light. Others, more thoughtful.
and above all, more enlightened, are men of conscience and of devotion: the Catholic camp is teeming with them; others
They still rank among the depraved, corrupt men, created for the worship and service of evil: the beauties of The religion of Christ is an object of horror to them! Others Finally, simply flat and vile, they were made, under the inspiration of attention to their needs or their senses, pen-wielding servants. And who has not seen many times, with us, sometimes this one, sometimes that one, a soldier in the dawn of a fallen dynasty, protectiona staunch nationalist, a valiant champion of some idea or other, to find himself that very evening the man of the government standing there,

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TEN.

361

the eloquent advocate of free trade, the boss, the protector ardent for an idea, an interest completely contrary to those for Which ones, at the break of dawn, did he pour his ink? It is that, in the field of journalism, the simple writer, illicit to be distinguished from the man with serious convictions, is only too often, alas! the supple and very humble servant of a master who, in a voice exemplifying gentleness and consideration, He commands his service militarily. He then remains at this
What a pity the freedom to obey or starve to death!

But what all-powerful and invisible despot is looming?
in the highest heavens, in the sublime spheres of the newspaper?
What is its mysterious inspiration, its driving force, its soul, the God? — Indeed, the man of trouble would be very audacious.
who sells the sweat of his eloquence to this supreme master, if

to his lips the letters that make up his name. Eh
What! The cashier on the slip of paper is counting him right on the due date the price of his prose k so much the task, k so much the meter, and his Curiosity is not satisfied! Ah! Let him write, let him loiter, or let his pen fly, but let him have the tact to remain silent, if he does not give up on receiving his wages

The true man of the press, and he alone represents it.
whether he can write or not know how to hold a pen, whether he whether alone or whether it calls itself a society, company, legion, because
The name does nothing but the thing itself; this man is, in every sheet, the one who can say of the newspaper: This is my property, It's me, it's me. These words are quite an opinion.
clear k anyone who, if this sheet is available, claims to to give it as an auxiliary or for oi^ane. He knows that desor-but he must finance and contract with her; otherwise, To please him or to convince him. Of these two options, the first is considered to be the most general and the safest.

However, the owner, the master of this machine, will stir

'La Finance is a French newspaper, but it is printed in Belgium-because she wants to live and maintain the freedom of her lifestyle.
Its editor-in-chief is Mr. Crampon, a witty and skillful writer.

Digitized by Google

I

36Î THE JEWS.

public opinion, this latent speculator, which most often and in most of the states in Europe are of Jewish race or extends his hand to the favors of the Jew, has never sometimes nor
He didn't fabricate or polish a single sentence. But one of his merits
It is about having a sure hand in choosing one's subordinates.
of its literary entrepreneurs, themselves skilled at to provide these artists with style, whose number is immense already, it grows every day, thanks to the impolitic and cruel a kind of education that is relentlessly provided to the classes needy. Trained as these mercenaries are, the art of to turn a sentence, and inevitably foreign or hostile to most social doctrines, all principles of fixity,
You see them turning their talent into a profession that cannot be... would admit to unemployment, and argue without restraint
the hand that deigns to offer them a wage.

Such are, in a large part of Europe, the people

procures a certain press; eager artisans that we Let us see countless crowds rushing to offer their services, and, without flinching, submit to the orders of the chief ctatelkr who engage them, the joyful destroyers of the social order of Christian countries. Now, these pen-puppet lackeys, and we want to avoid a stronger term than the one Lamartine used, are not the Most of the time, and almost always without their knowledge, that the executors of the Jew's works, exactly to pay what was promised, and gifted with a rare skill to hide the hand that draws up the plans and pays for the work.

vain. No one can choose, in this double and precarious specialty of journalism list and doctor es-fmanes, does not bring out with more talent and Courage over the mercantilism and venality of the press. Mr. Crampon directs its attacks openly, and its tactic is to produce facts, beside which it must be admitted that his arguments become sometimes a true luxury. We have noticed, among its various numbers, that of February 17, 1868. Read in this sheet, for example, the article on contemporary journalism, and the one that begins with These words: Has the commercialism of the press reached its peak?

We do not know Mr. Crampon, and we have no relationship with his diary, which is the terror of those he loves not to resemble.

Digitized by Googic

CHAPTER TEN. 363

We insisted on not saying a word to the delk of the necessthe strictest security on the visible and invisible personnel of these organs of public opinion. And, we all know that chathat periodical sheet, that each newspaper is a property; that similar h any object, b any building capable of attempting a buyer, he changes masters each time death or that propriety requires it. We know that it sells then at auction, and the buyer is free to take leave-to remove the tenant, that is to say the spirit that inhabits him, in order to to house and set up their own. Thanks, therefore, to the abundance of his gold, the Jew is, sometimes openly and sometimes under a name borrowed, the purchaser of this mobile property which leans and constantly spills onto its .ground.

Let us add to these general notions a reflection: that is The influence of religious ideas is spreading, especially today, far beyond the limits assigned to them by the common people.
govern, in a thousand circumstances, the politics of peoples-, and the nature of this policy depends on either the march or the slumber of businesses in the trade channels and public documents that give rise to these leading ideas and who compress them as needed, who knead them, and form-

- their opinion, according to the wishes of their master, is They, even more often, are the ones who deceive governments and governed by presenting themselves as the representatives of this This opinion, whose place they boldly usurp.
unfortunate fact, and one that cannot escape the notice of The observer tells us quite clearly what an indispensable instrument have become these pages of interests and machinations of the Jew, the prince of all the merchants of the earth, and, in the interests of his business and his faith, the politician
The most Machiavellian man in the world!

Full of confidence that we are in the penetration-out of respect for our readers, we point out these things at the end of the pen, and we say, without the slightest fear of hurting the considerable number of writers Gdeles to the laws of

Digitized by Google

364

THE JEWS.

the honor, which the press is, by the very nature of its constitution and the uses to which it consents, essentially mercenary. As such, it belongs to the most offering; the highest bidder, when he wants to, is the Jew, and this
The chapter will not be finished until the mouth of Israel itself-even does not open to give our words proof without reply, and legitimize conclusions that at first glance would have seemed reckless.

But before proceeding, it is important for us to know,
other than through words, if the press, this form proud of the opinion that she calls herself the queen of the world, has really of some value, and if the alleged power of this lever wielded by the Jew's arm is or is not a overrated power.

It is truly insignificant, some tell us, less than nothing, a kind of void; for its two poles Opposites balance each other. - Ah! Leave it!
"Quite the opposite," the others chime in; "she is She alone is everything! She is the force of forces, and the most
The firm of powers could not stand before it.
Of these two statements, is one acceptable?

We will simply give an answer:

example of the value that a government founded by journalists, simply appreciating press services and owner of a considerable number of newspapers, attached k
the most prominent of these leaves. But was this leaf
Was she mercenary? Did she use this or that to benefit the first person who came along?
What price did she pay for her favors? Did she prostitute herself to strangers, her crazy tenderness and his loves? Or rather, and without attributing to him Was she one of those whose baseness governments
They compensate through subsidies and pardons, for the penalties that they give themselves to serve them and losses of which the the sympathies they show them become for them an inevitable source? Thus it is established, by naming this for-
Mr. Toussenel, one of our most exemplary members, is a commendable member of the Debates c

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TEN.

365 spiritual investigators. Hyperbole and injustice mingle-

They held his word, which he proudly upheld before the public.
Responsibility? We are too ignorant of the facts which He has filled his pages, so as not to refrain from placing k side of his judgment ours. But the staff of Debauchery, even if it had remained what it was then, it would be justice to to point out to our reader that no assertion of Mr. Toussenel, - and we are far from reproducing them in their entirety, - does not exceed the year of his book (Paris, 1847).

Under a prince who was a protector and admirer of the Jews', and of which this newspaper was the most accredited organ, bursts the Mr. Toussenel's cry: The Jews! The Jews are the kings of the times! This cry becomes the title of his book, and we read there these words: "Financial feudalism has, in order to make known his good pleasure to the men of the nominal government, his official journal, the Journal of Debates l »

K Ou dared to print that every ministry was required to to pay the Journal des Débats an enormous contribution of war. - Is this true? - There were great ministers who tried to free themselves from this onerous protectorate, Mr. de Villèle, among others. But Mr. de Villèle was overthrown by a coalition in which the Debates figure gloriously-

Journal of Debates, the three years of arrears,... Mr. Thiers also had, one day, what is claimed, the desire to re- to revolt against the despotism of the Debates. But old Entelle with a single stroke of his pen, he vanquished the presumptuous Dares, who immediately put his thumbs down, begged for forgiveness, and fought with 'to make peace with the newspaper cashier. The act of con- Trition was accepted.

"Mr. Guizot and Mr. Duchâtel are proud of their eagerness- to execute the slightest orders of the Journal des Débats: "If it's possible, it's done; if it's impossible, we'll do it!" They serve him his subsidy on his knees, and on a golden platter.

' Ut suprâ, Bédarride, p. 430; ed., 1861.

Digitized by Google

366

THE JEWS.

The devotion of M. de Montalivet to the Journal det Débau de- crosses the line into servility-that is, properly speaking, by- first, the Journal des Débats which reigns supreme inside when Mr. de Montalivet is a minister. Mr. de Montalivet must have caused a The July Dynasty was wrong immensely, even more so because of its entourage than for his actions-not only because that he has cluttered all public offices with the worst writers Debates, but because he has accustomed public opinion to doing in- to involve the King's name in all the press's manipulations ministerial, and to consider the Journal des Débauchers as the organ of the castle, of the court party. And how at- Would anyone in the public have doubted the intimacy that reigned between the royalty of the rue des Prêtres and that of the Tuileries, when The list of editors of the newspaper included all The names of the princes' tutors?

"I was able to live there as long as I wanted, under On April 15th, the region of favors, sinecures, and gra- tifications. I don't know why, despite my affections for the power, I have never been able to stay in this region More than a month. He needs to get out of this official environment. a scent of moral rickets and silvery harshness which "It suffocates the kind-hearted man!"

These words from Mr. Toussenel are not ambiguous; But wouldn't it matter to us to know what is in him-gives us a sample of the importance of some Newspaper clippings? Well, that's said in the most... firm: the Journal des Débats is first and foremost "the official organ of The high bank, not the castle. He will protect the court as long as the court remains docile to the will of the powerful lords of rue Bergère and rue Laffitte; otherwise, no; and His devotion to the dynasty will go no further. The Journal The Debau family buried many dynasties in their lifetime, and He swore a long time ago never to get attached to anyone again. 'such fragile institutions'.

' 76., p. 6 to 9, vol. 11.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TEN.

367

This newspaper of the high bank, whose Jewish lords of the Bergère and of the rue LaiBUe would be the princes, "is therefore a true power, almost oILGcielleraent Recognized in Europe? And indeed, he sometimes has fun b. to prick the Emperor of Russia in the nostrils. There is no coronation of the Emperor of Austria or the Queen of England land without an extraordinary envoy from the Journal des Débauchers. But this sheet is above all the large profit sheet. the red book of the current reign. I dare you to enter a public library, in an amphitheater of the Col- the Palace of France or the Sorbonne, without banging your head b. an editor of the Debates. The Court of Cassation, the Court accounts, the Council of State, embassies, the Council Royal Minister of Public Instruction, everything falls under his jurisdiction!

Mr. de Broglie had the excellent idea of returning a an order that reserved consulates for students of the Fifth School of the councils. Mr. de Broglie's ordinance never had any meaning; the true school, the only school of the consuls, is the Journal of Debates. The Journal of Debates has its own section. General B in Baghdad (a Jew), another in Alexandria, another b Jerusalem, uu another b Genoa, not to mention an embassy- deur b Constantinople. Mr. Adolphe Guérault, a former saint-Simonian, then editor of Débats, a man of wit, was... was causing trouble in Europe; Mr. Guizot, to get him out of trouble, has found a consulate... The Journal des Débau can do anything, even good! But he does not abuse it; however, he will be given par-

"The French Academy and the theatre fall under the purview of the newspaper—your Debauchery, like the ministries, the embassies, the consulates and the rest fall under the jurisdiction of the first-tier Paris » In

In short, the Journal des DébaU, this "journal of feudalism" financial," of which the Jews are the princes, "is the arbiter "supreme of the nation's destiny!"

We will stop at this point, and, leaving the appreciation to... the reader is presented with a series of singularly biting pages, 'Toussenel, the Jews kings of the era, vol. II, p. 12, 43, 6, 10.

Digitized by Google

368

THE JEWS.

we would ask anyone who glances at this sample from the French press, on "this official organ of the high bank, whose leaders are Jews, to tell us Is journalism nothing? If, sometimes taken as a whole and sometimes—early on, member by member, is it a power? If it is a power also great in the brilliance of its services, when one reduces the need to acquire them, which is formidable because his hostilities when one has not been able to give oneself the strength to to make them despicable? But, in whatever sense... pronounces the sentence, which a thousand mouths will join in a thousand different sides k ours to affirm, is that, on our continent, the vast majority of the organs of the the press lives in dependence on the Jew; this is because the founders authors of the greatest number of these sheets, and sometimes even the writers who write them are of Jewish race; it is that, rather, owner or supreme director Israel holds these newspapers to its promises, and behind the curtain, an assortment of religious and political writers, of men of science and fiction, most of whom, thus qne in the ranks of the Masonic hierarchy k which This press belongs to them, they don't know what their true master, nor what the plan and purpose of the complex work are a delegate of this master makes them carry out the details

Having said that, we believe that Germany is, for the moment, the region of Europe which places in their most These two facts stand out: 1° the power of speech ej, especially the one that uses the press as its organ; 2" the lion's share that the Jew has taken in possession and in the use of this power.

Statesman in the service of the German Great Power nique, and as insightful as he is shrewd, one of our friends, – one of those rare Protestants who remained faithful to the divinity of Christ, – wrote to us in December 1865;
"For the present times, I believe the Jews are very active in ruin-

'These things are neither solely nor primarily for France.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TEN.

369

to lay the foundations of our society and to prepare for revolutions tions. They belong to an admirably well-endowed race, which produces geniuses in all fields and in all trends; I mean original men, of a high intelligence and great power to act. In Holland, for example, two of the most prominent evangelical Protestants-fluents were two converted Jews, from Acosta and Cappadosc;
In Germany, the great Church historian, Neander, was likewise born into an Israelite family^ k Neuchâtel, in the opposing camp, the most tireless and most Happy with atheism, he is a Jew, an exile from Germany.
who has managed to carve out a magnificent position for himself in this country;
The state is providing him with extensive treatment and has built him an observatory.
Since the revolutionary resurgence of 1848, I I found myself in contact with a Jew who, out of vanity, betrayed the secrets of the secret societies to which he had belonged partner, and who warned me eight to ten days in advance of all the revolutions that were about to erupt on a certain point,
"Conch of Europe."

"I owe him the unwavering conviction that all these great movements of oppressed peoples, etc., etc., are combined by half a dozen individuals who give their orders to the secret societies of all of Europe!

"The ground is completely mined beneath our feet, and the Jews provide a large contingent of these miners... The ban-Quier Jews will soon be, through their prodigious fortunes, our masters and lords. >^I am finally told "that all

"Hands of the Jews" The first leagues of this letter

They told us what their task was.

A few months had barely passed since we the plane received, and, under the thunderous blows of Prussia, one of the world's most powerful empires was collapsing on himself, and fell with such a crash of ruins, with such a frightening suddenness that Europe shuddered at it Again. A terrible and perhaps pointless lesson, but one that teaches us

n

Digitized by Google

370 THE JEWS.

learns, when in the realm of thought each the destructive agent fulfilled its task, with what speed of lightning, – in the age of steam and electricity, that is to say, in a century of miraculous shortenings
of time and space – will come crashing down upon us the biggest surprise events; events that don't will cease to seem so distant in the eyes of those who they neither know how to believe nor see, that what seemed to contemporaries– rains of Noah the universal flood, the very day before the day when
This cataclysm, so long prophesied, shook the earth.

However, the secret of the vast web of machinations and betrayals at the heart of which this tragic event was unfolding change of view, this secret turned out to have been that of the public, who suddenly, remembering him, began to grasping the meaning. An astonishing thing and an "incredible fact, although "As has long been pointed out," people exclaimed, "the whole thing is that..."
press (the Empire hinders, stops, neutralizes the efforts of the power, and seems to be campaigning quite differently in the interests enemies of Austria than of Austria itself;
that is; every word of high teaching comes from a Jewish mouth; "that's because: the entire press is in the hands "Jews!" That's because the Jews, there as elsewhere, are the teachers of all the youth of the Empire, the chiefs invisible and supreme secret societies, which, all of them-it seems, are in the process of completing and perfecting the ruin of 'all Christian power'.

And, in fact, who would believe it if eyes didn't bear witness to it?
Testimony? The very newspapers of Austria "which de-
The monarchy and the Catholic Church are commanded made himself master, so that he might be master everywhere; "and the nobility

The Austrian woman could find neither the talent nor the
The dedication required to found newspapers! Also one searches in vain in the German newspapers for a serious defense of the rights and interests of the Empire.

'See the notes at the end of this section.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TEN.

371

A few Catholic people in France were the only ones to have...
"He steadfastly upheld the cause of Austria," while French newspapers of the Revolution, where the influence Jewish, worked against the vital interests of their homeland in to establish the power of Prussia. They used, as in Italy, from the unifying strength of a King, not in the design to grow it, but with the thought of achieving a little more Later, with the help of the states agglomerated under its control, this republican unification of Germany which must follow from so close to the republican reunification of all of Europe.

For a long time, alas, the dissolution of the Empire was prepared by the most Judaic doctrines, "rationalism, hideous leprosy, gnawed at almost all the bodies of the State—,
atheism was publicly professed in universities;
an impious press poured forth 'in torrents every morning the poison of more deadly doctrines, and let's not even mention corruption of the cities, nor of the licentious morals of the army and of the officers especially not of the sordid and almost proverbial venality biale of its administrations, nor of the obliteration of the meaning morality in the upper classes of society, where adultery was excused, the duel glorified, suicide legitimized! » Of all
So the rotten machine creaked, crumbled, and fell from its sides.
in ruins; and, despite the valor, and despite the heroism of the army almost entirely, of heinous betrayals, at

At that critical moment, what were they delivering to the enemy? — let's say—

We, the fatherland? No! But the empire! — for the fatherland, commençaienl'a dire un grand nombre des citoyens de l'Autriche,
It is Germany, which Prussia represents!

So there it is, this power, half-broken, and upon which summer, because it could once again become one of the boulevards of the Catholicism: the Holy Roman Empire! And, from whatever angle one considers its people, if the disorder there is so profound, if the misery there is so great, it can only be attributed to knowledge—to make of the occult world and its prince, the Jew. That is what which is said and repeated 'out loud on all points of 2i.

Digitized by Google

372

THE JEWS.

The Empire. Yes, "Germany's greatest scourge, we said a liommo of the Prussian state not long ago, it is the ju—"Daism," she, the most formidable of the instruments of Judaism, This is the word of the professor of the highest ranks, this is the daily solvent of the press!

But Israel itself is far from hiding its triumph, still unfinished; and in the country which formerly gave the Freemasonry for the universal grand master, its first Minister, Lord Palmerlon, another prime minister, the The son of a Jewish father and mother, Mr. Disraeli, claims in all letters for the Jew the honor of having made of the German Catholic Magne, Josephist and Masonic Germany, that is to say, the revolutionized Germany that we see re—pushing k, a title of insult and public danger, an alliance with the religion of Christ, a concordat with Rome! Listen—tones, and that our ears let not a single syllable be lost of these precious words;

"The powerful revolution that is preparing and brewing in Germany—Magne (1844), where in fact she will soon be a second A MORE SIGNIFICANT REFORM THAN THE FIRST—, celestial revolution, of which a glimmer of light barely allows k to.x eyes of Great Britain to penetrate the mysteries, well! Under what auspices does it reach the fullness of its development? ments? Under the auspices of the Jew, who, in Germany, the almost complete monopoly on all professorships has expired professorials' and all the press organs: truth obvious and widely known!

What the triumphant minister said in such clear terms of Great Britain, Mr. Disraeli, one of the sons and of

'For the quotation marks, the correspondence from Le Monde, September 4th–December 1866; the author of this correspondence is an eminent man,

3, who knows Germany inside and out; he is German, and a statesman
The person he is talking about is not the one whose letter we are reproducing, and that we call our friend.

^ Entirely devolving (itself) under the auspices of the Jews... Com-
Haven't these words gained in importance since they were written?
1844, Disraeli for the quotation marks, Coningsby, p. 183–4.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TEN.

373

of birth, the Prime Minister of Austria, Mr. Prince Metternich should have known this through observation. He, this all-powerful statesman who had so little idea that a man in whom he placed all his trust, and consequently keeper of most of Europe's political secrets, was the pseudonym Nubius, that is to say the chief most formidable of occultism, and the colleague of the piccolo– Jew Tiger! His eyes, as well as the eyes of most of the memories... Rains, refused the day of too bright a light. Defeated however, he was, by indications of an importunity Tiring, one fine day he let it escape from his chest this cry, where, in the expression of familiar language, the prophetic was intertwined with history:

■< There are revolutionary elements in the German Empire– tionaries that have not yet been used, and which are feared– tables; the Jewish element, for example... In Germany, the Jews occupy the leading role, and are revolutionaries of pre– First flight. They have writers, philosophers, stoves, speakers, publicists, bankers, and on the head and In their hearts, the full weight of the old ignominy! They will one day be dreadful for Germany,... probably followed by a dreadful tomorrow for them!

The organization specific to the Jewish nation, its doctrines anti-Christian, which are those of the occult societies of which The Jew is the soul and the prince, and whose organization repeats that of his race in the midst of the peoples; the gold that he possesses and which possesses us; the word of the teacher and the word of the press * that he is: our latent master; that is what, in a future next, will make the Jew our patent master, or at least the principal instrument of the most unimaginable despotism.

'Rougeyron, Antechr., p. 28-9; Paris, <861; words spoken in <849.

^ Read about the press; 1.1, the Mainstream Press; 1.2, the Small Press
Louis Veuillot, Odeurs de Paris, 7th ed., <867.

Digitized by Google

THE JEWS.

37 i

FIRST APPENDIX.

How and by what means is this work of decomposing a Christian society, which we have just indicated, however unfortunately Prepared in the German Empire? What was its prior cause? And was Jewish influence unrelated to the origins of this evil? Perhaps our answer will surprise more than one person; for, we We will say it in a word, and without hesitation; 11 one must look in rhere.>iie..., The immediate cause of this must be sought in high Jansenism. Social breakdown. We will immediately see clearly that This Jansenism, a close ally of occult societies, professed the doctrines born of the Gnostics; that the Gnostics, as well as all the first heretics, had Jews as their fathers; and we will remember So, to repeat it endlessly, that the Jews, the current schoolteachers of Europe, are the primary and permanent leaders of the Societies of occultism, whose principles gnaw at and devour the entrails societies of old Europe. Perhaps this is already putting it in terms It is quite clear that Jewish influence must have permeated Austria in a certain way. in a way that was both profound and sensitive under the audacious hand of the jan-Senism, whose exploits form a series of incomparable mer-vigils. For, as soon as this heresy begins to breathe the open air in the Holy Roman Empire, the spirit that permeated these states from one end to the other Christians make the clergy themselves, and even the bishops, the object of a scandal of which no pen could paint a more vivid and heartbreaking picture painting that of a very learned and powerful investigator, Mr. Abbot Davin. ,

Yes, Father Davin? One of those priests who become passionate, embittered, and whose mind boldly embarks on the detestable path of Exaggerations! — Ah, some say so, and we don't know if he There is some truth in these words. What we do know is that dam an enormous plethora of facts and details that flow in under .his hand of the authorities which seem serious to us, and among which are distinguishes one of our most venerable cardinals. We have not discoitéP3,' it is true, these authorities, because the reader will be able to impose that coward. But what we must state is that nowhere we do not find the history of the Church to be at odds with the facts and the conclusions that this learned writer establishes, and which, remarkably comparable among all others, seems to be nothing more than the development of the word by of which an Israelite by birth, the prime minister of the Great-Brittany proudly describes the disastrous and irresistible action of Jewish propaganda within the vast German empire.

But the priest's indiscretions expose the painful wounds-Church practices? A major source of scandal for the faithful, and of triumph for his enemies!

Would it be wiser to hide them? Why then does the Church, in

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TEN. 375

In her Gospels and in her history, does she take such great care not to Name her Judases? Has she ever veiled her wounds, the stigmata that prolong in his body the Passion of his divine Head?
Hasn't his glory always been to live in the light of day?
of the truth? An admirable way to prove it, even through weaknesses and the betrayals that, through the holiness of his servants, the divinity of his character.

'Having said this, we hasten to submit to the consideration of reader, and as a simple note, an extract from the important piece which Abbot Davin did not hesitate to assume before the public the responsibility Responsibility: we add little to it.

The illustrious and most Christian Empress Maria Theresa believed it her duty to introduce into his states two famous doctors, but who, faithful to their destructive plans, the skillful initiates who pursue Christ
Their deadly hatreds had, unbeknownst to him, been chosen in Holland
Among the men most dangerous to the peace of the Church: Van Swielen and de Haën. These two scholars had barely gained a foothold in the empire that Jansenism, that is to say the Revolution, has, "throws a, blindfolds over the eyes of the Empress and the future Emperors, eby "the Ministry of Public Instruction, and marching step by step"

"Giant." "Thirty years later, she will be mistress of everything. The Sanuédri.x jansé.mste will have its synagogues everywhere, under the name of Masonic robes; they will run all the offices, and they occupy-

Van Swieten died in 1772, and his son, who had become involved during his a stay in Paris with the apostles of the new philosophy, takes place the instrument of a party so powerful that, in the religious sphere, it reign "absolute, and for twenty years, under the names of Marie-Thérèse, from Joseph H, that wretched emperor to whom Christendom, "Humanity will owe so much to evil, and to Leopold II..."

'Observe* the close alliance that the perceptive investigator establishes, by the' The only words Sanhedrin and Synmjoqe, between Judaism and heresy represented by the high janséujsinc. Let us see again the jaiisénisine Iranscentlant to merge, by his convulsionaries, along with the Illuminati, that is to say, with the conspirators of The Spiritist order, followers of the Masonic Kabbalah. For the Kabbalah, says the initial Itagon, is "the mother of the occult sciences" [Occult Mafoounerie, p. 78; Paiâs, 1853}, and we must know that it is denied by the Talmud and the Zoliarl. Let us not lose s I saw none of these expressions, none of these reference points.

Joseph II, this successor of Frederick the Great, to whom the Jews did not spare the praise, and that this monarch called my brother the sacristan, was incapable of to govern his E(ai$; but, possessed by a mania for reforms, there are some of them-pote, y usurped papal power, ruled, upset, devastated the E{;ti8e, and pre-para par vei prodigieuses inepties la ruine de l'Autriche. Bien plus niais que nié*cbau, he was for the cbréiienic a scourge whose action did not cease with his life! Read in \ 'HI$(uir< de CE^lise de Rolirbai lier, t. XXVII, p. 231; 1852, etc., uo Summary of the actions of this sad and implacable innovator (student of Abbot Joseph). of Ternie, etc., etc. Course in ecclesiastical history, (111, p. 436; 1867, by M« I ablié J. J, Blanc; très-savant ouvrage).

Digitized by Coogic

376

THE JEWS.

"The total destruction of the Church," said Father Theiner, "was reserved to a single man. That man was the Jansenist Baron Van Swieten, who, through his unparalleled hypocrisy and the credit he had acquired thanks to his relationships with French and German philosophers, but above all, with those in Berlin, he managed to persuade the Emperor to appoint him Director of Public Education in Austria. » We count on many of his supporters, Sonnenfels, Born and Eybel, that is to say "the "The most zealous propagators of Illuminism!"

Such, consequently, was the man whom the Illuminati revealed to themselves. returned to France through the exploits to which the name of saint is attached Médard used them to "decapitate and deflower the Austrians." Van Swieten, in order to facilitate this work, only gave places to piety, morals, and dignity. True science never entered. at his home, in consideration. I would even go further, everywhere she finds herself—

She was rejected because a certain fear was present. One had to be philosophical.
Sophe or Illuminati, to obtain a chair in theology. — The char—
The most impious Latins were those who obtained the most ease for advancement. Finally, the foul spirit has cast off its mask; it became cynical, he set up the orgy in broad daylight and in full sanctuary tuary; one hardly dares believe the most authentic story here.
authentic, and above all, quote it.

11 would be too long, wrote a virtuous Frenchman on September 17, 1788.
Ciscain, professor at the Rattenberg Academy, to inform you of everything I experienced in Vienna. Know, in any case, "and be convinced that I am not speaking in hyperbole. "I saw, in this once so flourishing university, the overthrow of all things, and
"such appalling immorality that, if I had not seen it with my own
"I wouldn't believe what others told me about my eyes."

The general seminary has eighty seminarians;
"but the number of prostitutes to whom the directors grant the free entry, with the aim of removing from these young people any feeling of Shame is far more considerable. And what can I say about the theses that They support it there! The most dangerous writers are found in all hands, and several professors complete in their ex—
"These works lack impiety and infamy."

Moreover, "what I am telling you about the general seminary in Vienna is more or less true of all institutions of the same kind in Gratz in Styria, at Olmutz in Moravia, at Prague in Bohemia, at Pavia in the Milanese, in Innsbruck in Tyrol The Jansenist Tamburini, after having been expelled from the Venetian state for his blasphemies and his pro—scandalous situations, and having taken refuge in Pavia, he was appointed rector there of the general seminary. The rector of the Innsbruck seminary is the

"The famous unbeliever and Freemason Albertini."

'This same work, this same crime, is being carried out in a very...'
a large number of people; and, through its effects, the Revolution wreaks havoc elsewhere.
more formidable than terror.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TEN. 377

Priest and professor of theology at the Raltenberg seminary,

Jeaff Kolb indulged in every vice; and, a worthy imitator of the ancients Gnostics, "he openly attacked religion and morality in presence of seminarians and laypeople. He led his students on Fridays it encouraged them to consume in public meats forbidden by the Church. He taught them bluntly that simple fornication, far from being a sin was permitted, and necessary to remember. To make them comp- He himself was able to grasp these (gnostic) moral principles. even in the city ditches at the times when the soldiers are accustomed to indulge in their orgies; he feasted his eyes on this spectacle, and urged his seminarians to imitate with a clear conscience These abominable examples. Kolb finally became an object of scandal. for the whole city; there was loud protest against him in Vienna, but in vain; Van Swieten protected him, and Kolb remained there for five years. Tiers at Rattenberg. Only death could remove this monster from the stage of his crimes.

A circumstance undoubtedly allowed "the Minister of Education The public display of such appalling audacity in Vienna was due to his having intended to. accomplice the first prelate of the empire, the archbishop-elect of Mainz, C F J of E, and a whole troop of Judases with

"He" This prelate had even managed to present himself as coadjutor his relative, the Baron de D, a traitor to his country, and who did not fear point of handing the Church over to the Freemasons, his brothers * *.

During the fall of the ecclesiastical principalities of Germany, He alone will keep his; Napoleon, by leaving him the temporary domain- porel of some states, allowed him to take the title of primate, this which indicated quite clearly what projects he based on this prelate I But the divine Providence thwarted this plan.

And thus speaks Cardinal Pacca; and Cardinal Consalvi shows us, On the day of Napoleon's coronation, Bishop D was seated at the imperial table. before the Pope. Finally, with each step forward, "the Minister of the Interior- public education and the Archbishop of Mainz had come to to reform almost the entire episcopate in their image. Wolves! One does not saw that wolves were at the head of God's sheep.

Where had the bishops taken refuge? Alas, this terrible the fall of our holy Church, wrote a worthy religious, "could have facilitated- It was almost possible to be prevented by our bishops; but, oh sorrow, almost all lent a hand, and preferred to pay homage to the princes of the earth rather than glorify the God of heaven." Three of these prelates excepted, The others could, quite rightly, be called the destroyers rather than the herdsmen of their flocks. I don't want to, for fear of you to grieve, to remind you of the sad memory of C, Primate of Germany and archbishop of Salzburg, nor that of the infamous K, bishop of

* See, in the same room, what Cardinal Pacca says about this Illuminati, dunt la aecld dirqjeail then more or less all the channels of rAllemagoe.

* See the authorities, same room.

THE JEWS.

Saint-Pollen and private advisor to the Emperor, for he is too well known... »

C, "E's rival in schismatic deceit, was a Freemason, çoinme D', like all the leaders of the movement that was changing then the face of the German woman." Freemasonry, including the Jews form the general staff, "and which is nothing but Jansenism coupled with phi-Philosophy, his apparent adversary, but fundamentally his friend. Freemasonry occupied all the major episcopal sees. by the incumbents or their subordinates.

"Thus the prelates deceived the Church, thus they were deceived."

memes; thus the scandals knew no bounds. What should

Therefore, the people, with such a clergy and such diabolical schemes, What? Morals were collapsing in the cities, they were being turned upside down located in the countryside; but nowhere did they present a as sad a spectacle as in Vienna, where the government had as "Taken to the task of corrupting, in order to reign in place of the Church." 11 claimed to thereby increase his very legitimate power of power a very special power that could only belong to the ministers of the spiritual.

And yet, among the masses, faith still resisted, "so much so that was ancient and solid, and so sustained by the grace of God. As for religion, said Cardinal Pacca, despite all the efforts of the sects and secret societies to uproot it from the hearts of good Germans, I then to say that she was still full of life in most of the ca-Catholics, and this preservation, one might say, was a true prodigy * 1 »

Thus, when the time comes for the final, most formidable keys In the face of the Church's persecutions, will God protect the Qdeles, cast out far more even before we have just seen it in the midst of the dangers where Even the strongest faith would be overcome by vertigo, if heaven itself was in no hurry to intervene. But let us be careful not to exaggerate the scope of our horizon, and let us confine ourselves, for the moment, to repeating a sentence of this precious text, because it summarizes it in its entirety.

Jansenism, that is to say the Revolution," holding the "ministry" "public education" will progress in Germany "by leaps and bounds."

The senist will have his synagogues everywhere under the name of Masonic togas. They will run all the Sj offices and they will occupy almost all the temples K »

' T. 11, p. 81. This important document, supported by all the relevant authorities, was published in Le Monde, on August 18, 1KG8.

* Kuni.-ni-e implacable and above all epocrisy of all freedom, the evolution, of which the jaticiaeiisue is only one face, wants, under the pretext of progress, to imp Families, in every state, are subject to the yoke of compulsory education; and what about Because she wants to make our people her own, molding them in her image; because, as in Austria, she wants to transform a Christian people into a a people imbued with all the subversive doctrines of Christian civilization, that is- that is to say, in a p, tiple imbued with the doctrines of Judaism. Read the passages that We quoted speeches from the Universal Israelite Alliance.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TEN. 379

When we reproduced these lines, which seem to amalgamate, to form, without reason, a single and unified whole, four things in distinct appearances: Vhéràsü (Jansenist) and the Revolution, the French-Freemasonry and Judaism (Sanhedrin), some readers may have been able to Believe it or not, some critics may have imagined it, and we took care to address it. to formulate the remark, that the author cited by us was abusing hyper-bole and confused one with the other things that have nothing in common how many insensitive and distant relationships. But history, when questioned at its source, consulted in its archives, aided by the confessions of Judaism, demonstrates the contrary, and, for our part, we admire science of the writer and the accuracy of his judgment, while regretting in the public's interest, the overly nervous conciseness of his speech.

Nothing, therefore, could be clearer or better presented; Judaism, aided by the The teaching profession and the press are the tireless souls of all the cabalistic and secret societies and all the impious schemes which, either in the inner workings of heresy, or in the developments of the the philosophism that it embraces, are devoted to the ruin of the Christian world yours, which Mr. Disraeli seems to be threatening us with.

SECOND APPENDIX.

Ignoring France's most obvious interests, the press The revolutionary movement, almost entirely, was swept along with it, a disastrous outcome training to produce the two great unifications of Italy and Germany Magne, which are the ruin of our preponderance, and which already us reduce us to the cruel and imperative necessity of ruining our finances. our agriculture and our industry, making every Frenchman a that one of the thousand passages in the newspaper L'Étendard, the first of which his successes were due to this announcement: that he would refrain from any appropolitical conciliation, words that deceived us. His specialty must have been the account of the events of the war between Prussia and Austria.

But what struck the public, and what one could see flourishing with a comThe pleasant naiveté in this sheet of paper is the feeling of horror.

what inspires the Revolution by any State guilty of a Catholic tendency lique, the existence and prosperity of this State even if necessary to the power and prosperity of the nation. It is therefore a question of Austria, where the main organs of opinion are the mouth and the the Jew's pen.

During the war, the newspaper L'Étendard tells us, everything was used Prussia, everything was detrimental to Austria... » And where does this singular phenomenon What's the point? Ha! Ha! You'd be looking too far for the causes, and you'd be...
You'd be wasting too much time, unstylish reader! May we be granted to spare you this trouble. The cause of all these catastrophes, the Etendard told you: "Austria has a fatal pact that absorbs, diverts.

Digitized by Google

380

THE JDIFS.

paralyzes all its vital forces"; and this pact is a concordat with Rome! Therefore, and since this is not a concordat with the Revolution, "citizens distrust one another; and, all in-

It seems, from the power, the magistrate trembles before the priest, the mar-
"Chand in front of the soldier. All relationships are distorted and forced..."

"It could not be otherwise! Austria does not belong to itself;
His entire national life is in the hands of his clergy, himself in the

Thanks to whoever is leading it! It is not one of the branches of the activity social, on which the Concordat of 1855 did not give the Austrian clergy dog, complete sovereignty. Is it any wonder, after that, that we see

In Vienna, so much muted discontent spread, and throughout Germany, men of action, study, and thought, rally to the Prussia' We can therefore say of Austria what we have said of Spain; two societies inevitably form there in the so-Society, two states within the state... That is the evil, and this evil is all-encompassing the revision. » •

By resigning en masse when the enemy wins—that is on the territory of the empire, the Vienna city council Will he have done something useful? Will this lesson open the eyes of the people?
See? Oh, we would like to believe it, we dare not hope for it. But we must that the situation is indeed serious, the discontent very intense, the com—
The pressure was immense, for the city of Vienna to have been forced to...
to raise one's voice in such painful circumstances

"Indeed, a prince who makes such concessions, and who thus allows the crown to be diminished, becomes by his example a a public danger, not only to its own people, but to all States 'è! »

0 singular patriotism, and of which the prime minister of the Great—Brittany, the Israelite Disraeli, has just given us the word! We believe dreaming while reading these lines 1 No, our task cannot be to say this that there was cowardice and betrayal in the Empire in the face of the invasion Prussian Zion, others have done it! We simply need to point out the role of those who believed they should become the auxiliaries of the vanquished abroad queurs, in the campaign against the concordat. What, a state, a Prince, daring to acknowledge oneself as Catholic in the nineteenth century 1 Daring to give this dangerous example at a time when the anti-Catholic Mr.—Tous—Senel uttered this cry of terror; The Jews! The Jews are the kings of Era I: A state, a prince, daring to negotiate with Rome, daring to settle, o the example of Napoleon I", the agreement, the concordance of rights of the Religion alongside the rights of the state! A prince, at last, daring to break free! to the Revolution which focuses all hatreds on Christ I a prince daring to yield only step by step to the secret societies, this cos- militia

'Sample of the Jewish Maroonian atriotisnie.

^ Taking advantage of the Tiigonie of the homeland to achieve such feats: Proh pudorf
We know how this council was composed.

* The vests are from the Standard, July 30, 1866.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TEN.

381

mopolite that discipline and govern some of the strongest heads of Isrnol. Ah! May this state perish, or Judaism! May the same land not would be able to embody both of these powers.

One more word, and let German pens paint for us the feelings which, aided by the press, are on display in this Germany that Mr. Disraeli congratulated himself on seeing it so profoundly Judaized; but true—In fact, a more heartbreaking, more sickening, more disgusting spectacle would be hard to imagine:

“On several occasions we have pointed out the Prussian sympathies—his far too vivid criticisms of liberal newspapers, students and from certain associations in Vienna and Austria. A new An association of this kind has recently been formed in Gratz, under the direction of... tion of MM. de llausegger, Obtnann (president of the commission of circle), of Count Attems, Sailler, and Doctors Strohal and Mack. The association calls itself the German National Association. Its cowardice is to do a relentless war against the Catholic Church and all those who oppose it This is a sign of the Prussian unification of Germany. Here is an excerpt from the appeal she addressed to the Austrian Germans: »

“Today 30 million Germans are united in the Confederation—tion of the North; the German name has acquired a consideration and a authority which, since the heyday of the Empire, he no longer possessed. As a result, national consciousness not only fills each German of pride and happy hope, but still gives him the a firm conviction that, according to the laws of gravitation, which are exerted also in the lives of peoples, the annexation of southern Germany to The federal state of the North is now only a matter of time.

"Our feeling, for our part, is that, for the State to which we—We all belong to this same community; it's not just a task to be completed. but a vital question, that of placing no obstacle in the way of this irre—an irresistible need for unity that is pushing Germany down the path of its development National settlement. Separated from the German homeland by events From 1866, we, Germans and Austrians, nonetheless have a duty to allow it to happen, it is true without directly cooperating, but not without a warm and heartfelt participation, the meeting of our brothers of Germany into one great state. And if some attempt hostile resistance was taking place against this unitary progress which is continuing in C non-Austrian Magne, we should see this as a betrayal of the "The German cause, and we will oppose it with all legal means..." He Therefore, it will be considered treason for an Austrian to no longer betray Austria!

And everything is happening simultaneously. The courts, until now quite firm on the principles, continues Mr. Khun, to whom we owe this excerpt, com—are beginning to catch up with the most modern liberal progress. The Higher Regional Court (Oberlandesgericht) ruled that the songs Indecent and obscene acts cannot be punished by the courts. This This decision therefore ensures complete impunity for all obscenities. set to music. The effect was that today, in all the In Vienna's breweries, only such infamous songs are sung anymore.

THE JEWS.

Even the liberal newspapers themselves are alarmed and protest.
Hermann Khun, World, April 1869.

At the moment when Prussia, aided by all the secret societies of Europe has just crushed Austria, guilty of daring to sign a
In consultation with Rome, do we not see that the prevailing spirit in this empire where the Jews are today the masters of gold, of The pen and the island of speech, is the one whom the allies of the inspired in him. Judaism, the disciples of Van Swieten, the members of the Sanhedrin revolutionary, as a learned pen has just described to us; these followers, in short, whose audacious skill prepares with the Jews their masters, according to the words of Prime Minister Disraeli, the last Act of social upheaval I

Ü.VTIUÈMÈ DIVISION. – INTELLECTUAL SUPERIORITY OF THE JEW OVER CHRISTIAN – A WORD ON LV SUPERIORITY MORAL.

The Jew, armed with his means of influence, is today the man who prime and which directs; an irresistible force, and which he adds to the forces that we already know of him, is the incomparable superiority of his intelligence: – Exception, – Relentless cultivation of the superior Celtic-priority; why and how it asserts itself in all careers.
– It is proof of its imperishable vitality. – This superior-
The nature of this thing bursts forth even within the lowest classes; des-picturesque description. – The Jew, so quick to grow, is nevertheless not-dant point un]>arvenu ; he is a gentleman who returns in his rights of nobility. – .Other (>painting, complacent and true, the astonishing superiorities of the Jew, by the first minister of the Great Britain, Mr. Disraeli. – This superiority is contained within... compares to the Jew the empire of the world, which he covets, and which he already exercises in part. – The intellectual superiority of the Jew over the Christian is- Is it accompanied by moral superiority?

Armed with the means of defense and the allaque he had acquired, painstakingly, laboriously created over the course of centuries, this man, brimming with cunning, industry, and audacity, the Jewish,... in a number of European states, can today, one might call oneself, if not the obvious master of society, of the minus the prince-man, the one who truly prevails, the one who directs, and whose influence is dominant!

Such, however, is still the halo of contempt with which the

The master must most often conceal his origins.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TEN.

383

and to discover, only with extreme caution, the means of superiority which distinguishes his person and converge in his hand. The number is infinite; far from us is therefore the idea of listing them. But to the strength that the Jew attributes the natural constitution of his people in the midst of others peoples, that is to say the invaluable advantage of being at the times, in all kingdoms, a state in the state, and by that even, from one end of the earth to the other, an almost as easily secret as patent; to the strength that lends itself to Jewish, his age-old and supreme skill in keeping under his mystery laughing towards occult societies, whose spirit is the very spirit that animates him; to the strength that the Jew attributes gold, on which it exerts the fatal action of a magnet on iron; to the strength still provided by the press, of which gold is one of the most energetic engines, it is necessary to add a force to the—which completely different one obeys; and the core of the nation possesses it to a rare degree without almost any hindrance hindering it'. However, this force which constantly, in the world, compels us to bend Before her, there is the superiority of her intelligence, there is the wealth and excellence of its nature: an advantage that it is difficult to It is difficult to dispute the Jew, except in the philosophical sciences. losophical, these regions of escarpments where falls and shatters in fatal falls anyone who attempts to climb it the heights, if religious truth has not thrown before its steps indispensable insights. From this perspective, the Jew is therefore not that a cripple, and is it similar to these men that, in a On his better days, Noos depicted the poet Hugo as gloomy. mockers who sit in the sunlight to deny it and throw irony in the face of the public whose eyes... the rays affirm; mockers worthy of all ridicule, because they pride themselves on the infirmities and denials of their seen as supreme precision in the faculty of seeing!

'Because Talmudic morality exempts him from all rules of morality' in his relationship with the Christian. We admit, here as elsewhere And as always, there are many exceptions. As for the non-Orthodox Jew, He acts according to what he believes, and if his belief is not Jewish, Our words never reach him.

THE JEWS.

38 i

Struck as much as she could be by this geno- superiority
General newspaper of the Jew, the Protestant paper entitled the Gazette of the Cross therefore does not hesitate to proclaim that "Everywhere the Israelites are superior to the Christians or nearly equaling them, except on one point: devotion missionary. And more than ever these days, let's see-We, Israel, lavish culture with this general superiority.
because his dominant thought, his ambition, according to his own
The word is "to take a resounding revenge, and to ex-to cite an admiration equal to the contempt with which he was, during
"For centuries, the victim."

There is no century, however, that has not seen the Jews distinguish in the various careers where human intelligence Maine shines with its transcendent qualities*. But of our days we would give up trying to count, in the different states of Europe and the world, those sons of Jacob who encom-Brent and navigate the liberal careers with distinction and scientists; those who do not sit on flowers of lilies, - they have never had this honor, - but on the high seats of our judiciary-those who appear and distinguished by their skill in administrative positions, or who wear the epaulette* with honor; those who, thanks
The voters' ballots cross the threshold of our Chambers.
and become-oh wonder!-the legislators of the na-Christian traditions; those whom remarkable talents elevate to the rank of members of the great Councils, statesmen, of ministers, or, let's say it, of directors of the most powerful kingdoms or even more powerful rulers of the

'Israelite Universe, V, p. 195; 1867.

^ Read Archives Israélites, IX, pp. 371-377; 1867.

® Valiant successors of the warriors who fought with their necks the rage of the lion under the Maccabees, with the rage of the tiger under the chiefs of revolt which, since the death of Christ, provoked in the regions Eastern countries, the almost total extermination of their race. In France, the Jewish archives list one Jew for every three hundred and sixty inhabitants. and a number of officers three times greater than the proportion of one to three hundred and sixty! Add to that the fact that officer ranks are not accessible-less to Jews than since the 1830 revolution. Jewish Archives, XVI, p. 746; 1867.

CHAPTER TEN.

385

earth. And we would not be saying enough if we did not add that the Jew is, moreover, not purely and simply the king, but the very genius of finance.

His outstanding qualities, the superiority of his intelligence impulsive and of his meditative and calculating genius, eclat not only in the infinite number of careers that it she travels with a high and rare distinction, but she manifests itself from early youth, and we see them emerging in the general competitions of our high schools, where his sons pause. They would make a game of snatching the laurels from ours. whose nascent merit is crowned*. Thus his faculties have transcendentals manifested themselves in a thousand forms in the thousand regions of industry -, the Expo- Catalogue sants, and the list of awards given in 1867 to grand competition of the Universal Exhibition, carried a from one end of the world to the other, the testimony of these glorious travels and these brilliant successes*.

In short, if everywhere the comparison makes itself possible- It is possible we take into account the number of heads, Israel is our victor; his abilities surpass those of us We oppose him; his intelligence reduces us to recognizing the inferiority of ours, and we can, by pointing out this In fact, repeating one's own words: Isn't that right, in the middle of the multitude of peoples, "a strange spectacle indeed" of a numerically so small minority occupying a relatively significant place in concerns public, and isn't that the striking mark of a imperishable vitality asserting itself despite all obstacles keys*?

The intelligence of Jacob's sons shines through and manifests itself with a singular speed even within the in-class

'Israelite Universe, 1, pt; 1866; - Israelite Archives, IX, p. 403 to 411; 4867. Id., HIV, p. 371 to 377; 1867;- Israelite Universe, VIII, p. 339, 1867, etc., etc.

2 Israelite Archives, XII, p. 549; 1 867. Id., XIII, p. 61 0 ; - Universe, XII, p. 584; ,1807. Id., I, p. 9; 1867.

THE JEWS.

We were the ones who formed the bulk of Israel, and this phenomenon... is described by a writer of Jewish blood in a style whose light and somewhat clownish appearance is far from altering the descriptive truth.

We said that Israel "is intelligent; take, in Indeed, the most disgusting .luif, of the most abject ignorance, of the most ragged attire, of the most bloody, as the pantagrulist Rabelais would say;
wash it, comb it, and trim its beard; fit its legs together in boots that are not yet worn out; clothe his limbs of almost new clothes; to the white linen of his shirt attach buttons made of fake k thirty-nine sous; serve his head mushroom k a refurbished hat; cover his hands scabby gloves with fresh butter; arm them with a stick of sa-pine tree painted to resemble rushes, surmounted by an apple in the shape of Melchior; Slip a few coins into his pocket, and you'll see immediately this sort of Quasimodo will straighten up and split open; he will have superb air, confident gaze, lively gesture, rounded speech gait and jerkiness; he will stroll like a dandy on the boulevardvard of Ghent; and thanks to his Alsatian gibberish, to his
With a foreign accent, he will pass himself off as a German baron, and will dine that same evening at the Café de Paris at the expense of his dupe*.

The Jew was born, it seems, for the role of par-came? — No, yet, and what we will say is On the contrary! The Jew is a lord whom misery overwhelmed, that she debased, that she deviated in a thousand ways, and that of her Filth made a mask for itself, but who feels the value of its blood, and that the slightest breath raises it. So you see.
to reclaim his noble rights with such ease and of nonchalance that the man who, having covered himself during a freezing night from the disgusting cover of an auriverbank, washes his body at daybreak and returns to his calvings from the previous day.

' A. Cerfberr, les Juifs touristes, p. 40; Paris, 1847.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TEN. 387

Let the public be the judge. Let's sort through the crowd. somewhat neat; let us choose from the refuse of our population European nations an assortment of the same types of ignorance rancid and vulgar, filthy and miserable. There it is. Done, this choice; here are our men: well! of a few blows (the comb and brush that we caressed their habits and their heads; some islands of laundry or soap black that we flood their bodies with; of some luxury of fine linen, and of whatever elegant cut of clothing he Will we succeed in astonishing and covering them? never before had this sudden and prodigious result of high-level counterfeiting Baronial council? No; our rabble, despite the deceitful Similarity of appearances, will remain a hundred spikes below of theirs; or rather, the rabble, from an intellectual point of view typical, does not exist among this elite people. Scratch their repugnant epidermis; it is only an effect of pain-ture, a trompe-l'œil, and you will constantly be surprised by to see the man appear, of whom no nation would be ashamed.

If we were to compare the first ones in Israel to the latter, these people sometimes so close to one another the other! or, to put it better, if we study the whole of this population in which, mind and body, everything is pro-life course, we will soon realize that we have spoken without hyperbole. And how, in these new times that the nineteenth century inaugurates, escaping before the nation Jewish to a strange feeling where fear and Disgust, a singular admiration? How then? to imagine that the marvelous faculties and influence so rapidly progressive of this people, "who are beginning to to distinguish everywhere and in every respect, with a tendency of visible superiority before which all nations seem—"They could bow down," would not be "the main instrument of his restoration" in the midst of the peoples, and his glory next?

•J. de Këlicilé, pseudonym (F. Vercruysse), The Twelve Tribes, p.67-68; Paris, <860.

THE JEWS.

But let Israel itself speak to us.
 all the more true, especially if he is not very modest, that the
 The date of his words is that of the year 1844, and that the qualities that drive the Israelite to conquer his Future positions have developed since that time with a dizzying speed. The work we are considering freedom to translate bears the signature of this prime minister of Great Britain, to which, in the previous chapter,
 We have just made a brief but decisive loan. This man of state is of Jewish race, and his pen exposes with a unspeakable complacency in the eyes of our Judaized world, that is to say, given over without reservation to greedy and sensual instincts
 The only thing Christianity condemns is constant superiority, but above all the growing superiority of the Jewish race, of which marvelous faculties and audacity progress in the same way not just its immense wealth.

"Following struggles repeated a thousand times, signaled by traits of heroism that no Roman ever equaled: struggles fertile in acts of patriotism, Athens, Sparta and Carthage would have declared inimitable, the weight of fifteen
 'ccnls years of natural servitude' has fallen upon our heads!
 But far from being broken under this burden of oppression and of ignominies, we have mocked the efforts of the inventor human tion, which was vainly exhausting itself to degrade us and to to lose us. Yes, the Jew's son grew up only to learn that he was the pariah of this ungrateful Europe which owes him the
 the most beautiful part of its laws, the most exquisite aspect of its literature and its entire religion!

"The Jews! The Jews! Will you ever see them..." to pronounce in Europe an intellectual movement of some importance without the Jews playing a large part in it?
 Who will be the first Jesuits? Jews. – This diplomacy Russian matter so full of mysteries*, and before which pales

' Five hundred years of supernatural slavery.

This Russian policy, which renewed the nineteenth century, more atrocious and hypocritical persecutions of Christianity by the Ce-

all of Western Europe, which organizes and directs it "Jews? They're still Jews!" – The powerful a revolution is brewing and taking shape in Germany, where, from

In fact, it will soon be DNE SECOND REFORM, MORE CONSI-
MORE DERIVING THAN THE FIRST; ccttc revolution doHl a hint daylight barely allows, in the eyes of Great Britain,
'penetrate the mysteries', well, under what auspices does it take-
Has it reached the fullness of its development? Under the auspices of the Jew, – under the auspices of the Jews – To whom, in Germany has lost its almost complete monopoly on all Professorial chairs? Neander, the founder of Catholicism spiritual, and Regius, the university professor of theology Berlin city, aren't they two Jews? Bénary, this illustration from the same university, he is indeed a Jew, isn't he?
This step? And it's a Jew, again, that Wehl, the professor "From Heidelberg!..."

In Palestine, a few years ago, I met a a German student who, inspired by the local genius, had a life only to collect the materials intended for the history of Christianity. This modest student, what was he?
He? He was a Jew, a stranger! It was Wehl, the man.
today the most learned in Arabic literature, and the author of the life of Muhammad! In short, what is the name of the pro-German teachers of Jewish descent? That name is legion!
The city of Berlin alone has ten pins*.

Sars, and who, on Russian soil, persecutes the Jews themselves when necessary.
The same, oh mystery! – "The Tsar and the Revolution often make cause Commonly, this is not the first time we have noticed it, and This coincidence inevitably casts some light on politics.
modern. » Mr. Coquille, August 23! 869.

We repeat these five or six points so as not to destroy the effect of the painting. This revolution is the one in which Prussia, as pro-Testating and the capital of occult societies, it was declared, before Sadowa, the executor and the provisional beneficiary against Austria, France and Spain. Its goal is to strike and reach, by reaching these kingdoms, the last bastions of Catholicism, that is to say of prepare the great universal republic which they are working towards, against their homeland, the cosmopolitan revolutionaries of occultism, whose
The leaders are Jews.

THE JEWS.

... (I Upon my arrival in Saint Petersburg, I had a Interview with the Russian Minister of Finance, Count
Cancrini; he was the son of a Lithuanian Jew. In Spain,
I had obtained an audience with Minister Mendizabal -, Men-Dizabal is what I myself am, the son of a Jew, of a converted from the province of Aragon. In Paris, I wanted to take The opinion of the president of the council, and I had before my eyes a beros, a marshal of the Empire (the one who almost sat down one day) on the throne of Portugal), in short, the son of a French Jew-Soult. What! Soult, a Jew? Yes, no doubt, so... than several other marshals of the Empire, at the head of which Masséna, who in our culture is called Manasseh... I left Paris to Berlin, and the minister I had to visit, the Count Aini was none other than a Prussian Jew... »

In truth, you see, "this world is governed by all other characters than those who do not see imagine.
"What's happening behind the scenes!"

In other words, the all-powerful but so often
The Jew, still invisible, is everywhere! Everywhere, even in
In the realm of fine arts, the Jew reigns supreme.
At the moment I speak to you, the whole of musical Europe, It's ourselves! Is there, in any capital city, a a troupe of virtuosos, a theatre, an orchestra where there is no faith.
^ sound the children of the Jew under false names (the feigned names) which they use to escape hatred despicable, of which your descendants will soon be ashamed for having overwhelmed us? You would hardly name a com-eminent composer, hardly a learned musician, a throat
Exquisite, an angelic voice that one of our tribes wouldn't love!
The list would be too long to unfold, and too glorious-

It is within this Judaized Germany that the philosophers of Europe will seek enlightenment and progress, ever since the Europe turns its back on Rome, on Christian philosophy. So what-What respect for the Jew your master, O Christian!

'The World is governed by very different characters to what is imagined by those who are not behind the scenes. Disraeli, Co-

CHAPTER TEN. 391

laughing so that we try to lengthen it by writing secondary talents, regardless of the vibrancy of their brilliance. Will it be enough to name the three great geniuses?
creators before whom every nation bows today:

Rossini, Meyerbeer, Mendelssohn: And I doubt that among you, the arbiters and regulators of fashion, the muscadins de Paris – yow muscadins of Paris – and the dandies Londoners suspect, when they swoon over melodious accents of Pasta or Grisi, that their hom-
'Magi fall at the feet of the enchantresses of Israel.'

But to conclude, and without getting sidetracked into the fields of history and politics, of science or the arts, Here is our message: "No criminal law, no physical torture" siquere will never cause a superior race to be absorbed by an inferior race. The mixed and persecuting race disappears; but the purebred and persecuted race holds and subsists. In vain, therefore, they collapse upon us, soiling ussant, by flattening us under their debris, centuries and Over decades and centuries, the spirit of the Jew rises again, resumes life, walking, and, nowadays, exerts influence on affairs of Europe an influence whose wonder is striking. I I do not, however, wish to allude to their laws, which are those under which you still bend {which you still obey), nor their literature which your minds are satiated with-No, I only hear talk here of the intelligence of the Jew.
current: of the living Hebrew intellect*] »

But every time an active race becomes richer and more developed Loppe in a country where several races are present, he

1 Disraeli, ibid., p. 185; 1844. As they thrill into raptures at the notes of a Pasta, or a Grisi, little do they suspect that they are over-steering their boundary to the sweet singers of Israel. – Let us not go to beyond that; let's not even talk about Rachel, etc., etc.

^ Ibid., p. 183. We see that if we give our translation what-that freedom of pace, is never at the expense of a rigorous accuracy. This truthful and insolent piece by the an- statesman Glaes is too important not to deserve a certain amount of respect.
What is not in quotation marks is ours, as is often the case, but in accordance with the meaning of the text.

THE JEWS.

It seems that the less active ones "take revenge for their inferiority" through slander. We belittle those we could not equal, and "The most unforgivable grievance is success!"

If such is already the success for the Jew, k barely emanwhat will it be like in a little while, as soon as his emancipation Will the cipation be complete? A future awaits us.
 To say it, and we ourselves will help somewhat to the letter.
 In the meantime, we will ask whether intellectual superiority-tuelle (read Jew on the Christian is accompanied, as he Would it be natural for it to be so, given its moral superiority?
 A big question that we are not addressing, but which one?
 Here, however, is a word of reply.

If the types we are considering are the Christian-Orthodox and the Jew of Talmudic orthodoxy, no; Superiority will not be on the side of Israel; that cannot to be; and why? Because moral superiority derives of the superiority of religion, which, among the Orthodox Jew, is monstrous, just as it is in the case of the reformist Jew
 It is a bastard, as unstable as that of sects.
 Or winds, absurd!

It cannot be repeated enough; the corruption of men which were the best, and that of the best things, is of all, the most detestable; Corruptio optimi pessima. It is Why the Jew who corrupted his faith, that is to say the prince-the principle of his morality, which is the rule of his customs; the Jew Talmudic scholar, who, rebelling against the teachings of the Synaancient gogue, rejected the perfection that was about to be imprinted k his religious law the divine hand of Christ; this Jew is the more immoral and the last of the sectarians, because he acts according to his belief. Similarly, and for the same reason, the Catholic Frankly orthodox, is he the most philosophical, the most moral and the least imperfect of men.

But the number of these two pure examples is limited.
 every day; and, when we see them cross the threshold of orthodoxy, we no longer deign to grant these

'Archives Israélites, p. 726, n» t6; 1866.

fallen believers, by another name, if it refers to the Christian, that that of the baptized, if it is a Jew, than that of the circumcised. No longer belonging to their Church except by a characteristic sign— In this way, the circumcised and the baptized are then, each in their kind, more or less Protestant or fanciful, then— that each person recognizes no other rule or measure of his faith, which he called his reason.

Consequently, they cannot have anything on each other. moral superiority than that which derives from the rule of their customs, that is to say, the beliefs which they prefer, — if they believe in anything in this world, — to make themselves hour by hour, a religion. Knowing what they believe, when— that it is impossible to see them at work, would therefore be the pre— the first and most essential condition for assigning them a rank in the hierarchy of moral beings; but rarely the do they even know themselves, and even more rarely do they show themselves— They are stable and consistent in their faith. Reduced as we we are then forced to operate only in darkness and to judge instinctively, we admit that our preferences lead us to... tend towards the circumcised; for, raised as he was in the grossi— absurd conclusions drawn from the error, it is undeniably less fallen, less degraded than the being raised according to the laws of the reason, who let himself fall joyfully from the heights of Christian doctrine in the abyss of free thought, mother of free morality, that is to say, morality without rules and without brakes.

The circumcised man can therefore, in our view, look straight ahead, often even with advantage and from top to bottom, the one who retains of the Christian only the indelible mark of baptism, and which, thanks to the doctrines and affiliations of the occult— is generally only the disciple and often only the the Jew's servant

Digitized by Google

Its entirely exceptional and privileged constitution; immunity from infirmity mites and diseases that afflict every other human family. Consequently: the Jew, the people of the dispersion, is the only people truly cosmopolitan, that is to say, where each individual can have to bite with impunity into any place on earth. – Causes of this an exceptional privilege, according to some unflappable commentators. Second privilege; the Jew has never cultivated the arts that strengthen the body; its limbs are generally thin and weak; and for– His vital forces and longevity far surpass those of others. Three peoples. – Examples, statistics, various authorities. – But, to hear the phenomenon of this mocking villainy which occurs in the sense inverse of the vigor of the body, and that of its immunities, a new– This phenomenon is signaled by this unique cosmopolitan. – What is it? A sudden fertility, which science cannot explain, and which is reminiscent of that of Israel in Egypt at the time of the miracles of the Exodus. – Examples. – This constitution, which made the Wandering Jew and Dis– Perseus, the most indestructible man, the most tenacious missionary of the Does evil, the universal apostle of occultism, predispose him or not? to be the most universal, the most tenacious, and the most gifted of mis– Gospel Zionists? – Statistical tables of the element

Judaism spread throughout the world, and a summary of the superiorities of this people; what they might dare and do at a given moment. Example in the following chapter.

To this intellectual superiority of the Jew that comes from to point out our pen, and which, in the state in which it finds itself dark world, foreshadows the coming supremacy of son of Jacob, we must add a physical superiority strange music, and that to this day no reason has been drawn of the morphological order does not explain in an acceptable way. This superiority stems from a constitutional privilege that we must call it unique–, and, as a consequence, it engenders a unique immunity to infirmities and diseases that strike and devastate every human family Maine, when, moving away from the cradle of his ancestors, This family is settling in a new climate. But a preliminary and interesting question, that of the cosmopolitical science, must throw some light– on its path mières.

Is man a cosmopolitan being, as has been repeatedly

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TEN.

To this day, the language of the vulgar? – From a couple unique, as taught to the Jew and the Catholic books of Moses, which are far from contradicting the data of science, the human race, created to inhabit this world and to exert his power there, he covered it entirely with flow of its generations. In this sense, history declares it cosmopolitan. But does experience confirm the cosmopolitan-humanism in this other sense that every human family Maine can transport his home with impunity into climates where a long succession of years has not naturalized his fathers? In other words, the man who changes the conditions of his native environment, does he retain a natural home? in all places on earth? Has his life even been active there? speed, same fullness, same length, and his race grows there? Does it produce offspring as numerous and as viable as those on the soil where his cradle was?

No, experience has shown the opposite; and, in this In this sense, man is far from being cosmopolitan. To the Jew alone the privilege of the exception; and science, when questioned, tells us that his race obeys "the statistical laws of birth, of disease and mortality, completely different from those to which are subject the peoples in whose midst he lives." This same science tells us that "only between In all of them, the Jewish race adapts and perpetuates itself in all the climates"; that it perpetuates itself there without struggle, of its own accord, and

- On the non-cosmopolitanism of human races, by Dr. Boudin, p. 392; extract from vol. 1 of the Memoirs of the Anthropological Society Paris logy, of which this scholar was president. – Chief physician of the military hospital of Saint-Marlin, in Paris; chief physician of the army of the Alps in 1818, then of the Army of Italy, where he succeeded in 1859 Mr. Baron Larrey, the illustrious Doctor Boudin, author of very well-numerous works, and who left several unpublished, deals with this same question in the chapter entitled The Jews (vol. II, p. 128 of his magnificent that work: Treatise on Medical Geography and Statistics, two enormous volumes of seven hundred and so many pages each, with plans (ches; Paris, 1857, J.-B. Baillière. We will quote him shortly.)

Our very close friend, Dr. Boudin, had been frankly... realist; but, as he liked to repeat, "I have an advantage over most of my colleagues "A huge advantage: – I know how to forget." When experience made him to recognize in his scientific belief a school prejudice, he without calling upon that auxiliary and distant flow which will have to

THE JEWS.

For a long time to come, for example, supporting or increasing the population levels in Algeria, America, and of a multitude of colonies whose blood wants to be without constantly renewed, because constantly a stepmother land devour.

But what is the nature of these strange singularities that Do they distinguish, favor, or sometimes afflict the Jew? And First, which of the immunities gives him the right to life amidst the deadliest plagues? That is perhaps A few examples will help us understand this!

"As for cholera, sometimes the Jews make repudiated at that moment, and without worrying about the number or quality of those who made this error one of the dogmas of mo- science last. Several instances of high magnetism which he had witnessed, and that he had studied with the mixture of sagacity and tenacity that ca-characterized his mind, overwhelmed him, so there is something else here-

"Nothing but matter!" - Shortly afterwards, this eminent doctor was put in touch with our neighbor, Father Ventura, and soon he he tells us: a I'm beginning to believe that the right end is on the side of the ca-Catholics." A little later, the twilight he had glimpsed became
For him, full light, and he drew near to God.

On March 9, 1867, around nine o'clock in the morning, following a long an illness that had neither stopped his walking nor his work, he sent us
"By a servant, this word from his servant: 'I am a priest!'"..."
We arrived, and he pointed out to us Father Depontailier, of the clergy.
of Saint-Roch. We helped him receive the last rites, and,
In the evening, around nine o'clock, enjoying perfect calm and preserving
At the height of his powers, he gave up his soul before us.
God.

The most complete biography we knew of the scientific lifetifique and the works of Doctor Boudin is that of Dr.
JAN Perler, former chief physician of the Invalides hospital.
V. Rozier, 39 pages large octavo; Paris, 1867; very fine type.
This pamphlet was read on June 20, 1867, at the solemn session of the Anthropological Society, of which Dr. Boudin had been the president.

Mr. Boudin's father was a senior officer; his mother belonged to one of the noble houses of Bavaria. He was multilingual, and the
The German language was as familiar to him as French.

'Algeria, mortality, deaths per 1,000 inhabitants;

1844. Europeans. . . . 44.6. Jews 21.6.

1845. - 45.6. - 36.1.

1847. - 50.0. - 31.5.

1848. - 42.5. - 23.4.

1849. - 105.9. - 56.9.

Doctor Boudin, Non-cosmopolitanism of human races, p. 389.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TEN.

397

"mult the costs," sometimes they are, so to speak, alone scattered "gnés," and this case is by far the most frequent. - Since the year 1832, - "the Jews have often been completely spared, even though they lived in the most filthy and the most compacted. The entire Middle Ages... rope to point out the immunity of Jews during epidemics of plague-immunity that often became against them a pretext for persecution. Speaking of the plague of 1346, Tschudi, a former historian, states verbatim that this ma-"The law did not reach the Jews in any country*." The Jews, observe the London International, "resident in a locality unhealthy, unsanitary, and that's what those who live there know. were the same district, especially at the time when cholera wreaked havoc. Well, apart from three or four cases of diseases, all the Jews, and we include in the number the smallest and poorest class, have miraculous-"He escaped the plague."

"Frasicator shows us the Jews completely escaping-ment to the typhus epidemic of 1503; Rau reports the same immunity in the typhus epidemic observed in Langgaeus, in 1824; Ramazzini insisted on the immunity of Jews during the epidemic of intermittent fevers observed in Rome in 1691; Deguer shows us the Jews escaping in 1736 on the extreme rarity of croup in Jewish children; and, According to Wawruch, the tapeworm (tapeworm) is not found not within the Jewish population in Germany*.

'a Various diseases constitute the almost exclusive prerogative of the Jewish race, while others seem to spare it completely. "A'on-Cosmopolitanism, p. 388. Ophthalmic diseases are rampant with a certain predilection among the Jews. Messrs. Grellois and Furnari have reported in Algeria hydrophthalmia as an almost exclusive of this race." Doctor Boudin, Geography, Medical, vol. II, p. 140. What needs to be noted is that the immunity of this scapegoat is generally the one that exempts it from deadly diseases.

^ Iselin, Schweizer Historié, 1734; Boudin, Géogr. med., t. II, p. 141.

^ Arch, israel.,XXI\, p. 1063; 1866. In 1849, same phenomenon.

^ Read this entire chapter; Gétgr. médic. t. II, p. 141; 1857; Boudin, authorities in support, tb.

Digitized by Google

398

THE JEWS.

But what are they for the Jews, and for some explanations? professional creators, the causes of this preservation Inexplicable? These are causes that cannot be explained. since most of them, in the circumstances in which they are reported, do not exist. This will be, for example, the observation of the regime religious food, which we see most Jews to trample underfoot as lightly as that of the Sabbath! will be circumcision, which many Israelites begin to neglecting; these will be frequent ablutions and other causes of equal validity*! For, if there is one proven fact, it is that In every country in this world, the filth of the Jew is in the state proverbial; and, if any city contains within its walls a Jewish population, or rather if you encounter one there a dirty, miserable, frightening neighborhood from the point of view Regarding hygiene, everyone will tell you, if you happen to ask; What is it? – Ebl, what else could it be, if not the Jewish quarter? Because still, and not finally, among the Jews, where people rarely marry except between neighbors of the same gender race, the frequency of consanguineous marriages is extreme, and the Statistics has armed itself with terrible figures to establish, not not the hygienic advantages, but the multitude of causes

It is therefore important to search in a direction that has not The causes of these singular-features that the observer sees repeated under a strange variety of forms, and we could not present under one

This fact had escaped Shakespeare, a keen observer: Halh not a Jew eyes? Fed with the same food, hurt with the same weapons, subject to the same diseases, healed by the same means, warmed and cooled by the 'same winter and summer as a Christian is? Merchant of Venice. - Walter Scott shows in his Ivarwhe, at pro- Isaac of York and Rebecca's deep knowledge of The status of the Jew in the Middle Ages.

2 Archives israélites, XXIV, p. 106b ; 1866.

3 Read Doctor Boudin, The Dangers of Consanguineous Unions and The necessity of crossbreeding in the human species; Paris, 1860. J.-B. Baillière; octavo pamphlet of 82 pages. - The professions of which the Jew engages in exposes him perhaps to less danger than the Christian; ibid., Geography of the Middle Ages, vol. II, p. 140; but that cause of pre- The reservation would be very minimal.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TEN.

399

A day too favorable for viewing such a phenomenal exception.

Yes, with no other resource than himself, "scattered to in the midst of all peoples and in all parts of the earth, Far from Judea, uncrusted and uncrustable, having its diseases and his own pathological immunities, acclimatized everywhere,
The only truly communist people, the Jew represents in time and space, the physical and the moral, the phenomenon
The most surprising historical and ethnographic. Everywhere he is remaining himself, preserving his traditions, his rites, his features, his nationality and its type, similar to the Rhône which crosses the Lake Geneva, still preserving its trace and quality initial of its waters.

Yes, "the features of the Jews are so distinctive"
It's difficult to be mistaken. For centuries, they have been doing part of the population of the countries where they settled, but the

they live there, and, most importantly, they they all resemble each other in diverse climates... that is to say that all have the same characteristics of form and proportions, in short, 'everything that essentially constitutes a type. Also, the Jews of these various countries resemble each other. much more among themselves than they resemble nations among which they live' ^ «physiological character of which its invincible tenacity throughout the centuries never ceased to isolate them, distinguishing them from any non-Jewish compatriot, to bring them closer to every foreign Jew in the land where they had been born! None of the habits produced by nature realization cannot, in fact, change or alter in any way linking the evidence of their nationality; "and the climate, despite the long duration of his action, gave them little more than

* Ibid., p. 128. W. Edwards, Memoirs of the Ethnological Society, t. I- r, p. 13, Paris, 1841. – Examine the most ancient Egyptian monuments ancient, and at every step you encounter "groups of the types are still the striking portraits of Jews today. And if

If you're willing to settle for a period of three hundred years, study the Leonardo da Vinci's painting of the Last Supper. In this masterpiece, "the "Jews of today are painted with a trait for Irait." (Geography, Med., vol. II) p. 128-9; – Memoirs of the Ethnological Society, l. I»'', p. 13.

Digitized by Google

400

THE JEWS.

diversity of language and expression, or perhaps other "Such minor modifications."

These remarks have baffled more than one observer!
However, not everything has been said about the Jew, and not only– the immunity that pursues him and clings to his flesh is a fact that left the physiologist stunned and the a Christian speechless with admiration, but a second anomaly accompanies it and occurs contrary to the frail appearance of the Jew, and of the weakness, of the frailty of his limbs. This unique characteristic lies in its longevity, that is to say in the superiority of its vital force over that of the peoples whose His physical strength strangely surpasses his physical vigor.

'Doctor Boudin, Geography, Medical, pp. 128–129. – That if it pleases what– five Christians to recognize, in agreement with a large number of uifs, a divine action in this exceptional state, this will be the case of to remember the principle, constantly reiterated in our books on magic, of the constant parallelism that exists between the divine order and the democratic order niaque in the things of this world, where the demon is called the monkey of God. The application of this principle will be immediately apparent in the current species; for, besides ubiquity, or mer- universality night watchman, and immunities of God's people, momentarily ill-said and humiliated, we encounter in 1;\ enigmatic race of the Bohemians- mine, these fortune tellers, a universality and some parallel immunities, albeit of a much lower order. We deliver our idea to those who want to build this parallelism, of which they will encounter some elements in the chapter on the Bohemians of Treatise on geography and medical statistics in France ■

"The name Bohemians was given to a wandering and vaga- bond which, since the beginning of the fifteenth century, has spread throughout Europe. It now seems proven... that he is Indian of origin; but no trace of its emi- "Gration..." Their name is vain among the different peoples of Europe, and They are scattered in almost every part of the world... today they meet their tents in Brazil, the kid in America from the North, and their total number is estimated at 600,000 or 700,000. The Bohemian resists cold and heat admirably, and he He is almost never sick. His sobriety is remarkable, but he has a pronounced taste for the flesh of dead animals. Almost all the Historians accuse this people of cannibalism, and they attribute to its "Cannibalistic tastes, the child abductions attributed to him." Ibid. 124. We will encounter this depravity of taste in the study of the Sabbaths diabolical; among the Jews (Bible), among the Canaanites, among the idols- latrines or people with demonic religions, and among sorcerers. We also- As a consequence, this led to child abductions and the murder of adults. like that of Father 'l'homas, to have their blood, and we shall see to draw the various forms of cannibalism, which is a crime sacred. See our book (temporarily out of print) God and the Gods.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TEN. 401

And in vain do the peoples who despise his race glorify themselves will they erupt from the superior strength of their muscles and of their members-will they succeed in vain in developing them? and to increase them through the learned exercises of the gymnasium- tics and the improvement of hygiene laws; vain- will they study each other to fight for a long time with this puny des- descendant of Israel - for, in this one, life opens and gives itself of her own accord: she immediately felt roots in the ground that he plant his feet there; he holds the earth, and the earth

From him come the most vigorous offspring of every race that is not point hers.

The facts gathered from statistics on life in England-land, in Prussia and France, says Doctor Richardson, lead to this inevitable conclusion; that the consequences the effects of gymnastics have led, in all countries where the practice becomes vulgar, a general improvement-The rallies of life. "However, the most remarkable fact" between Everyone notices this in the history of a particular race, and I I want to talk about the Jewish race. In no period of history-of the history of this Meroëuleux people, we discover not the slightest trace of a system that tends to develop its capacities physical.

"His own ordinances and hygienic laws, perfect" In certain details, they are poorly defined, or even negative. regarding special processes whose purpose is to develop strength and size. It remains a certain fact that, as people', he never gave the slightest proof of supe-physical priority. » However, faithful to his faith, and supportive the weight of the cruel persecutions and oppression that he attracting attention from all sides, even the sight of his weakness, he extended "over the entire surface of the earth in the midst of the con-editions, climates, the most diverse societies, and it is "Of all civilized peoples, first in terms of vitality!"

'The strength and size of the inhabitants of Canaan, which they were to con-To seek and destroy, were once a source of terror for them.

26

Digitized by Google

402 THE JEWS.

The civil registry records of Prussia, if indeed they are the ones by example that we take as a comparison title, give For Jews, the mortality rate was 1.61 per 100, while, For the rest of the kingdom, it is 2.0. Every year the The Christian population increased by 1.36 percent, while that, among the Jews, the increase is 1.73... In France strong, according to the records of Doctor de Neufville', "the duration The average lifespan is only thirty-six years and eleven months. among Christians, while for Jews it is Forty-eight years and nine months.

"During the first five years of life, deaths of children, among Christians, were twenty-four, and of

Hey, he was reaching a quarter of the Jews' lives, the first offering, in short, seven years and eleven months, and the second 'twenty-eight years and three months. Half of Christians don't reach not k thirty-six years, while the same proportion among the The Jewish man is fifty-three years and three months old. Above fifty-nine years and one month, only the one found alive is a quarter of the Christian population; a quarter of the Jewish population, over seventy-one years old*.

Whether, in its inelegant style, this piece is flawed or not With some slight exaggeration, this is possible, and that she... offers a truly exceptional example of the exception itself that we point out, we want to believe; but, from Therefore, it only relates in a way that is all the more re-metricable to general statistical data; it cor-strengthens the observations relating to immunities which are the Israel's privilege; and, for its part, it demonstrates a vitality singular, a prodigious superiority of vital force in this

'According to Doctor G. de Neufville, Frankfurt, 1855, Lebensda-ner, etc., a quarter of the population dies:

Among Christians, at 6 years, 1 month, and 1 year. Among Jews, at 28 years, 3 months.

Half at 36 – 6 – – at 53 – 1 –

Three-quarters at 59 – 10 – – at 71 – 0 –

Ibid., Non-cosmopolitanism, p. 390.

This English document is reproduced by the Archives israélites, XI, pp. 497-499; 1868.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TEN. i03

A scattered race, so remarkable in the midst of peoples by the inferiority of his physical strength!

But, besides the phenomenon of an invariable and invincible inferiority of type; besides the phenomenon of this mocking vitality which manifests itself in the opposite direction to the vigor of body; besides the phenomenon of these immunities which singular-They once again discriminate against the Jew, exempting him from diseases and plagues, and which strike him among the peoples a more indelible character than the yellow badge whose police orders used to mark it on clothing; besides these phenomena, so bizarre in their course and in yesterday's event has just caused a strange surprise, a real seizure, to the investigators of the reports of the statistical, while the suddenness of its production seems designating it as one of those warnings that the Providence takes pleasure in giving to the world, and that history records under the title of signs of the times.

But what is this sign? What is it? Nothing, in a few years, it will not be ignored; it is an abnormal multiplication of the species, it is an inexplicable increase in population which, all of a sudden and everywhere at once, is taking place and accuses himself in the home of Israel, in the midst of the various peoples in which he mingles. And yet it is not in the atmosphere-Malthusian sphere, whose miasmas invade the so-modern society, which has become the milieu of the de-Talmudiated Jew; this is not in new and favorable conditions the extension of human life that we are permitted to attribute this prolific virtue that sprang unexpectedly from the flesh of Israël, and whose actions stop under his roof without going beyond it the boundary, without communicating itself to the peoples whose land it lends a homeland.

Is it then, by chance, that an intelligent force, is it that an invisible power had endowed Jacob's men with a privilege which, under the ceaseless fall of the centuries and under the destructive blow of revolutions, they would not have preserved them.

26.

Digitized by Google

404

THE JEWS.

only untouched in the whirlwind of peoples, than for the to call by the means of this sudden multiplication to new destinies? Is it after having maintained, for centuries, on the surface of the globe, the level of population that Judea supported at the time of the death of Christ, this unexplained force, would like to create in the Jew resources whose unexpected magnitude would be a temptation for him of conquest, in those times when, passionate about the improvement of the human condition, he would like to see the world as expected, the sick and suffering people who host it delight in the plot twists whose succession changes and renews the face of the world? Would she want to excite to any audacious movement he who knew, in every country, instigators of the people*; this Jew, in short, who until now he only plotted in the darkness the resurrection of a Jewish empire? Is it finally this invisible force and Intelligent, is it this force, which never tires? to walk in accordance with the meaning of the Jewish-Christian prophecies yours, would like in a few years, on the side of power intellectual and metallic of Israel, which suddenly reached summit of all social positions, to double, triple his Numerical value? Would she want to create for him, all ready to move at the trumpet blast of the man she will call his Messiah, an army master in all places of gold and iron, these two metals which, on the ruin of the princes The two pillars of Christian civilization have become the two main levers of our social changes, the unique levers of our social change, Dominant sounds of modern omnipotence? ^

But let us refrain from any hypothesis; let us be content to submit the statistical figures to the informed reader lessons from history, which are those that we recommend command the Church, and let us leave it to the sagacity of each individual. reflections and comments.

'See in the Jewish journals we cite, love and admiration' a ration for the Jew for all the revolutionaries who were and are the scourge Christian societies.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TEN.

405

"In all the countries where we were able to obtain retrospective censuses of the Jewish population, – written was our friend, the illustrious president of the Anthropological Society– Paris logic, – we are seeing an increase in one unusual speed. And, he told us in the privacy of the conversation, this speed, for whatever reasons one strives to explain it, it seemed to me, as well as cosmopolitan virtue from the saug of Israel, one of those phenomena "that confuse the 'human reason!' 11 It is therefore important for us to place under With keen eyes, here are a few examples of these astonishing facts:

In Holland, in 1830, the Jewish population recorded is d3 45,482; it is, in 1840, 51,138.

E l Suisse, 1803, 1,207; 1837, 1,360; 1850, 3,146.

In Rhenish Bavaria, 1814, 9,951; 1829, 13,937; 1835, 14,428.

In Prussia (kingdom). 1822, 145,000; 1840, 195,000; 1849, 218,000.

In Algeria, 1849, 19,028; 1851, 21,048.

In Hungary, 1785, 75,089; 1805, 127,816; 1840, 241,632; 1848, 292,000.

In the city of Pest, 1840, 7,721; 1843, 12,800; 1848, 16,512*.

The Israelites of Algeria, according to the Jewish Archives, In 1861, they numbered 28,097, and this number has increased, during the last five years, by 5,855 individuals'. Now, "such a rapid increase does not

'Geography, med., f. II, p. 431-137; 4857.

• Geography of Medicine, vol. II, p. 437, etc., etc.

® Israelite Universe, IX, p. 423-i; 4867; id., VI, p. 169; 4868.

According to the report presented to the Governor General of Algeria, the average ratio for Jews is therefore in the proportion of 208.39 for 4,000, while the climate is devouring us there. The same phenomenon had been accomplished long ago in Egypt in favor of Israel, during the captivity speed. The multiplication of Jacob's sons had exceeded the limits ordinary fertility, and that is what the Hebrew text expresses. The Latin translation tells us: Filii Israel died, and, almost germinantes, multiplied sunt; ac, roborati nimis, impleverunt terram. – The word ni'mi marks excess. The French translation borrows the a periphrasis, powerless as it is to convey the force of the text: s The

Digitized by Google

406

THE JDIFS.

"This fertility is not seen in any other people of Europe!" This fertility... daine, and renewed from the miraculous time of Israel –, this ubiquity, this exceptional cosmopolitanism, signs of the most singular and extraordinary privilege of physical constitution that the history of peoples has shown us, and which,
– we must repeat it, – "confounds human reason–

"Providential rather than mere chance?"

Would the Jews still have, as they claim,
They go with Moses, an angel who guides them, and who, while...
■ Punishing in proportion to their faults, preserves these chosen ones for a providential mission that we would see all at The blow will spread to all regions of this world? The texts Biblical texts are precise about the past: "I will envelop my angel, says the Lord, so that he may go before you, and that he
He will keep you safe along the way! Listen to his voice, and keep It is good for you to despise him, because he will not forgive you. when you sin!... If you hear his voice, and that If you do everything I tell you, I will be the enemy of your enemies, and I will afflict those who afflict you."

Growing tired of respecting the angel of the Lord and of passing by

The children of Israel grew like trees and multiplied like fish, and, having become extremely strong due to their number and "Their riches filled the whole land where they were." the learned The translator adds: "The paraphrase here conveys the force of the expressions."
from the Hebrew text, which presents the idea of these two: comparisons.
Vence Bible, Exodus, ch. i, v. 7; t, II, p. 50t-2, .^'edii.; Paris, 1829.

This is therefore a case of prodigious multiplication. This pre-
It is like the Exodus, or the triumphant departure of the Hebrews. A multiplication Did it suddenly become similar foreshadow a similar event?

Despite the oppression of the Hebrews and the massacre of their children males, we see in the biblical book of Numbers, chapter 1, and especially V. 46-46, to what extent their descendants have increased. Read, as for the miracles which abound in the biblical book of ['Exodus, the work;
Thoughts on religion, by our good friend MJ Thomassy, cun-Honorary steward at the Imperial Court of Paris. We cannot overstate the importance of this I recommend this work, remarkable for the beauty of its style and the grandeur of thought; t vol. in-S" of 579 pages; Paris, <865, Plon.

'Geography, med., vol. II, p. 38; which is demonstrated by the table of the -page 65, same volume.

» Ibid., t. II, p. <3t.

■* Bible, Exodus, I. XXIII, 20, etc.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TEN.

His voice, the Jew despised him. Is this contempt, as well as the
 The people told him that the cause of the punishment that would punish him was What's next? Look at him, after having been everywhere, since his fall, the witness to the truth of the prophetic Scriptures that he peddling rumors without ever managing to understand them, being at the once the missionary of evil, the left-wing Kabbalist, the apostle primitive traditions of occultism, and the man that Fixity, which peace and rest repel. March!
 march on, man of grim progress—advance! —But Where to walk? — Wherever you can, wandering soul, wandering Jew;
 because the people, seeing you pass by, greet you by that name.
 March; march, child of the earth, prince of the earth;
 walks, and without being able to find a homeland there: walks tou-days, and always agitated, always worried, always slapped, booed, always the same, always impassive and im-Mutable amidst all the changes!... So old are you that all the ruins, on the side of the centuries that count your wrinkles, seem from yesterday; and yet your sap astonishes and your Verdeur is a marvel. The money you adore cannot to dry up in your hands; but you possess it without enjoying it; and neither Neither your foot nor your possessions can be fixed to the ground. Walk!
 Walk! Because staying in one place means you have to carry double the load.
 The weight of time that burdens and tires you, but without wearing you out.
 Every nation remains foreign to you; yet every nation...
 They know, and you know them all; but your heart is of stone
 No one is attached to any man, and no one is attached to you! No one
 This place is not your home, and the tent under which your brow
 She takes shelter, wanders from country to country, torn apart by all the Storm winds. You are recognized everywhere, and everywhere, Men, climates, and plagues, if they do not spare you insult,

'Time wears down the Jew no more than forty years in the desert did not, according to the word of the Bible, his clothes and his shoe, when he wandered under the guidance of Moses: "He has led here through the desert for forty years: your garments have been preserved, and the shoes on your feet have not
 "Not worn out during all this time." Bible, Deuteronomy, vol. XXIX, p. 5.
 — Read Thomassy, ut suprà, on these miracles of the Exodus.

Digitized by Google

Would Cain preserve you then? EnGn, walking without ceaselessly, and constantly waiting, do you not seem pursued?
by this anathema which fell upon the law, mingled with the blood of Christ,

the day of the great Calvary scene: You are cursed,

Yes, damn it, but for a time that seems about to end.
to finish, if we are not mistaken about the signs that are appearing sent to awaken our eyes as sonpisi... Damn! and the pro-
The followers of your old law cry out to you that no blessing
It will not equal yours on the day you please, as in the past.
to pour out the angel of the Lord -, the day when, regenerated by the
The blood of David's son, you will want to remake the person a true child of Abraham!

In any case, let us refrain until that hour from to dispute the superiority of your intelligence, and the strange physical superiority that makes your race the lasting race by excellence, the cosmopolitan race, the one that, in its fullness of health and life, sure not to lose its name on the side of flourishing peoples who lose theirs, can be seen to sit like a queen in every corner of the globe, to breathe with impunity, the venom of any atmosphere, braving all intempperishes, all mysterious and deleterious influence, prosper finally in the very places where any other human colony it withers, most often doomed to disappear if the waves successive waves of immigration only replace the flows that the
The ground devours it....

Yes, history tells us so and wills it: the Jew is, by his very nature... sence, the most indestructible people on this globe, and by Consequently, the most gifted for business and negotiation distant missions, for foreign missions, facilitated by him by his marvelous ability to speak the languages of all the nations. From a physical and intellectual point of view, the Jew, this cosmopolitan insignia, therefore, is, until he becomes so From a religious point of view, the most universal man is-that is to say, the most Catholic one imaginable, for such is the meaning of this word (xaeoXixôtj!

Digitized by Google

cm PITRE TENTH.

409

So far the brilliance of his superiority has not yet shone forth greedy and sensual, whose sole aim is conquest and enjoyment of worldly goods, an irresistible pull over others: superiority in art, in the science of exploit the man who owns, the man who produces, the man who sells; superiority in the art of making gold sweat and circulate, in the formidable association of capital, manpower and heads; superiority in the organization and discipline of occult societies, where followers walk towards a goal that Most people are unaware of this, but where Jewish genius excels is in... stealing, turning to one's advantage the ambition or vanity of some, the malice and foolishness of others; superiority in the arts that charm and enthrall the crowds; ca- superiority ballistics in the arts of darkness and audacity which, pl- giant in the depths of the evil empire, associate the action of man and that of the spirits of revolt; superiority in the transcendent sciences, those of religion and' excepted by philosophy; but superiority in the next year. the sophist's fraternal, skillful in blending with the doctrines of the theo- The logician and the publicist, the subtleties where the mind wanders, the poison of intoxicating doctrines that pervert the individuals They empty themselves and drive peoples to madness; superiority singular k marrying the false to the true, in the laws of an eco- political economy and a social science intended to form k his image the nations he blinds to lead them k his ends; superiority above all, and this is one of the most distinguished In the eyes of any astute observer, unparalleled superiority to hide, either in the thoughtful council of kings, or in the tumultuous council of peoples, their singular and infatuable influence, wealth and the eminence of the gifts which are acquired They embody the genius for intrigue that characterizes them, or rather the supernatural instinct that drives them, in the middle from their religious and moral blindness, towards the extreme goal of domination that turn k turn, for misfortune and bou- the happiness of the world, it is and will be given to them to attain.

Digitized by Google

i<0

THE JEWS.

So this is it, this is the Jew, this is the Jew of our time," that is to say, here is the one who prepares us, in the shadow of the so-secret societies of which he is the soul and the prince, a future and a formidable future—a character charged with a high-level role—prophesied by the Church, terrible, gloomy; but a child prodigal, she adds, who returns after difficult ordeals reliable, restorative, and therefore blessed by God to be forever blessed by men.

FINAL NOTES. STATISTICS.

Some statistical tables describing the distribution of Jewish people in the main parts of the world, become a appendix necessary to this chapter, which we conclude with these alignments figures. When we have compared these documents, we We will weigh its value at leisure, and we will know what is on this global, on the dates marked by these censuses, the approximate forces natives and the distribution of the Jewish element. Perhaps then, in In this time of revolutionary surprises, will it be easy for us to understand? to take, while thinking of the spectacle that the shores of the Ocean, the rising tide of galloping waves, with what speed The human tide endowed with such powers may one day invade, and perhaps—to be one day soon enough, such and such a region of the earth.

At the very moment we are speaking these words, the Danu- provinces Romania's assets are on their way to giving us an important an example of this phenomenon. Far from disdaining the teachings that they offer us, let us try to grasp in them a warning that our words could not place in a salient relief enough to strike util—their gazes.

"The Jews scattered throughout Europe are divided into three classes: I" The Spanish and Portuguese Jews, who are found not only in the Peninsula beyond the Pyrenees, but also in France and England—land: — eminently distinguished and exceptional, these are hardly Jews by blood; 2" Polish Jews, who claim to be descendants of Galileans; 3" the German Jews, those of the lowest class, that is to say—to say the one that is in Swabia and Alsace; for the Jews of the north "of Germany are of the same class as Polish Jews."

And let us note, in passing, that the German Jew, our close neighbor, "is the type and prototype of the Jew as he is depicted and as we generally know him. He is cunning, greedy, and rapacious; without faith or law, though fanatically devoted when he

* Ooclenr Boottin, Giogr. «tArûfiyuc, t. 1, p. 130; 1857.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TEN.

finds himself in the lowest ranks of his nation; but if he prays to God, this
It is only to ask him for material well-being. That is not true.
that he begs him to help him deceive Christians in transactions that he does with him, because he does not need divine help to do it to acquit skillfully and successfully. He has an incredible intellectual capacity.
He has intelligence and imagination, but he is lazy and cowardly. He is not clean only once a year, at Passover, or at Easter, because it is an obligation of his religion to then sweep his house, to brush his clothes, and to perform frequent ablutions.'

The Jewish population of the globe has been estimated:

By Hærschelmaun, in 1833, at 0.598.000

Johnston, 1855, at 6,000,000

Groel>er(j, at 5,000,000

Pinkcrotton, at 5,000,000

Mahe*firun, at 5,000,fK)0

Balbi, 1829, at 4,000,000

Berglians, 1854, at 4,000,000

Hessel, at 3,930,000

The caiholifjusy store at 3,260,000

V. Israelite Yearbook of Holland, taking the average of These various numbers, according to the estimates of the entire Jewish population,

4,444,000 After consulting a large number of computer censuses and from scattered documents, we believe we can propose the figure of 3,900,000 as being fairly close to the truth. The following figures—the figures indicate approximately the distribution of Jews in the five parts of the world:

Europe...

Asia

Africa...

America.

3,228,000

200,000

450,000

20,000

2,000

Total 3,910,000*

A little later, in his pamphlet on Non-cosmopolitanism human races, published in volume 1 of the Memoirs of the Society of anthropology, of which he was the president, Dr. Boudin...
He said: Today there are approximately 4,300,000 Jews, distributed as follows:

Europe 3,600,000

Africa 450,000

Asia 200,000

America 48,000

Australia 2,000

Total

4,300,000

'Report these assertions to their date; Cerfbeyt u(«uprà, p. 38; Paris, 1847.

* Boudin, Géogr. et statistique méd.ft, 11, p. 131*132; 1857,

^ P. 387, Nan-cosmopolUisme.

Digitized by Google

*12

THE JEWS.

The Almanach israélite from 1825 to 1829 indicates:

Europe . . .

Asia

Africa.

America.

Australie.

1,699,000

1,738,000

1,500,000

5,700

100

Total

4,940,800

But this document barely withstands scrutiny

11. There is therefore reason to contest the accuracy of the figure that seems to go to report the following words addressed on May 31, 186* to the Israelite delegation by M. Crémieux: "Do you know," our Abbot Grégoire told me in 1831 goire ^ do you know that our statistics show that there are six million Jews? – Six million! You have never even reached that number when you were a flourishing nation, in the best of times your story.

Today, that is to say thirty-seven years after the speculations of Abbot Grégoire, and nine years after the last and very serious calumny of Mr. Doctor Boudin's buttocks on the total figure of the Jewish nation (4,300,000), we give the following statistics on German Jews; it is that of the New Constitutive Map of Germany, which was published in Munich.

Prussia 260,751

Wurtemberg 11,610

Grand Duchy of Baden 25,263

Prussia conquered by annexation

From Nassau and Frankfurt, 20,000 new Israelite subjects.

Dii Hanover 13,000 –

Electoral Hesse 12,000 –

Dea six million Israelites spread throughout the earth, a figure adopted by the Jewish community, more than half live in Europe, namely:

Russia 1,300,000

Prussia and the rest of Germany 346,000

Austria 900,000

France 80,000

England 42,000

Saxony 1,200

Syria and Türkiye in Asia 520,000

Morocco and North Africa 610,000

America 250,000

There are some in Sweden and Norway

^ Boudin, Géo^r, med., l. II, p. 131–132.

* Our abbot! A very apt expression. We cannot dispute with the Jews this Bishop Atsernaenié, this conventiounel who treated his king as the Jews have treated theirs: Jesus Naxarene rez Judaeorum.

* Reproduced in Vl/nive>-$ israeVi/e, IV, p. 189; 1866.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TEN. *13

According to the first figure from Doctor Boudin, in his Geography medical, in 1857, and this is the lower of the two, we find:

Germany, 1,150,000.

Austria

Plum •wind >ei auueiioui

Bavaria

WVuricroberjj

Beautiful

GrendKluclié de Heite

HCSE Electoral

Nassau

Uoyaiime of Saxony

Grand Duchy of Saxe-Weimar.
Duchy of Saxe-Cohourg-Gotha

Duchy of Saxe-Meiniogen

Duchy of Saxe-Allenburg

Hanover

Duchy of Brunswick

Grand Duchy of Oldenburg. . .

Mecklcmbourg-Siréliix

Houiein-I-aueubourg

Litierabourg (sic)* •

Limburg (1849)

Duchy of Anhalt

Free cities, etc.

149,851

2[^],808

11,914

23,100

28,134

14,422

6,811

988

I, 450

1,600

1,508

1,400

11,562

980

1,488

616

3,402

326

1,259

1,400

II, 656

Total in France, 73,975, namely:

Upper Ubia

Seioe

Moselle '*■

Meurihe

Gironde

Vosges

Landes ...a –

Doubs

Meuse...

The rest decreases considerably, for example:

Dawn

20,935

14,882

10,918

1,168

5,615

2,454

1,311

1,194

836

145

699

19

21'

* Doctor Boudin, Céoÿr. et scalùtigue màtic., p. 133–135 i 1851. – Le Monde, August 23, 1869, we are told without indicating the source: Europe, more than three millic half. Poland, 1,100,000, of which 1,100,000 are Russian Poland; 400,000 are part of the k of Poland; 200,000 Galicia, 11,000 Duchy of Posen, 8,000 Krakow. – In France, 156,000 (let's say less than 80,000); in Algeria, 29,000.

CHAPTER ELEVEN.

(

A JEWISH POPULATION IN THE MIDDLE OF THE MEDIEVAL OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

A word to pose the question. – The Jewish tide, we said, can, on a certain day, cover a point in Europe and approach it pray. – Who would these Jews be? Medieval Jews, and here they are.

– Their sudden demands, supported by all their compatriots from outside and from some of the European powers. – How And why. – Romania, the scene of their invasion. – Struggle of the Romanians, similar to that of the Christians against the Jew in the Middle Ages.

– Reaction against the Jew.

The final lines of our last chapter have said that the growing waves of the Jewish population for- would one fine day, and in a stormy wind, get drunk- to, accumulate floor upon floor, and all at once, my- crumbling swamps, melting on this or that point of this globe, to invade it, to overwhelm it, to cover the earth with it, and to spread over it at peace amidst ruins. Let us now read in the current pages, no longer simply the possibility of this fact, but, we might venture to say, the comment- cement of this very fact itself. In audacity, in morals, and consequently in the faith of the Israelite masses who acc- complit, perhaps we will recognize this Jew of whom we have so often and so singularly spoken, the Jew of our average. age. And if he seems to emerge from his grave, fully alive, – where he never descended, – let us see if the providential goal The aim of this vision is not to resurrect before our eyes the history- history disfigured, massacred by foreign historians mostly Jewish race, but a number of whom are- could be called Jewish. The time has undoubtedly come when, in the designs of Providence, the exact knowledge from a past that is revived and takes shape again to strike our Our eyes must give us the intelligence of the future.

'Ignorant historians, or those passionate and complicit with the Jew. To them Joseph de Maistre's words: "History, for three hundred years, "It's nothing but a vast conspiracy against the truth."

It is on the borders of Austria, and towards the East, that this past regains its form, that the Middle Ages recover live, and that all the Jews of Europe, auxiliaries of the Jews of the locality, are currently striving to direct our regards and to keep the whole world on tenterhooks. The principality of Romania, that is to say a vast dismemberment of the embassy the worst of the sultan formed from the Moldavian-Wallachian provinces, here is the topographical point where these new interests are clashing, these audacious claims of Judaism—and the weight of major European powers are openly being pushed towards this by the hands of Israel in the balance of public affairs. Drawing on these diverse forces, the Romanian Jew said to the Romanian who has just welcomed him onto his soil: From now on at your place I want to be at home—I will be your equal there; and at My worship will be in his house, respected by all, and equal to yours * .

Because Israel has, for the moment, given the world a revolution—to adopt this slogan, so poorly understood by so many Christians: Equality of religions! He makes it resound with his most so-nore: "It is the equality of religions that alone allows all the progress; » and freedom, equality of religions, are one of the the first human rights*. Judaism, in fact, does not could not establish on any point of the earth a principle more favorable to his cause!

However, to the point of legality, Israel, by using this language on Romanian soil is within its rights; likewise that from the point of view of reason he is in the absurd; and, at from a practical point of view, in the impractical, in the impossible—Possible. But where does this legal right for the Jew originate? Here it is: The potentates of Europe, thwarted by the Jews and by the instigators of revolutions, constant auxiliaries of Israel, have enshrined in a constitution which they endowed the Rou-

- We have shown how, for Jews, equality implies superiority.

* Israelite Archives, XV, p; 683, 1867; – ibid., XVI, p. 721, 1866; speech by the Jew Crémieux before a bureau of the Legislative Chamber Romania lative.

THE JEWS.

hands and that they clothed with the distinctive title of internationalnal, this right to equality which the Jew already sometimes uses in the middle of us, trying to turn it against the free practice of the religion that our nation professes. – (See above.)
 We probably didn't have time to think, in improvisation-Given this constitution, what should be granted to the Talmudic Jew of the Romania, the rights of the Romanian, it was dispossessing the Romanian-hand of his natural rights and his possessions. For he fails to this native, to fight on equal terms against the Jew, a religion similar to that of the Talmud, that is to say, which gives it allow him and grant him credit for deceiving and robbing one man whose belief is foreign to his own. He lacks yet another intelligence and acquired resources that make him the equal of the Jew; moreover, he lacks what only in the world, the Jew possesses, that is to say not only in middle, but around the common nation, a second nation, a particular nation that shares his faith, that is of his blood, and which, giving him everywhere the support of a powerful health and irresistible family, make the cause of all indi-
 He saw the cause of an entire nation! Hence the feeling of weakness and inferiority which discourages, which distresses the Romanian, and excites him, as the Christian populations of old did.
 yourselves, to rise up against oppressors whom the law does not would allow him to reach, to turn against them acts of the most reprehensible violence

The phases of this question thus become those the great struggles of the Christian against the Jew in the Middle Ages
 And ever since. As they unfold, they reproduce Therefore, in favor of the inhabitants of the nineteenth century whose eyes would consent to open, one of the erased pages of these times, now largely unknown, offer us a a history lesson that is as reliable and necessary as it is engaging;

'Same cause in Servius, same effects. See the Israelite f/m'üers, VIII,
 p. 357-9; 4867. But in vain did they weigh the law, in vain did they weigh the foreigner of all their weight in favor of the Jew; the customs, and the necessity of Living while remaining master of one's own home, prevailed in Servia over all another force: Primo vivere, secundo philosophari.

Digitized by Google

let us follow with a watchful eye Israel, which gives it and which We're paying quite a lot for it!

Israel arrives, rests, settles, sits down, prospers, pul-Ille in the Danubian provinces, and immediately decrees that the time has come for him to expose and support this which he proudly calls his rights. He defends them; he exercises them, He abuses it, and, as a consequence, suddenly the
The ground trembles beneath his feet and refuses to let him stand. Israel is, as in the past in the heart of Europe, overthrown, reviled, Slapped, chased away! The brutality of the abuse he was subjected to!
equal to that which they display, to the applause of the Jew and of his friends, Spain and Italy regenerated, by stripping and in hunting down, in the name of freedom of conscience and religion, the religious men and women who are demanding in their country the the right to live according to the practices of the dominant religion!
He is burned, beaten, drowned, the victim of heinous plots and of atrocious persecutions. All the plagues that come out of the malice and human wickedness – if hyperbole does not mixed with his language, – unleashed upon his devoted head; he he becomes agitated and irritated; he grieves and is angry; he cries out, cries, howls, threatens, moans, rages; and, descending going back up the range of passions that are inspired by the earth-anger and fury, his voice, quick to vary its tones, deafens heaven and earth!

* Read the Jewish journals that we cite in passing, and our newspapers revolutionaries: the Century, etc.

The persecutions, details. – Accounts and grievances of the Jew. – Cries distress call, appeal for intervention from Jews abroad and from the powerful sessions. – Raids on Jews, imprisonments, brutal expulsions.
– Heartbreaking scenes. – A few months of respite, and then the fury of Populations reignite; looting, violence, synagogues overturned, Horrific abuse.

Let us listen, let us listen to the urgent grievances of these persecuted, because telegraphic electricity addresses them to great Israelite lawyer in charge of the task will give every interest

Jewish the highest resonance that Ia can achieve Human speech: "A man, and he is the |) prime minister of Prince – his name is Bratiano – takes the liberty of cancelling with a stroke of the pen the contracts that protect us; he
It tears apart even those that the government has passed; it tears us apart Search our rentals: farms, inns, public houses questions; and, almost within his sight, the police, exempt of judicial control, executes with its appalling brutality of* Jewish beatings! Neither age, nor status, nor position, nothing e-moves these executioners. We are being pursued, we are being charged with With irons, we are thrown in masses beyond the border crossing.
men, women, children; and when they rise towards the sky our cries of distress, this welcome spectacle is not for the populace, a subject of ridicule. The excitements stem from...
They rise and multiply; fanaticism intensifies, and we do not we live more than ever under the threat of a general massacre.
Brothers of the West, protect us! mrreruenei; welcome our supplications; save, save your unfortunate brothers from Moldova. Hurry and rescue us from our misfortune-"Reux sort!"

These grievances and these distressing pieces of news are followed by More news, but nothing changes. "The arrests, the expulsions, initially smaller, – and we transcribe
the very terms of the Jewish journals – had ended up to take on such dimensions that their number reached from one hundred and fifty to two hundred per day! At first, they had only been carried out by police commissioners, on the order of the minister and under the auspices of the mu-national; but 'now, in order to win the people, or made to carry out general raids on the city day and night by salaried individuals, as well as the dregs of society, are supplied everywhere.

people. Arrests in the streets, invasions of the towns Sounds and mistreatment, that was the watchword of these gangs, and happy are those who made it to the prisons without having been too badly mistreated. The prisons are de-

' Sereth, May 25, 1867. Israelite drehiees, XII, p. 539; 1867, etc.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER ELEVEN.

it 9

Insufficient attendance... The despair of those who are the object to recreate scenes that one might imagine taking place among savages

'vages', but not among Christians. The excited Israelites briefly considered resisting these acts by force brutality;... fear and despair were painted on everyone the faces... » Calm was restored, however, despite The mayor's response, so likely to unsettle him: "There is something superior to the laws, that's our right, like Romanians, and as owners of this country, to expel you,
"You Jews who are merely residents here*," that is—that is to say, foreigners; and what an impure bunch! . . .

A few months have passed since these lamentable scenes, but the fury of the people against us did not
The situation calms down, and soon we see the same acts repeated.
repeat in infinite variations. At Berlad, "a thousand individus, at the head of which there were a few instigators, are hurled upon the Israelites with diabolical fury, in .plundering these unfortunate people down to their last shirt... In the street where I live, the damage done to the Israelites
It amounts to fifteen thousand ducats... Everything has been destroyed without mercy.
both furniture and buildings. To the craftsmen, we have The tools were broken. All the windows, all the doors of the The Israelites have been so damaged that we are forced to cover ourselves with mats so we wouldn't die of cold. Our synagogues are demolished and destroyed down to their foundations
The wealthiest Israelites are reduced to the most...

'And the prisons of your free Italy! And the shootings to which...'
are delivered your friends to the Kingdom of the Two Sicilies, where the shot Without trial, they numbered in the thousands! And the atrocious scenes of Poland, where women are no more spared than men!
We have other witnesses to attest to these incredible facts than Jews... Let us hasten to say that these odious excesses cannot ex-accuse those whose Israelites, friends and admirers of extreme men, my revolutionaries and their doctrines, as their Reviews, it would appear, were the victims.

2 Israelite Archives, XIII, p. 593; 1867. — Ibid., XV, p. 685. — Ibid., Jassy, XIII, p. 59i.

î7.

Digitized by Google

450 THE JEWS.

Profound misery... My hand trembles, for misfortune is so great and so terrifying, that it is absolutely impossible for me

The International Bulletin, for its part, publishes the following note. vanity, where a profound consternation is depicted: "The Berlad's dispatches request help against the acts barbaric mob that invaded the synagogues, destroyed the houses and ransacked the shops of the Israelites. – The Banker Thenen, whose house was devastated, escaped, with difficulty to certain death. The rentier Numts, horrible– The abused child is dangerously ill. The merchants Nacbbar and others, whose stores were looted, are completely ruined. Mr. Epouréano, and those who have sought to defend the Israelites, were outraged without The prefect took measures to repel the attacks. "Lants..." However, "it was to the gendarmes that the Jews..." "They must have their lives!"

* Archives israélites, 111, p. 1 24–S; 1868.

^ Ibid., p. 153. But aren't the gendarmes the instruments of the prefect? – In Smyrna, around the same time, the Jews are guilty of acts similar to those of which they are victims here. Archives israélites, VIII, p. 342–3; 1867.

1.NSTIGATEUBS 00 AUTHORS OF THESE PERSECUTIONS; HARDIES ACCUSATIONS

OF THE JEW. – Denial of justice by the prince, elected by Mr. de Bismarck. – His all-powerful minister is Bratinno; this leader of the democrats is The great persecutor. – The enormities he commits, his denials brazen; he seeks to mislead Europe. – In one In short, the great culprit, in the sense of the Jew, is, as in the means age, the prince who dares to protect his subjects against him.

Israel has spoken; we have not stifled its grievances, and our words were only his, but not everything is said; atrocious, odious persecutions, and whose violence reminiscent of those of the most distant centuries, so here is the a fact that echoes throughout Europe. But what about Who is the instigator? Who will name the perpetrator? Could it be the party that the men of modern liberalism call

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER ELEVEN.

ill

Retrograde and clerical? No, not in the least. He doesn't care.

the prince himself; he is the young soldier of the house of Prussia, which Mr. de Bismarck and Napoleon III had established on the Romanian throne! It is the young Protestant whom the lawyer Israëlité Crémieux proclaims, addressing Napoleon III, a prince "animated by the most liberal intentions" I That is Furthermore, the all-powerful minister of this prince, that is to say Jean Bratiano. But who is this minister? A fanatic, a A friend of the priests? – Oh! Not at all, he is the leader of the men of progress; he is Romania's great democrat! – The true one The persecutor, then, would ultimately be the government. Romanian, the prince and the ministry supported by the Chamber who represents Romanian nationality! But let's leave, let's- Israel itself points this out to us, in formulating its terms ribbles incriminations, those whom he calls the guilty ones:

"As we predicted (dated June 25, 1867), The situation is becoming more intolerable every day. The prince arrived on the 16th, and none of us can get an audience! However, he "spent nearly three-quarters of an hour in the Israelite temple of Galatz, during the Te Deum celebrated in its Honor! H expressed himself on everything he saw in a way kind; but one can deduce from the words themselves that he uttered, what ideas his entourage insinuated to him on the Israelites," for these words are attributed to him: u The Moldovan Jews deserve persecution because they are not not only harmful to trade, but also to health public!

The recourse to the prince who governs Bumania is therefore Closed to us. And what about Jean Bratiano, the minister? all-powerful, he who coaxes riots, "who does not confide the official functions only to members of the committees persecuted cutters, » the author of the appalling circular from which aqui- they all the iniquities committed against the Jews; this mi- minister against whom the cry of the victims rises from all sides;

> Archive* Israëlité*, XII, p. 614; 4867.

Digitized by Google

422

THE JEWS.

this merciless man, who populates the prisons (Israelites, who abandon them there without food; or who, treating them as vagrants, gives the order to throw them beyond the borders.

door, and nothing moves this man whom you hear denying "All the events that take place in sunlight." The
The world, fortunately, "knows the value of its denials."

And yet this implacable, ferocious, and treacherous demo-
Crate is the prince's man! His goal is to deceive Europe, while at the same time it stirs up hatred against the Jews, and that, obedient to his orders, his officials arranged-petitions are being sent to the peasants where the government is begged to take action against the Jews. That is why the prince who grants the minister his full confidence, promises Everything, and nothing changes!* In short, "that the persecution Whether it was the work of Prince Charles's government, there is no doubt about it.
tera that the day he proclaims the complete emancipation of Moldavian-Wallachian Jews^.

The cry of the nation, which will soon strike our ears, rejects and refutes these accusations against the Jew. But,
In his view, the princes who refuse to protect Israel against their own subjects, and to raise it triumphantly to the level of indigenous citizens, which means to sit it on the ruins even of their kingdom, that is nowadays, as in the middle age, the great culprits, those whom written history stigmatizes by the Jew or by the friends of the Jew.

< Archives Israélites, XIV, p. 659; 1867, etc.; – id., Archives israé-lites, X, p. 471; 1868.

2 Israeli Archives, XI, p. 502; 1868.

® Here's the tip of the ear. Israelite Archives, XV, p. 683; 1867.

WHO IS AT FAULT? – The eugete denotes that the instigators of the excesses
Those who committed these acts were the Jews. – The Jews of the West, after having made th the echoes of the Romanian Jew, admit to not knowing how to reconcile the deposits-tions. – The Jew opposes freedom of the press and of the tribune, of which he is a late champion in the Christian states where his influence dominates. – If the government declares itself against the Jew,

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER ELEVEN.

423

He merely yields to the pressure of the national will. – This the refuge of the persecuted; its people are, according to the admission of the Jews, a model of religious tolerance, kindness, and hospitality. Words from Messrs. Crémieux and Montefiore. – If the Romanian has not changing customs in the blink of an eye, and without reason, the wrong would be Therefore, as in the Middle Ages, in the exactions and iniquities of the Jew? – A remark by Mr. von Metternich on Germany, applicable perhaps – to be in that country tomorrow. – Is what is happening there for Europe, which has ignored the truths of its ancient history, a pro- warning Videntiel?

The prince and his minister are therefore an object for Israel of mistrust, terror, and horror. But such feelings Are they legitimate? Because, amidst these horrific scenes, How can one not ask whose faults are there, whose... Great harm is done to those who provoke or incite such persecutions. Or such bloody accusations?

Let us listen: the public outcry erupts, and rises up against the Jew: Back off, back off, relentless aggressor!... your presence is cursed; and if we tolerate it, farewell to our homeland^/ for the race abounds there, your race flocks there, and your greed without The brake dispossesses us, leaving us with nothing but misery and tears. – But this cry, which seems to escape from the very bowels of the earth, responds the clamor of accusations and the Jew's grievances. Could this not be, by chance, the maneuver of the caught criminal, whose skill diverts on others, by the noise and vivacity of its clamor, the attention- tion of the passerby? For according to the proverb recalled against these foreigners by the president of the Legislative Chamber of Romania, "they are the ones who strike, and they are always those who shout" We will even have to resign ourselves to believing that he This is the case if we accept the letter written to the Israelite Sir Montefiore by the Foreign Minister of the Romania: I can assure you, sir, that the troubles suffered by the Jews, "although very- regrettable in every respect, are far from presenting the gravity which It has been attributed to them very inaccurately. The truth compels me

'Words received with applause. Israelite Archives, VI,

p. 266; 1868.

Digitized by Google

4ii THE JEWS.

even adding that, according to the data from survey ii which one proceeds, it would be your coreligionists who would unfortunately have caused, if not provoked, the

This is the response of a liberal and progressive government to the awful grievances voiced by the Jews of the West, without knowing themselves or who the perpetrators of the evil are on to which the Nioaldo-Vlach Jews give them the mission of to groan, or almost what its nature is. This difficult truth- The word "believable" occasionally escapes from the mouth. from Israel: "It's a lot of contradictory statements; or rather, - he tells us, - it is a double stream of information opposing sentiments that are being felt in Europe. If we are to believe the Israelites, there is continuous and organized persecution on on a large scale-if you believe the Romanians, it's a pure "A case of vagrancy and municipal police*.... » Com- therefore, how to "reconcile all these depositions,)> one of which is the ruin of the other? And how, we might add, not Should we not remain silent until we know which side justice lies on?

But while the liberal Jew proves inept at dissipating to alleviate the grief caused to him, in the states where he is accused to be sorry for, and for the free speech of the platform, and for free speech of the press', for which he is passionate in the States Christians who are influenced by his antisocial doctrines; while, Let us say that the liberal Jew protests against freedoms from the press and against the Romanian's incompetence, let us guard ourselves omitting to read a few lines whose content we introduces him to the role of the potentates who protect him, and to the character of his alleged attackers.

One of our most eminent publicists wrote, in the month of May 1868: - "We have seen that the Chamber of Deputies of Bu-Charest dismissed the reproach addressed as unfounded.

'Signed: Stefan Golescu; Israelite Universe, VII. p. 371; 1868.

2 Archives israélites, XV, p. 682; 1867.

* Read the Archives israélites, p. 78, no. 2, 1868; p. 659, no. 15, 1866, etc., etc.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER ELEVEN. 415

to the ministry for having persecuted the Jews from Romania. This addresses the allegations of the consuls. foreigners, who all reside in Bucharest, and are ignorant of what has could have happened in a remote location. We will observe Moreover, "that the collective action of the consuls resembles too closely k a bias. LaC/wmèreroumauie published an address yesterday well deserved by the prince and the fatherland >> Thus, these guilty parties whom the Jews accuse, the representatives of the nation

They glorify them!

This is because "the customs and background of the populations are largely responsible for what is happening in Moldo-Valachie.
The European powers seem to be complaining that the Jews in Romania did not have all civil and political rights ticks. But, in truth, who has the right to decide a Such a question? And isn't that an act of violence against a population that to force him to ratify an equality that he finds repugnant?.... R ne
We must not forget that, in the East, the Jews are not
They have become part of the nationalities that have welcomed them. They live k part, retaining their national and cosmopolitan character. Savons-
What kind of relationship exists between the Jews and the inhabitants?
Danubian principalities? Let's examine the question.
before deciding it, and let's not foment trouble by "Interference that is always frowned upon."

The government, if its action is not free and spontaneous tanned, would therefore only be guilty of yielding to the irre-
irresistible pressure of this national will for which Progressive Europe and lovers of universal suffrage they inspire such tender and profound respect. But, in the
The major question of wrongdoing was whether this will was
Is it an intolerant and barbaric population?

"Never," an admirable manifesto published by ' thirty-one Romanian deputies, never this gentle people and benevolent did not give himself up in the interest of his faith à /a moiWic

* Coquille, the author of Les Légasques, etc., Le Monde, May 19, 1868 and 49 June 4868. Ibid., German Correspondence.

Digitized by Google

426

THE JEWS.

religious persecution. Far from it, "since the earliest times Romania has been a refuge for all the persecuted, and
The Jews also benefited from our hospitality and our tolerance.

were dismissed as suspect, the accuracy of the sentence the ture presented to our eyes would be confirmed by the Jews themselves same, because they represent Romania to us as a country where the spirit of tolerance and the "Freedom of worship, which is one of the virtues of its inhabitants!"

"Twenty years have passed since my first entry in Romania, writes J. Byk of Jassy the Israelite, and my relations with all classes of its inhabitants put me in the state of studying their character and observing their inclinations kind. I had often had the opportunity to appreciate them. their good nature and their obligingness. Pious, attached to his religion, the Romanian always respected the beliefs of others; Hatred never tainted his noble sentiments, and never your Religious disputes did not disturb his peaceful nature.

But, "later, the different political opinions have began to stir up passions." And that's when the Romanian, so good-natured, finds himself reduced to defending his existence against the invasions of the Jew. The struggles erupted tent; they spread, bursting forth, their usual bitterness, and yet the Israelite Crémieux, who requests the intervention Napoleon III, made him hear these loyal words: "The Prince Clair was animated by the most liberal intentions;... and the Romanian people did not know, a few years ago, what religious hatreds were*. » Finally, one of the temptations of Judaism, Sir Moses Montefiore, confirms in the petition that he addresses to the Prince of Romania the praises that the Jews, his compatriots, in agreement with the representatives from Romania, award to the wonderful tolerance of this

'Archives israélites, X, pp. 462-4; 1868. Ibid., p. 470. Manifesto Jews to the European powers.

2 Israelite Archives, II, p. 72-3; 1867. – Ibid., XII, p. 641; 1867.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER ELEVEN.

457

people: "The rumor spread in England and elsewhere!" my coreligionists in Romania no longer enjoy ' the peace and security to which they had become accustomed, of fairness and honor of this nation'," /

The sudden change of which Romanians are blamed
This therefore seems hardly believable to the Israelite negotiator, and Would it be accomplished without motive? Or would there be nothing to see? in the self-serving accusations of the Romanian Jew than those including the medieval Jew who persecuted the populations that Christian doctrines made people tolerant and gentle.
but whose abuses and tyrannical greed drove him
Had their patience run out and one day unleashed their fury?

A great lesson, but one that has been going on for a long time, since that history, odiously distorted in the teaching of peoples, ceased to reach their ears, a great le-This lesson would therefore be repeated to our advantage in this corner of the Europe; and perhaps we have to see it happen for this country the word that Mr. de Metlernich was applying to the his: the Jews "will one day be dreadful for Germany-Magne, probably followed by a dreadful day for eu.vL » It seems, however, that on this fragment of the Europe chosen for the theater by Providence, and as if he the aim was to protect ourselves against an immense and pro-revolutionary chain where Jews are preparing to play a major role role. God willing, offer k our nineteenth century for Warning, the moment he starts to get passionate against the doctrines of Catholicism and in favor of the docantisocial tendencies of laissez-faire, a true and irrevocable sand edition of the lamentable scenes which some historians accused our ancestors of the Middle Ages of being Jews;
atrocious scenes, but where the details that unfold today
what is before our eyes today gives us the intelligence of the centuries pasts, because they retrace our steps, in the very fabric of history.

'Archives israélites, XXI, p. 989; 1867.

* See previous chapter.

Digitized by Google

THE JEWS.

iS8

more of the people whose spectacle provokes and satisfies our Regarding the reason for the uprising of the Christian populations tiennes against the Jews, their treacherous and implacable oppressors against the Jews, constantly repressed and broken by the masses who seemed to have become their prey, and constantly miseries.

The dictatorial tone of a Jew addressing sovereigns. – The Romanians reduced to resorting to cunning against the Jew and against foreign powers reduced to intervening in favor of the Jew. – With what ink the citizens of the Jewish nation, worthy emulators of the citizens of the sovereign people, writers Wind to the potentates. – Outstanding example and patience of princes. The Jew, "faced with the atrocities" being committed, laments "the The hypocrisy that reigns at the top and at the bottom.

But in order for the lesson given to us to be complete, Let's keep our eyes open for a moment longer, and see what is in this country the marvelous self-assurance of the Jew, supported by his brothers outside – let us see what the ascendancy of the outside is these, their audacity, and with what weight, with what arrogance gance, all together exert their will on po- tentacles reduced by them – if one were to trust appearances, – to violate the most formal will of a people.... Two Letters will say more and better on this subject than our words. The first letter was written from Paris, dated July 28, 1867. by the honorable Israelite Crémieux, to the sovereign himself of Romania. It measures five large pages. The passages that we deem it appropriate to extract from it teach us with what singular ink today the ordinary citizens of the Jewish nation, worthy emulators of the citizens of the sovereign people, They take it upon themselves to write to the princes, those who put, there is no just for a moment longer, their pride reminds us what sad breastplate, in their childhood, made of their person the quality of being Jewish.

<(It's been a year since, in conversations that I cannot
* See previous chapters.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER ELEVEN.

429

Forget, Your Highness expressed the most liberal ideas, worthy of a prince raised in the generous principles of our time. I can still hear those words: I cannot com- to take the prejudice against the Jews; I will put my honor and my duty to have them declared equal to others Romanians. However, I had barely left Rucharest when The riot was rumbling around the House, and carrying the march-to the distressing spectacle we have just witnessed, and which, to the astonishment of Western Europe, presented in Romania the barbaric scenes of the Middle Ages so perpetuating over a period of three months...

"Now, the author of these odious persecutions is without possible denial from your Minister of the Interior, Bratiano, whose name, which has become European, remains attached to its disastrous past. Circular!

Public outrage is at its peak, Prince; the two Houses of England have loudly and emphatically cast their blame on France, which had so much contributed to the creation of Romania, France was dismayed and wonders if she armed executioners against a population harmless to her, she who professes such great respect for freedom of religion.

"

"The time has come, Prince, to perform an act of legitimate authority by breaking this odious plot. Strike Bratiano with an absolute revocation; to immediately cease all these brutal measures against the Jews; to pursue without weakness all the newspapers which, for a year now, have been constantly provoking to contempt, to murder, to the expulsion of the Jews; to revolt all those cowardly officials who violently lent the hand to the dreadful persecution... that is what they demand of the people of Bessarabia, and that will be the first benefit of justice restorative*.

'Of which the Jews are almost entirely the masters.

To stage a coup against freedom of the press, against the

Digitized by Google

430

THE JEWS.

"I dare to hope, Prince, that after this terrible turmoil, Your Highness will wish to give the Jewish population, of which you are also the natural leader and protector, the guarantees of concord and peace that I claim in their name' l... y dictatorial – we refrain from saying shameless, this letter who precipitated the accused minister from his position of power, but soon after recovering from his fall, – the prince replied– humbly addressed another letter from the English Israelite Sir Moses Montefiore, powerful patron of Judaism, and colleague– the Jew Crémieux; "Sir Baronet, I have received your letter of August 24th...; the Israelites are the subject of all my concern, and of all that of my government nement, and I am very glad that you came to Roumania [K] to convince you that religious persecution, of which The malice that has made so much noise does not exist. If it is It happened that some Israelites were harassed; these are... isolated incidents, which my government does not intend to take responsibility for. responsibility.

"I will always consider it an honor to uphold the religious freedom, and I will constantly ensure the implementation of laws that protect the Israelites, like everyone else Romanians, in their persons and in their property. Charles.

... However, the Israeli Archives add in repro– reading this same letter; To this day, the mission of Sir Moses Montefiore, who for some time has been... brought to Bucharest, "did not succeed at all –, well at the con– "Trade!" This philanthropist, "as esteemed by princes as by butchers– "Geois and even the lower class," is under attack Romanian newspapers^]... And the Temp* having given some newspapers and the country's civil servants who would not give themselves to Jews, such is the order which he gives to his sovereign, in magnificent terms, these valiant champions of all freedoms.

'Archives israélites, XIX, p. 881 to 887; 1867.

2 Israelite Universe, at the head of issue no. 2; October 1867.

* Archives israélites, XX, p. 929; 1867.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER ELEVEN. 431

With the beating of wings, the Israelite universe resounded in our ears, under the title of Romanian Monstrosities, these dazzling grievances: "We would need several issues of our a collection to share everything we've learned about the Moldavian–Wallachian atrocities, either through authentic documents ticks, either through private correspondence. What we bad faith reigns in this sad country, at the bottom and at the top. In the past, religious hatred and fanaticism were openly admitted. his actions, his crimes... 11 there was at least some sincerity... In Romania, the most extreme excesses are committed savages..., they trample divine and human laws underfoot, and the government boldly denies all these atrocious facts; He denies the sun... the light of day! Hypocrisy, lies, "Blindness, that is the strength and soul of Romanian barbarity!"

A dispatch from Bucharest, dated April 11, 1868, he said:

"The Romanian government, in a note to consuls" Europeans, denied the rumors relating to persecutions that were allegedly carried out in Moldova against the Israelites. Today, Prince Charles, in a special audience granted to the Austrian Consul General, stated that Jews had not been persecuted anywhere, and that they could have complete confidence in his protection and in his word.

Let us therefore be aware that, alongside these incredible denials, the incitements and persecutions against the Jews of Roumania continues its course, provoked by "the ministry" Rratiano and his clique; then, they are refuted with the greater impudence" And to what end this disgraceful And ridiculous charade? With the aim of "([thus avoiding arrests-awkward diplomatic relations* [»

- Israelite Universe, IX, p. 413; 1868.

* Archives israélites, XI, p. 501; 1868. For this people, it is a matter of to defend himself both against the Jews who oppress him, and against the powers whose policies Israel has been able to shape to serve it.

Digitized by Google

432

THE JEWS.

Intervention of the powers in the interest of the Jew, and despite the Anti-Ciretian Principle of Non-Intervention Adopted by the EU LIBERAL HOPE. – The Jew affirms that this hypocrisy of the Rouhands are caused by the fear of the powers, which he summons to intervene–to come. – Insistence of the head of the Universal Israelite Alliance with eagerness of these. – The reading of Mr. de Bismark.

"Avoiding awkward arrests" is the key.

which escapes the mouths of the Jews, and which gives us the reason for the apparent condescension of Roumania towards him. This state senses its weakness, and understands that with Europe, all dressed up in liberalism, must make use of same makeup, and promise what (|he cannot keep without to lose; while, among the powers that hold him a master's language, she sees that she cannot do without neither gold nor the printing press of the Jews, and that, consequently, She needs to campaign on their behalf. 5 This other hopes or fears from them what she dares not confess, fears their displeasure, or ' finds happy pretexts that commit its policy in the direction of Israel's interests. But, whatever they may think or that the powers decide, and that the Jews bear the blame the most serious, or that the justice of their cause shines with the brilliance of the big day, a fact that their audacious sum- today, the nations place them in a splendid relief, Here's the thing: most of the powers, reduced to them to serve and often trained in tow by companies secrets of which they are the masters, become in the con- Certain Christian nations have a keyboard whose fingers Israel makes the notes speak or shout at will.

Let us examine, however, how these European powers Europeans, forced by the men of progress to protest against the right to intervene between states, they actually use of this same right in favor of Israel, which is involved to be their policy through the cunning and stubborn skill of son of Jacob. Not a word will escape us beyond the necessary, and our language will continue to be the one we Let us borrow from the very mouth of the Jew.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER ELEVEN. 433

Jewish events erupt, and the telegraph in barely transmits the news that "the tireless president of the Universal Israelite Alliance," Mr. Crémieux, the so- 'verain of French Freemasonry', and one of the sovereigns- spontaneous events in France during the revolutionary phase born in 1848, he launched his campaign and obtained an audience of Emperor Napoleon. This powerful figure promises him to return Justice for the oppressed. But already the Minister of Foreign Affairs Mr. Drouin de Lhuys, warned his sovereign about foreign matters; He hastened to intervene, and, not content with the words flying things coming out of the imperial mouth, he wrote on July 20th

Israel: "Sir, you have drawn my attention to the acts of violence of which the Jews of Bucharest have recently been the object. I had been informed of this incident by the correspondence from our agent in Wallachia..., and I have charged our consul to express on our behalf to the government Moldo-Wallachian, the wish to never see such scenes again renew in the future, recommending that he claim, when the time will be opportune, an improvement to the pre- situation- 'the path of the Israelites of this land.'

... However, new complaints are reaching the president of the Universal Israelite Alliance, and his activity doubles down. "I saw the Emperor," he writes almost immediately, "he was fully aware of this tragedy... I was both indignant and surprised! While telling him that his ministers had taken the initiative with our consul General H. Bucharest, I asked him for his personal intervention- "Right now," he replied, "I'm going to write by the..." telegraph to Prince Charles; that was my plan today- of today. To tolerate it is to place oneself outside the bounds of the nations. such persecution in our Europe. I replied: "The prince

'0 MA Crémieux has just been elected sovereign grand master of the rite Scottish Rite Freemasonry. It is the highest rank in the order. Masonic in France. » Archives Israélites, VI, p. 187; <869.

Archives israélites, XV, p. 661; August 1866.

28

Digitized by Google

434

THE JEWS.

is animated by the most liberal intentions; but the one whom he Minister Braliano should be ostracized by the nations. who nevertheless calls himself a liberal and a democrat." The Emperor he added: "This oppression cannot be tolerated or understood," 'I will testify to it to the prince.' – And I, Sire..., I will, For my part, I will address the press; I know that all its sym- "Patries will come to our aid..."

The same rhetoric was echoed in the British parliament. where the foreign minister "spoke in harsh terms on the regrettable trends that have a matter, he said, "that touches Christians more deeply than the Jews themselves; for if suffering falls upon the Jews, it is dishonor that falls upon the Christians. The English government, in agreement with France and Austria, sent wise and firm advice regarding this question... And, to top it all off, it is claimed that the chancellor of the Austrian Empire, Mr. Baron de Beust, declared that he A solution was needed; that "the honor of the Austrian cabinet was committed to it!

Meanwhile, the most skillful of governments Germanic, – if there is another government in Germany than that of Prussia, – dealing with one of the potentates who represent Jewish nationality, that is to say with Mr. Crémieux, the Honorable President of the Alliance Israélite

'And the otherwise terrible and permanent oppression of the Poles Catholics? Did some Mr. Crémieux pray to the Emperor and the the ministry to write to the sovereign of all the Russias that he could not To tolerate it or understand it?... And so many other forms of popular oppression... Catholic nations, in Europe only!

^ Archives israélites, XV, p. 541; June 1867, etc.

® This feeling is entirely ours: the cause of the Jews is just. and if there is persecution, for we are enemies of all violence, and, what's worse, a supporter of the right to intervene, this first and this most essential of the principles of conservative corporate policy Christians.

* Archives israélites, X, pp. 435–6; 1868. We know what the menacing and frightening insurrection of Jews in this Austria which borders to Romania.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER ELEVEN. 435

universal, hastened to transmit these lines to him, and The name that signs them is quite Oer! "I have the honor to Inform me, in response to the letter you sent me on the 4th of this month, which the king's government has just invited from new his representative k Bucharest k employ all his influence to ensure k your coreligionists in Romania the position that is due to them in countries whose legislation is inspired by the principles of humanity, civilization, etc. – Berlin, February 22, 1868. – From Bismack »

If, therefore, the principle of non-intervention dominates politics

seems to dominate this policy; this interest is that of the Jacob's house.

Thus blows the wind! And we pray in all simplicity who will know, to appoint in certain European states an interest, concerning men or things, which meets k its service a more general, a more constant and active in-intervention that which the Jewish nation knows how to use and distribute poses a problem in his favor.

And yet, on the banner that modern liberalism displayed in the European kingdoms, he drew with one hand
This word is imperative, for it is the ruin of Christian civilization.
Yours: No more intervention from the people! – Only if the house next to yours, struck by the fire of the revolutions tions, come to burn, O you who govern, hold back the hand
It would be sacrilege to try to extinguish it, for this devouring fire
It's the sacred fire!

Never interfere in someone else's life, that's the principle.
antisocial, that is to say anti-Christian, which takes root in the soil of Europe. The Revolution imposes it: but, for it, To live without violating it would be to die. That is why, by-wherever the interests of the United Republic seem to require it

'Univers Israélite, VIH, p. 371; April 1868. – Another letter from the kid Minister of Foreign Affairs, and, in the same spirit, to the council of the Jewish community of Prussia, April 18, 1868, etc., etc. Universe Israelite, IX, p. 429; 1868.

28.

Digitized by Google

THE JEWS,

436

Verselle, destined to spread over the ruins of empires
Christians, we see the Revolution, served on all sides by the occult societies of which Israel is the prince, deceive or draw governments into its ways, intervene under their protection, and impose on the people against their will, against their interests, against their nature, against their genius and their customs, the principles that permeate the midst of their social state: division, desolation, and death.

Seven monarchs, founders of the new constitution

calf whose excellence is proclaimed by the revolutionary world, but which traditions, customs and interests reject of an entire people! This fatal right of the native is entirely natural-
- actually violated by him - the Jew finds himself insulted, robbed, threatened by the most tolerant and gentle of men, by the Romanian, whom he pressures and exasperates, and the governor
The Romanian government does not want to, cannot, or dares to lend, to the cries of pillage and death shouted against the Jew, that the
No more deaf ears!

"O powerful monarchs who reign over the peoples*, -
"So cries Israel, this protégé of the Foreigner, - it is to to whom the entire Jewish population of Romania is addressing itself, It is you whom Jews around the world are asking for, to their brothers in the principalities, aid and protection In addressing this high-level intervention, the Romanian Israelites are based on the right given to them by the convention which has "created the Romanian nation under your powerful guarantee"

The Jew who cries out so loudly for this help from outside

'Every rule has its exceptions, and there are, cite all the peoples of urgent interests, including Jewish intervention, forced him to attend-to take advantage of time, tries in vain to triumph.

2. Address to the sovereigns of France, Austria, and Turkey quie, from England, from Russia (which, in its own country, oppresses them cruellyment, vide suprà), of Prussia, and to Victor Emmanuel of the house of Savoy, who prepared the convention on April 28 and May 29, 1856 said international, which was concluded in Paris on August 19, 1858.

® Archives israelites, X, p. 469; 1868, etc. Manifesto of the Jews to the European powers.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER ELEVEN. 437

/

has therefore, all of a sudden and without cause, become the object of all Violence perpetrated by the Romanian people?... Believe the Jew on his word, and against the word of an entire people, this se-
This would push naivety far beyond its limits. But yes, in this tolerant country, the laws imposed on the new government government by its liberal statesmen and by the kings from abroad, are subject to perpetual violations of What can we conclude from the cruel repetition of this fact? Placed in-

In the face of this phenomenon, will outsiders have the right-the need to recognize the danger of intervening in nations foreign countries, when it comes to imposing laws on them that re-fight against their religious or political faith, and against the-which protest with such terrible energy their interests vital and their customs? What! You, potentates, fathers of peoples, you take it into your head to utter the word sacementelle of the marriage between the Romanian people and the nation Jewish? But this so-called one that you throw into the arms of the Romanian, he knows her better than you! She lived under He despises his roof, he finds it hideous and odious, he repels with all the powers of his soul and raises the hand on her when, crossing the threshold of her home, She dares to demand from him the sacred rights of a wife. Is this in the name of your principles of freedom of conscience that you
You are acting as the pious pontiffs of this forced marriage, and you claim, because you have chosen to punish her,
that it bears neither bitter nor bloody fruits?

Immense unpopularity of the Jew. – The Jews treated by the nation like leprosy and the filth of the earth. – The land which is delivered, and what they cover takes on a sinister air. – To declare oneself there For the Jews, it means giving up all influence.

But let's return to the moment when the vigorous wrist of Bratiano is still at the helm of the state. No, we don't We mustn't dream, the soul of the Romanian, so good-natured in his life habits, he vents his anger against Israel in terrible

Digitized by Google

438

THE JEWS.

accents: let us listen, let us lend an ear to the words that are exchanged gent between the parties involved, and let us retain our just judgment-that the parties had exchanged responses... The Jews have, after all, just suffered a severe defeat

Ah! "We should be happy about this victory of "Public opinion," cries one of their opponents; "cl mal-Despite this, we are grieved, for we did not wish him well.
not such a triumph. They were discussing it yesterday in the House.
draft constitution; the people, in a crowd, who could not on the heights of the metropolis, in order to bear witness, to all force, that he did not want to cede any political rights to the Jews," and that he wanted to "take back" those that these en- already possessed invaders.

"A commotion then broke out in the House."

The ministry was reduced to promising the removal of Article 6. of the draft constitution which is causing despair among Romanians, and he declared in plain terms; "that he would not suffer jonww au- a kind of infringement not only of rights, but also of- core to Romanian interests in favor of foreigners in general, and the Israelites in particular.

The real culprit is the one who allows our borders open to Jews, and that Moldova, this promised land in which their waves accumulate, of- Their homeland comes more than ours. What! Germany On all sides, there is an uprising against the Jews, hunting them down, hunts them, pursues them with cries of death, and we, we we will have to eliminate the use of passports to attract them and Welcome them! The one who proposed this elimination, well, This is the author of the evils that are befalling Romania. "caused by the horrific invasion that is flooding it."

And it's not just in Bohemia and Moravia,

"that we revolted against this impious race;... but, all Even recently, Jews suffered in Munich and in Wurzburg, evils that we do not wish upon them, among others. us. A horrible massacre would certainly have taken place if the

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER ELEVEN.

439

had the police and the city commander not intervened to calm the people's unrest. They were given thousands of passports in all German provinces, and there are very few who have not been to Romania No. All the cities of Magne are purging themselves of this leprosy; and only humanitarian Romania opens the ports and extends the arms h these 'lepers,' who will transform Romania into a immense hospital. We ask Messrs. Rosetti and Bra- Tiano, is this a biblical process? Certainly, it is neither

"Everything that's shabby, repulsive, and... bad, everything that Germany rejects ends up becoming isolated. in this country, destined to become the receptacle of the immondice from all over Europe! We have now arrived at the moment when This is no longer a game. What happened in Bohemia, in Moravia, in Silesia, in Munich, Würzburg and Nuremberg, goes also take place in our country; and no doubt we would not have had to go through there if the government gave the least to demonstrate foresight. We believe it impossible that Romanians accept the advice of the (Journal le) liomanulu, and that they voluntarily hand over their country to the Jews. And the clear evidence of the complete abandonment of the country between the The hands of the Jews is all too clear: in Brayova, Bucharest, Ploïschti, and gradually up to the Pruth, the Judaism of- it becomes so cumbersome that, with the exception of Bucharest, which is not yet completely disfigured, everything else has redressed in a sinister manner. We don't want to talk about the part from northern Moldova, which no longer has anything Romanian about it. In Iași, For every five Jews, there is one Christian, and the proportion of Romanians in general are eight to one Jew. This state of This situation is no longer tenable, and there is no doubt that the government, the legislative body and the municipalities do not must take strong measures to avoid this harm,

'Everything in quotation marks is text. Note that at these Minister Rratiano is hardly less vehemently accused by the Romanians than by the Jews.

Digitized by Google

440

THE JEWS.

1 so that the people do not try to take justice into their own hands

"It is now common knowledge that Mr. Cré- better, speaking of Bucharest, swore on his faith to his co-religious leaders that, in a year at most, the Jews will enjoy of the natural and political rights of Romanians, adding that if it weren't so, he would hang himself. This the question... is taking on such considerable proportions every day. maple trees, that it becomes for all Romanians a question- A matter of life or death. Those who bowed and scraped, genuflections, Mr. Crémieix, those who led him in the assembly of representatives of Romania, where the president-

Setti helped him lower the sail to guide him supported On their shoulders remain the supporters of this case, that they whether they are interested or not. As their skill is general-recognized, and that the Romanulu newspaper is the most widespread throughout the country, we, powerless to fight, we can use no other means than to say h each one; Avoid pitfalls, don't sign anything against the Jews, which is not written in suitable and clear terms.
 Do not place any faith in those who come to tell you that the requests, the formula of which we submit to you, are "Barbarians, they'll make all of Europe laugh." No, because...
 "Such things have been done and are still being done... even in the most civilized countries. The real barbarians are those who have neither homeland nor God, who are agents of the foreigner-ger, bought by him, and which force us to look How traitors are selling our poor country to the Jews
 "Martyred." We say these things "because we believe it is our duty not to let the Romanulu deceive everyone the people with these words: civilization, progress, nineteenth century, humanity, cosmopolitanism, etc.*. »

i

* Archives Israélites, XVI, p. 711; 1866, etc., extract from the Gazette Romanian from the Carpathians.

* Archives Israélites, ibid., p. 717; 1866. – The politics of the Jew is necessarily cosmopolitan, and often he is interested in recognizing it

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER ELEVEN.

441

Passionate admirers (all extreme men, and of all the acts of revolution'; unperturbed instigators of all the principles that dissolve, without violently overturning them, Christian states; apostles, when it is not a question of their own cause, of all liberal liberties and of the principle of non-intervention, the Jews, accustomed to regaining heart in
 In the midst of the storm, they repeat themselves to one another; These threats remain and will remain in the state of written insults, and do not treat themselves will not translate into action. "Following the intervention of the governors"
 English and French governments, and under the fear of an invasion
 Turks or Russians, its neighbors (1866), the government Romanians will undoubtedly have taken eBcaces measures

ricaux, whose impotence will soon reduce k to nothing*.

The Jews, whose speech varies according to the wind that blows*, would they by chance be included among these few key-
Are the Democrats the Democrats? Is Minister Bratiano their leader? a people who were not afraid to surrender against Israel more formidable excesses, and the statesmen of whom we Are we about to unveil the Manifesto? These few key pointsrics, which had not been mentioned at all until now, form-
So they alone would be the ones shaping public opinion? Such a firm opinion? and so clear-cut that the Jewish lawyer Crémieux points it out in these terms: "The prejudice against the Jews is at this point, that a candidate k a vacant seat k the constituent assembly formally committed himself in his printed profession of faith, that I have in my hands, to vote against any proposal favorable to the Jews*. But the Jewish Archives have better tre: "Black politics," say the Archives in their program, "will be essentially universal, cosmopolitan, like our readings teurs etc. » P. 8, January 1869.

Read the Jewish journals, including the latest issues: Archives Israelites, I, p. 14, 15, 20, 1869; id., II, p. 55; id., Vil, p. 495; id., X, p. 308; ta., XI, p. 332, etc., etc., etc.

» Ibid., p. 718.

^ Read their magazines.

* Ibid., Archives israélites, XVI, p. 719; 1866. Foreigners, they fe-from Romania would be Palestine, and from Bucharest the new Jerusalem Salem. » Ibid.

Digitized by Google

THE JEWS.

UI

They still have something to tell us about this immense unpopularity of Jews. Let us gather their words, and not lose them:

K What's most unusual is that people the most opposed, the boyars on one side, and the reds on the other hand, to which the Bratiano ministry belongs, they mutually reproach each other for their benevolence towards the Jews, to discredit each other in the eyes of the masses who exercises the right to vote, the boyars claim that the go-prescribed by the constitution; and the so-called red newspapers They accuse the boyars of protecting the Jews. That's how it is. that the patriarch's word is renewed, in the Nathan of Lessing; It doesn't matter, the Jew will be brfiled! – So, whatever "Either the party that dominates, the situation of the Jew will be sad."

and, without the intervention of the foreigner, which the Jew rejects with fury ii Rome and everywhere the interests of the 'Christian civilization, what would become of the Jewish cause?'

* Archives israélites, no. 2, p. 78; 1868,

2 We read in the Vienna Press: The nation accuses Sir Moses Mon-the fiore of having come to the Danubian principalities to make it a new Palestine, to take away from the Romanians their territory and their products. It encourages people to sign petitions whose purpose is to all the Romanian's demands against the Jew: All the Hebrews invery much in the country since 1848, without having a personal occupation in industry, will have to be repatriated to the country from which they are coming naked. – All those who own factories, mills staffed by Romanian workers, who practice some kind of trade, or those who have taken higher science courses, will need to be tolerated if they follow the march of civilization... From this day forward,
The entry of the Hebrews into the land will be forbidden forever...

The government has banned the circulation of these petitions, at least in the streets and public squares. Israelite Archives, XX, p. 929-930; 1867.

The C.VUSE OF the immense unpopularity of the Jewish Dr. and the persecutions that he suffers, is the same as in the Middle Ages. – HIS EXPECTATIONS AND HIS EXPECTATIONS FOR DOMINATION ARE THE SAME. – The concert of me-
Caught and driven by the fury that pursues the Jew, it remains unchanged only because that the Jew has not changed his mind. – Overwhelming documents, and a manifesto admirable statesmen of the country against the Jew. – In this lam-Beautiful in its contemporary history, we find the Jew of the centuries still very much a ancients. – Terrors he inspires by his unsociable habits, by

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER ELEVEN.

443

the incessant, the elf and the increase in its number. – Action ca-pitiful state of the country's vital forces: rampant usury, monopoly, adulteration of foodstuffs. – The Jews are diametrical-is to rise up upon the ruins of others. – They hope to rebuild themselves into a distinct, then dominant nation. – They are trying to establish in Romania, this Jewish state which would be the first achievement of their wishes... – Bill formulated to ward off the danger social issues exposed by this authentic document. – Cries of the Jews; the Eu-Rope is moved. – Letter from Mr. de Bismarck reassuring these Jews against The intentions of Romanian statesmen. – Conclusion.

But where does this strange concert of curses come from, which seems having traversed the Middle Ages to rise to our time, and which the Jew himself cannot help but echo?

Hence this agreement of hatred, contempt, and fury against The Jew? Could the cause lie in the harmlessness of the popu-Jewish culture, in the services it rendered to the country who welcomes him, in those that one is permitted to hope for from his an ever-growing tide? Or this concert of hatreds, of contempt, fury, does it not remain invariable, wherever it is im-plant this people, because this unsociable people remains himself without varying? That is what, in a moment, Each of us will be able to say to ourselves when we have finished to depict the fear and horror that these Talmudic scholars, that These citizens of the new Palestine have the misfortune of inspiring around them, and when we have concluded this presentation with the A brief extract from two pieces. The first stems from a French pen, and which will be of little suspicion to us, because that Mr. Ernest Desjardins, who formulated it, belongs as a professor at the University, and here are some of the con-Conclusions that V Hellenic Indi-dependence draws from its brochure entitled "The Israelites in Moldavia":

((For any impartial man who reads this pamphlet)
Carefully, it will be proven that in Romania the Jews are more than four hundred thousand; that they have only been established there since a certain number of years only, that they are, for the most part part, foreigners in their country of birth as well as by choice, of morals, mind, and language, and that they persist in de-to die such as they furiously exploit and by all means

Digitized by Google

Yes, THE JL'IES.

the means of the country that gives them hospitality; let them strive to evade all the laws that govern them, and to evade to all the obligations they impose on citizens; that they are ignorant, superstitious, avaricious, liars, usu-wicked, deceitful, and hideously filthy: hence the fears for public health, in places where they proliferate; finally, that The religious motive plays no part in the measures taken by testifies. This, in summary, is the result of the investigation. scientific inquiry undertaken by Mr. Desjardins. We will discuss it. Let us wholeheartedly congratulate the people and the government of Romania. 'hands'.

The last piece of which we have to mention a few steps—sages is the one that the Archives israélites call the Mani-festival of persecution in the nineteenth century. Its purpose authors and signatories thirty-one members of the The Legislative Chamber of the Romanian States, and the importance of this admirable protest allows us to call it the Manifesto of Romania. It seems to us, when we Let us read aloud, so that an echo of the Middle Ages may send us back the grievances of the Christian populations bowed under the oppressive yoke of the people of the dispersion; that is why we want to let its accents resonate in the ears of our audience, and thus restore a smear of life to The most forgotten pages of history:

^ "The invasion of the Jews into Romania, and particularly in northern Romania, has taken hold in the last years, on such considerable proportions that it horrified the Romanian population; because they find themselves flooded with a separate and hostile race, which formed, on the side of the Rou- nation Maine, a foreign nationality and opposed to the interests of that one (this one). The indifference that has been shown until- today, in the presence of this silent conquest of our economic and national terrain, produced in the economy

'Extract from the Archives israélites, no. V, pp. 197-8, 1868, which indic- gment of this assessment.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER ELEVEN. 445

of the State of deep-seated perturbations which are worsening day by day," and these invaders are currently forming "A floating population of over five hundred thousand souls."

Considering this fact "from the point of view of the population digital technology, we feel how threatening it is for Rou- handles a compact colony of five hundred thousand souls, çtd aug- lies continuously, and on which no local influence nor does the social environment in which she lives exert the slightest influence see. And this comes from the fact that the Jewish race is distinct from Romanian by origin, customs, language, tra- editions, her religion, her morals, and above all, her obstinacy to remain completely isolated from society, and to protect themselves from

From an economic point of view, our indifference "has had disastrous results. We allowed to develop in the middle of the Romanian company a monstrous monopoly, which destroyed completely trade and small industry... This breed, particularly in Moldavia, it therefore became popular with traders and to the native artisans of all cities without exception, and has even penetrated into rural communities.'

"This substitution isolated the different ones from each other" rents and social classes, through the interposition of a foreign body who refuses any solidarity with the local population, and who, in

Instead of being, in its political and economic application, the Christian protection of the weak against the strong, Jewish civilization, or modern, establishes, under the pretext of freedom, the savage reign of Irremediable despotism and rampant oppression. In politics, This is the dogma that forbids one people to intervene in the affairs of another. ple, even if it is to put a stop to the most appalling disorders; and in industry, it is the disastrous and cruel doctrine of laissez-faire, the one that gives free rein to the powerful everywhere against the weak. The essence of Christian institutions was to protect to turn the weak against the strong, instead of helping to crush them; the essence of Jewish or Saint-Simonian civilization is to create within some, through this crushing, of exorbitant wealth, source an outrageous luxury. As a result, the moral ruin and misery of the very-a large number, to whom the voice of murderous doctors then ceaselessly shout: O multitudes! Are you suffering from hunger? Well then, cease Grow and multiply, and sterility will be your relief. What then? Is it okay to share without restraint a loaf of bread that no longer satisfies you? (See e (From this chapter, a dark note on Civilization.)

Digitized by Google

THE JOYS.

m

establishing themselves among us in overwhelming numbers, destroyed everything the balance of our national forces.

... "The capital produced by trade, which bear fruit-formerly in the hands of the Romanians and returned through a thousand channels to replenish the sources of the production, are today alienated and diverted from their national activity hub; hence this nervousness and this inertia that can be felt today on all sides'.

their inclinations to exploit those of another race, and driven by their
With a predominant instinct for rapacity, the Jews are prone to wear and tear without the slightest reservation, and on such a scale that they have stripped thousands of families of their possessions and reduced them to poverty.
opulent. Usury has become a terrible scourge that has extended over the entire social body, and which dries up the very source vital forces of the nation. This monopolization of Capital is the most natural cause of the monetary crisis which has afflicted the country for so many years*.

"The rulers, no longer feeling any opposition which can counterbalance their instincts, create genes and fabricated crises, and strive to find, even in the misery of the people, all sorts of means of extortion for to satisfy their insatiable greed for gain; for misery
It is productive for those who have the cruelty to exploit.

"This is how the hardest and most im-
One of the most elusive tyrannies is the tyranny of money, which, when exercised on a people by foreigners, annihilates all means of development, hinders the momentum of its general aspirations reuses, and, without anyone noticing, gives to its future a fatal blow. The progress of this Jewish coalition is going so far as to monopolize drinks and food items public station. This appropriation has produced even more

'What practical lessons in political economy! And how different-Are rents among our most renowned economic systems?
mists 1

^ Read the full text. Archives israélites, IX,
p. 413; 1868.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER ELEVEN. 447

disastrous effects in times of general famine, and the class laborious is the most threatened by the greed of monopolies-readers, who employ vile falsifications and a thousand mixtures harmful to public health.

History proves to us that Judaism is characterized;
by predominance and the most severe exclusivism. This inclination... which is innate to him, is the powerful cause that has
It resisted everywhere, and allowed it to survive without modify in the midst of nations for a space of twenty centuries... » ^

they were subject to the authority of non-Jewish states; but they never They may consent to becoming an integral part of it. They do not can erase from their minds the idea of the Jewish state, an idea which we see, on every occasion, emerge strong and vibrant of all their actions." The Jews, in fact, "are not only a religious sect; they are above all the expression-sion of certain indelible racial and cer-certain invincible beliefs of nationality. That is why the Jew from Spain, England, France and the Poland is neither Polish, nor French, nor English, nor Spanish; U remains Jewish, like his ancestors of old.
biblical.

Because the merging of groups does not only happen through simple relations of residence and trade; it operates
"through the mixing of blood, and through the coming together of senses" moments, something impossible with the Jews... Driven by a instinctive force to isolate themselves in the midst of the peoples who surround them
They turn around, they feel they cannot make common cause with the Christian peoples, for they are, in every way, diametrically opposed to them.
element opposites/' On the contrary, it has been observed that something part of the way they are transported, either in large or small quantities In number, they introduce everywhere, by the very effect of their presence, of the seeds of destruction and dissolution, because, their tendency is to rise everywhere on the ruins of others, n/
And as for recognition, they believe in it.

Digitized by Google

448

THE JEWS.

completely detached from the people who gave them hospitality, because they regard them as usurpers that's why they use every means to regain the rights of supremacy and domination nation over the universe, rights which they believe to be assured by their ancient religious pact. ' I »

However, when "the beliefs and aspirations of a few-
Some are in contradiction with national interests, the thread has the right to protect itself with strong guarantees for prevent evil; for if the State allowed itself to be led by a spirit of cosmopolitanism (the spirit of modern liberalism), and sought to subordinate it to foreign and isolated interests
the overriding interest of preserving the nation, U se

"ality."

"Jews can therefore invoke tolerance even less."

that their religion is the most exclusive and oppressive; because not only does Judaism not admit anyone into its fold his religious family, but he condemns them to hatred and persecution perpetual union of all those who do not belong to the race Israelite*.

"This irreconcilable exclusivism, which has become synonymous with blood of the Jewish race, maintains the continual war that it declared to the high moral ideas which permeate all the institutions of Christian states, IDEAS THAT FORM THE BASIS "MORALITY OF OUR CIVIL SOCIETY!"

'Archives israélites, IX, pp. 410-417; 1868, sic. – Whoever will have Having read our chapters, one might readily imagine that this conclusion is from our pen. But, in the interest of the credibility of our pages, we Let's stick to our plan of borrowing from people who can't to be suspect the form of our own judgments, and especially when we find them displayed with such a profound knowledge of the per-sounds and things by a host of statesmen who, from the morning In the twilight of their lives, they witness the spectacle of the human phenomenon. hand that we are studying.

2 These notions, which are given in our chapters on the Talmud, are commonly res in countries of Talmudic orthodoxy, where the Jew cannot, as in our country, exploiting the prodigious ignorance of Christian peoples and liberals, and present themselves as followers of the law of Moses.

Digitized by GocJgle

CHAPTER ELEVEN. i49

It is therefore especially unfair and absurd to invoke the principle—a code of tolerance when, as in our midst, the The majority's religion is gentle and humane, while the religion of the Jews, "these foreign sectarians, is into—"Lyrescent and wild," to the point of considering our society Christian "as impious and sacrilegious, and to maintain strictly its followers in a state of permanent war with the population that welcomed them into its midst.

We must not forget that "the Jews consider the time they spend among other peoples as a time of expiation, trial, exile, and the inhabitants of countries where they are scattered like enemies, for they are waiting the promised moment when they will once again constitute a nation religion, by giving them "a glimpse of the prospect of a bright future where, ultimately, they alone will dominate humanity entire unit!

However, "it is for us" "an established fact, which results from all these details, as well as the perseverance with which Jews took root and grew in Romania. They are trying to establish this Jewish state here, which is lk

FIRST REALIZATION OF THEIR IDEAS OF DOMINATION OVER CHRISTIAN PEOPLES.

Furthermore, the Jewish religion is "the greatest obstacle" to the fusion of Jews with races foreign to them, in the sense that it is, "at the same time, a constitution political and social that follows the individual in all his actions and in all periods of his life." Among the Jews, in effect, "religious law is also civil law, and vice versa"; The State and the Church form an indivisible whole, "which concentrated in the word Judaism. The Jew who would renounce "K in this position, K would be forced to separate from his Church," because he would thereby cease to be a faithful believer. Hence this evidence that "Judaism, wherever it may be "It finds, is forced to distort a state within the state."

In short, "Judaism, as a religion, cannot remain

29

Digitized by Google

ISO THE JEWS.

in a middle ground, he must be either dominated or dominant because it constitutes a special cglct which only admits within its ranks the descendants of Abraham, looking at the rest of humanity "He was treated as an outlaw*."

The Romanian people are a gentle people; and all the witnesses- gnages agree to recognize that never "he persevered- Cut off no one for their confession. Since the earliest times In remote areas, Romania became a refuge for all the persecuted. The Romanian state is tolerant of the free exercise of all * your cults" 5 but he cannot lose sight of a religion "whose dogmas are antisocial, and whose main goal is to ruin the nation's most vital interests.

"From a legal standpoint, Jews cannot to demand equal rights to those of Romanians, because and legally submit to the charges and obligations modern societies; because they want..., in short, to be treated fraternally by those they treat as enemies implacable.^ Judaism, which rejects "reciprocity, does not can therefore claim from Christian states the benefit of principles of reciprocity.

Our former Romanian princes, in receiving the Jews who fled their barbaric neighbors, granted them freedom complete in the country; but at that time the Jews were only guests received under conditions that allowed them to to live in peace and freedom. And when these foreigners "abused the asylum that had been granted to them in exas- The princes, having deceived the Romanians through their frauds, were forced to expel them from the country," and were expelling them.

Such, then, was the state of the Jews, Ik as elsewhere, until the era of the Fanariote princes... But, "like the Rou- hands then lost the right to govern themselves, and that national sentiment was systematically destroyed

'See, in support, our chapters on the Talmud, and take into account the circumstances that often lead to more apparent exceptions than real.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER ELEVEN. i5I

by the new princes, their country became the scene of Armed and economic occupation of all foreigners! The beginning of prosperity also dates from this period. the Jewish people, attracted by the benefits of the era of the corruption that had been initiated.

The growing decadence of Romanian society, and the The multiplication of the Jews then marched in step-, but the Jewish invasion took on a furious development in the year 1828, when the country, invaded by the Russians and overwhelmed by unimaginable suffering, he "bent under immense misery" which were compounded by new vices and the establishment of a a corrupt bureaucracy system.

The number of Jews, which at that time barely reached the The figure of 25,000 rose in 1844 to 55,000 in 1854.

160,000, and today it exceeds 300,000! And "these figures have an irresistible eloquence," because they paint us, at with the help of a few arid signs, the various phases of ment in the Middle Ages, but even into the heart of the nineteenth-sixth century! We see, in fact, their multiplication "corresponding with the decline of our economic forces" "Miques, with the denaturalization of Moldova's cities," who, from being Christian, become almost entirely Jewish; "with the monopolization of Romanian trade..., with the decrease in money, the increase in the financial crisis-ceremonial, and the burial of the country's land in a huge mortgage debt*.

Nor is there one figure for another, because this same document says elsewhere

500,000. Mr. Crdmieu-x limited himself to 400,000, and Mr. Desjardins adds the word at least; but whatever number one takes, it is, and sur- Everything becomes enormous.

^Ibid., Archives israélites, X, p. 462; 1868, etc. - "The moral state and Moldova's equipment has reached a degree of decay that one cannot can only compare it to that of Galicia, etc., which groans under the Lardeau and the hideous pressure from the Jews." Ibid., p. 465. It was, he This is the case everywhere that the orthodox members of Judaism are rooted. Example: in Hungary, this kingdom of admirable fertility, the no-wounded, disdaining to engage "in agriculture," it is the Jews alone who do all the major trafficking, who lease the land and who hold

29.

Digitized by Google

452

THE JEWS.

"Based on these considerations, based on traditional laws-tional and on the positive laws of the country, and considering that all these laws were dictated by necessity imperative to guarantee Romanians from Jewish exploitation and to avert the dangers that threaten our nationality; » considered-while legislators in other countries "have also forced to put an end to the harm caused by the Jews; seeing the danger that threatens the Romanian people so much both from an economic and a national perspective danger that imposes upon us the duty to bring it as quickly as possible possible remedies, effective in a state of affairs that is aggravated Given the ongoing seriousness of the situation, the undersigned have the honor to propose to the National Assembly the following bill: »

Then came "the signatures of thirty-one members of parliament from the Romanian Chamber, including the president of that Chamber; here are their names: Jean Neguru, D. Pruiicu, N. Voinov, JG Leca, AD Holban, etc., etc. » (See more.)

Thus, almost all the country's wealth was in their hands. Also, the most-
Are the great lords indebted for several generations?
and we can, even today, foresee the moment when Hungary will no longer be "more than a vast Jewish estate." Le Monde, December 6, 1868
German correspondence, generally remarkable.

A few months before that date, the Madgyar Sigismund Bernath demanded, in a motion to the Hungarian Diet, emancipation policy of all the children of Judah. "The Israelites, as we call them called quite improperly, they do not in fact enjoy all the rights policies that the state constitution grants to Christians, which does not prevent them from holding in their hands almost the entire force "tune of the country." "They think they are prisoners everywhere, like in the old days."

in Babylon; therefore, they should not, in all fairness, be received at to enjoy the same political rights as Christians. However, if the The Pest government wants to emancipate them completely; it might be... It would be wise not to let them have absolute control over all trade. Hungary and, so to speak, of the public fortune; for, before half- In the 19th century, the Jews could well dictate the law to the Hungarian crown. as they do in Austria, where almost all the wealth is between their hands. A Prussian minister once told us, with great... of truth: "The greatest scourge of Germany in our time is Judaism. The Hungarian government should therefore think carefully. before granting Jews equal rights." The kid, ibid., n° of June 9, 1867.

- Not a word is said about the religious aspect of the issue. I. The reproach Jewish fanaticism therefore falls away on its own.

Digitized by Googic

CHAPTER ELEVEN.

i53

Lee Jews, from whom we obtained this admirable document where It reads like a story of the past, present, and future. this page where the ju- is depicted in such strikingly truthful strokes Orthodox deity in a Christian country, the Jews did not tell us delivered only to signal the violent disapproval of the Eu- rope'; to such an extent, when it comes to the serious interests that they

on the profound ignorance and blind bias of our public!
That is why we learn their latest from themselves their effort and their dearest hope in this glorious manifeste, of this supreme and generous attempt of men of the Romanian state. Let's listen:

"Count Bismarck had the following response prepared" boasts to the council of the Jewish community of Berlin, which had sent him a petition regarding the bill of proscription against their coreligionists in Romania.
– Berlin, April 18, 1868: "The king has charged me to respond
h the petition of the 6th of this month, from the community council Jewish,... to prevent the implementation of a law subject to 'a the Romanian representation regarding the position of the Israelislites,... that the communication of the bill in question had been presented against the wishes of Prince Charles;
that it was unlikely he would be adopted, and that, if he were,
He would not be sanctioned by the government of the prince, etc.
Count Bismarck*".

- .treftiees israélites, X, p. 462 to 467–472; 1868.

^ Israelite Universe, IX, p. 429; 1868. Same approach by the Jews in France; Archives israélites, IX, p. 427–28; 1868.

Not important. Europe has weighed heavily in the political balance.
Moldavian-Wallachian; she showed herself to be favorable to the Jews... Israeli Archives lites, no. II, p. 54; 1869. The Jew prevails; the Braliano ministry has been overthrown, the Chamber dissolved, the new prefects belong to the party of progress, etc. Ibid., Archives israélites, VI, p. 178; 1869. The
The new Minister of the Interior, Mr. Cogalniceano, is from the same gone; yet here is the circular that the force of circumstances compels him to follow to address to his prefects regarding the Jews (literal extract):

"According to the laws of the country, Jews do not possess the right of domicile."
permanent in the villages. Consequently, they could not be either ca-
"Hareliers nor excise tax collectors in rural communes, etc..."
"...To this day, the greater part of the Jews, and especially

Digitized by Google

434 THE JEWS.

Whatever the country may want, liberal Europe will therefore know to compel its governments to use the law in favor of the Jew right of intervention which she has outlawed; she will know how to weigh in need on the prince she placed on the Romanian throne, and, willingly or unwillingly, bend it to the demands of a policy on which we know what the Jewish influence is! If he

The Jew,... we will ask him then; Whose fault is it?

the emigrants (Gallicia and Odolia, consulted the impulses of our country not not a religious community, but rather a distinct millionaire, having its own language, costume, and customs; and a sad Nuus experience has proven that, especially the Jews of Galicia and The odolie that habib iit the villages, feels like a scourge for the villagers Romanians... I cannot tolerate this abuse, and, as soon as possible, we We must all strive to save the country from the evil that threatens it... »

Make it clear "how determined I am to stop the evil in the villa- ges, as well as, jwr against, I will do everything possible with back Chambers to increase the rights of enlightened Jews, and especially of those who, by birth, by their studies in our schools, will obtain the right to be counted among the sons of our country, without distinction of religion. » Cogalniceano, n° 761 , January 15, 1869.

In 1869, the pro-Jewish minister, Il. Cogalniceano, was reduced to accuse the French government of "interfering in the affairs of the alfaircs" "internal affairs of Romania," at the instigation of >1. Crémieux. Read Archives Israélites, XV, p. 466; 1869. This Minister of the Interior writes to his foreign affairs colleague, in response to the note from June 15, 1869, from the French Consul, a piece of the highest interest "Mr. Marquis de la Valette con-" better than I could see the exceptional measures that had to be taken Napoleon I", in the interest of France, against the Jews of Afsacoel From Lorraine... Your Excellency is well aware of the storms that have broken out in the House every time a minister dared to say a word in the The Israelite question... This proves a great deal of irritation on the part of the Romanian populations, resulting from cruel suffering and a Legitimate concern. Because it is the voice of the nation that feels threatened. in his nationality and in his economic interests... For the past Nor, I repeat, can the Israelites complain at present. from Romania.

"The representatives of the powers residing in Iași have acknowledged" themselves, I am convinced, this terrible scourge, which gnaws at the soul of Moldova The European powers, in their capacity as powers-

Christian beliefs also owe their share of compassion to the Christians. I'm from Moldova... I would consider myself lucky if my feeble words could erase from the conscience of French ministers the unfortunate the impression produced by the erroneous reports of the Alliance isToélite and his Moldovan correspondents." Thus speaks the official-Mr. Cogalniceano, the replacement for Minister Bratiano, is the most skillful master of the Jews!

Rulers of Germany, masters or auxiliaries of...
cults of the most influential statesmen in Europe,
inspirers and directors of secret societies whose con-
The supreme authority seems to have become the government of throughout the world, Israel therefore holds the secret, when its interests they demand it, to force liberal states to impose on the people who are turning against the Jews against the will of Judaism!
And when, by chance, a contrary interest does not arise throw an accidental disturbance into the normal disorder within which Europe is in turmoil, it is necessary, whatever they may want or where peoples suffer, may Judaism be humbly Listen, let him progress and let his triumph be glimpsed!

But what does this indomitable people of Israel want? Where can they find refuge?
will restrain the audacity of his genius, and that one day they will not be able to,
at such a critical moment, to plot and operate the Jews in the
The whole world? Big and final question for which the reader, already half-informed, will you please allow us to refer him to the next chapter. A careful reading of
He will no doubt have prepared him for it, if incurable pre-
The judgments did not render his mind impervious to the rays of the day.

SUMMARY-CONCLUSION.

The documents that have been gathered in the latter pages are of unparalleled interest, and we find there the entire book we have just written, no longer at the historical state, but the state of being alive. The facts hardly credible things that we have stated and that witnesses have-carried by death have affirmed from century to century, but that could challenge us, a host of people incapable of judging historical matters, because their education li-Béràtre deprived them of healthy criticism-these same facts, Here they are again before our eyes. Here they are, no more of yesteryear, no longer of yesterday, but such as the products of the current moment, a process that is in the process of unfolding. Or Rather, here is the Jew himself, here is the Jew in action before

Digitized by Google

456

THE JEWS.

our eyes; the ancient and pure-blooded Jew, the indelible Jew,

"The indestructible core" of the nation. We find it at the work as in the Middle Ages, that is to say, in the process of being- To devour a people and all commentary is useless, whoever it may be sees it operating. Do you see it, do you remove it, and, because it provoked cruel reactions; who wouldn't take it for An innocent victim? He complains, moans, sighs, lallies, and mingles with the cries of pain the cries of fury; He fills, he stuns the world with accusations which, in Even his own words contradict the denials he inflicts upon himself; He accuses the people he devours of slaughtering them. he only accuses her of sparing him; he doubles his supplications with the insolence of his threats; he calls on him to support his compatriots abroad; he demands, invoking what he calls his rights, the intervention of foreign peoples; his word imperious, it demands sovereign protection; from sovereigns of these peoples; he treats their princes of power k then- sance; he speaks to them of the tone that the superior allows himself in addressing the subordinate whose obedience wavers; he dares, to the face of liberal Europe, he dares to demand that they break k Its benefit: freedom of the press and freedom of expression. these freedoms which, everywhere else, are in his mouth personification of social progress, and for which he arms all militias, all occult or overt sects revolutions put the world from one end to the other. service!

This is what we see and hear, this is what we made us feel, with our fingers and eyes, the theatre where we have transported the reader, and on which it is the Jew himself which occurs; where his actions mingle with his words, and where his sad and dramatic person gives us, right in the middle of the nineteenth century, the complete and perfected spectacle of the Jew, his father, in the Middle Ages!

'Manifesto of the thirty-one deputies of Romania, document admi- official and reliable.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER ELEVEN.

457

But, once again, who is this Jew, at the same time antique and brilliant in its youth, of which three or four days What separates the one who persists in denying it? What is- He? Because this summary must reiterate: He is the Orthodox Jew number of countries. Look! Lower your eyes to this po-enormous, flourishing population, which you see growing fat, to strengthen, to grow by 25,000 or 500,000 souls in a few years', and proliferate by devouring the substance of the the people who host him. He is good – and who would dispute that?

– the Jew enslaved by Pharisaic traditions; he is the unwavering believer, whom twenty centuries have been unable to change nor change beliefs; he is, therefore, the cursed one of twenty centuries, because twenty centuries could neither change nor change his actions or his morals. And the multitude that came out of His sides hear his doctors, his religious oracles shout: Patience! This ground you tread upon is only a Judea provisional, a land of exile or borrowed land; but Tomorrow you will be here at home; tomorrow will be the day of deliverance; tomorrow the liberator will appear; tomorrow his-will come the hour when, from the heart of the reconquered homeland, "only
You will dominate all of humanity.

Such, then, is the faith of this population which, in the magnificent surroundings of the Danube, he says, while redoing his Palestine, and whose beliefs are vigorous and formidable lead us to the chapter on the Messiah, this liberator whom he wait.

■ RouiiANiii:. "The capital's health service recently published, through the organ of Doctor J. Félix, a report" whose results are,
In 867 and 4868, among Christians: excess of the dead, 4,765 out of 40,537 births; among Jews, on the other hand, almost twice as many As many births as deaths... The capital is therefore doomed.
within a period of fifty years "to become a purely Jewish. » Archives Israélites, XIII, pp. 393-94; 4869, extract from Trajan, May 4-S3. Add the influx of Israelite immigration to this prodigious excess of Jewish births over deaths, while the opposite exists among Christians > of all rites", and calculate!

Digitized by Google

THE JEWS,

ioA

NOTE.

A KEY WORD ON CIVILIZATION.

What does this "soft civilization" mean? Because the most opposing camps,
The most hostile among them fight over it, tear it apart, as if it carried eir

the present era!

Civilization closes in on itself and rests, entirely, within the whole principles that make man a citizen (ciuis), the worthy inhabitant as much of a city, the healthy and active member of a human society, that is—that is to say, an eminently sociable being. This has long been formulated. This fortunate saying: No one can be a good citizen of the earth if he does not works to become a good citizen of heaven I

In other words, civilization consists of a bond full of strength and gentleness, which, binding man to his fellow man, binds them all together with God. The word religion (from religare, to bind) is the name of this link; however, in matters of religion, simple common sense teaches us that a only one can be true, and the slightest reflection teaches us that this The true religion can only be the most ancient. It is, therefore, the most ancient. even the one that the God of Israel engraved on the stone of Sinai when—that it had almost faded from the stone of the human heart: that which Christ, foretold by her, came to complete and perfect. Outside of this last religious code, civilization will never exist; it will only be imperfect.

Thus, the most literate peoples of antiquity; worshippers of gods murderers and infamous figures, among whom passions were worshipped, and for whom man was – an instrument, prey, a thing', less than one thing; these peoples, despite the culture of their intellect— They were not civilized men; they were merely... civilized men, people whom the laws of their cities had sufficiently polished from the outside so that contact would become less hurtful to them. fundamentally, and from a moral standpoint, these men, despite some precepts Having escaped the ruin of natural law, they scarcely rose above Barbarians. They betrayed themselves through their philosophy, which undermined their work to all the debaucheries of the mind or of free thought; and, by the disorders of their hearts, to all the debaucheries of independent morality Dante, that is to say, to the license that he professes of all necessity. who denies all belief and all supreme legislators, in other words... my lawless man

Now, for the Jew, from Christ until the middle of this century, the law Moses' teachings are nothing compared to rabbinic traditions. For this

* The Church condemns slavery in all its forms; but, didactically, The ancient slave is less a thing than a nothingness, non tam vilis quam nutlut.

Among these peoples were men who lived a pure life. because the precepts of natural law existed in their hearts.

Digitized by Google

The Jew became the man of the Talmud, a wild code where the precepts of Hatred and plunder are intertwined with the doctrines of cabalistic magic. that professed high idolatry. He is therefore uncivil, insofar as he remains unchanged. As for the one who begins to change, to walk, to to condemn rabbinic traditions, to put oneself at the head of the ideas of modern progress, born, he confesses, from the philosophy of eighteenth century, not only does it place itself outside of civilization-true sation, that is to say, of Christian civilization, but it is the most irreconcilable enemy. In short, the essence of religion of the first of these Jews, and the essence of the principles that are life in- The intellectual and moral dimension of the second is the most implacable hatred of truths of the Christian religion. This is demonstrated, in their agreement, the publications and actions of these men among whom, today, the only common faith is glue which is limited to the unity formed by the blood ties and racial interests. That is why, despairing of Judaism itself begins to tell us: "The entire religion Jewish identity is founded on the national idea*! That is to say, on the expectation of a Dominating Messiah, life or idea, whose triumph will be the triumph of Israel. (See our chapter xii.)

And the triumph of Judaism is the ruin of Christian doctrine. source of civilization. Who then, among us, by embracing with love, "the realization of modern principles," of which the council The Jewish law of 1869 promotes and blesses "development, as the most a sure guarantee of the present and future of Judaism and its memories "bres," suspects that he works little more than to establish, at the expense of the The only possible civilization, the domination of Judah?

* Lévy Bing, Leures; Archivez israétils, p, 333 to 330; 1864.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TWELFTH.

PREMIÈRE DIVISION. – THE JUDAI MESSIAH.

The Orthodox Jew never ceases to hope for a universal revolution which will raise him, through his Messiah, above all peoples. – Israel Did he or did he not retain his naive and robust faith in the Messiah? Yes, but The Jew, for some years now, is no longer, here and there, like himself. – Rabbi Lazard states that the restoration of Jerusalem Salem is merely an ideal thing, which does not, therefore, harm their national patriotism. – The German reformers hold the same language, because talking about this recovery would be a obstacle to their emancipation. – English Jews are more frank, and the vast majority of Jews believe in the Messiah, but defense is the act of setting the date. – The Messiah of the Lalmudic scholars remains the pivot of the Jewish faith. – Letter from Mr. Lévy Bing on the Messiah, leader- a work of clarity. – The unification of peoples must take place, in order to

* Universal toast. – The heartfelt and ultimate homeland of every Jew is So, Judea again. – However, the Messiah will not be of a certain nature divine. – 11 will rebuild Jerusalem and bring back the redeemed Jews. The Talmudic Jew is nourished by the hope of conquest and the dispossession of the peoples who grant him citizenship. – Proof, anecdotes. – For the progressive Jew, the Messiah is the philosophical age. current sophistry, which overturns the Church and the Talmud; for the Jew or– Theodox tradition holds that this era is one of the stages that prepare for the Messiah. real. – Grotesque superstitions. – Messianic families, descriptions.

The Jews have always hoped for their Messiah, and sometimes there sometimes unconsciously, they prepared the work of the social and universal revolution whose instrument– The definitive outcome would be this Messiah, and whose final result must "To be and will be" – they never cease to repeat to each other, – to establish their dominion over all the peoples of the earth! But we cannot understand either the vividness of this es– neither the strength that this traditional faith gives to the execution their plan would be ruined if we did not for a moment stop our eyes on the fervor and tenacity of the belief that binds the mind and the heart of the Jew at the idea of the Messiah.

The question therefore arises for us in these terms: Israel Did he or did he not retain his naive and ardent faith in the Messiah? And the answer that the sons of the dispersion give us is This one: Woe! Woe to him who has lost this faith! This–

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TWELFTH. 461

Meanwhile, among the Jews, some believe in the Messiah of a frank and valiant faith, while others seem to deny this Desired one of the descendants of Jacob, and others besides alter and distort the lines so vigorously accentuated of its traditional Ligurian dialect, let us therefore know more than ever, by delivering us the search for truth, observing alternative– Weigh the pros and cons; and, first, let us remember that it It is no longer a question of imagining that the Jew is here, there and Elsewhere, what it was just a few years ago was– that is to say, always and everywhere equal and identical to itself. We will therefore refrain from taking the one that is within reach of our ears and eyes for the like according to the belief of the Jew, whose word and sight are not familiar points.

What is remarkable, a resident of the Ratisboune, a converted Israelite, is the care with which the Jews "flee any serious and dogmatic discussion." above all, it dismisses the big question of the Messiah, the only one that a conflict arises between Jews and Christians, w

Today "the Jews no longer accept this fundamental point-mentality of the religion of their fathers; they reject everything in-seems to be the mystery of original sin and the promise of the Re-demitter. Or, if they still invoke the Messiah in the obligatory recitation of the psalms, they do not attach

Their words make no sense; they regard them as outdated formulas; they even declare that one should no longer to await the Messiah, nor ask for any other liberation than what they obtained in their political situation. The Blessie came for us on February 28, 1790 with the Rights of man. Thus expressed one of the most self-ridiculed by modern Jews, Mr. Catien, the translator of the 'Bible'.

These words are undoubtedly restricted, with the intention of 'The Jewish Question, p. 18, 1868, 31 pages; and M. Cahen, Archives' Israelites, HIV, p. 801; 1847.

Digitized by Google

462

THE JEWS.

learned religious figure, to the educated and reformist Jews of a part of Europe—men powerful by virtue of their wealth, by their influence, and often even through a shining display of respectability, but which constitute only a tiny number in the nation.

Another Christian, whose pen represents to us the Holy land raised at the junction of three continents as a fortress whose enclosure awaits Israel, expresses itself in Terms worth quoting: "The last resort Mr. Vercruyssc tells us that the Eastern Question will not be resolved. does she point to the restoration of the Israelite people in her country, Palestine?... The re-establishment of the Jews in Palestine It has two sides; the religious side and the political side.

"The Israelite people, and the Arab or Ishmaelite people, nationalities of the world—they were providentially preserved and preserved;... and, we can be certain of this, the destinies of these two nationalities, unique and mysterious—laughing, will be even bigger in the future (magpies pass "

However, Messrs. Isidore Caben and Marc Lévy do not cite these words that, to combat them, were used with singular audacity of reformist doctrine. Let's listen: "We have often spoken on this issue in a different direction. History does not repeat itself, and the Israelites, messengers The seeds of the monotheistic idea must be dispersed throughout the world. "Not SC to concentrate in a fortress." Moreover, it is a slander that all theologians of the Christianity is that "the Jews did not want to recognize—to be born the Messiah in the son of Mary, because they were carnal, and hoped in a Messiah who would give them everything First, absolute domination of the world; a gratuitous assertion and contrary to history. In fact, Israel's election has nothing worldly; he always understood that his kingdom is not this world. He is first among the nations, like the priest is the first among the believers; his mission is to > Israeli Archives, p. 884; October 15, 1866.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TWELFTH. 463

To recognize in men the true doctrine; how the Could the Israelites have imagined that God would subject them to... treat all nations, they whom the prophet Daniel came • to teach that every people has its guardian angel, like Israel? They were far from having this exclusive mindset and of an ambitious intolerance that some want to attribute to them—, he there was, there could be nothing like it in their species—"Mesiimque rances*."

"In vain," cried the rabbi from the pulpit. Lazard, in vain would one seek to return to Jerusalem his former brilliance. "It is no longer a question for us of repopulating it, but to turn our thoughts toward her," for she is not Our physical city is merely our "ideal city." And that's how "daily prayer asking for the re—the establishment in Jerusalem does not cause any harm to our national patriotism'. In short, "our religious banner—grievous bears four dogmas clear and luminous like the so—the eye: absolute and rigorous unity of God, immortality of the soul; Sinaitic revelation, and finally the coming of the Messiah." But, By this dogma of the coming of the Messiah, we must not understand

All messianic faith will therefore culminate in this grotesque subtlety, against which a formula protests which, in all peoples, expresses the most unwavering faith and the more positive than the expected thing: I expect it like the Jews await the Messiah.

Doesn't the Bible say of this angel: "He will not forgive you"? point when you sin, n Exodus, xxiii, 2t.

2 This sample is one of those that show us what a feather Jewish dares to make paper bear the burden. The Talmud. History of the traditions. rabbinic teachings, which are the catechism of the Jews, the history of the false Messiahs and messianic families tell us what we owe to think about such a ruling. See Marc Lévy, Archives israélites, VI, p. 249, 1867; read on, and see the opposite below.

® Archives israélites, XVII, p. 8t0; <867. Thus the Jew ceasing to be A Jew by nation, he would only be one by faith! And this faith would be Symbolic!... Making the masses of... accept such absurdities nation.

* Archives israélites, IV, p. 64; 1868. Auscher, rabbi. – 0 Israel!

Digitized by Google

46i

THE JEWS.

The German reformers, the Israelite Rabbino- tells us Wicz, saw in "the passages that speak of the return of Jews in the land of their ancestors and of the restoration of the kingdom of David..., an obstacle to emancipation. » De- Having finished getting rid of this obstacle, they then took bravely the party of making light of hopes Messianic. This is the key to the mystery of this reversal. On the contrary, they were better advised and more generous. English Jews "understood that this would be a reform" which would do more harm than good." They found it just right to respect the age-old faith of the Jews, who have a right, to their meaning, "to form the most ardent wishes for a mis- happy homeland, even if they were determined not to never return, in person, to the country of their ancestors'. "

Faith is therefore no longer uniform among all the sons of the

They are the most courageous when it comes to believing in their Messiah; and, in their minds, the credit of this character goes to all as the days grew shorter and shorter; for "he let pass without showing all the periods that the rabbis have found at the end of their many suppositions* 1 » Their faith without Constantly disappointed, she eventually grew tired! Some, entering within the Church, they humbled themselves before the Messiah from Betbléhem and Calvary, and the others forged themselves from a completely philosophical form of Protestantism, while while others still seem to be resting and refreshing themselves in plunging into the depths of indifference. However—dant, the vast majority of the dispersion remains blindly faithful to his messianic beliefs and his rabbis, who very cautiously, and with the learned Abrahamel at their head, they decreed the anathema against anyone who would have the presumption of fixing a date for the arrival of the Messiah: let them simply see

'The Israelite Reform in London, November 4–5, 1866; Israelite Archives—lites, XXII, p. 984; 1866.

"Second letter from a converted rabbi (Drach), p. 100; Paris, 1827.

Digitized by Googic

CHAPTER TWELFTH. 465

to appear in his time, this illustrious restorer of Israel! But if this vast majority remains what it was, what was—So, she? The following passage tells us in terms very clear;

"The wise men and the mayors of the Synagogue conclude" ordinarily, nowadays, by the thought of this TltiOMPATEUK FUTURE the speeches they give in their assemblies: they urge their fellow believers to faithfully observe the law, by supporting their hope for the coming of the Messiah, and to enjoy all the blessings promised to Israel. Now, one of these good is the desired moment for the massacre of Christians, and of the complete extinction of the sect of the Nazarenes." The word is clear, and what he still says today, he was saying to himself. many centuries ago. Even Saint Jerome, who knew...

"Based on Jewish doctrines," he wrote about the little stone that detaches itself from the top of the mountain to bristle the statue of Nebuchadnezzar: "The Jews turn this step—wise to their advantage, and refuse to acknowledge Christ in this stone. It represents for them only the people of Israel, which had suddenly become strong enough to overthrow all the kingdoms of the earth and found upon their ruins its eternal empire

Later, in the fifteenth century, the learned rabbi Abra-Baue'l announces in his commentaries the reign of the Messiah. glorious era in which the extermination of Christians will be accomplished and the kind ones* Cl Reuchlin tells us: They wait impatiently—the noise of weapons, wars, the devastation of provinces and the ruin of kingdoms. Their hope is that of a triumph similar to that of Moses over the Canaanites and which would be the prelude to a glorious return to Jerusalem,

'The Church and the Synagogue, pp. 18–19; Paris, 1859.

* Fifteenth century. A highly esteemed figure among the Jews, who was minister of Finance in Portugal and Spain under Ferdinand the Catholic king. He was banished with the body of his nation, and, whatever one might say, This banishment of the Jews was the salvation of Spain, of which they were the scourge, as they are of Romania.

3 On Jeremiah, ch. xxx.

30

Digitized by Google

466

THE JEWS.

restored to its former glory. These ideas are the soul of Rabbinic commentaries on the prophets. They were traditionally passed down and instilled in the minds of this nation; and thus have prepared themselves from all times Israelites, this event, the ultimate culmination of aspirations of the Jewish race!

The Messiah of the Talmudic scholars, who is not yet a defeated, was therefore by no means a myth; and Mr. Félicité (Verernysse) can and will for a long time, no doubt, us to assert that the Israelites do not renounce this belief cherished from generation to generation for so long a chain of centuries*, for the Messiah is "the pivot of their faith and their hope; and not having admitted the Christ for the promised prophet, they await us! But he is at hand to hope that one day they will recognize their mistake; or else he will be feared that a large number will eventually admit the Antichrist for the Messiah. That is what God has planned, and whose He was kind enough to warn them'... »

Most of them are waiting, they are preparing for the realization of this hope tirelessly sustained; and, "always They imagine that they are the chosen ones, or the people of God; They imagine that, as such, "they are superior to all the nations (Gojim); that they differ from them physically and morally lyrically, and that these will have to be exterminated during the the coming of their Messiah." Therefore, Judaism has not been just—that to date, "from a political, religious and physique, that a caste spirit, which spoke of rigor and inexorability The partiality of scs [lartisans, has no equal in any class]

'Buxtorf, Jewish Synagogue, ch. 35. Maimonides in Surensheinsius, Mischna, part, iv, p. 164; Abrabanel, Prcco salute. The Church and your Synagogue, pp. 18–20. – This preparation is carried out vigorously—lying today.

■^Booklet entitled The Regeneration of the World, dedicated to the twelve tribes of Israel; Paris, 1860, and of which M. Vercruysse 01s nousflt the very-gracious present at the Matines congress of 1864; very interesting work compelling, but whose ideas we cannot adopt in their entirety.

Ibid., Vercruysse, p. 43. See the rest.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TWELFTH.

*67

of men in Europe... From this comes an antagonism
"A permanent conflict between the state and Judaism is inevitable!"

Thus, on one side of Judaism remains and stands tall.
the ancient and unwavering belief in the exterminating Messiah and plunderer of peoples—while on the other hand, sometimes this Dogma evaporates, is reduced to a symbol, and sometimes we forget it.
dispose of it without ceremony if the slightest interest requires it 5 but Doctors endowed with some prudence refrain from re—brutally push back the faithful who persist in taking it seriously. The Israelite Archives, whose editors... include among those who mythologize the Messiah, therefore open their pages wide to the beliefs of orthodox, and give us in the following letter an admi—
a mighty monument to the unwavering expectation of the Jews:

Nancy, March 21, 1861. – "Sir, I am one of those who think that our generation will not see the light of day to assert the contrary, in the presence of events and transformations animations that we have been witnessing over the last fifteen years years ago »

"You say: We do not believe this idea – of the Messiah, and his triumphant return to Jerusalem – neither feasible nor Acceptable! Have you really thought about the seriousness of these words? Because they constitute the complete negation of our faith and our mission in the world! That is certainly not your thought; but it is fitting that an organ of the impor-
The tance of the Archives cannot be considered as having not just the awareness of duties as well as hopes of Israel. What! You don't believe in the final mission of The house of Jacob? Jerusalem would be a meaningless place for you.
Word? But that would be the immediate overthrow of our worship', of our tradition, of our reason for being; and, in that respect,

'Kluber, A Glimpse into the Diplomatic Deliberations of the Congress of Vienna, 1. 111, p. 390; – Goschler, Encyclopedic Dictionary of the Catholic theology, by the most learned professors and doctors of theology of Germany, vol. XII, p. 451; Paris, 1861, in-8".

30.

Digitized by Google

468 THE JEWS.

We should immediately burn all our sacred books... Our Ritual, ordinary or extraordinary, always speaks to us of the MÈHE PATRIE; in our rising, in our lying down, in our putting
At the table, we invoke our God to hasten our return in Jerusalem, without delay, and in OUR day! So they would be Does he have empty words? The general, universal rehearsal of these So words would no longer have any meaning? Would it be purely formal?

"Fortunately, that's not the case; and you see,
Dear Sir, which, if many of us have forgotten the importance of returning. God has raised up new brothers for us.
calves who sometimes understand this better than we do ourselves a miracle, unique in the life of the world, of an entire people dis-persecuted for eighteen hundred years in all parts of the uni-towards without merging or mingling anywhere with the populations in the midst of which it lives! And, this incredible preservation, made to open the eyes of the blindest, would have no Meaning, no value for us or for the world?

... "But let's look at the horizon, and consider three signs striking things that strike us. Three words, three things have the Current events: Nationalities, Congress, Suez.

"Well, the key to this threefold problem (of peoples who come into possession of themselves in order to unify, and unify using electric wire and steam the various regions of the world), the key to this three-pronged solution is Israel, it is Jerusalem! As I said earlier, the entire Jewish religion is founded on the national idea. – And whether or not they have... science – it is not a pulse, not an aspiration 'sons of Israel who are not towards the homeland'. I repeat, he we would have to close down from the first to the last of our books "If we had to banish Jerusalem from our thoughts!"

* That's quite literally, quite anti-synbolic, also po.^itive How precise; and let us note this word: the return to the motherland. How So, are these the Jew's temporary homelands?

* The land of the fathers! Will we be told how the Jews can to be true citizens elsewhere, with this necessary thought, with these dominant desires of their soul?

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TWELFTH. 469

"And these aspirations, these thoughts, are not only something intimate, personal to our race, but it is a need universal; it is the fulfillment of the words of the prophets; that I say? Words from God. That is proof of His presence. eternal among us, that is the sanction I was talking about.

"If, little by little, personal vendettas have disappeared; if the barbaric and stupid prejudice of dueling is soon no more than a memory; if, in a moment, it is no longer permitted to take justice into one's own hands, but rather to rely on others judges generally accepted and impartial in the dispute, Isn't it natural, necessary, and far more important? to soon see another court, a supreme court, seized major public disputes, complaints between nations, judging as a last resort, and whose word is to be believed? And this That word is the word of God, spoken by his two elders. (the Hebrews), and before which they bow with respect all the younger sons, that is to say the universality of men, our brothers, our friends, our disciples'.

"One more word, dear sir... We are approaching the anniversary of the Israelites' exodus from Egypt fathers. It was on the evening of April 20th that, throughout the world, a people scattered for almost two thousand years, the same

He took hold of the cup of blessing placed before him, and, with a
In a heavily accentuated voice, he repeated the magnificent three times Here's a toast: NEXT YEAR IN Jerusalem! Will you say-you still believe that the restoration of the Jewish nation is not Neither feasible nor acceptable? – LévyBing.

Is this language energetic enough, clear enough? – Eh
Well, in turn, the president of the Jerusalem work,

'I am the people-Pope!' an astonishing saying of Israel, which places him at The most ultramontane point of view: You need a supreme judge, and Therefore infallible, O nations of the earth! Well, here I am, I
I must be, I will be that arbiter, that judge. Recognize in a congress Jewish, recognize in me not only the kingly people, but the pope-people.

* Israelite itrcAives, pp. 335-350; 4864. It would be necessary to read all of this. letter.

Digitized by Google

470

THE JEWS.

Mr. Chief Rabbi Isidore, although he is a member of the •pro-sandstone, that is to say, dogmatic reform in Judaism,
This is what they say to us: "Jerusalem is for all religions"
Let us call it the city of memories; for us, it is both the 'City of the past and the future.' The true homeland, the homeland of The heart and ultimate goal of every Jew, therefore, is still and will be Always Judea! Otherwise, there would be no more Judaism!

Hence the importance of pilgrimages to this city, continues
On the other hand, the Israelite newspaper was hostile to the reform; for it is
"By breaking with noble traditions, it is by becoming indifferent to the best memories of religion and p.vTRiE that one pronounces one's own downfall. The authors of the Ritual understood this perfectly when, in the official large cracks*, they have reattached the hope of restoration from Israel to this same pilgrimage, including thousands of mouths echoing these sentiments during these solemn days.

"Messianic thoughts, and of universal unity, we come in droves at this moment; but if, according to the pathe infallible roles of the prophets and our good and ancient beliefs," it is said that multitudes of people must

"of the God of Jacob," oh scandal! And how can it be tolerated?
"The doctors of the Jewish reform seem to believe the con-to milk"; that is to say, we Israelites would go "to "Temples of foreign cults!" And the ridicule is thrown from from the pulpit, by rabbis, on the hopes of the Messianic restoration of Judah!

On all sides, alas! we are under attack.
French; and it is in the face of this persecution that...
The daily toll of this uninterrupted martyrdom of Israel, which our Reformist doctors in Germany abolished the Messiah, the deli-
"Oh no!" "Prayers and hope for the future."

'Archives Israélites, XI. p. 495; 1868.

– Prayer of Moussaph, for the three festivals.

*Israelite Universe, II, p. 67–54; 1866. Id., IX, p. 386; 1867.

* L'Univers israélite, p. 147, 20th year; Paris, September 1864.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TWELFTH. 474

For a truly Israelite heart, such a thought would be A crime!

Whatever language is held outside, it is therefore se-Ironically, this Messiah is eagerly awaited. However-and even among the Jews who remained faithful to the traditions Rabbinic, most doctors deny the divine nature of the one whom Israel awaits with that faith that the centuries will not They can extinguish, and the slightest breath can rekindle. This Messiah, – a former rabbi, who had undergone extensive studies, told us to return in our time to the bosom of the Church, and who strove to share in his happiness with his fellow believers – this Messiah will be, according to contradictory and grotesque belief doctors, a man of the blood of David, and whose ma-
The fact that he was born will be nothing miraculous. "He will be endowed with the spirit of prophecy, and he will have such a keen sense of smell that by means In this way he will discern all things! However, he has not-

"He will attain the perfection of Moses..." The object of his mission Zion will be to deliver scattered Israel, to free it from the captivity in which they force the nations to groan, "and of to bring him back to the Holy Land after defeating Gog and Magog. » To the chosen people to rebuild both Jerusalem and its temple-, h him to re-establish and consolidate "a tem- reign

tions then "will be subject to the Jews, and the Jews will dispose—will be, at their discretion, the individuals who compose them and their "property." He will marry several women, and his children will for—will mark the line of his successors after he has fulfilled his long and glorious career. Such is, for the Jews Judaizers, one of the images of the promised happiness under the 'Messiah they are waiting for!'

According to the most serious Jewish authorities, the Jew frankly Talmudic, and especially the Jew of the crowd, He therefore still only nourishes his dreams with the sweet hope of the conquest of the Christian nations which gives him the right to cited; that of the subjugation of the wretches spared by

'Read Drach, second letter, p. 99; Paris, 1827.

Digitized by Google

475

THE JEWS.

his iron; what plunder for the vanquished! — But an anecdote—The pleasant dowry gives us the measure and degree of greenness of this faith of Israel, and, if the fact that it brings to our con—Its origins seem to stem from the Jews of the Middle Ages, let us not However, let us not imagine that it belongs to times past —, It is from the very century we live in. It is from the era where the great Sanhedrin of 1807 had just given to the first Empire's famous and touching answers on the qua—civic rights and the edifying charity of Israel: answers that a an ancient and learned rabbi reduced k to their true value, but who, in the words of the Jewish lawyer Bédarride, were avenging Finally, the Jewish nation, through centuries of slander and insults whose injustice of the people had nourished her!

"At the school I attended, in Strasbourg," he tells us Mr. Drach, this former rabbi, the children took the resolute—tion to do, k the first appearance of the Messiah, hand based on all the confectionery shops in the city. debated to determine who would be the custodian of this precious loot. While waiting for the candy, he was dishing out a good deal of blows. with both feet and fists. These ad hominem arguments led an agreement under which everyone had to keep this which he would seize. I trained for a long time, on my part, the condition of a beautiful shop on the corner of the square 'd'Armes, on which I had set my sights'.

Better than any human words, the naive plan, the debates, the struggles and conventions of young Talmudic students Alsace, fellow students of the very learned Drach. Our old con-birth, describe in traits as characteristic as they are inde-weak the positive doctrines of religion that were instilled in them their mayors are... It is therefore with all the seriousness of faith that is instilled in childhood, that in the nineteenth century, and in one of the main cities of this France which was in a hurry to proclaim them French citizens, we saw an increase in among Jews who are faithful to their religious law, the belief in

'Drach, second part, p. 319; Paris, 1827.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TWELFTH.

4-3

Talmudic Messiah, that is to say, the Messiah who must exterminate To mourn and to grieve the Christians!

"What do you expect?" people will cry, "the Jews were languishing." then, in such filthy and disgusting ignorance! – But No, please—that excuse is repugnant to the Jews; and, from the your 1st firmest, the very organ of Jewish reform pronounces these words: Believe him well, "if the instruction of Youth occupies a large place in concerns current issues, if it has become the central question, to the point that from one end of Europe to the other it is done as a backlash against ignorance, one can affirm that it has always been in Israel one of the questions that have the busiest were the rabbis and the leaders of the nation—and that Never before has this ignorance, which we want to eradicate today, existed among us.

"Exclusively religious until that time, she was, so to speak, free and compulsory. Emancipation, by breaking down all barriers, by opening up a vast field to the activity of the Israelites and placing them on an equal footing complete cooperation with their fellow citizens of other faiths; the disarray in their entire organization and in all their habits studies, especially in France, where they had to abandon their specific idioms to adopt the language of the country. Finally "Religious instruction suffered the backlash of this happy change, which for her was the signal of decadence" of even that it was for secular sciences in Israel the signal

But this anecdote that Drach told us without pa-

* Archives israélites, XX, pp. 945-46; 1867. Singular eulogy of s<i religion! I call happy the change that brings about its decadence!
- Lalmudisnie, that is to say, Pharisaic-rabbinic orthodoxy, y received the most serious defeat; for, as the ancient rabbi Dracli tells us:
"In theological schools, the courses were limited solely to Talmud; the text of the Bible was neglected. The school curriculum Talmudic teachings have since been updated; but this is at the expense of the...

Talmud, Talmudic science, has declined considerably. > Drach, Uarm.

Between the Church and the Synagogue, vol. I, p. 234; 1844. Orthodoxy is affected; and the more it becomes entangled, the more acceptable the Jew becomes.

Digitized by Google

i74 the Jews.

mocks us by feeling its importance, and by seeming to age us.
several centuries, we believe we should link it to the narrative by Mr. Crémieux, who, in his speech to the general assembly General of the universal Valuation, we paint, this same date and with equal naiveté, the Jew's hairy beard, so different from its triumphant state in the present era. - Li-Let us listen to and meditate on the stories of these two sons of Israel, where reveal with such powerful and comical energy the mar-and the signs of the times.

"How everything has already changed for us. Gentlemen, in if Not long ago! When I was a student..., I didn't know I would have gone to dig.
The streets of my hometown without receiving any insults.
I've fought many battles with my fists! Well, not many years.
Afterwards, I did my studies in Paris; and when I returned home
Nîmes, in 1817, I took my place at the bar, and I was not Jew for no one! I soon saw the Jews conquer...
High places, and my enjoyment was great. Yes, I tell you
I tell you, gentlemen, I am proud of the Jews, and it is necessary
I hope you'll forgive this feeling of vanity-because, when I was
As children, they counted for nothing, and as they get older
When I arrived, I saw them full of zeal, full of courage, labo-Rieux, boas citizens, useful men: I have seen them conquer in all careers a high position; I have heard their names resounding amidst the most beautiful names of the country Honor yourself/Courage, my friends, redouble your efforts; when We have conquered the present so quickly and so well, that the future is
: BEAUTIFUL ' ! " /

...The messianic truth brought to light will preserve
So today there are two meanings: according to the first, that of The philosophical and progressive Israelite, the Messiah, is not a man, a character; this is the philosophical era that we see taking shape before our eyes, overturning religious superstitions, the worm-eaten buildings of the Church and the Talmud, and all of a sudden to walk, to advance with giant strides, fill the noise of reformist doctrines with 'jtrctu'we» Israelites, I, p. <3; <867.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TWELFTH.

i76

matrices of time and space, and triumph to the glory of A Jew who is its apostle and hero; a hovel that the Messiah is a man, a very positive character, in the eyes of the Jew of bastard orthodoxy, and the Jew of true orthodoxy, remained in the remote countries of Europe, and in the vast regions of Africa and Asia, what were at the beginning-cement of this century the fellow students of Messrs. Drach and Cré-Better. For these timid souls, who form the mass of the nation, the philosophical era we are going through is but one steps that prepare the Messiah, the man under the law of-
'which Israel must one day bend the world'.

One thing is therefore certain, whatever may be the case

* Perhaps it would be useful to observe, as a reminder, the Cliemin is doing this.
and taking note of the vitality of messianic traditions, that the
The most grotesque superstitions providentially mingle with the expectation of the Jewish rabble and bear witness to the unfailing and prodigious vigor of popular faith. Serious rabbis teach us by for example, that "according to the ancient prophecies, the Messiah has come within the specified time; that it does not age, and that it remains hidden beneath earth, where he waits to manifest himself until Israel has celebrated as he
The Sabbath is necessary. The Talmudists misused these parables by... interpreting; and they assure that this Messiah will give to his people, gathered in the land of Chanaan, a meal whose wine will be that of Adam himself; which wine is preserved by the Angels in vast cellars, in the center of the earth. At this meal, we will serve

The starter was the famous Leviathan fish, two or three hundred leagues long.

"God had, in the beginning, created the male and the female of this singular fish; but, as their offspring could have given rise to great troubles on earth. God very fortunately changed his mind, and He killed the female, which he salted for the Messiah's meal. Other rabbis They add that the bull Behemoth will be killed on that same day. 11 is so It's monstrous that he eats the hay of a thousand mountains every day. The female of this bull was killed for the same reason, but she was not Not salted, since fish was preferred. – The Jews most Ignorant ones—the true Jews, those of the rabbinic traditions—swear still in important matters concerning their share of Behemoth. n Of Jews in the ninth century, etc., p. 45, by M. Bail, friend of the Jews; Paris, 1816, 2nd edition.

These absurdities, mixed with immoralities whose number and quality are incredible, as our chapters have demonstrated, were adopted as venerable truths by the vast majority of Jews Orthodox. – Read in the serious and learned Drach, former rabbi, second letter, pp. 300–330; id. Harmony, etc., 1. 11, p. 489, etc. See all the writings where the ink of the rabbis has spilled, by for example, the Apocryphal Gospels, by G. Brunet, pp. 343–374; Paris, 1863, etc., etc. » ^ f

Digitized by Google

476

THE JEWS.

What this means is that belief in the avenging Messiah is still very much alive, and prodigiously rooted in the very heart of the nation from one end of the earth to the other. It is the basis of religion Jewish; it is the last consolation of the Jew, and, in the very course of that year 1866, the documents that foreign correspondence transmits to us as evidence sign of its singular firmness. A truly remarkable phenomenon. believable amidst the providential decay that Jewish beliefs have begun to suffer for some time now. years, and the noticeable transformation of Israel, prelude and a sign of future events.

Faithful to this tradition, the Jews therefore adhere to "with extraordinary ardor and firmness k hope to see the arrival of the Messiah soon" – and for most "They expect to see him born among them, or rather at their home." certain privileged and well-known families. The main one lives at point K, roughly the most central point in Europe, the small

"Jewish den, and of the worst kind." The current leader of this The Messianic family is, for the Orthodox, the object of a religious worship that closely borders on fetishism; because You only discover the most wretched side of this man. Idiots. Bent under the weight of premature old age, Isrolka, with her rheumy eyes framed in red—that is his name, — "is the richest Jew of all the Slavic countries; and anyone who knows what the Jews of Russia and Poland amassing wealth in their ruined hovels, will know What that means.

Thanks to the hope of the Messiah's imminent arrival at the Jews of Slavic countries, the Isrolka family amassed millions for a century. <> The heads of this family are considered as thaumaturges (baalschem) among their coreligionists. Sada-Gora is currently the meeting place

'Other messianic families exist in Belz, in Galicia, in Kozk, in Podlachia, in Kozienica, Sandomir's government, and in several-Jewish communities of the Tsarist empire, etc.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TWELFTH. 477

YOU universal, the preferred pilgrimage, so as to say, Jews from Russia, Poland, Galicia, the Bukovina, Moldavia and Wallachia. It is his duty of rigorous faith for the faithful of the Isrolka family, who number in the hundreds of thousands, to visit at least once in their lives the head of this messianic family, and of him Bring gifts. Jewelry is attached to the bodies of members of this family, as one would do to the body of a idol; they shower them with ducats and imperials. The miser The more hardened one snatches a gold coin to sacrifice it to representing the Messiah and gaining the favor of his family. But neither the Jews, who readily give this gold, nor those who They regret it, they don't like to talk about these gifts; and, because We know very little about this, at least from a distance, from CCS pilgrimages to Sada-Gora. On the other hand, the Poles and foreigners passing through Sada-Gora cannot sufficiently boast of the opulence dazzling from the Messiah's palace, which appears to be unique in world.

" , in the midst of the miserable and ruined houses of small merchants and usurers, a rich palace rises and grandiose, surrounded by a number of elegant houses gloves, but smaller and serving as a dwelling for the sons and Glies, married to Isrolka. Everything one can imagine of splendid houses. At the palace, there is a real antique and modern silverware shop, representing a sum of several hundred thousand thalers. The the most magnificent Turkish carpets, the most damask tapestries rich people are found in abundance in the rooms that serve dwellings, and these magnificent objects are pious Offerings from Slavic Jews! Greenhouses and orangeries Tastefully arranged, they define the boundaries of the large park. The entire palace forms a princely dwelling, decorated and furnished with the most refined luxury. In the midst of the filthy shacks of Sada-Gora, it evokes a lost and de- fairy palace country. And the owner of these riches and these magnificent

Digitized by Google

i

478 THE JEWS.

ficences, the father who is to beget the awaited Messiah; the sacred vessel of a long-awaited glorious future – the descendant of David, whose mere sight is regarded as a good thing so great that he is bought for his weight in gold, this man whom one venerates it as a supernatural being, resembling a being without reason, neighbor of the animal.

» Rebiche Isrolka is in fact a man devoid of all intellectual faculties. Beneath the white hair which covering his skull, his mind and thought are lacking; he is old before his time, a fool without motive or reason. His language ne consiste qn'en sons inarticulates, intelligible only- He lies to his family and to his private secretary. He is Stupid to the highest degree, behaves almost entirely Like a brute, he lets out wild cries, and falls asleep. 'in the manner of animals. However, when it has to mount itself- Walking in the street, we always know it for several hours in advance, and all the windows and doors, all the streets and the squares immediately became crowded with people eager to see it. We climb onto the roofs and the trees to contemplate the head of the messianic family; one We fight and get crushed to admire the idol.

"Rebicbc Isrolka is married; he has sons and daughters, and" Most of them have been married since childhood. Each of his sons-in-law, naturally chosen from among the The richest people of the country are required to settle in Sada-Gora, and to stay there to build, in the vicinity of the paternal palace, a house similar, but smaller. At their place, and in their apartments-velvet and rich silks. The ordinary caftans of his

His sons and sons-in-law are made of the most precious stars.
The little children have good French, German,
English and Russian governors and tutors like young princes and princesses.

"Many employees oversee the household affairs," which consist specifically of receiving donations.
During the morning. Rebiche Isrolka holds audiences,

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TWELFTH. 479

That is to say, he receives, assisted by his private secretary, a few pilgrims, announced well in advance, let themselves staring dumbly for a few moments, without saying a word the slightest word, and accepts the traditional gift, which does not may be less than ten florins (25 francs). In the after-At midday, he takes his drive. Not so long ago, his the car was followed by a carriage filled with musicians, but This musical accompaniment no longer takes place, probably as a result of a defense by the official authorities.

"Rebiclie Isrolka's ancestor, more than forty years ago" of this, displayed a similar luxury in Russia, and pushed the the recklessness of his pride, even to the point of maintaining a guard pera group of twenty Cossacks who accompanied continuously lying in his car. Emperor Nicholas, whom chance had Having witnessed such a scene, he was categorically forbidden-
He was confronted with this display of oriental luxury, and had him arrested, then thrown in Kiew prison, because this Jew dared to defy the orders of the sovereign. His numerous supporters and his riches having Having opened the prison gates, he came seeking refuge in Sada-Gora, in the Austrian Rukowine, where the emperor Nicholas claimed him as a Russian subject. But the money from the
The Isrolka family was stronger than the emperor, and decided twelve peasants of Rukowine to affirm under oath that the refugee Gié was born in Sada-Gora.

"A few years ago, Rebiche Isrolka was accused of having counterfeit money was produced. Counterfeit coins were They left his home and had been put into circulation.
This was a perfect opportunity for Christians to play a trick on the arrogant Jew, whose insolent luxury offended everyone. Rebiche Isrolka was arrested without any consideration, and despite the noisy recriminations of Jews. This arrest caused a real riot.
Isrolka was imprisoned and subjected to several interrogations.

a word from him. As expected, the parties without cl the members of Isrolka's family gathered]K>ur

Digitized by Google

480

THE JEWS.

to consult on ways to obtain the release of father of the Messiah. But the judge to whom the case was referred was one of those men on whom seduction had no effect no hold; he refused to let go of a prisoner at any price.
to deny against whom such serious accusations were being made.
Since this official could not be won over by pro-
Neither masses nor threats were used to try to destroy him.
reputation with his superiors, which was believed to be possible
It was possible, with the help of money. But this plan failed.

"Isrolka's supporters then had the idea of drawing their chief of the judge's clutches by securing his promotion to a higher position. A delegation equipped with recomwith firm and diplomatic mandates he went to Vienna;
the judge was appointed advisor to the superior court, and left the country. His successor released Isrolka, acquitting him on the grounds of lack of evic of evidence.

I) The counterfeit money factory was discovered later
Elsewhere, it therefore became clear that we had been very wrong.
to believe in the guilt of Isrolka and her family, as counterfeiters. These people are not only too Rich, but still too stupid to commit such an act.
package '. "

We feel compelled to follow up this story with the very-curious extract from a report that Dr. Buchanan, in 1810, to the Anglican Church, concerning this messianic faith whose perseverance is no less remarkable in the* Israelites of India than in the most central part of Europe.

"During my stay in the Orient, I found everywhere*
Jews filled with the hope of returning to Jerusalem and seeing their Messiah. But two things struck me especially: the so-

'E.vtrailde la Voiles- Halle de Leipzig, World, January 9, 1866; - ibid., in part, Univers Israélite, I, p. 34; 4866, translated from the Fremdem-

Id., Arch. Israel., XIII, p. 591; 1866. This anti-Nussian review is surprised that serious newspapers in Austria, where Sada-Gora, and France, repeat these milks without reservation.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TWELFTH. 481

come that they preserve from the destruction of Jerusalem and their hope of one day seeing this holy city re-to rise from its ruins. Without a king, without a homeland, they sustain themselves-constantly distanced from their nation - the remoteness of time and the places seem to have in no way diminished the memory of their misfortune. They speak of Palestine as a neighboring country.
sin and easily accessible.. /They believe that the era of their j deliverance is not very far off, and look at let revola- ' lions that stir [the universe] like omens of freedom. A a sure sign of our imminent liberation, they say.
This is because in almost every country the persecutions provoked
'Against us they slow down', y/

CONCLUSION.

Documents, therefore, are pouring in from all sides, including the multitude leads us to recognize what recognizes a assembly of learned professors of theology, b the head of the-what place did a holy priest of Jewish origin, Father Abbot, place himself in? Coschler; "The Talmudists," he said, "are the core of the Indian-your nation's destroyable which will endure until the end in its stubbornness and in his faithfulness to preserve the Scriptures.'
And when we listen to these unwavering orthodoxes, we are increasingly becoming certain that the
The Messiah "is the cornerstone of their faith and hope!"

The words in which immortal hopes are expressed and the faith of the vast majority of the Jewish people, must therefore repeat at the end of these pages, so that they never They slip from our memory if we take any worries of the future:

What! For us Jews, "Jerusalem" would be an empty word?
But this would mean the immediate overthrow of our cult, of our dark tradition, of our reason for being, the whole of religion

'Everywhere, therefore, revolutions and catastrophes are the hope of Orthodox Jew. History of the Jews, by Malo, pp. 523-526.

* Goichler, Dict. encyd. of Catholic Theology, t. XII, p. 453.

Digitized by Google

m

THE JEWS.

Jewish identity is founded on the national idea; it is not an aspiration, not a pulse that is not directed towards the homeland. In as we get up, as we go to bed, as we sit down at the table, We invoke God to hasten our return to Jerusalem. lem, without delay, nowadays; and these would be vain paroles? And we would cease to believe in the idea of the Messiah.

"Feasible and acceptable!..."

"Fortunately, that's not the case!" and we can, we must continue to say; "I firmly believe that The Messiah must come; and, though he may delay, I await him! We We await it, and, without our faith wavering, we repeat In our firmest voices, the great national toast: "The year Next in Jerusalem! » In Jerusalem!

* Empty supremacy. "Many Jews, when they reach the end of their careers, turn their gaze towards Judea and come, they say- They await the Messiah. The Jew is tenacious and persevering... » JB Morot, Journal devoy. de Paris à Jérusalem, p. 193; 1869.

In an interesting article, but one which we cannot share Father E. Michaud, we have not shared all ideas or opinions. points out the failures that the Talmud receives in Israel, treated as old-nille, traditional junk, and moreover contrary to the formal law of Morse. He tells us, however, about the efforts of a new school for the rehabilitate, while "what is undergoing among most Israelites a serious alteration, it is the supernatural, biblical inspiration and the character-priestly order." – Monotheism, as he observes, constitutes so much so that, according to some, Messrs. Strauss and Renan, for example, they "appear as true Israelites, n However, he adds, alongside these ruins there is "a double restoration" seeks to take place: the restoration of the messianic idea, and of the Jewish nationality. » Read the article entitled "The Jewish Crisis of 1867" in the Correspondant, December 5, 1867.

SECOND DIVISION. – THE JUDAIAN MESSIAH, CONTINUED,

The expectation of a Messiah, future ruler of the peoples, is the expectation "of the indestructible core of the nation." – Some dissenting opinions
They were among the reformists, but an event would rally them to the believers.
If some seducer were to claim to be the Messiah, the Jews would be inclined to Would they side with him or with the states that made them citizens?
– Clear connections between the Messiah whom the Jew awaits, and the man

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TWELFTH.

i83

whom the Christian calls the Antichrist. – Everything is pre-prepared for the great cosmopolitan unity to which every man must belong the expression. – When the work of dechristianizing the world, will the world not be able to accept for all else a fascina-
A leader of Jewish race? – Examples of dominant figures repelled, then unanimously accepted. – Examples of men who suddenly came out from nothingness to rise to the pinnacle in times of turmoil.
From the steam train from which ideas and things travel, how to be astonished that from the bosom of Judah should arise the one who will realize the idea of cosmopolitan sovereignty, of which the Jews are the apostles?
Won't some walrus suddenly take charge of some formidable exodus? – Can't the Jews at least make themselves second best, and the support, the forces of some conqueror? – Examples of resources that Israel knows how to accumulate on a single point; possibilities, facilities. – A glance cast from the heights of history upon the future.

The expectation of the Messiah, therefore, is, even today, Israel's expectation! And despite the singular and prodigious de-road, despite the collapse which, on this side of the West, all of a sudden, after twenty centuries of unwavering resistance, has just taken place within Talmudic beliefs, a enduring faith in this immense figure remains the linchpin, the essential and indestructible point. But will this Messiah be A mere mortal? Will he be a man or a God-man? That is the question.
Among the believers, the question is contentious; for each one...
Today, a Messiah is created and dressed as he pleases. Human-Speaking finally, the advent of this future dominator of
Is it an admissible fact that peoples can exist, and that the world can...
How to face without feeling overcome by a fit of uncontrollable laughter?

The vast majority, the true core of the race
Jewish, continues, admits, to see in him the man

As for the less religious minority, and in whose eyes a glorious or messianic era would have the meaning of the Messiah, the slightest event would follow to comfort his failing or lame faith and rebuilding it on the model of the faith of his fathers. That, for example, the reputation of a May this extraordinary man come and resound throughout the world, and that the orthodox believers, dazzled or seduced, exclaim: Here is the man of Israel, the one whom Israel awaited; here is the Messiah! Well, this religious and entirely national cry, the mino-

31.

Digitized by Google

iU

THE JEWS.

almost the entire nation would rally to the majority, and This man would become her Messiah. Israel could to be mistaken, as history testifies, has happened to him twenty times to do it over the course of centuries, which does not would in no way prevent him from remaining ready to be mistaken again.

Given this certainty, the question now is that We take the liberty of asking: Every Jew, in every The people who grant him citizenship, is he or is he not a member? of two nations at once? For no man can serve two masters. Is he a member of the Jewish nation first by the blood, and especially the cult, with which this nationality is confused; is it, moreover, by virtue of our legislation, If he claims to be from France, is he a member of the French nation? And in this case, is he more French than Jewish, or more Jewish than French? What would he be like, what would he do, for example, if what-that agitator, if some conqueror, raising the banner of Messiah and the brow crowned with the halo that would be cast there by glorious day of victory, presented himself as the desired one of Is-Raël? And what is being asked about the French Jew, we Let's ask it about everyone else!

EnGn, if he is a deceiver to whom the prophecies of the Church gave the name of .\ntecbrist; if Christians believe that This adventurer will begin his journey with the Jews. inductions, because it is said that Israel must see in him its Messiah, isn't it a sin against common sense to hold How foolish is the Jew who deludes himself into thinking he will become dominant in the fu about the Christian?

Let us seek in words only things, and therefore, whether we adopt a purely human point of view hand, or that we fix ourselves with both feet on the ground prophecies, which are part of the treasures of knowledge of the Church, we will see the most intimate relationships linking one to the other, or rather, to bring about their merging into one, the Jew's belief in his Messiah and the Christian's belief in man whom his language has named by the name of Antichrist.

In fact, however little the Holy Scriptures may be in the eyes of a Christian, absurd and outdated rambling—if However little this indispensable belief remains in him, civilization of human societies: that the Church cannot nor neither lie nor deceive; let us remember that the Antichrist is not more than the Messiah, a fable, a myth, a symbol; rap— Let us remember that his reign was terrible and full of revolutions. unheard-of wonders of all kinds are a future reality. which is equivalent to stating a fact necessarily in the process of being formed information, which is reaching us along the roads that, day to day Day by day, events shape him. But let us beware, in At the same time, to forget that 'this character is a dominatrix—a figure so similar to the one the Jews were waiting for, that he It will be difficult, impossible for these blind people not to to deceive; for it carries within it the union, the perfect synthesis of all the anti-Catholic aspirations that eighteen centuries Judaism attributes to the future liberator of Judah.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TWELFTH. 48.I -

Furthermore, the Christian will add, let us consider that very— Long intervals may no longer separate this character of the era in which our lives unfold. Already, if it pleases us Looking to the future, everything seems to be in place for its installation. lation, we mean for its passage. And under our eyes, from one end of the earth to the other, the political world, the economic and commercial world, led or driven by the societies of the occult world, of which the Jews are the princes, they started stirring from all sides and with a tireless ardor, the great cosmopolitan unity*. Thus names, in the language of the day, the system from which would emerge the abolition of all borders, of all homelands, or, if one wants, the replacement of each person's particular homeland people by a great and universal homeland which would be that of all men. Now, this unity, which demands a head, Does it not, in its formation, prepare the prodigious advent—the order of a single and supreme ruler in which the

'Unicalion of peoples, etc., partial realization of socialism...

^ "Our policy will be essentially universal, cosmopolitan, etc."
(Sic.) Archives israelites, no. 1, p. 8, January 1869.

Digitized by Google

i86

THE JEWS.

Jews could see the Messiah at the same time as Christians
Hey, would they recognize the Anlechrist?

When Christianity, gradually, methodically driven from government and the education of the people, and therefore repelled by the increasing licentiousness of morals, by the appetites of a ferocious ambition and a boundless greed
A brake, seeing himself proscribed, reviled, vilified everywhere, will not be scarcely more, amidst the masses he had civilized, than a object of contempt and hatred*, do we think that this domination-commander of peoples, this conqueror of intellects, forger-corrupt hearts and desires, that supreme fascinator whose wish will be the wish of humankind, may not appear to hold ^ the Jewish race? Could the obstacle then be a the remainder of those Christian sentiments which will have become a odious prejudice against the men of the day, and of which our century already takes on the task and prides itself on dispelling the remains?

That is, in several circumstances, the unforeseen brought about the omnipotence of modern revolutions and the liveliness of a spring, we saw, with our own eyes, a a man abandoned, as the Antichrist must first be, otherwise rejected by the people to whom he offered himself as savior, seized by the public force, condemned without a soul becomes agitated, imprisoned, pardoned, recaptured after another attempt-tive and condemned, then forgotten again, becoming all at 'Suddenly, because the political climate had changed, the man of the situation, to stir up, to sway minds in his favor, buckle under the millions of votes that overwhelmed him indifferent or yesterday's enemies, find themselves master in a glimpse into the will, life, and strength of a people, how could we possibly deny it, regardless of language prophetic of the Scriptures of the Church, that, in circumconstants prepared long ago by the revolutionaries of the whole world, a single man, one of those leaders of revo-

'When the Son of Man comes, do you think he will find...
"Faith on earth?" Saint Luke, ch. xviii, v. 8.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TWELFTH. *87

May solutions that fascinate and captivate the masses, in an instant, to be on everyone's lips, in their vows and the heads of the people, eager to turn the marvelous what are his or her personal abilities in relation to the ultimate goal of their aspiratic

When the dark days of the last century faded away, to give way to the century we occupy, have we not—
We have not seen men emerging from deep darkness proudly raise his head beneath the plumes of his toque.
toriale, to drape oneself in the folds of the consular toga, and not Lacking only audacity and genius to rise to the pinnacle, to grasp and appropriate, to the applause of the crowd,
The symbols of supreme power? Have we not seen, while the torrent of ideas and passions roared revolutionaries, a man of prodigies, a soldier' under whose gaze the world
Tut, under whose hand did peoples and kings humble themselves? No Did we not see it carried on the shield by the people? more generous on earth? Have we not seen his lieutenants—tenants cover, without too much astonishment to the world, or attempt to cover—To unsheathe their shoulders with the cloak of kings? Have we not seen the son of a hotelier, the seminarian, the intrepid, the legendary—Dare Murat, closely followed by his friend Bernadette, poor child of Gascony, each one in the saddle of Their horse, the seat of a throne? Descended from Jewish stock, the Marshal Soult, did he not see himself at the moment of giving his valiant sword in the shape of a scepter? And who would have been surprised if Would the same desire have crossed the heart of the Jew Masséna?
darling child of victory * was he unequal to his brother in arms
And race from a side other than the side of ambition? Eh

'Was Corsica not then declared French, which asks, in
In times of turmoil, to the man whose hand vigorously grasps the
The tiller, its birth certificate?

^ What the Prime Minister of Great Britain, himself Jewish, claims—mftme d^origine. Marshal Soult believed he was about to mount the throne of Portugal, of which he perhaps dreamed of making a stepping stone in Iberian throne.

® Nickname that the soldier gave to this marshal, whose Jewish name was Manasseh.

THE JEWS.

Well, let the circumstances return to what they were.
So, let political fortune bring new faces new and even more irresistible smiles; that he might re-against a highly skilled sophist, one of those leading figures of revolutions whose breath incites fanaticism among the people, one of these cunning and valiant captains for whom the soldier, and who, perhaps inspired by the public, as well as Soult and Masséna, would turn out to be one of the wayward offspring of the Jewish race; that one of these skillful and glorious ones may arise strangers whom his blood brothers would also recognize to be born than to support, and especially in an era where the laws of revolutionary civilization has made every citizen and by Consequently, every Jew is a soldier; that this man, finally,
Carried by the winds of the storm, it combines audacity with service.
And which of us, after the spectacles of which our century has seen... sasié our eyes, will imagine that all of a sudden a diadem imperial could not fall, could not crash down on the front of this newcomer? Who will tell us the height to which we would know how to rise, this ambitious man, trampling underfoot the ruins thrones shattered by revolutions and battles?
And who will think that this new emperor of a republic universal and egalitarian, widening the terrible path that The emperors of the Roman Republic once followed,
This could not usher in a new era of cesarean sections! Who
In short, one would be astonished to see him dictating his laws to the world.
whose financial reins are adrift and will continue to be adrift in the hands of Israel, on the verge of becoming, from one end to the other of the land what it is in Germany, that is to say the distribution goal scorer and regulator of the only ideas that the liberal public and The scholar favors and acclaims!

Have the eminent men of Judaism already Are they not men who are acknowledged, sought after, and courted? Are they which already existed in the electoral assemblies of England or of France, the elite suffrage, that is to say the vote restricted, and the confused suffrage of the masses, that is to say, that that which we call universal, both hesitate to to elevate to the pinnacle? Do their bankers, their financiers—ciers, mostly true statesmen, are not not only bankers, but sometimes even ministers of princes, the financiers of the kingdoms, the chiefs and the rulers of all industrial companies, of all large and colossal companies of Europe, the arbitrators, in short,

 of peace and war, with which they must reckon, and sometimes more humbly than the commongaire, the chosen ones of victory, the most crowned heads tall and proudest republics?

In truth! from the midst of these countless upstarts of the Jewish nation; from the midst of these men whom Europe makes its advisors and judges, its legislators and leaders army, why shouldn't they meet one fine day?
 and at the moment of supreme crisis a man whom the
 by uniting, the people would become the repository of power universal? and, whether this power is titled presidency or royalty, protectorate, Caesarism or empire, would the word make it nothing h the thing*?

Why then, from the steam train or lightning which Things are moving quickly and rapidly today, why?
 if eyes turn towards points in the future which me—
 They are giving birth to all of Europe through radical upheavals, for—
 Why should we be surprised that Jacob's blood suddenly springs forth?

• Le Petit Figaro tells us on April 12, 1869, according to Le Réveil, newspaper Socialist, it is true: "Mr. de Rothschild's heirs know
 Finally, the exact figure for the fortune of the famous financier; the sum
 The total is one billion seven hundred million." — "With his brothers he lent to the whole world, and commanded, purse in hand, all the sovereigns, from Le Monde, November 18, 1868. The fortune of this A family can grow immeasurably through operations, marriages, and to join with other Jewish fortunes... See the note in chapter X, div. 2', on Mr. de Rothschild.

^ The emancipation of the Jew produced the effects that were expected;
 "It allowed these people to enter all careers. They had remarkable ministers, eminent financiers, great orators distinguished military personnel, skilled engineers, legal experts profound souls, great artists; in short, he possesses everything he
 "It is necessary to form an independent environment and govern itself."
 (Let us add: and, to govern others besides himself.) Amadeus Nicolas, Conjectures on the Ages of the Church, p. 372; Paris, 1868.

THE JEWS.

On the unexpected day, the ruler who would fulfill the doctrines cosmopolitans, of which Israel is the apostle, whose liberalism is not What about the echo? Where, indeed, since the nations are docile to his voice tend to unify, to merge into a united people that, where to find a man more suited than the Jew to the po- a new, more intimate situation, reflecting the universality of interests and things of which he is almost everywhere the creator, more cosmopolitan, and we repeat this term, because Israel is the the only man who could be, thanks to the privilege of his constitution- physical tuition, and which has always been, by the fact even from the dispersion, the citizen of the whole globe!

What a man, from whatever point of view one considers, would have more just and legitimate chances than the Jew k se to make it acceptable amidst a population that was emotional and troubled, confused, pressed, driven by wars or upheavals one upon another; populations which, formed to curse Christ and the civilizing law of the devout- They can barely appreciate other things anymore. that the goods of the earth, and whose furious appetites They turn, as if towards a final goal, towards wealth. for the multiplication of which it seems to have been created expressly the genius of the Jew.

At a given moment, how then can one not admit that the Jewish race should bring forth from its bosom some Joseph gifted with the necessary talents for organization and governance ment. of some colossal Egypt? some Moses raised up to organize, to lead towards the land of the patriarchs* some formidable exodus, to shatter the pride of some Pharaoh? How, at least, not to fall back on pen- ser that he may be found above these sons of Jacob, if we We relegate them to a secondary role, a great politician, a ambitious, a rather strong genius, thanks to the support of the mo-

'See the chapter on influences.

"Look at all his attempts, all his preparations to save money there his return. Read all his journals; - for example, Archives israé- , lites, Israelite Universe, etc., etc.

Israel's vast and prodigious resources, to govern the crowds called upon to play out, under his command, the final act of revolutions and to seize the supreme role?

But, if he cannot resign himself to being only the second of this ambitious genius whose star would make his eyes shine Where then does the triumph that his secret and terrible ambition dreams of come from? Would Judah encounter this Archimedean lever capable of supporting to raise the world? In what place on earth would it feel itself moving? to see under his control the necessary Jewish population k this triumphant exodus, this conquest of universal power, k the exercise of this prodigious domination that must k both to submit to and to accept the conquered or seduced peoples?

We couldn't say, and yet we would reply without the slightest difficulty: It will be everywhere; and moreover, if it If necessary, it will be in a specific place, any place at all. It will be everywhere; for that is where the Jew, that people, dwells. whose mobile and cosmopolitan flow spreads, as if by a natural slope, in all the folds of this globe. Or else this will be in a specific place, if the actions of the revolutionary sects tionaries, etc. Jewish settlements, have prepared Whether in Europe or elsewhere, the surprise of these events. And their arrival can be rapid, because nowadays, it's... k-say at the beginning of the era of progress in material things, a An instant of steam is enough on land or at sea for transport immense multitudes. Déjk even, thanks to the caprice ap- Whether by chance or through the calculations of genius, a whole The Jewish people find themselves, as if it were the execution- tion of a long-considered plan, agglomerated in a A state that bears a name that has become modern again, the name of Rou- mania, this country that Israel and its adversaries have called by a The same lip as the new Palestine.

But let's not forget: the corner of land bathed by the the Danube, nearly drowning in the Black Sea, and on which At any moment, our gaze would stop, it would host and condense a force that a few brief years have brought from twenty- five thousand people, nearly five hundred thousand souls, a figure which seems to us-

Digitized by Google

h a development as rapid as it is monstrous—, yes, of Moreover, just a few hours from this powerful and growing population, Russia, Poland, Hungary, Austria do not feed—swarms of these sons of Jacob, whose fertility alarmed by a sudden and inexplicable awakening Let us summarize, then, and get back to the point ^ we deto order: this universal nation, aided by all that our
 the world contains and produces discontented and unbelieving people; aided by all that is called and believes itself to be philosophical; aided by all men of naive philanthropy; by all the dreams empty vessels of a specific belief, or whose ignorance takes as its guide only a sentimental Catholicism; aided through the latent association of universal Freemasonry, whose
 The principal guiding principles of Judaism are the soul and life; aided by the patent association of the Universal Israelite Alliance which rally and weld his body together the disintegrated elements of all the cults; this nation, we say, is it not on the path, Isn't she, on the eve of becoming the first A force in the world? Mistress of the press and of education—ment; mistress of gold and industry in most of the kingdoms; mistress of the steam that gives wings k of entire nations formed into army corps*, and vomit them at a point in space, with no more effort than before
 For years a stagecoach would throw itself from one town to the neighboring town a few bourgeois families; in short, recruiting all the vital forces of the people, could this nation to experience serious embarrassment, to let, one fine day, tom-like clouds, a swarm of people on a point given by Europe: on Palestine, if that is its aim; on this desolate land, plunged into unspeakable mourning since that she is a widow of Israel, and that we would see so prompt-

'Germany alone has 250,000, Europe 3,238,000, etc.
 Geography and medical statisticsf, ut suprà, t. II, p. 131-135; 4857.
 The new Fremdemblait tells us, in April 1869, that Hungary, voithe sine of Itoumanie, has 500,000 Jews.

"Prussia at Sadowa; first attempt, which will be well departed.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TWELFTH. m

restored, to regain her smiles and her joy, if, derechief, it opened itself to the opulent and industrious people who Did she once impregnate her breast?

The day when Israel would like to take advantage, for to carry out this repatriation, one of the major crises that the po-

Would the legions and millions of Jews not allow themselves to be no point flowing towards the Holy Land! And that the reader, put on the path to convincing oneself through one's own reason, we per- put in a hypothesis in which we will not enter for elements that the facts made possible by the current state and the course of minds and things.

Suppose, for example, not one of these crises or For a minister such as the late Mr. de Cavour, this is a matter of to begin quietly, and to rally the cou- fears of unhealthy adventures in neighboring states, for the throw onto such and such neighboring territories, the object of its con- voiries; let us suppose, not yet one of these crises more major issues where it is a question, for a minister such as Mr. de Bis- mark, to break a single, unique power, having raised k against her at once her neighbors and her own subjects: for These two assumptions would be too petty; but admit- one of those terrible, immense crises, one of those European turmoil, the fermentation of which is beginning to work all peoples gives the whole world the pre- wise, and who, suddenly unleashing his fury, precipitates and shatters Kingdoms against each other / Our hypothesis It's well laid out, well understood, we're there! Everything is in motion. and rises up; a dreadful sound of ruins resounds, for the ' The first blows are struck. But for a moment the melee ceases; we stop, we reflect, weariness and dizziness- Disseminates give a semblance of calm: sinister calm during which hearts prepare to resume the game

'A mixture, for example, of questions from the East and Europe, to- which America and part of Asia are interfering in, driven by Russia and England, etc., etc.

Digitized by Google

THE JEWS.

|494

i

'until a victor emerges, until it- complicit in the crushing of half a continent....

A cry emanates from that moment and is repeated from mouth to mouth- The Jews, the Jews are entering the fray! Here, here is the mouth- to see and the Jews appear, who suddenly emerge from the within foreign nations, and are taking shape as bodies of na-

that the Jews, in the midst of these crowds whose blows are suspended, include many interested parties and each their friends. They count those whom secret societies have enlisted in all the darkness and in the secret meetings of both worlds—and we have known, for a century, what It was in the great wars the terrible action of these so-companies'; they include with them all that curses Christ. all those who dream with them of the upheaval of institutions and Christian societies; they finally had to count, willingly against his will, all who suffer from the evil of covetousness and of envy—everything that feeds on unhealthy dreams and utopian fantasies—demagogic magpies; everything that ferments in the world of Misconceptions and vicious feelings^^ Them? The Jews, ar-River? It's a dream! Where is it? — A dream? We're going See it. Look; for the telegraph has given its words of order, and the steam heated up. Some, Ik-bas, were favored by populations or by parties, arrive at the pace of avalanches, after having condensed in certain areas of the land, where, as in the vicinity of the Danu-Biennes, the hopes that flatter the future have accused them of hundreds of thousands of mules. From the north and east, from the west and from the south, in the battlefields of the war and the Politics, here they come, here they fall in growing numbers. and like the locust in the desert, Jews of all kinds—These new ones, the world's impromptu referees!... These new These unexpected arrivals, are they allies of the Russian, of the An-Glaz, or any other kind? We don't know... But turn them over eyes towards the sea, and, in these ships rocked by the va-

'Read the Protestant Eckert, Abbot Gyr, etc.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TWELFTH. 495

Hey, don't you see any new recruits yet? On These powerful ships? — Yes. — On these immense fleets—its? — Yes... The first ones lay stinging "the harbors of America—risk — they are charged with auxiliary and stipendiary staff. The ports of such and such European states have allowed the au-very. Equipped by the Jews, these floating cities advance loaded with their emigrants gathered on this or that coast, and the gathering of Garibaldians of the time, happy to be halfway there to read the pledges of Israel and to cut off a bout of their fever cosmopolitan by engaging in some desperate crusade against the Cross, with which some peoples still make the sign of the Cross!

The men's eyes turn towards the grand theater—diosis of events; and some tremble with a powerlessness—

It was then that, peacefully or not, the expeditions succeeded
The censives of Israel unite with the armies of the peoples who

'The history of the conquests of the Tartar Alexander, of Tamerlane, res-
It resembles an oriental tale. By reminding us of what the world has seen,
Let us consider what he can see today, that events do not mark-
They sing more, but let them leap and cover the earth in the manner of torrents. A two-week campaign has just transformed the Eu-central rope; and, suddenly, the Austrian empire was shattered like a glass, thanks to indecision and cowardice, thanks to betrayals protected by the occult societies of all of Europe, and despite the force, despite the heroic courage of its armies. Since that day sinister and wonderful, and it was yesterday, how new, how terrifying Proctès in the art of destroying and taming men!

We avoided relying on the ancient prophecies of the Church, which we will examine in another work, and whose texts announce in positive terms the grandiose events that seem to us a goal that is in the process of being fulfilled. All the more reason, then, to allow ours
On the side of the prophecies of all origins which, especially nowadays, revolve around lie to the world*. Our sole purpose, under the tyrannical and atrocious empire of the politics of accomplished facts, which dates from the ruin of Christian law; in other words, our sole aim, under the reign moving, given the unforeseen events that are devastating the peoples torn from their homes the fixed and solid ground of the Christian king, is to make appear, to healthy, clear eyes, a corner of the living tableau in which one encounters they try and experiment with the events that every observer can judge pressible.

Most of them are co-authored in three volumes from 1861, 1862, and 1863, which we brought back from Piedmont; J futuridtttin. – Comvnii aile predizioni. etc., – and JI yaticinatore, Torino, Martinengo, – A French collection, Poracle de
H. Dujardin had preceded these works; Paris, 1840, Camus.

Digitized by Google

496

THE JEWS.

s'uniHeDt to give the world its master, and that its Fleets descend upon the half-abandoned coastline of the Palestine, where, voyage by voyage, they release their swarms triumphant.

Forgetting that in times of tojirment and bygone vertigo-tionary the strangest designs turn out to be

He smiles, he shrugs; an easy and commonplace way to cut to the chase.
The difficult questions! And yet, to smile, one must have lost the memory of the events one has just witnessed;
We must not want to remember that just yesterday, one of the
the most powerful nations in the world; the leading power maritime land, trembled before a lesser phantom
A formidable blow indeed, that of Judaism; a phantom which, standing before England, each day threatened to to take shape, and deprived his state officials of their sleep and his sailors. Yes, it was yesterday; and how could one forget that, from a at the other end of its shores, the British Empire, atten-fearing avalanches of hostile ships, bra-
He turned his glasses towards the sea, where the wind that was blowing from
On the Reunion side, this time they were content to make threats!
Are these adventurous and improvised bands known under the name of Fenians, were not, at one moment, the terror of England? Is it possible that in the blink of an eye, everything However absurd they might have been declared the day before, England did not Didn't he start trembling before them? Yes, leaving aside the so-called prophecies*, which would give the Christian too easy an Having won our case, we simply observe the march.
Given the current state of events, is the progress of the documenttrines, influences and Jewish forces do not doesn't show, arriving upon us from the heights of the future, a a new kind of Fenians, whether from Romania or from
In one place or another on the globe, Judaism will have drawn from His blood? And, sooner or later, what to say of these words, of this cry: The Here they are, propelled by steam in their war chariots, or on ships armed with their millions, covered in their

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TWELFTH. 497

soldiers, and coasts from which we will undoubtedly have to count the fleets and the years of some coalition of powers.

A grand spectacle, and one which, in this form or in any form any other, any one of them, will one day be fulfilled, k the sur-immense grip of those whose nature of mind and strength Their studies prepare them so strongly that they see nothing. – The "Jews! Jews!" will be cried almost suddenly from all sides.
in one of the grandiose crises where the peoples were thrown, thrown
They are pressed against each other, mingling like crushed bodies.
And the Jews are advancing! Haven't they just put their heads down?
One of their own? Or at least, didn't they just cheer?
and without asking him what his blood was—a conqueror, a
A man gifted with a genius for political deceit, a sinister a mesmerizing figure around whom multitudes of fans gather

Let's listen, let's listen! All together they call him frantic—how the savior, the glory, the peace and the joy of the world.
Carried on the rolling current of this militant force, the strange
The triumphant leader appears, and these cries precede him: Glory and Happiness, the earth is freed! So here it is at last, the real thing!
Messiah; the one who curses and ignominiously drives out the Christ, that austere and somber enemy of man; he who He crushes the infamous, he who purges the world of it. He is the apostle and the prince of universal brotherhood; his holy mission is to unite men, to unify peoples, and to com—to enjoy the fruits of the earth. The enjoyment of all goods And of all pleasures, that is its supreme, unrecognized law.
outraged to this day by all the deceitful and all the hypochondria which, under the detestable sign of the cross, and under the crosier of the bishops, docile to the government of the tiara, have tyrannized the earth

For a moment, astonished, the world stops, hesitates; then, from
On all sides, the people were in arms, and half-broken.
they cry out: "To us, to us the Messiah of the Jews; let him live and..."
May he reign! May he have the peace and joy with which he fills us!
men, and that all the nations of the earth may not be 32

Digitized by Google

i98

THE JEWS.

that a nation under his rule. He is the king of kings. Um—proud and eager to be his lieutenants, our sovereigns of All dates crumble beneath the force of his arm. Let him
Let him be our nounarch, our father; no, let him be our God!
Peoples, kneel, and believe in his word: that Humanity, the one and only true God of the earth, worships itself in this representative of the most admirable and the most divine of all men!

But what is the point of this fantasy painting, in which, obviously—both any supernatural intervention and any political impossibility, Note the care we have taken to gather certain traits that the traditions of peoples attribute to the turning days Mentions of the Antichrist? What good are these elements combined, and to which our pen seems to give in anticipation the definitive form of history? For if it is indubitable for that something new, incredible, immense, prepares, stirs in the world, even announces itself in favor of the Jewish nation through warning signs, it is not hardly less certain, when it comes to revolutions whose long-suppressed fervor threatens to overturn the world, that the event awaited in one aspect, likes 'a se to present under another guise, and does not make his entrance onto the stage that by one of the doors whose leaves seemed to be ' refuse to open. What good is this painting, we will repeat—we therefore, if not to note that, in the revolutionary world—newly emerged revolution, the events indicated, Far from being in any way impossible, they are possible from all points, and are so in a thousand ways!

'We were careful not to take into account, in fact, elements historical, tangible realities, we have not concerned ourselves with pes than Jews, and we have omitted, in the construction of our ■Hypothesis: the existence and intervention of the ten tribes of Israel. What—that serious and learned men claim, and we are not unaware of it not at all, that the core of these ten tribes, relegated to one of the oases inland Africa, forming a distinct people, ready to come, one fine day, and through a new exodus, throw off an unexpected burden in the balance of events

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TWELFTH. 499

And it is in the face of the opportunities of this future that, while preserving for the Jews feelings of sincere brotherhood The fact that civilized man must respect every other man, we let us provoke anyone who has deigned to initiate themselves into things and to people of this world, to form the idea of the immense role and suffers whatever role the most tenacious and astute might play there, the most anti-Christian and most cosmopolitan of peoples, that who, present in every country, never ceases to remain a citizen of a foreign nation, that from which a telegraphic sign can, in an instant, to gather the waves at a single point in a hurry; in short, the one who holds the prize in his hands of everything, and, if modern history does not deceive us, the one who holds k roughly the price of any man, the sign of All power and all enjoyment, the universal talisman, the king of metals and de-Christianized empires: gold.

SUMMARY

VERY LACONUC. AND CONTAINING ONLY THE MAIN THOUGHT OF EACH

What were the beliefs of the Jew since Christ?

Orthodox, pure Orthodox, which alone is the one we let us call him the Jew; and what, for this reason, is the source of its customs? – These beliefs were a mixture of traditional-sublime, vile, absurd, prodigious works rabbis, who together form the Talmud, dominated, crushing them with their mass and their self-rite, the books of Moses. Therefore, the Jew cannot, without lying k the history and k his faith, give us for his religious law these same mosaic books in which he sees no today– Today, it is "neither a book of science nor a book of history!" (Ch. I*'.)

- The Talmudic Jew is the continuator of the Pharisaic sect secular; that is why the Piurisian, this sectarian completely of pride and hypocrisy which the Saviour so harshly condemns 32.

Digitized by Google

500

THE JEWS.

veur, is today even the admiration and joy of ju-Orthodox deacon. (Ch. II.)

"There are no more doctors in Israel," such is the language dogmatic of Israel itself. And, on his lips however, The title of doctor is attached to the title of Rabbi. Israel, adds– will we be, has lost its priesthood of divine institution; the Rabbine, therefore, has nothing of the priest in him, and is not indebted to his power, oh marvel forever humiliating to Judah than to the leaders of Christian societies. Why then the Jew Does he prefer to call him his pastor and his pontiff?^' For– What? If not to give his cult a simulacrum of life, and ensure him a place in consideration and in the budget of Christian states?

Better still! A completely artificial organization of ju– Daism, which took place in the early days of the nineteenth century under the auspices of the conqueror who was then making the world tremble earth, has placed the laity in Israel in charge of this sa– Cerdoce, and designated as regulators of this cult the ministers of a Christian government. (Ch. III.) O prodigious overthrow– abandonment of all religious notions!

Why then this unimaginable phenomenon, if not that the big question, for the progressive part of Judah, it's about getting out and freeing oneself 'at all costs' from the Talmud, this religious code which, for centuries, devoted the Jewish nation 'Has hatred and contempt for peoples? For, the very expression of the Synagogue, and drawing inspiration from the sinister mysteries of the Kabbalah, the Talmud stifled among its fanatical sectarians every conceivable seed of civilization. (Ch. IV.)

Therefore, no one will be able to decipher the Jew if he does not know and penetrates some of the secret masters of the Talmud. And, since it is essential for us to form an idea of the main teachings of this holy book, a part Israel is reviled these days, while the other puts all its art 'a glorifies him, let us know, so as not to forget, that he donjje to humankind as father and as mother not point the monkey and the ape, scandalized by the honor their confer certain leading figures of modern science, but two monsters whose life begins with the most horrific depravities militants for human nature. Let us also remember the the answer of this religious code when the Jew questions him about his relationship with the rest of humanity: You must not con- to be born into this world only to a neighbor, and that neighbor is the Jew. Every human being, if not of your blood, if He who does not share your faith is nothing but an unclean beast before you. He You deserve to curse him, you deserve to strip him, you deserve kill him. (Ch. V.)

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TWELFTH. SELF

And you, woman, descended from the blood of Jacob, what are you? N'ou- Never forget that, for the pure Talmudist, you are nothing but an es- slave; that he has the right to flog you; that he owes you neither loyalty- marital life and morality in its relations; that your person, In short, what is under his hand is butcher's meat that "The buyer is free to customize it as they see fit." And Such is your nothingness, that to teach you the holy law is the pro- to wither and become as guilty as teaching you obscenities. — What does it matter to this master if, despite the rich nature that distinguishes you, your moral fragility is proportionate to the value of your faith! (Ch. V.)

A thousand times superior to everything that breathes, how ortho- Would doxe deviate so far as to make himself a slave to a promise? of a word, of an oath? No, his law will save him the humi- binding this servitude; and, whatever he may have promised or

The Talmud holds that a simple desire to be freed... mality clears him and makes him aware of all the fran-Things of free thought. (Ch. V.)

Among the most precious freedoms of the Jew, one stands out.
usury, which, in the Quran, Muhammad criticizes him for (b) of theft'; usury, this means of universal domination which avenge the Jew, subject to his law the human brutes ageknotted in front of his gold, and allows him to laugh at this words by which the Regent's Attorney General dared

'Alcoran, ch. iv, Des femmes, p. 67, Irad. du Ryer; 1775.

Digitized by Google

502 THE JEWS.

to stigmatize the sons of Israel: they are "the monsters of society" civil. (Ch. V.)

But accused of this enjoyment of your Talmudic rights
Don't hesitate to disavow what the good guys call crimes.
split, O son of Israel, and repel with the most heat-reuse indignation the word that claims you mix 'a to your food, the blood of Christians fallen beneath your sword for obey the vows of your worship. (Ch. VI-VII.) The Bible accused your faithless fathers of this sacred cannibalism ^ but not Can you argue that sons are not fathers? De-Then, for half a century, moreover, oh wonder! the faith of your people it stirred, it changed, they set off, and "So say the men of progress. What is happening then?"

Let's open our eyes, let's listen! Immobile, unchanging in his belief for eighteen centuries, all of a sudden the noise of a world that is collapsing has startled him out of his sleep.
Thargie, the entire Jewish nation. The peoples run, rush towards fantastic and elusive horizons.
The Jew contemplates; his faith, which fixes and isolates him, distresses him.
It repels them and mingles with their course; it comes to life, and suddenly There he is, as a reward for his efforts, declared the equal of those who They declared him a helot. But at that moment, this people remained everywhere and in all centuries equal to itself, divides and splits. This one still wants and claims that he should be called orthodoxe; he forges a bastard orthodoxy; this other bears in cockade the word progress, and the rules of his faith have for the source the whim and variations of a Protestantism that a-had scorned his fathers. Progressive beyond measure.
imaginable advances, this third one names and salutes with transporting the philosophy of the eighteenth century; and, for him, morally, he is a brother whom the true Jew must embrace with love. (Ch. VIII.)

There is someone, however, before whom tolerance recedes. sudden death of the one whom the world had proclaimed the most intolerant of all men; and this someone is the Christian

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TWELFTH. 503

faithful to his faith. If the Jew believes himself to be free, woe to the Christian. Oh, woe to his pontiffs, woe to his Church, whatever recognition that the son of Jacob ever professed him duty. For never, he declares to us, was his gratitude that a trap b the use of his policy, and his hatred was im-Placeable. She was, she becomes, especially within her, one. A sentiment less religious than national. (Ch. IX.)

Your prudence, O Christian! must therefore henceforth be extreme, since, in declaring the Jew your equal, you have declared him your master; that is to say, since you have made him a citizen twice, when you are only one! citizen of your nation and here-citizen of the Jewish nation, which, everywhere indivisible, shows its Head in every country, always ardent, always audacious always ready to use all her influence in favor of everyone of his sons.

Every day, therefore, we see an increase within the Christian states, the sometimes overwhelming preponderance of Jewish, and each day the superiority that adds b its natural advantages, the advantages of which include its tenacious skill This finally earned him the conquest.

Among those whose sight rarely strikes and captivates To our eyes, the natural organization of these humans is distinguishable. my of the dispersion among the peoples who host them: similar organization, from one end of the earth to the other, b that of occult societies. Each of the societies se-crests that develop in the midst of modern states are not indeed, only a copy, only an image of Jewish society as it exists among the people.

Z' And the goal of the sons of Judah, the last word of the mysterious' the will that animates them and binds them together as a people is the final word of the implacable hatred that Christian civilization-yours inspires b the one whom, for eighteen centuries, the Kabbalah recognized as a prince.

It's the Jew! And our astonishment is to see that no one...
It is hardly surprising, within Christian nations, that there is the most

Digitized by Google

self

THE JEWS.

strange phenomena; let no one be struck by seeing that all secret societies, whose soul is that of liberprogressive realism, they only think what the Jew thinks;
they only say and keep silent about what the Jew keeps silent about and says, they do not want, exalt, and exalt only what will, exalt, and I abhor the Jew!*

Hence this splendidly obvious fact: what a trans- Liberal I Cendant is none other than a Christian who became a Judaizer because that he was Judaized, because of revolutionary education, or j anti-Christian, inl^usa in her soul the heart and mind of the
A modern Jew, who could not reign if Christianity did not
He succumbs. ("Ch. VIIMX, etc.) /

But, the incomparable power of the societies of the occultism, whose rudder is shifting under the hand of Israel, comes to join the irresistible power of gold. For gold possesses the man as soon as he de-Christianizes himself, and the Jew possesses gold. He possesses it to such an extent that it could undermine the Jew's credit.
That would shake the world! Besides, doesn't the Jew have doubled in his person this power of gold that of public speech, that is to say, the speech of the press and that of the high professorial chairs, or of Higher education for peoples? For the Jew has acquired; and it is through this that he attacks faith at its source Christian, that he shapes, that he molds opinion, that he dominates with an irresistible upward force the vastest extent of Europe. From this word worthy of all our meditations tions, and which we captured still vibrant on the lip of the former British Prime Minister, from of Jewish blood; "This world is led by all kinds of people" very characters that those whose eye cannot imagine penetrates no point behind the scenes;... and the powerful revolution-tion which is being prepared and brewed in Germany, where it will "Soon a second reform, even more significant than your first,"

'Alternative name for the Aniihrétienne Revolution.

the same as those of the Jewish ecumenical council of 1869.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER TWELFTH.

505

and consequently more destructive to Catholicism, "takes its development under the auspices of the Jew, n (Ch. X.)

What weapons, in truth, if one is not a government, to support the struggle with a shadow of luck against a people Present everywhere, everywhere at the forefront of the most irresistible means of domination, and remarkable in the midst of all the peoples, of whom he is often both the owner and the tenant, by the multiple superiority of his intelligence; remarkable for the prodigious and still unexplained nature of its superiorities bodily.

For the most singular of immunities exempts the Jew from diseases that spread death around his head; the most characteristic the teristic of privileges elevates its vitality above the vitality of any other man; finally wants no land not to be a stepmother to her, and not to devour her colonies as she devours that of any other race.

Thus it is that these men of the dispersion, that these interested apostles of the unification of peoples, be the only a people who can truthfully call themselves cosmopolitan, the only one who must, by its very nature, an invariable aptitude, to furnish with its population, to bend its wishes, to settle, to dominate its one's own person, the entire globe! Hence this strange fact qn'après avoir été, par l' grâce de ce privilege , le mission- the prime example of anti-Christian doctrines, which For us, this means antisocial doctrines, and the general- the reader of evil, the link between all occult societies, is k this same privilege that the Jew will owe to being the missionary par excellence and the generalizer of good! 11 will owe him the glory of seizing the empire, to which he claims, and of Strong reasons compel him to believe that he will one day be raised the most generous services.

Even if modern science demonstrates or admits its impotence- sance k will give us the reason for this physical superiority, she fails in a manner just as noteworthy k explain to us why, all of a sudden, since that sudden

THE JEWS.

(almudisc and sets off, its fertility redoubles and reverts to what it had become on the eve of its release from Egypt. As if Providence truly willed that what new Moses will soon be nothing more than his signal to wait to take the lead of a second and larger one diose exodus. (Cli. X.)

Statistics, the state of affairs and of minds, have said, in effect, that a Jewish flood can, from today, flow—to open a beach in Europe unexpectedly! And no one will dare We hardly need to ask ourselves: But where are these Jews, and who Are they? For we have just seen them, and we have reported.

These are the Jews of the Middle Ages; these are themselves, re-found full of life in the very middle of the ninth century, and all valiant with their Jewish sap! Yes, these Jews! from the Middle Ages, this reality of all eras converted by modern history into an absurd myth, these men from another—The times she denied it, we see them at work! We encounter them—'trons devouring a people', and our eyes see them show such as the history of all times and of all The nations had shown them to us: Reserve forces, Huge elite units flank or follow them, formed from populations of the same blood, and inspired a shared national spirit, but where countless groups distinguish themselves from their brothers by their beliefs and customs more similar to that of de-Christianized Christians than to those of the Judaizing Jew. (Hungary, Poland, Galicia, Germany) (magne, etc.)

And the goal that these formidable masses confess is to to found a new Palestine; while awaiting the exodus which will Prejiare towards ancient Palestine; while awaiting the return whose periodic wish is expressed with enthusiasm religious to all homes in Israel through these national words: "Next year in Jerusalem!" (Ch. XI.)

For Israel awaits its Messiah, and prepares for the day of that future world leader. Anyone who says otherwise is deceives; unless his thought *limits k some fraction of the thils of Jacob; he is mistaken or deceives Christendom. More favorable and grandiose circumstances, plot twists more unexpected than those that made a Alexander, a Tamerlane, a Napoleon, will they do this con- Seeking? Will they raise this Messiah on the platform, aided in his an upward trajectory thanks to the prodigious resources that the discoveries of science and that the secrets of your unified policy They are prodigal in their silence to adventurers of our time to capture and To subjugate the people? So he hopes, so he professes, This is what Israel wants, and many pages have demonstrated, in the rapid development of our chapters, the possibility of This incredible marvel! (Ch. XII.)

CHAPTER TWELFTH. 607

A wooden cross saved the world, they said during the Revolution panting amidst the ruins, one of the men from Elat and leading figures of liberalism (Mr. de Montlosier). After to have made the imminence and enormity of the danger that threatens Christian civilization (that is to say the order that gives social life its fullness), we must To repeat it in our turn: only one savior could to halt the slide of a world that is now almost Judaized: this world, ravaged and driven together by its ruin the anti-philosophical doctrines of tenth-century philosophy eighth century, and the implacable selfishness of the economy and of de-Christianized politics. Now, this savior would be Again and again the same Calvary cross, horror and abomination of the Jew.

But how can we expect a full return of governments? b the Cross, b the faith of our fathers which they rejected; this cross, this faith, which pushes far from us the principles of unreason and pride, division and enslavement, that Europe owes its press and its education to the tireless machinations of the Jew, his tutor, and soon his master! (See Mr. Disraeli's threatening confessions, etc.)

Oh, unexpected chance of salvation! An ecumenical council, composed, formed from the blood, knowledge, and piety of all Christian peoples offer the most simple and the most solemn occasion of this return. Already the peoples will they be too Judaized for the good sense to seize it, those whom we see lending themselves so easily to laissez-faire in what wastes and attacks the the sum of their true wealth, their genuine freedoms and their peace? Or, suddenly, their eyes are opened—Will they—will they be allowed to let themselves be and to to yield to the counsels of this Church which distinguishes the name of a Universal, because it was instituted by its divine founder dater to meet the needs of all times, in all the places and all the men? In short, will they know how to put a Benefit from this broad path of wisdom, true science, and salvation?

THE JEWS.

We hardly dare to hope for this happiness—and yet the Nations are born curable!... But, whatever the course current affairs, the Jew, whom our pages have shown dreaming the role of a sovereign people; dreaming of something even better, in a A certain sense of dreaming is more accurate, but for a lesser future future, that is to say, dreaming of the role of people—arbiter, of The people—pope, the Jew, sooner or later, and this seems to us undu—Bitable will regain the upper hand over us. We shall see. emerge aided by the countless and disparate auxiliaries that his words have disciplined—or rather, we shall see him do to tip the balance of events in his favor some prodigious adventurer whose fortune he will have followed, and whose cunning, by thwarting his plans, will open his eyes eyes. Thus, we are led to conclude a new perspective. that which, with its distant weaknesses, has presented itself to our minds, struck by the striking relationships that manifest themselves between the Church prophecies and the radical revolutions that are in a way of being accomplished. But, written from the simple point of view of human possibilities, our book naturally had to re—to push any insight into which the facts might have been mixed of the day of supernatural elements—and such are judged by one by mutual agreement, in both hostile camps, the prophecies that they constantly extend to us with one hand and the Synagogue and the Church.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER APPENDIX. 609

So we pushed back into our wallets a few chapters originally intended to give to our work its fourth part and its complement. It seemed to us It would be wiser this time to speak in purely secular language. and from where would this supernaturally foretold future be banished which each person admits and expects in a different form, The faithful Catholic and the believer in Judaism. We regret it. sincerely tones for the honor of the Jew, this elder brother of Christian, to whom our last pages gave, in the rein-incorporating in all the nobility of its titles, the role of devotee-and glory into which he will enter, for salvation and the astonishment of the world, the people forever chosen, the noblest and the most august of peoples, the people descended from blood of Abraham, to whom we owe the spotless Mother of the Savior the Son of God made man, the entire college of Apostles, and whom the blessings of Heaven will then fill, endless melee with cries of gratitude and benediction tions of men.

APPENDIX CHAPTER.

THE TWO CABALS OR THE SCIENCE OF TRADITIONS.

FIRST DIVISION. THE DIVINE CABAL.

(See p. 100 above.)

Kabbalah or oral traditions of the Synagogue predating the biblical books. – The two brandished symbols of this cabal of divine order. – The Cabal is entrusted to a special body of doctors. – Corruption of the Cabal, of-came a receptacle of magical superstitions and goetia.

The chapter on Kabbalah, of which we form an appendix, would have found its most natural place after the chapter of the Talmud, because He would have explained the mystical part to us; but it seemed to us It is wise not to erect any construct between the reader's mind and the reader's.

Digitized by Google

610 THE JEWS.

still reeling from the strangeness of this monstrous collection, and its immediate consequences, which are the pages where we saw to unfold Talmudic morality, the kind that the Jew put into action over the course of centuries.

What, then, is the importance of the two Cabals in this work?

in the Talmud, which is dominated and permeated by left-wing Kabbalah, will not know To decipher in a sultanizing manner neither the Jew nor the things of the Judaism. Let's learn this once and for all: if the Talmud is the soul of the Jew, the Talmud itself has as its soul the Kabbalah, of which the The principal code is the Zohar. Now, the admirers of this religious code— The wise tell us that "the Kabbalistic doctrine is the dogma of the high magic ' 1 »

That is why, although under the title of the Kabbalah we do not we can offer the public a chapter on current events, we we consider it essential to address this subject in a book where it is at wishing that the Jew, this mysterious being, would be transformed under our eyes in a transparent being that light penetrates into all the senses, and finally make us diaphanous. But there are two Cabals, and let us be careful not to confuse them at first glance on the oldest one, the one that repels any impure mixture, and that vulgar language no longer designates today under its sacred name.

The ancient Kabbalah. The Synagogue previously possessed to the books of Moses an oral tradition which served in some a sort of "soul within the body of the letter"; otherwise the text would have risked sometimes remaining obscure and incomplete, sometimes lending itself to whims of individual interpretation; and never, until our days, the Synagogue had not tolerated this excess of madness 'which delivers Before our very eyes, Protestantism is the laughingstock of the world.

However, while civil law in Israel rested under the guardianship of the entire nation, oral instruction was entrusted to a body special group of doctors under the supreme authority of Moses and of his successors. "The scribes and the Pharisees," said Christ, "are seated in the chair of Moses; therefore, observe and do "Do not do what they tell you, but what they do."

' Eliphas Lévi, History of Magic, p. 23; Paris, 1860.

• Drach, Harm., t. I, p. ix, etc.; Paris, 1844.

'Matt., eyelash. xxiii, v. 2, 3.

Digitized by Google

APPENDIX CHAPTER.

sn

And this tradition of the ancient Synagogue was divided into two branches: one patent, and this was the Talmudic tradition, was distinct from those who came after Christ, and fixed the meaning of the written law. It dealt with Mosaic precepts; it was known through it what was permitted, obligatory, and forbidden; it constituted in addition to the material and practical side of the tradition.

The second branch was its mysterious and sublime part. It formed the Kabbalistic tradition, or the Kabbalah, that is to say, according to the etymological meaning of this word, the teaching received by the word. This cabal dealt with the nature of God, his attributes, goals, spirits, and the invisible world. She relied on the symbolic and mystical meaning of the Old Testament, "which was also traditional"; it was, in a word, speculative theology. The Synagogue's teachings. Essential information concerning the mysteries of the Holy Trinity and of the Incarnation was not omitted; and the rabbis converted simply by reading the Kabbalah.

This vast science is fraught with difficulties, thanks to the darkness of the books in which she shuts herself away, and most of the rabbins remain foreign there, because the cabalists don't want to initiate only an elite of followers, thoughtful people of mature age, and which meet certain conditions listed in the Talmud. Such, says the learned Drach, is the ancient Kabbalah and genuine. We will carefully distinguish it from modern Kabbalah, false, condemnable and condemned by the Holy See; for this. The latter is the work of the rabbis, who also falsified the Talmudic edition. The doctors of the Synagogue trace the Ancient Kabbalah up to Moses, however, admitting that the first patriarchs of the world had known of it through revelation the main truths'.

That if, among the high doctors of the Church, some bear witness to the Cabal the greatest respect, while others express only

'Drach, 'Harm., t. I, p. x-xi; 1844. Today the rule of the rabbis "go so far as to condemn to death those who admit the doctrine of the Holy Trinity." Ibid., second letter, p. 27; 1827.

* One thing, Drach adds, has always struck us, which is that in the Zohar, this principal code of Kabbalah, contains related traditions to the physical sciences, and that these traditions are in perfect agreement with the discoveries of the most profound geniuses of modern times. The Church Fathers, Pliny the Elder, and numerous scholars, attest by their writings on the antiquity of the Kabbalah. Ibid., vol. I", Harm., p. xv.

Digitized by Google

towards him, what fear, what reprobation and contempt, the cause of This singularity will therefore no longer be an enigma; and, we repeat—
The point is that there are two cabals, the first true and without misunderstanding... language, that which the ancient Synagogue taught and whose meaning is frankly Christian; the second, on the contrary, is false, full of ridiculous superstitions, and which had become in the hands of the Synaunfaithful fool, a receptacle of the damnable vanities of magic,
of theurgy and goetia"

The doctors of the ancient Synagogue teach from a coma voice that the hidden meaning of Scripture was revealed on the Siiiaï to Moses, and that this prophet transmitted this knowledge through initiation.
This teaching was given to Joshua and his other close disciples.
mysticism then descended orally from generation to generation—tion without it being permitted to put it in writing. And as the
The satanic line continues to appear in parallel below the
In line with divine order, we know that the idolatrous nations, that is—that is to say, those whose worship is demonic, followed the same path and only entrusted to proven men the traditions of which formed the doctrinal part of their mysteries, the legitimate source of orgies for these believers.

However, the captivity of Bahylon threw into the bosom of Israel an immense disruption, and the orthodox Kabbalistic tradition then came to be forgotten. Ezra, upon the return of the faithful to Jerusalem—Salem, consequently received God's order to record it by written. But the seventy volumes of which it is composed do not were not made public, and the prophet was ordered not to no point entrusting it to any hands other than those of the wise*. Later, When the time came, the guilt of the doctors of the
The Synagogue consisted not in indiscreet revelations custodians, but, far from it, in the jealous care they took, and the Savior reproached them for hiding from the people the key to science, the traditional display of holy books, to clarity from which Israel would have recognized in his sacred person the Messiah.

In this regard, let us observe the characteristic that essentially distinguishes * Drach, Harm., vol. II, p. xviie.

'Ibid., vol. II, p. XXI.

'Saint Luke, c. xi, v. 52; — ibid., Drach, vol. II, p. xxi-xxiii. The cabal Parallelism is therefore the key to magical science!

of the new law, that which preceded it: that is that this first had a secret teaching to which the common people remained foreign, * but which was to be openly preached during the "The coming of the Messiah." The Kabbalists of the ancient Synagogue, in repeating the traditions relating to this or that point of Christian dogmatism, "they deliberately enveloped him in obscure language, using before expressions unknown to the vulgar and even to the common Jew." "The doctor; only the initiates held the key to these enigmas." Moses, This living symbol veiled its face to protect its very weak eyesight. Jews, while it pleased Christ to show himself only to face uncovered. For it is in the nature of the new law that the last of the faithful should be initiated from childhood into the most sublime truths of religion; and the child who receives from a Christian mouth the teaching of his catechism could not envy the 'the deepest philosopher's revelation of the smallest mystery'.

Such is the cabal, of which, in the fifteenth century, Pico and the scholar Jewish Paul Ricci "were the first to reveal the existence to the Christian world-Well. It should therefore come as no surprise that the study of this science has brought a large number of Jews to embrace Christianity. Indeed, unless one were to do violence to the text of the previous pieces-heavens that remain to us from the ancient Kabbalah, it must be agreed that Christian dogma is professed there as clearly as in the Church Fathers; and the rabbis were so well aware of this that they took steps to keep Jews away from reading the Cabal*.

Towards the end times of Jerusalem, and when Judea suffered the dreadful ravages of idolatry, the cult was miserably invaded by Pharisaism, whose luxuriant growth threatened the Synagogue almost entirely. The attention of the doctors was then focused on Talmudic theology, which existed in a state of oral teaching and regulated the practical and material aspects of the press-religious descriptions, while mystical and speculative theology fell into disrepute, for the reason that its tendency Christian faith was undeniably evident. This movement intensified killed especially during the crisis sparked by the opposition of the Pharisees to the doctrine preached by the Savior and the apostles. But

t

'Dncb, Harmony, t. II, p. xiv.

3 Ibid., vol. II, p. XXXII, etc., to read there a list of certain scholars illustrious figures of Judaism converted to Christianity through this study.

THE JEWS.

5U

already, turning to a change of flavor, this Talmudic tradition-dique had become what the Talmud calls vinegar, son of the wine; and, denatured in its essential part, it received the me-impure swaddling clothes of the rabbis' fantastical reveries, of their vain subtleties, from their absurd, grotesque, unimaginable tales! A little later, after the dispersion of the Jews, the Rabbis re-developed a taste for the speculations of metaphysics; and, Returning to their mystical cabal, they introduced an amalgamation of Greek and Eastern philosophy whose systems screamed in clashing with the Mosaic revelation. Such is the modern cabal. The Rabbis admitted there, almost without understanding them, certain things... mules whose ambiguity lends itself to Greek materialism and to pan-Indian theism*, or, better yet, the sacrilegious vanities of the magic of the Sabaeen peoples, given over to the idolatrous doctrines of descendants of Ham. It was, moreover, in the midst of these peoples that before Abraham, and during the Babylonian captivity, had lived their fathers, accustomed to constantly mixing the worship of God saint to the cults of demon gods'.

Therefore, if we consult only its doctors, the second cabal is of Jewish origin and relatively modern, it dates back to the the most ancient times through magical traditions and superstitions tions to which it relates, and that the Jews, in approving them praying to combine them with their traditions, have made some changes to their seal.

'Dracli, Ilarm., l. II, until xxvii.

' DH geiiuum dermonia. l's. xcv, 5. - Jdsiik, wiv, v. 2-14, etc., etc.

SECOND DIVISION.VL\ C.VBALE H.àGIQUE OR LEFT,

that is to say, the Ph.vrisa'ique cabal.

It is the dogma of magic, the key to secret societies or the occult. ism. - Sovereign power that it gives to the men who possess it. denl. - The Jews, our masters in magic, were the custodians of it. more faithful. - Its origins. - It is "born of the need for independence- "pendance," that is to say, of revolt. - It gives knowledge of spirits of this world, and governs every being by the virtue of letters, of Words and numbers. - The world is formed on the mathematical plane of the alphabet. - The Kabbalah is the key to the invisible world, the secret of the Ancient spiritualism. - The Kabbalist must unite body and soul with the angels.

APPENDIX CHAPTER.

515

mastery. — This sidereal magic is that of the mathematicians of Rome, that is to say, the Chaldeans, or astrologers, who, after having been the oracles of the world, were almost at all your times oracles in you Christian world.

The cursed or Pharisaic cabal, the one that has been preserved for us The doctors of the Talmud gave birth to the worship of the stars, these splendid ships that powerful geniuses appointed to govern things of this world direct and steer in the oceans without shores of space*. The Jewish Kabbalah is therefore the code or the key of Sabaism, this primitive idolatry which presented itself as gods, 'the fallen geniuses of the stellar army'.

Long before it received its name, it was, like the en- a child in the maternal womb, in the process of formation and endowed with being; Then she had a body, without being named, and received names which changed. That is why, seeking only substance and unity things, we often give it the name in our chapters of cabal in anticipation, before the date on which she wore it.

The Jews, whose existence preceded it, welcomed it as soon as they they devote themselves to foreign gods, to the worship of celestial gods, that is to say, well before the time when their princes afQ- song in favor of the deities of Chaldea, Egypt and the neighboring countries, the scandal of a public cult*.

The cabal then penetrates and infects patriarchal traditions, reduced to seeking a last refuge at the foot of the pulpit of Moses, whose virtue repels error. It seeps into their doctrinal books; it establishes itself in their medicine, it insinuates itself in their social science, but undergoing modifications successive, and eventually became ingrained in their customs. Thus the Does he become a Jew, under whose gaze Christ is born, despite this home? of light, and according to the remark of the fathers of magic and of Church Fathers, the prince of heresy, that magical spiritualism imbued with his venom*, the missionary of evil, the grand master of anti-Christian occultism. For "the cabal," the oracle of the 'Belief of the greatest philosophies of the idolatrous world, and of the theo- Catholic logic, regarding the stars.

* Saba, Tzaba, from which Sabaism derives, means the heavenly army, and it is in this sense especially since the Lord is the God of armies. Kabbalistic dogmas These are the principles of the science of the mage, or of magic.

* IV finis, chap. xxiii, etc.

* Epiphan., Adv. heres., p. 55, ed., in-fol., 1622; – irf., Iræn., Adv. Valent., p. 43, 62, 137, ed. 1660, etc.

33.

Digitized by Google

THE JEWS.

G wire

Secret societies are the mother of the occult sciences; and the Gnostics, – these heretics who pushed their errors to the point of abomination of intelligence and the perversion of morals – were born of Cabalists*.

If, therefore, the first and most ancient religious tradition of world, known by its Hebrew name Kabbalah, is of order 'divine', the second, the one that must follow it point by point on a 'parallel line, is demonic'. It is, in fact, by the title of dogma of high magic which the pseudonym Eliphas salutes, in fl-bending the knee before her, this second cabal, which, under the Templars' aegis, "threatened the entire world with an immense revolution," and which, broken before the tiara by the scepter that she was about to seize, took refuge in doctrines and rites "if "Little known still of ancient and modern masonry." Also We are told that "the cabal, cultivated by the Jews with an unparalleled strength, almost single-handedly eclipsing all others secret societies'. Perhaps it would have been more accurate to say that she contained almost all of them within her fertile womb.

Even today, despite the principles of division and variation the principles that characterize error, secret doctrines, and unitary doctrines of cabalistic magic, which penetrates and dominates the high con- The sons of occult societies are preparing a violent unification of peoples; and this immense revolution is about to bring about one of the most famous prophecies of the sacred Scriptures.

In any case, the Kabbalah, which predates the Jewish people, is the soul and the Jewish form of the kind of magic that this people appropriated: learned form, because such was the religion of Jews, of whom she created a philosophical counterfeit; while

Based on the empirical evidence of witchcraft, it was generally refused, despite his pride and pretensions, to attribute to him a value

'Ragon, the most accredited author among Freemasons; Freemasonry occult, p. 78; Paris, 1853-

* responding to our Sayrt, or to acceptio, teaching received verbally ment. Urach, Harm., t. I, p. xi; 1844.

'Dracli, ibid., vol. U, p. xviii. – The rationalist Hæfer, History of the chemistry, vol. 1", p. 247; – Matter, Hist. of Gnosticism, vol. 111, p. 184; –Eliphas Lévi, Hist. of magic, p. 23; Paris, 1840.

< Eliphas, Ibid., p. 23, 222, 256, 273, 399, 407.

'Memoirs on the Kabbalah, by de la Nause, in the Memoirs of the Academy' registrations.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER APPENDIX. 517

of good quality. Let us, however, listen carefully to the words as the magician Eliphas Levi confidently says and repeats:

If there is "an indisputable truth," it is because there is "a "high science, an absolute science," giving "to men who take it as their rule a sovereign power that makes them masters of all inferior things." Now, "this science "That's magic, and the cabal's dogma." And we don't care. this cabalist, this perfidious enemy of the Church,^# if this assertion seems paradoxical to those who have not yet doubted the in-Voltaire's fallibility, that petty ignoramus, who thought he knew so many things because he always found a way to laugh at 'a place to learn'.

Celestial origins; essence, spiritism, Kabbalistic. – The language that we are about to discuss is worthy of some attention, in this sense that it happens to be both the expression of the belief of the ph-Jews, rabbis, Talmudic or Orthodox Jews who are their disciples, and transcendent magicians who recognize- They took as their teachers the Jews of previous centuries. For, we said one of their princes, "it is certain that the Jews, custodians The most faithful keepers of the secrets of the cabal have almost always been In magic, the great masters of the Middle Ages*!

However, the Pharisaic Kabbalah, this science of such mysticism- a terrifying thing that the eye of ordinary doctors could not detect and which leads men to the knowledge of the most profound truths deep*. It is all the more necessary, according to the Babbins, that, without it, Holy Scripture could not be distinguished from secular books in which miraculous elements are found them, and precepts of a morality as pure as the law. She only help to penetrate the truths that are hidden beneath the bark of the literal meaning. God, if we were to believe them, was the first master of this science in paradise; for he instructed the

'Eliplias Lévi, Bist. de la magie, p. 3 and 23; Paris, 1860.

* Dogma and Ritual, ibid., vol. II, p. 220, 2nd ed.; Paris, 1861. By means of The author should have added the Renaissance period, or the Protestant era. ism, which was at the same time, and quite naturally, an era of great magic ancients, and great heretics, or great revolts.

* Rouland, Hist. des Juifs, t. VI, supplement to Josiphe; Paris, 1710; a very scholarly work, printed in Holland, from which certain passages offensive to the E[^]ise. We have already quoted it, and we extract from it^ on the cabal, what it contains that is essential to our subject.

Digitized by Google

518

THE JEWS.

Angels immediately after the fall of the first man. And, as it was important to reveal all the mysteries to man. God commissioned the angel Raziel to teach him the truths. through the Kabbalah. He gave Angels as masters to patriarchs; after Adam, Sophiel was the patriarch of Shem; Raphael Isaac taught, as did Metaphron Moses, and Michael King David. Thus, According to these doctors, the cabal is as old as the world and originally descended from the sky. We had the opportunity to study it in the desert; but, at the time, no one dared to write about it. Simeon Jochaides was the first who did not hesitate to entrust He wrote down a few fragments. He was the one who composed the famous The book of the Zohar, which has since that time been expanded by numerous additions, and it is believed that this Simeon lived for a few years before the ruin of Jerusalem'.

The first part of this cabal focuses on knowledge divine perfections and celestial Spirits or intelligences; she It is called the Chariot, or Mercata, because Ezekiel, it is said, explained the main mysteries in the miraculous chariot which appears at the beginning of his revelations. The second, that is to say the sublunar. This name is given to it because it is the first word of Genesis. {Ibid., 315–327.}

'Jbid., p. 316–317. – The contemporary mage or cabalist, Kliptias Lévi, – a well-known pseudonym, – therefore of almost the same antiquity, the same genealogy to the cabalistic tradition. "Let us now go back to the sources of true science, and let us return to the holy Kabbalah, or tradition of children of Seth, brought from Chaldea by Abraham, taught to the Egyptian priesthood by Joseph, collected and purified by Moses, hidden under symbols in the Bible, revealed by Saint John, and still contained within, under figures hieratic motifs analogous to those of all antiquity, in the Apocalypse of this apostle." Eliphas, History of Magic, p. 105; 1860. – Saint John is that of the disciples of Christ, which the followers of occultism, Rosicrucianism, Templars, high-ranking Freemasons chose each other for apostleship, but in the inter-lending in their own way!

X M. Frank... defines Kabbalistic science as "a mysterious science" distinct from the Mishnah, the Talmud, and the Holy Scriptures; mystical birth by the need for independence and philosophy (i.e., science of revolt and revolutionary progress), and which spread among the Jews before the end of the first century AD. » Th. Mangey, preface to the Works of Plato; Sonnetiy, Annals of Philosophy, p. 39i, no. 106; 1868.

However, this science existed before it spread; but few of us The date of its cabal name is irrelevant. What it teaches us about virtue numbers connect it on one side to the doctrine of Pythagoras, which this philosopher-Sophie, magician, or theurgist, founder of the Italic school, had drawn from The East, the primary source of religious truths and religious revolts, or superstitions.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER APPENDIX. 819

Kabbalistic theologians encounter and recognize at each not mysteries; one cannot name a letter that does not contain her own, each having some relation to the Sephiroth, that is to say to the splendors of God, to the works of his hands. The letter A, for example, represents doctrine, and indicates light inaccessible to the Divinity;... but it is found to be composed of a vau and two iod, which tells us that it also contains great mysteries, and how many more still rest upon the beth! (3). One affirms that this letter is from a woman, and that its two parallel lines are two arms, between which it She receives and embraces her husband, Thipheret. The others support that this second letter also means house, and should be remembered to lead to wisdom, which is the second splendor, the second Sephiroth

We will also observe that the first ten letters of The Hebrew alphabet corresponds to the ten sephirot, and that the following have other uses... It is only right that the creatures have their own particular letter; otherwise they would be dishonored. Thus the capital P is the symbol of the intellectual, while final p indicates animal spirits; the tzadd represents the matter of the two, and the four elements; the boph, minerals and mixtures, etc.; the R, fruits, trees and everything that which vegetates; the S is the symbol of reptiles, and of all that exit of a sensitive life. Finally, the T, the symbol of man, is the last of the alphabet, man being of all the works of God, the most perfect and complete.

These are the Pharisaic Kabbalists, the fathers of our magicians, who speak to us in this way. Let us be careful not to forget it, and Let them mix error and magic with a dose of truth without in which falsehood cannot live; let them wear themselves out, in the but to mask the copper and its poisonous oxide, from some means which the ancient Synagogue used to veil from eyes unworthy of the pure gold of transcendent and celestial truths...

The world, these doctors continue, was formed on a plan the mystique of the Hebrew alphabet, and the harmony of creatures is similar to that of the letters which God used to compose the book of life. It is a certain assemblage of letters that makes the beauty and excellence of the universe; and, since the world has been as if shaped according to the dictates of the alphabet, there exists neces-

Digitized by Google

520

THE JEWS.

certain things attached to each letter, and which ohacune happens to be the symbol and the emblem. That is what They easily discover the initiates of the cabal, but they need to distinguish between single and double letters. U has seven double letters. whose significance we shall see. (Ibid., pages 335 to 339.)

Let us say it then, repeating their doctrine; God uses himself before-cleverly using letters and combinations of his name to act on the Angels; these Angels influence the twelve signs of the zodiac-that; these exert their influence on the earth, and preside over the various generations succeeding one another there. Thus, letters have originated-clearly an admirable power, not only because they things of the universe, that is to say, earthly and celestial things that The ignorant would not be able to see, but because they are so many channels through which God's faction operates on intelligences*.

If such is the virtue of letters, what will not be that of their compounds? So the cabalistic magicians make themselves strong to obtain, by the arrangement of certain words in a certain order, miraculous effects; and do these words give birth to specific effects, according to the degree of holiness. of the idiom that produces them. That is why the Hebrew language it infinitely surpasses all others. Miracles are proportionate— moreover, it relates to the value of the words that express the name of God or his perfections and emanations. The custom is therefore to For this purpose, it is preferable to use the Sephiroth, or the names of God. There are ten Sephiroth, which are: the crown, wisdom, understanding, strength or severity, mercy or magnificence, beauty, the victory or eternity, glory, foundation, and kingdom. (Ibid., p. 363.)

The Sephiroth are the names, the attributes of God, or God himself. even in its attributes, and the Angels who represent these attributes goals. — Of the ten Sephiroth, seven are the seven Angels of the pre—the presence of God, and three the splendors of the three persons of the Holy Trinity. These are the Sephiroth of the divine Kabbalah. When—that the words, and particularly the seventy-two names of God, are arranged in a certain way, they acquire a

'Ibid., pp. 340–41. The letters, moreover, serve as elisers, and the names— The words they describe have extreme power. Finally, the accents do not are not useless to letters, and, like all the particles of the law, they are armed with energy and power. Ibid., pp. 244–340.

Digitized by Google

APPENDIX CHAPTER.

521 irresistible force (Ibid., p. 395.) But if it happens that words do not contain not the meaning in which their power resides In order to act, it is important to change them, and there are rules. prescribed to bring about this change. (Ibid., 345.)

Thus speak the Kabbalists, and, for the moment, we Let's just say that, to comment on what it contains and this that which the Pharisaic cabal does not contain, it would be a task arduous. But what is not surprising is that her breast presented as a counterfeit of the true cabal, we express by the very fact that, while distorting it, it must recall its august traits. If, for example, divine mysticism contains within 'certain numbers an incomprehensible virtue', the magical cabal immediately accumulates countless absurdities about this dogma, about this adulterated belief which Pythagore seized upon during his travels, and whose unfathomable antiquity he recalls in his lessons'.

But this cabal, it will be objected, has all the appearances of magical! Well, what does it matter to us? Are we unaware that the most specious reasons could not fail the cabalists of Egypt to see the innocence of magic. And what scruple should stop man before the cabal? It is sacred; the saints, they tell us, in they used; it was their power: it was through it that Moses, arising above the magicians of Egypt, he made himself formidable through her miracles; it was through her that Elijah saw the fire descend from the Heavens, may Daniel strike the mouths of the lions, and through it all 'In the rabbinic book, Toldot Jeschu, or life of Jesus, terminating the apocryphal Gospels translated and annotated by Gustave Drunet, The Jewish writer gives us examples of the miraculous cunning of Name of God, p. 185-6-8; Paris, 1863.

'Works of Abbot Martet on this saying of the Apostle Saint John: 'Qui habet in collectione computet numerum bestiarum. Apocal. xiii, v. 18.

'Example of this virtue of numbers: the manifestation of this mystery we discover the efficacy and the ingenuity of the number seven, by virtue of the which all things were made; for, according to these Magi of the Synagogue, Seven Sephiroth pour their influences upon your seven Intelligences of the seven planets, and these have immense power which consists of seven things about the economy of the earth, and about events, etc., etc. There are seven gates of Pame, namely; two eyes, two ears, one mouth and two openings in the nose; there were seven days employed in the creation of the universe; there are seven Sabbaths from Easter until Pentecost, and seven times seven Sabbaths for the Jubilee year. Finally, the seventh millennium will be the 'great sabbath and the time of rest for all creatures' It was necessary therefore that there are seven double letters to which these seven could be referred things. Ibid., Hist. des Juifs, suppl., p. 340, etc., etc.

Digitized by Google

THE JEWS.

SSX

the prophets discovered the events hidden in a distant past

The Talmudists have revived this cabal, which already towards the time of Jesus Christ had spread throughout Judea, and whose merit is all the more incomparable, in the eyes of its followers. that it leads the initiated to perfection; for it elevates the soul by degrees to the contemplation of what is most perfect in the nature. (Pp. 390 and 411.) And, if our eyes rest upon this world inferior, she shows it to us populated by a multitude of spirits of four different species that reside, "each according to its nature" ture, in the four elements. These spirits are of both sexes; They were created as friends and servants of man, and practical cabal teaches the means of conversing with them*. It is therefore the key to our relationship with the invisible world. possible, or the secret of ancient spiritualism; and this admirable science gives, among the five orders of Kabbalists, the first rank to those who are called contemplatives, and who would wear nowadays the name of spiritualists.

Eager in their pursuit of heavenly truths, these wise men... They follow the path their soul, senses, and body take, freed of all attachment to sensitive objects. Raised and kept in close contact-ports with the Angels, these spiritual channels through which the Divinity flows and pours its marvelous gifts into us, they know that, if Our mouths do not approach it, the water spills out, and without quenching our thirst, it rushes headlong and is lost in the abyss. We must therefore, body and soul (see note It, p. 540), unite to the Angels, even in the depths of our being. Thus it will be done. the transcendental cabalist, thus does the philosopher of the high magic. But let's consider this only as the first of the required provisions. through the Kabbalah; for we must add to it prayer, a prayer seraphic, in the conflagrations of which, indissolubly United with God, we live under the kiss of Divinity*. And may the The duty of the Kabbalist is to turn to the angelic intelligences liques, nothing will seem more natural to the adept, since, depositi- Hidden from God's gifts, these spirits exert invisible influences

' Read Hist. of Satan, p. 127; I8G1, scholarly book, where misfortune several errors slipped in (by Father I.eranu.)

• Ibid., 391. The polysoplies of the Alexandrian school, the tbeurges, are of this school, etc., etc., where devotion has gone astray, where piety is tender and good saying, from gap to gap, unites with science and internal practices.

Digitized by Google

APPENDIX CHAPTER.

on the stars; since, therefore, it is important for us to know them as.sczà fond to change their names if necessary; for names are the instrument of our action on these rulers of this or that star, of which the duty is to pay in such places, at such times, in such circumstances stance, the influences that enter into our will to lead.

Thus the contemplative spiritualist will turn his meditations pro-based on the number of letters that make up the name of Jehovah, on their figures, their combinations and the names of the Angels that Their duties attach them to it. But, humble servant of man, the body must unite its action with that of the soul; the Kabbalist will have so sometimes turning it one way, sometimes the other; he will have to re-to change one's language in a certain way, and to compose, to combine one's gestures with the pronunciation of certain letters, certain words and certain names, in short, to harmonize the movements of the body with those of the soul * .

Far from fostering the fear of indulging in futile labors, the ca-Ballista feels happy with the pleasures he painfully wrests from the within science, and the happiness that stems for him from a His union with God was so intimate that he sometimes... believing himself transformed into a deity. That is why the doctors who have risen to the very heights of the cabal speculative, by invoking the name of God and the names of the Angels, they are merely playing at the miracle; we call upon the Miracle of the wonder-generating cake of Rabbi Ishmael P....

...And let us not forget to mention a cabal order astrological, the secrets of which we will not reveal here, but which teaches us that the Kabbalists grant great in-influences on the stars, and particularly on the moon, because it It is the barn and the receptacle for other planets. It communicates with them, but even more so with the sun. It fills her of a life-giving virtue that she lets fall back from her bosom onto the other creatures. It is up to her to regulate all the inferior revolutions. laughter, for she is the only woman in the names of God; and this 'Ibid., p. 892. Cos clioses fall within the sacramental signs of the magic, when it takes the form of judicial astrology. Read the ancients Theurgists and Cornelius Agrippa, etc., etc., whom we have so often cited in our books on magic.

'These magic cakes are reminiscent of the enchanted cheeses of which it is question in the City of God "Saint Augustine. Read chapter XVIII, p. 18; - see ibid., in our book Des hauts phénomènes de la mapie, cliap. v, 2* division, transformations, zoomorphism, etc., etc.

THE JEWS.

Woman holds the middle ground between God and the creature, between the two Archetypes and angels, between us and the celestial realm. Its role is that of mediator between the Angels and man; she conceives and becomes pregnant by uniting with the sun with her husband, to commune then screw what she designed for the men who were showered with the by the grace of God. She also receives from Venus the necessary virtues to the generation, and from Mars the strength and the boiling mood...

Those initiated into the cabal claim to grasp a fatal chain of events. between secondary causes and superior spirits or intelligences laughter. Each creature, they imagine, shares in the qualities of a preeminent being; they therefore strive to know from what pla- The net depends on the one they have in mind. They then look for which channels the planet and intelligence pour their influences into this object, and they struggle to unravel the secret rings of the chain that links heaven to earth. Have they solved this problem? They masters say to bring these genies down from on high, either by showering them with honors proportionate to their rank, either through oblation of herbs and scents to suit their tastes.' And you hear them to assert that this assistance of genius communicates to the ter- object remains a virtue quite foreign to its nature.

One of their beliefs is that souls pre-exist the bodies'; that, passing through the Sephiroth, they cross certain spheres; and that their fate depends on the interplay of these circumstances. this world. God, they say, when man is born, sends him a guardian, an Angel who guides him according to the inclinations he has received of the planet under which he was born; the Kabbalist will therefore have to strive to discover what this genius is. But if man is under- trait to the direction of this Angel, his fall into crime and into the Misfortune is inevitable. Such was the fate of Saul, such was the fate of Belshazzar, of Nebuchadnezzar... And, from then on, the evidence of this principle shines forth, that To ensure a child's happiness, it is essential, above all, to soothe them. and to flatter the spirit of the planet under which he was born. {Ibid, (pages 294-96.)

Enough seems to have been said to show that it was thanks to these

'Read Saint Augustine, highlighting the pliiloso|ilie Poi pliyre, City of God, Book X, scene XI. - Shakespeare seized upon these notions, scene iv of the Sor- cières de. Macbeth: "Scaleof draiion, tootli of wolf, "etc., and Virgil exhausts the description of these inaginous objects; «Has herbas,, Uis ego sse|>e, «etc., Betog. VIII. ,

'A well-known and condemned error of Origen.

CHAPTER APPENDIX. 625

detestable and invincible beliefs, thanks to their countless variants, which the Jewish Kabbalists, heirs of the Kabbalah tideral, or sabetto, whose date in Babylon is that of the challenge of Chant', They spread magical doctrines from one end of the earth to the other. And it is with the help of this celestial magic that the Chaldeans, and the men of judicial astrology, their successors, seized of pagan Rome and the spirit of its terrible emperors, infest they silenced the palaces of kings, and filled the castles of the feudal nobility and the dwellings of wealthy bourgeois up to times that border on our own. The cabal was therefore, in principle, speaking of the main root of magic, this art whose masters had already become so expert, said U, at the time of Moses, that this liberator needed the power of God to to rise above their enchantments'.

TBOISIEUE nmSION. THE HAGIC CABAL.

All dogmatic religions, a Rabbalist scholar tells us, originate from of the cabal. – “All Masonic associations owe their secrets and their symbols. – These traditions are jealously guarded. by the priesthood, and, according to him, the Clavicles of Solomon are the ritual, Let's say the first (one Pope. – The principal receptacles of the cabal The Jewish texts are the Zohar and the Talmud. – She finds herself polishing all the peoples, in all that is rajfstere, and this mystical doctrine descends Chaldeans descended from Cbam. – Abraham is said to be a Kabbalistic magician. because he was Chaldean. – Magic and goetia inseparable from the Kabbalah. – The Jews, who are the most faithful keepers of the secrets of the Kabbalah, They are, in magic, the great masters of the Middle Ages. – Representing the spirit dq, darkness, your ex pofre diabolo, they were the missionaries and the great masters of occultism. – Kabbalistic traditions slip their venom in the various branches of human knowledge in because of the role played by the Jews. – Example: medicine practiced created by the Jews]; it is tainted with magic. – They mix medicine with Astrology. – The councils and the Church Fathers against these practices. – To complete the perversion of social science, the Caliphs, whose princes are Jews, they introduce Kabbalistic doctrine among the Templars, whom the Freemasons claim as their ancestors. – Their goal – Revealed lations of their successors.

“All truly dogmatic religions,” he tells us in
In the year 1861, Professor of Magic Eliphas Levi, were released

'Initiated, according to scholars, by the children of Cain; see at notes.

'Ibid., p. 476. – Read the Egyptian papyri that we have cited in our book On the High Phenomena of Magic, chap. i". – Lirefd., the Quran, t II, p. 55, trans. of Ryer, 1775.

Digitized by Google

556

THE JEWS.

of the cabal, and return to it. Everything scientific and of grandeur in the religious dreams of all the enlightened, Jacob Böhne, Swedenborg, Saint-Martin, is borrowed from the cabal; All Masonic associations owe their secrets and their symbols. The cabal alone consecrates the alliance of universal reason-saddle and of the divine Word, she holds the keys to the present, the past and of the future*.

The primordial seed of all magic, and consequently of evils the most dreadful, surreptitious things that the spirit of evil can sow, the left-wing cabal, or sinister one, is therefore truly worthy of highest tributes from those who profess this false and perfide science*. Also, rejecting what he calls the evil cabal I have heard of certain shameful heresies that the world has cursed, Does Eliphas dare to tell us: "The Church, then, had to forbid the faithful to the dangerous study of this science, whose supreme The priesthood alone was to reserve the keys for itself. The Kabbalistic tradition- This tic appears indeed to have been preserved by the Pontic Sovereigns tifes, at least until Leo III, to whom a ritual is attributed occult, which was allegedly given by the Pontiff to Emperor Charles-Magne, and which reproduces all the characteristics, even the most secrets, from the Keys of Solomon. This little book, which was meant to remain Hidden, having been later disclosed, it had to be condemned by the Church. and fell into the realm of black magic*. He is known still under the name of Enchiridion [Manual] of Lion III. But the The loss of the cabalistic keys could not lead to the loss of infallibility. the Church's resilience, always assisted by the Holy Spirit; it cast However, great obscurities remain in the exegesis, and it made com- the great figures of prophecy are completely unintelligible of Ezekiel and the Apocalypse of Saint John*.

'Dogma and Rites of High Magic, vol. I', p. 95; Paris, 1861, 2nd ed. work ti'ès-aïlicatlioliiiue. When we speak of Freemasonry, it is necessary to hear the liautes lodges, the supreme and secret council at the head of which the The Masonic constitution requires that a Jewish majority always be present.

* Even the Israelite universe itself is reduced to disavowing the cabal, to These Kabbalistic practices are no less those of Jewish ritual and the Talmud, which teaches us that the characters of writing, the names of the Angels, and those of the months, are chaldean; /6i(f.,X,KI, p. 107-8, 1866, etc., etc.; id., X.VII, p. 984, etc.

Eliphas Lévi therefore acknowledges that this tradition, or Jewish Kabbalah, has for a code, a grimoire condemned by the Church, and famous in the field of black magic; but he likes to attribute its writing to Popes!

* Eliphas Lévi, History of Magic, pp. 212-255; 1860. "May the

Digitized by Google

APPENDIX CHAPTER 67

"The sovereign owner of this book, and knowing how to use it, should be the master of the world." (Ibid., p. 865.) However, the two main receptacles of Jewish Kabbalah, to which the magic claims to interest the Church, which it pursues with its deaf ears. Hatred, that's the Zohar and the Talmud. Now, we affirm about From this denture book, Professor Eliphas of Magic states, there exists "a a second Bible, unknown, or rather misunderstood by Christians; a a collection, they say, of obscene sayings; a monument, let us say, which brings together all that philosophical genius and Religious geniuses could never have created or imagined anything more sublime, treasure surrounded by thorns, diamond hidden in a rough stone and obscure. Our readers will have already guessed that we want to talk about the Talmud.

But the Talmud, the Zohar, the rabbinic tradition, the tradition of Magicians and initiates of the occult have one and the same inspiring, and thereby reveal to us one and the same spirit 1

In elTet, continues one of the Church's deepest enemies, 0 through the veil of all hierarchical and mys- allegories ticks of old dogmas; through darkness and trials bizarre of all initiations; under the seal of all the sacred scriptures, in the ruins of Nineveh and Thebes;... on the blackened faces of the sphinxes of Assyria and Egypt, etc., etc.; in the strange emblems of our old alchemical books; in the reception ceremonies practiced by all mystery societies, We find traces of the same doctrine everywhere, and oneself- hidden* \ n And this sacred doctrine, which is found to be that of theurgy or high magical initiations, is both that of the Kabbalah that the Jews teach us, after having received the deposit from the Chaldean Sabians, descended from Ham,

"Legitimate successors of Saint Peter," dares this professor of magic, accept the homage of this book, and bless the works of the humblest "his to lay at the feet of the one to whom it belongs to open and close the treasures "Get out (the intelligence and faith)." Ibkl., Hist-, p. 222; 1860.

'Thus speaks the cocabalist, perfidious enemy of the Church, defrocked ecclesiastic-Dogma and Ritual, p. 3; 1861. See black cliap. Talmud, what the The learned Drach told us of this treasure trove of filthy absurdities, and "sometimes of science and sublime concepts. — Saint Jerome, who was thoroughly knowledgeable The Talmud and the Jewish Scriptures, "declare that there are so many fables and of filth that we were ashamed to even speak of. » Suprù, and read the list of Jews, suppl., ibid., vol. VI, p. 254. — Moreri is in every library; see this that he says of Zoliar, vol. VI, p. 140, resuming after p. 652. (1732.)

'Ibid., Dogm., t. b«, introd., p. 5; edit, of 1854.

Digitized by Google

528

THE JEWS.

and ()ui, according to a widely accepted opinion in science, were the heirs of the doctrine of the sons of Cain (In this cha-clown, passim.)

It is a constant for Mr. Natter that Gnotics, engendered, thus which we will soon admit, by the Jewish magician Simon had "inherited theurgy of the Kabbalists and Chaldeans." This is what we call the first Sabaeans, who mixed the serpent worship versus that of stars* animated by spirits; and this He was from among those peoples whom God chose to call Abraham, this patriarch whom the falsifiers of history and religion, in agreement with the rabbis, consider as "V heir of the se—"The Book of Enoch, and the father of initiation in Israel*."

The rabbis assured us, in fact, that "every member of the The great Sanhedrin are adepts of magic; that the patriarch Abraham, originally from the Sabaean city of Ur, was a necromancer—the one who trained the sons of his concubines in his art, and that at Following the example of his father Abraham, David was an astrologer and a magician*.

'The* ideas of Kabbalah and Clialdeus, of Chaldean science, of astrology sa-Beist or idolatrous, are so closely linked together that, in a novel of which The heroes are a Jewish family; it is said of one of the characters: "He knew the Lochène Koïdech (that is, the Chaldean), as well as a bal-Kebolé (which means a doctor of Kabbalah). — The novel reflects the belief Vulgar. Serialized in the Journal des Débats; Paris, issue of December 7, 1866.

war of 1814.

Furthermore, the idea of judicial astrology, or Sabaeen cabal, is linked so closely aligned with those of rabbinic traditions, that Father Boulionrs, in his The Life of Saint Ignatius of Loyola tells us, regarding the famous William Postel, whom the saint had adopted as a novice: Postel "had set himself up visions in my head, from reading the Rabbis and contemplating the stars

Rabbinism and judicial astrology had corrupted his mind. (Vol. II)
I. IV, p. 5; Paris, 1825. Ignatius having tried in vain for two years to bring this prodigious scholar back to his senses, he dismissed him from his order.

> S. Epiphan., Adv. Acérés., p. 55, ed., folio del622; – td., S. Iræn., Adv. Valent., etc., p. 43, 62, 137, etc., folio edition of 1560.

'M. Matter, dignitary of the University, Critical History of Gnosticism, vol. III,
p. 184, 2nd ed.; Paris, 1843. – Bible, Daniel, chap. xiv, etc., etc.

' Eliphas Lévi, Hist. of magic, p. 46; Paris, 1860. Initiation of the fans.se cabale. – Enoch, he tells us, is the same as Hermes Trismegistus of the Egyptians; ibid., p. 46. Elsewhere, this Trismegistus is Ham, or his son Mesraïm...

'The Church and the Synagogue, p. 28; 1859. – Dist. des Juifs, iA., t. VI, cliap. VIII, etc. – The Church says the opposite in the prayers for the dying; Liberated animam rjussicul liberasti Abraham from Vr Cbaldæorum. – According to Modern Kabbalists, disciples of the Jews, trace the Kabbalah or magic back to its origins.
beyond Abraham, who exported it from Chaldea, and of whom "it was the science, as well as the science of Orpheus, Confucius, and Zoroaster! This

Digitized by Google

APPENDIX CHAPTER.

5Î9

"Abraham, upon leaving Chaldea, had carried away the mys-
"cabbalistic" terms," and the cabal is so intertwined with magic, that, according to "Kabbalistic tradition, India was populated by the descendants of Cain; that later the children of Abraham and from Cethura withdrew there," and that, thanks to this population Kabbalist, "it was preeminently the land of goetia and of prestige*.

Goetia, magic, demonic prestige, the arts and the practices of the Kabbalah. Nothing seems to us more universally established by the mouths of the great doctors of occult science, and we call upon the very words of Eliphas as witnesses, which we heard the cry: "The Kabbalistic doctrine, which is the dogma of high magic, is contained in the Sepher-Jesirah, the Zohar and the Talmud*"; an assertion that the rationalist Hoefer confirms in these terms, whose clarity is second to none: "The mystical trines, and magical practices of antiquity are partly preserved in the cabal," the date of which is, in our opinion, that of the first followers of demonic Catholicism, although he was not written that "towards the first centuries of the Christian era by the Rabbi Akiva and his disciple Simeon Ben Jochai. The alchemists Jews and Arabs had nevertheless known each other for a long time. the reading of the books of the Kabbalah, which were with the adepts in "As great an honor as the books of Hermes Trismegistus*."

In short, and we do not hesitate to repeat it, "it is

These are the dogmas of magic that were carved on stone tablets by Enoch and by Trismegistus. Moses purified them and beheld them again; this is the meaning of the word reveal. He gave them a new veil, when he made the Holy Kabbalah, the exclusive heritage of the people of Israel, and the inviolable secret. of his priests. The Eleusinian and Tliebe mysteries preserved some of them. the nations some symbols already altered, and whose key was lost among the instruments of an ever-growing superstition, u Finally, "the Saviour—The vision announced to the Angels, the sacred star of initiation came to tear apart the worn veil of the old temple to give the Church a new fabric of legends and symbols that are always hidden from the uninitiated and preserved for "The chosen ones (the magicians), always the same truth." Hliphas Lévi, Justice of the magic, pp. 3-4; 1860. We see with what tenacity the Kabbalists cover the truth hidden in the cloak of their false science.

'Eliphas, ibid., Hlst., pp. 46-66, 7-8. — Numerous works attributed to Abraham by the rabbis, pp. 345-348, etc., see Gust. Brunet, Evang. Apocrypha and annotations; Paris, 1863.

* Ibid., Hist., p. 18.

* Hæfer, History of Chemistry, vol. I, p. 242. The books of Hermes were supposed to contain a large part of the cabal.

certain that the Jews, the most faithful of the secrets of the cabal, have almost always been, in magic, the great masters of Middle Ages. Representatives on earth of the spirit of darkness. Your ex-pastor diabolox, they were the providential missionaries and the great masters of occultism. Every mystery society and of disorder, by presenting themselves as leaders of Kabbalistic Jews, gave the chiefs and hereditary conservatives of the doctrines adapted tagged to its hidden purpose. This is what the plebeian class of these associates is unaware but every learned adept, every serious initiate, would say to himself, as he bowed down before them: "They are truly our fathers in the science'." "

And this science, whose pseudonym Eliphas Levi, clothed in a Jewish war name, has in our time constituted the imperturbable patron, being that of magic, cannot be, as well as The Church Fathers and long experience teach us this. of peoples, that the very science of evil; science skilled at creating from all sides, against the doctrines and power of the Church who strikes him with his anathemas, the most learned and formidable an agency that can infest the earth.

Eager to conceal this ignominy from our sight, and draped herself pant of the cloak of high wisdom, cabalistic magic affects to push away from her, disdainfully, some of his own children, those who, drinking away all shame and leaving the terrible consequences of their principles to peacefully follow their courses, dare to be at midday what the clever ones are only in the darkness. Magic, Eliphas, this Levite, tells us—volté who, donning sheepskin, dares to present himself as a Respectful champions of the Church: "Magic also has its heretics and their sectarians, their men of prestige and sor—we will have to avenge the legitimacy of science against usurpers. passions, ignorance, madness, and fraud*.

Now, among those whom the mage Eliphas rejects with contempt

'Eliphas, Dogm. et rit., t. II, p. 220, 2nd ed.; 1861.

'Ev. Saint John, c. viir, v. 44.

' Eliphas, I/ist. magic, p. 147, ib.

'The Quran in a thousand places, and for example: "They followed what the Devils taught during Solomon's reign. Solomon did not "Sin, but only the devils, who taught magic to the people." Chap. la Vache, t. I*', p. 392, Irad. du Ryer, 1775.

'Ibid—, p. 33. Also the magician Eliphas, and the men of the Modern spiritualism, although linked, makes a rather poor pairing.

APPENDIX CHAPTER.

534

that his doctrine cannot justify, we first consider, between the Kabbalistic followers of Gnosis, the adopted sons of Cain, that is to say the Cainite heretics descended from the Jew Simon the mage'. These wretches adorn themselves with the name of this first of the homicides, and give as father to Cain, to Esau, to Korah, to the accomplices and imitators of their revolt, the people of Sodom..., the highest virtue of heaven. They boast of having such men for ancestors; and their science, which is entirely cabalistic, It is sublime, they say, incomparable and perfect. Also, when The great Architect of this world claimed to exterminate them, he saw himself unable to harm them; for they knew how to create darkness to escape his fury, and supreme Wisdom assimilates them Mila. Judas, whom they boast of having as a brother, was one of their initiates, and you see them respectfully raising above 'their head a gospel which bears the name of this divine traitor'.

So here are heretics of the Epirite order who are an object pity for decent people, contemporary magic! and the sentence of the latter, as brief as it was unjust, is positive: "Gnosticism, Arianism, Manichaeism were sortis of the misunderstood cabal*." No; misunderstood is not the word, the word would be clumsily divulged, and others have said so. in good French.

The more our research expanded, the more it became clear to us that... It is a shame to see the Pharisaical traditions of the cabal spreading their venom. in the various branches of human knowledge, and the They penetrated in direct proportion to the role played by the Jews. have infected religious sciences and history since antiquity. questions and morals; they disfigure the astronomical sciences and physical; could we therefore, without ill will, and in agreement

' D. Epiphanius, Adv. hæret., p. 55, ed. 1622, folio; — id., D. Irenæus. To Adv. Valent., etc., p. 43, 62, 137, etc., ed. 1560, in-fol.

2 Sancia Epiplianii Opera; Adv. hæret., t. He, p. 276; Paris, 1622, in-fol. Caiani, a potentiori quadam virtute ac coeiesti autoritate derivatum esse Caianum prædicant, nec non et Esau, et Core cum suis, iteuque Sodoini-heap: Abelum vero ab imbecilliori virtute prodiisse. Quamobrem, etc.

'Elipbas, mst. de la magie, ib., 222. The word is clear; but the cabalistic lists, originating from the Jewish magician Simon, can they not refer to the

not to offend the sensibilities of the present era, rid themselves of both the troublesome and unfortunate character of the devil, so often named in the Quran, the Church, which stubbornly insists on it, and magic, of which, for In a quarter of an hour, it wounds the nerves and offends pride! – See Elipbas, ibid., Hist. p. 14 k 28.

34.

Digitized by Google

532

THE JEWS.

with the ignorant or clumsy friends of progress and of humanity. We are astonished by the reputation for magic that attaches and adheres to the medical science of the Jew, and which, in the centuries of orthodoxy Talmudic, provokes the Church's harshness against the sick person Christian cowardly enough in his faith to surrender himself into the hands of the evil-Talmudic doctor

Indeed, one branch of the Kabbalah lent itself to the art of to cure. Or she was suspected, she was accused of being grafted onto the magic, and the Jews turned away from it only with difficulty; often Even when they had become Christians, they were seen to persevere to combat diseases and ward off imminent evils, in attributing a miraculous virtue to numbers," including the letters re- they presented the chitres, sometimes by reciting strange formulas, sometimes by engaging in some bizarre practices'; and, in this For the people, healing art seems to go hand in hand with the art of doing talking to the stars.

"In the olden days, in France," an awkward man tells us, "a long-lost soul" friends of Israel, most of the "doctors" and "astrologers" were Jews. This knowledge was very popular among this nation. since the Babylonian captivity. We know that the Jews were in possession of session of administering love potions to Roman ladies, and they practice Even today, medicine is practiced throughout the East. The science of judicial astrology, of which they were proud, on the one hand, and Their wealth, on the other hand, was undoubtedly the cause of these appalling violence and persecutions of which history has preserved the memory.

And turning against the peoples who, tired of being the victims of Jewish usury, became from time to time Against them were the executors of a terrible and often cruel justice, The same writer adds, in his naive style: "They were dealing with

* History of the Jews, vol. VI, 16, p. 394. The Kabbalah being of probable origin—The Cainite, but at least the Hamite, etc., is prior to the Jews and does not may be particular to them. It is held in high esteem among Arab scholars, and Later she filled the most curious pages of Cornelius Agrippa, of Paracelsus, disciple of the Alexandrian theurgists and initiates of all the Great ages of magic. Hippocrates mocks certain imposters who boasted of curing terminal illnesses through prayers, etc..., L. De morbo sacro; and Galen rejects these practices as being forms of prestige. Egyptians and Chaldeans, that is to say, Sabians or Kabbalists. — h. From simple remedy. potest. — Tbiers, Superst., ch. xxxv, p. 416, etc.; 1679. — On the contrary, we see the famous cabalist and Basilides, heretic, disciple of the Jew of Giton, Simon Magus.

Digitized by Google

APPENDIX CHAPTER.

533 to the heirs of the Goths and the Vandals! The ignorant peoples and The barbarians considered them magicians; one hardly did the proeè» to some supposed sorcerer that he was not there »n Jew involved, and everywhere they were accused of wrongdoing of all kinds*. » Faithful to his unchanging system of apologetics for Judaism at the expense of the Church, and presenting us with Jewish medicine only by the seductive aspect of the treatments, Mr. Bédarride, the lawyer, forgetting the the cabalistic side of Jewish medical science, his compatriots, cannot tolerate these insulting suspicions that the history of all However, peoples have translated this into certainty. Therefore, he does not condescend. to explain them to us only by the stupid ignorance of Christians: "The cures that the Jewish doctors performed," he tells us, "and which had something wonderful about it in a century of ignorance; the foreign language in which the secrets of their art, and which gave them a mysterious character, and sur- all the qualities of infidels borne by those who exercised the medicine, aroused the anxious concern of a vulgar superstieus. They did not hesitate to see only sorcery and magic in the sa- to see who distinguished between Arab and Jewish doctors; the councils They therefore excommunicated Christians who turned to them.* And, for a Jewish writer, it goes without saying, the councils, in procri- before the art of these magicians, as the Caesars did in Rome, the masters of the most civilized peoples of the ancient world would do work of Vandals 1

'Bail, The Jews in the Nineteenth Century, pp. 91-94, 2nd ed.

the most civilized peoples of paganism, of pagan Rome which raged without A cease against these Jews, these magical mathematicians, these Chaldeans!
Chaldea, Babylon was the school of the Jews, and the Quran shows us there the evil angels teaching magic. Ibid., 1. 1", p. 392, from Kyer, 1775

> Bédarride, The Jews, p. 139, 7th ed. ; Paris, 1861. – Father Gioberti, very little authority on the matter, where his anti-Roman liberalism leads him astray,
We speak in roughly the same way. We refrain from arguing with Jewish doctors made certain progress that the art of medicine could achieve, which they ov Didn't she herself owe great progress to alchemy?... And of What a profound ignorance this audacity shows in basing one's criticism on the decrees of bishops and councils which ordered sick Christians to Why resort to Jewish science? The study demonstrates that the Church does not
It was by no means composed of a vulgar, ignorant, and superstitious person. But faced with the homicidal malice and the crimes of magic whose history is full of The people testify that the Jew was accustomed to it; the Church must have trembled at the both for bodily life and for the life of the third of his children. – Read at the support the famous Treatise on the Police, t. !•', p. 279, etc., 4 vol. in-folio;
Paris, 1705, 1710, 1719, 1738.

Digitized by Google

THE JEWS.

S3i

Our eyes, since early Christian antiquity, have been turned towards one of those men who were the glory and light of fiumanity, indeed surprise Kabbalistic medicine, which the Jews con-contemporary peoples had received from their fathers, in the process of descending from his century towards ours along the chain of traditions badly-healthy things that they offered to their sons; and our ears hear it.
to strike with his anathemas.

“The demons!” cried Saint John Chrysostom, that valiant father. of the Church, inhabit not only the Synagogue, but also the souls of the Jews. Would you seek healing for your body at The price of your soul's salvation? Could you, without stirring up the indif-God's creation, the creator of your body, implore your
Is your cure an enemy? And how does medical science not Wouldn't it become, in the hands of some idolater, an infallible resource to train you at the feet of the gods
The gentle ones, '7, also jump; the pagans have been cured of diseases of this manner and restored health to the infirm; will this be a reason to take part in their impiety*?

“If God allows demons, as he allows humans-my, to perform some healings, he allows it to test us;

Impious means of deliverance from our evils. The devil, even in healing us would surely do us more harm than good; because it would have relieved our body, which will nonetheless be the same. the nature of the verses, but it would have compromised the eternal happiness of our soul. Slave recruiters offer children

'Saint Chrysostom, when he gives this speech, knows what those who dare to call Christians fanatics and superstitious and the councils. He knows that a large part of ancient medicine, among the idolatrous practices took place in temples, where the priest and the physician con-merged with each other; he knows that this medicine was partly Magnetic, magical, demonic – that's what we discuss in our book. Mediators and means of magic. Now, Kabbalistic medicine or the Talmudic tradition of the Jew, intertwined as it was with magic, became so intertwined of view with that of the pagan, and drew inspiration from the same gods. An art Medical spiritualism has also regained strength in recent times, and particularly thanks to the resurrection of magnetism. – Read on these points the volume Prælectiones theologicæ of 1866, by the illustrious theologian J. Perrone, of the Roman College, which often does us the honor of citing us.

'Pp. 358–362. Tcrullian spoke of demons, with the help of whom medicine-magic cinema seems to heal us; Lædunt... , remedia præcipiunt ad miraculum nova, sive contraria, lædere desinunt et curasse creduntur. – They ca- We feel the harm... and when they stop causing it, we cry out for healing. Apolog., ch. XXII.

Digitized by Google

APPENDIX CHAPTER.

535

sweets, pastries, dice games, trifles, a thousand baits, in order to deprive them, by attracting them, of the li-Beauty and life. That's what the demons promise us.
the healing of our members, in order to compromise more safely-
The salvation of our souls. Oh, let us not suffer such abuse.
My beloved. It is not because God has abandoned you,
It is in order to make your virtue shine forth more vividly that he leaves Sometimes illness will strike you. So endure it generously.
seam; flee, flee, or drive out the Jews; they have the claim to be the most skilled doctors in the world, but their medical science-enchancements, amulets, and practices emb-pruntées à la magie 1... de même que leurs synagogues ne sont than places of debauchery, where shameless women go and dissolved.'

Familiar with Jewish tricks and superstitions, a Another Church Father, Saint Epiphanius, teaches us that the Jews mix demonic arts* with their science; that often even They do not shrink from homicide, and put it into practice the article of Kabbalistic faith that Thomas of Catimpré recalled formerly in these terms: "A very learned Jew, recently converted From time to time, he affirmed to me that one of his former coreligionists—the Jews, on the point of death, had made this prediction to the Jews tion: "You will not be able to cure the shameful disease that you afflicts only through the use of Christian blood*... For human blood is at the heart of all magical practices!

Magic needs blood, human blood. It needs blood.
 of man and human fats to perform these rites

'Amulets are one of the principal works of the Kabbalah, and one of the principal instruments of magic. St. John Chrysostom, ibid., paSS-SSZ, 3, 4, eic., already cited in Complete Works, vol. II, ed. 1865 — Example of Kabbalistic or magical medicine — The alchemical physician Paracelsus "the the greatest of the Cliertian mages, opposed the bewitchment with the practices of a contrary enchantment. He composed sympathetic remedies, and the applied not to the suffering members but to representations of these
 The members, trained and consecrated according to the magical ceremony.
 The successes were prodigious, and no doctor ever approached the cures.
 "Marvelous Paracelsus." Lliplias Lévi, Dogma and Ritual, vol. !•", p. 302. Read elsewhere his biographies, and a multitude of examples of Celtic Kabbalistic medicine. One of the best known is the famous powder Digbgy's kind friend, who healed at any distance and worked wonders (cited) our serious neighbors the English

* Opponents. hours. XXX; — the Church and the Synagogue, p. 321.

* Devita instituenda, I. XI, cap. xxix, art. 23.

Digitized by Google

536

THE JEWS.

and perfect his sacred chrisms, his malevolent ointments, your sacramentals, to achieve his sacrilegious goal. Here, there, and elsewhere—their, according to the times, according to the genius and the de^e of civilization of peoples, he needs this blood and this flesh, drink and means of Mystical regeneration. And, from the very beginning of historical times,
 The Bible itself gives us, on the soil of Canaan, the spec—

of this blood and human flesh that they ate and drank the Jews were associated with the Kabbalists of Canaan, and whose incantations required the use*.

Methods of cabal and magic, that is to say, demonstrative means, but employed as religious or scientific means, So here are two things that keep happening over and over again in the Jewish in the practice of the art of healing or preventing ailments of the body. And, in the careful examination of "child murders" "committed by the Jews," which will strike a sagacious person most keenly investigator, it is not always and only a fierce feelings of religious hatred; no: that will only be too painful—wind still intends "to use human blood and the flesh torn by magical operations" endowed with virtue "To heal the ailments of the body or mind." This will be the firm regarding "obtaining abominable effects," convinced that they are operators "that it is found in this blood and in this flesh, in addition to medicinal properties, a particular virtue, a strength occult, ensuring the fulfillment of their desires.

Sometimes, and when circumstances allowed, the practices of cabalistic or magical medicine took on a particular form in Full sunlight, a frankness, a perfect cynicism of ferocity. It is as we understand Rufinus, the illustrious contemporary of Saint Jerome, appointing Jewish doctors whom a queen of Persia afflicted—suffering from a dangerous illness, she consulted doctors; these doctors prescribed her write for treatment to cut in half Christian virgins yours, and to pass between the suspended halves; advice that the queen welcomes with blind docility'.

'Bible, Soyets.t*, di xji, 4, etc.; — id., our book the Magieau dix-neu-sixth century, last edition, ch. iv; — id., above in this present work, the cb. VII, 2* division: Blood...

'The Church and the Synagogue, p. 313–315, etc. Tliom. de Catimpré, Devita instituenda, 1. II, cap. xxix, art. 23. — Affairs of Syria, ibld., y. II, p. 380–84–8, and 390, etc., etc.

' Hist. eccles., 1. II, XXIV.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER APPENDIX. 537

L

But perhaps it's time for us to put an end to the cabal, if we did not have to give a glimpse of how stubbornly The Jews skillfully managed to turn against Christian institutions.

they themselves, and with what tireless art they have learned complicated, in time and space, to mature and perfect at The corruption of social science in the heart of the Christian world. a single word, which should suffice for the moment, will place the reader on the path to this truth.

"The idea of the Christian hierophants," that is to say, according to the meaning that Eliphas attaches to this word, the idea of the conspirators of the The cabal had been to skillfully seize power and to to surreptitiously retain for their own benefit. They therefore had to create a a society dedicated to self-sacrifice by solemn vows, protected by strict regulations', which would be recruited through initiation, and which, the sole keeper of great religious and social secrets, would make kings and the pontiffs, without exposing themselves to the corruptions of power.

This idea was, according to the Kabbalist Eliphas, "the dream of the sects" dissidents of gnostics or enlightened ones' who claimed to rat-stain their faith with the primitive tradition of Saint Christianity John*. She finally became a threat to the Church and to the society, when a rich and dissolute order, initiated into the mysterious doctrines of the cabal, seemed inclined to turn against the authority legitimizes the conservative principles of the hierarchy, and threatens the world of immense revolution. » Ancestors of sub- societies frequent sequels to occultism, "the Templars, whose history is so "These terrible conspirators were little known."

However, these men of occultism, to whom Eliphas recognizes the merits having possessed the mysteries of the Kabbalah, but who gives himself born the unforgivable wrong of wanting to absorb into an aris-exclusive tocracy, the immense revolution with which they threatened the world, these conspirators, both blamed and honored, disappeared in a storm. But the empire of darkness has only short-lived interregnums; and soon, in the thick of the shadows, it was born to them

■ "The Jews are all regarded as doctors of the law, among the Illumined. • Figuier, Sist. du merveilleux, vol. IV, p. 162, livre snlicatlio-tick; 1860.

'Catholicism of Saint John, password which designates Catholicism' of revolt and magic.

' Eliphas Lévi, Bisl. of magic, p. 273; Paris, 1860.

Digitized by Google

successors. It is their followers themselves who, from a thousand on both sides, in the fleeting eras of their triumph, threw These revelations are being blown away. We are listening to the one among them. preferably, the pseudonym Ēliphas, is one of the least equivocal and the most learned: let us continue to listen to his language, and not forgetting that the architects of all disorder anti-Christian or anti-social elements that are stirring up the world, under the guise of occult societies are linked by a secret and Jewish bond from the cabal to the immense and universal association that designates the recent name of Freemasonry'.

"The Kabbalistic doctrine, therefore, attracts us the adept Eliphas" "Who professes it with brilliance, is the dogma of high magic," and the occult philosophy of magic, "veiled foolishly by the name of cabal, is indicated by all the sacred hieroglyphs of the ancient sanctuaries and rites still so little known in ancient Freemasonry – and modern*. But what is the purpose of this association, which gives to his face of such philanthropic charms, and which one must seek the principle of life within the very dogmas of the Kabbalah, pushes– Is it the Christian world? Let's listen, and we'll know how to answer each other. to ourselves, when we have heard from his mouth the, Most positive admissions:

"The great cabalistic association known in Europe as the The name "masonry" suddenly appeared in the world at the time where the protest against the Church* has just dismembered Christian unity yours." Now, the Freemasons have "the Templars as models, the Rosicrucians for fathers, and the Johannites for ancestors*. Their dogma is that of Zoroaster* and Hermes, their rule is initiatory, their principle, equality, regulated by hierarchy*,

'High Freemasonry! – Read especially the scholarly and now rare book by Saxon Protestant Eekert, trans. Gyr. 2 vol. in-8*, Liège, 1854.

'History of magic, pp. 23–24; 1860.

* This protest is Protestantism, which erupted so suddenly at that time called the Renaissance, as a new birth of paganism, of its pliancy, of its exclusivity, its exclusive literature and its arts; the arts and literature having been Christianized since the fall of the idolatry.

* The Johannists, that is, those who transform the holy apostle John in cabalism, leader of the Rosicrucians, Freemasons, etc., and who They tell us that their secret goal is to break the tiara, etc., etc.

* This descriptive name means living star, and would link the Cainite cabal to Ham to Sabatism, which must be. – Read, among other things. Treatise on the police, theft. I", p. 521, folio; Paris, 1705, etc., etc.

'Tacit reservation being made against equality in favor of the heads of the association–

CHAPTER APPENDIX. 539

and universal brotherhood'. They are the successors of the school of Alexandria, heir to all ancient initiations. They tolerate—they hold all beliefs* and profess only one philosophy philosophy. They only teach reality, and want to bring about progress—"simply all intelligences to reason," that is to say, to rationalist antisocial, to Masonic reason, against which Woe to him who reasons! We have already seen this more than once; but better We will see that again later.

So, and according to the significant leaks from many enemies of the Church, these ancient Jews whom Eliphas calls our fathers in science, and that Christ called the sons of the devil (coa ex (diabolo shepherd), that is to say the fathers of the demonic church, have for sons the chosen of Judah in whom we must recognize the philosophers, the high doctors and the mysterious leaders of "the large cabalistic association known in Europe as of Freemasonry," and whose aim is the ruin of the Church of Christ and of Christian civilization. .Proudhon, this avowed friend of the Prince of the cabal, dared to tell us in brutal terms; others They repeat it to us every day, in treacherous or softened terms.

Therefore, those who tell us that the universal and supreme council, but secret, of the masonry, composed of nine members, must to keep in reserve for the representatives of the Jewish nation a minimum of five seats, because that's what the constitution requires. Masonic principles tell us what the simple laws of common sense tell us. They told us we had to be careful. But we've said enough about the... cabal and on its fruits, on its works, its offspring and its future plans. For the moment, it suffices for us to have only scratched the surface. this subject, to which we have had to devote another elsewhere chapter.

the long note on equality in our book Customs and Practices of Demons—ed., of 1865, p. 421.

'Without the patriarchy, which underlies the subversive theories of the cosinopolism, by destroying the principle of parochial homelands, the triumph of a universal Israelite association would be impossible, and the reign of the .ntte—Christ upon the world, formally announced by the Church, could not be prepared. The Italian, Germanic, Slavic, etc. units, in short, the partial units founded under the generally false and arbitrary title of The principle of nationalities prepares this general unity, and consequently must inevitably come to pass sooner or later.

* Eliphas Lévi, ibUt., Histoire été la magie, p. 399–400; 1860.

Digitized by Google

5i0

THE JEWS.

FINAL NOTES OF THE CABAL.

NOTE I. – EGYPT: THE SOULS, THE ASTRAL SOUL.

We know the immense power and influence attributed to the Egyptians. they booded Isis and Osiris, etc., etc., that is to say, the sun, the moon, the stars; so that, in order to reconcile this doctrine with that of the French ar-Bitre, they gave every man two souls; one of divine emanation, and the other who descended from the stars. The first enjoyed a freedom pardone; but the second was subject to the influence of the stars and intelligences supramundane. Read Jamhlique, Demyst., p. 162, sect. 8. – Read, in besides, Cornelius Agrippa; id., Eliphas Lévi, Rit. of magic, its doctrine of the astral fluid, and see everything concerning the various physiognomies of the error of the two souls, in our book Mediators and means of the Magic, Part Three, The Human Ghost and the Vital Principle.

The philosopher-magician Iamblichus assures us that this opinion prevailed. still from his time in Egypt, and he sighed with a glance at the pom-few praises that the Jewish caliphs lavish on the stars and the moon for to recognize striking similarities in their beliefs and practices. We have quoted these authors extensively in our book, Magic in nineteenth century.

These same theologians from Egypt, far from simply consulting the gods, about things of nothingness, questioned them on lofty matters relating to our purification, the separation of bodies and the salvation of the Soul. Similar to our spiritualists, they imagined, thanks to a few pre-naive cautions, unable to be led astray by the demons who had seduced them. They claimed to travel up through the channel of spirits to the divine nature. There was a similarity of purpose, as well as a similarity of origin, between their cabal and that which the children of Israel have transmitted to u with which Egypt was filled after the death of Christ. Also the ancient renown Did the teachings of the Kabbalists of Egypt and Chaldea pass on to the Jewish people? the opening of the Christian era.

NOTE II. – PODBQCOI THE CULT OF THE AKGES FORMERLY REPRESSED BY THE CHURCH.

celestial beings, or Angels who were said to preside over the stars, and through the stars to the things of this world, allow us to judge whether it was wisdom to the Church to suppress the worship of Angels, while awaiting a time when the cabal The Sabaeans would have lost part of their empire.

The bastard and perfidious science adorned with the name of astrology, where the observation of the stars intertwined with the worship of Angels is of such ancient origin. in a world that history cannot reach. But we cannot to ignore that the first known Sabaeans, worshippers of the celestial torches, admire from the outset the fact of an influence that they exerted on their destinies of the ruling spirits of the stars. And these spirits who seduced them

Digitized by Google

APPENDIX CHAPTER 6i1

They were, according to the words of the Apostle to the Gentiles, the angels of malice. princes and powers of this world, relentless instigators spread throughout the middle of the air and the celestial bodies. (Saint Paul, Ephesians, chapter 3, verse 1)

Navigating with lightning speed through the vastness of space, the Angels of God are the pilots of these powerful and luminous ships who populate and crisscross the firmament. Thus taught the doctors of the Church, so believed the men of Catholicism prior to the coming of Christ; and the Lord, addressing Job, said to him, "Where were you when the morning stars all praised me together, and all the-
"God's children were transported with joy" (xxxviii, 7.)

The angels, the children of God, these were the leaders. of the stars; truth so turned against the Lord by the Spirits pre-hurled from their thrones into the regions of the air, that all that there idolatrous peoples around Judea prostrated themselves before these lights do firmament, honored them, adored them, poured human blood on their altars; that almost all the infidels on earth embraced the super-detestable stances of these Asians; finally, that the voice of the men of God continued to thunder in the very midst of Israel against the worshipers of the Spirits of the stars, and to break their altars.

This is how King Josiah exterminated "the augurs who had been established" blis for the kings of Israel, and those who offered incense to Baal, to sun, moon, twelve signs, and all the stars of heaven. So it is that he defiles and profanes the bond of Tophet, of the gate of Jerusalem, so that No one sacrifices their son or daughter to the sun (to Moloch). That is how it-raises the horses given to the sun by the kings of Judah, horses which are at the entrance to the temple of the Lord; thus he brushes against the chariots of the sun... that he defiles and profanes the high places built by King Solomon to the goddess of the Sidonians Astaroth and to Melchom, that is to say to the sun and to the moon... " '.

head, succumb Aii-mèrae before the acts, before the wonders wrought by the Spirits who call themselves the rulers of the stars and the sovereigns of heaven; when we see the men whom the Lord himself had enlightened, those whom he had instructed by his own mouth and nourished daily with miracles turn, at the instigation of these Spirits, their freedom against its light, sometimes succumbing before the crowd, and dragging it down with it; when the marvel of human science and wisdom, Solomon, allows itself to be simultaneously seized by the heart, violated by the senses, and blinded by curious passions; when he gives us the public example of failure the most incomparable and shameful intellectual and moral history History of humanity tells us, do we doubt that the flock of simple Could faithful be seduced? Do we think the Church was wise to ask this question? a narrow limit to the otherwise comforting worship of the good Angels, we who let us see, within the enlightened classes of our modern capitals, the rava-Incredible claims of spiritualism; we, to whom men of science, were seduced

* IV Eoii, chap. xxrir, 5, t0, 11, 13, etc.; – Jérénie, vit, 31, cic.; xxxfi, 35. The same defense against these superstitions, disguised in another form, is found in the C liarlema;;ne areas, which we mention elsewhere.

* Read rfjcode, and, in this regard, the fine work of Mr. Tliomassy, advisor hon-ormaire at the Imperial Court: Thoughts on your religion; 1865, Plon.

Digitized by Google

5i2

THE JDIFS.

through vain prestige and unfortunate enough to set a precedent, they propose cha-What a great means to discern good spirits from evil! Yes, certainly, if the Church in its great wisdom does not obstruct it, the tra-editions of Sabaism or of the Clialdean Kabbalah, that is to say the traditions of primordial demouiac Catholicism (DU gentium dæmonia, Ps. v, bà), the source of judicial astrology and theurgic magic, would have rendered only The worship of angels was too dangerous for the early Christians. Because, everywhere And constantly, these Christians were exposed to the unhealthy influences of the the science of the Jews, whose underground activity, when idolatry disappeared, maintained and preserved in the world the empire of demonic arts and of the magic.

Infected by the principles of this false and arrogant science, which from the breast the foul mysteries of primitive polytheism had infiltrated their perverted traditions, that is to say, in their cabal, and that the father of the men-Dream, who became the father of Israel (your ex-shepherd diabolò. Supra), made grow and prosper in the shade of the Jewish roof and the Synagogue, the wise Jews-They then experienced a double joy. It was to give a wide career to their lique, the principles of a science before which the great prostrated themselves, and who recognized Judah as his master; it was, at the same time, to satisfy their silent and implacable hatred against Christianity, by bearing terrible havoc wreaked within the Church through the spread of doctrines and practices which, while placing the Christian at the feet of the Jew, his mail, mingled odious-sowing, in the heart of the one whom baptism had regenerated, i.e., the worship of Christ worships spirits of rebellion, murder, and impurity!

Thus, under the cover of profound ignorance, and under the inveterate influence From pagan customs, witchcraft preserved a refuge in the camloincloths and in remote hamlets where idolatry, finding its last retreat at the foot of the divine oak and the animated stone, 'which represented the gods, stars, light and nature', spread with the help of the initiative an empirical and crude tactic, which the Jewish peddler constantly re-tempered zeal. Everywhere, in short, the Jew playfully cast the bait of a science which, beneath the treacherous and shimmering multiplicity of its aspects, flattered Both pride and curiosity irritated greedy appetites and appetites sensual, and offered an irresistible enticement to the unruly aspirations of the man of ambition and the man of science or pleasure.

It is therefore not without reason that he repeated from time immemorial that, Wherever the Jew set foot, magic took root and sprang from the earth. The Jewish lawyer Bédaride himself acknowledges this historical fact, and expresses it had these words; "The Emperor Hadrian said that he had not seen in Egypt "...a single Jew who was not a mathematician." It is from this name that no schoolboy... He is unaware that imperial Rome called the followers of magic; and one of the larger and incandescent centers of the theurgical cabal and of the cor-
At that time, Egypt was a hotbed of Jews, according to Rédarride adds, which goes without saying, that they "spread out perpetuated in the West, in this reputation!

'Lmnits-Luna, Diamut-Diana, eic. Read our book God and the Gods, Paris, 1854 (sold out),

* Ibid, p. 454, - Basnage, t. IV, p. 1212.

Digitized by Google

APPENDIX CHAPTER.

543

The doctrines scattered throughout the Jewish religious code, where Us abound variants and contradictions also teach us that "all the stars and all celestial spheres are animate beings, endowed of intelligence and reason. As they recognize the one who is so often Blessed rain, they recognized themselves, and recognized

Angels, and superior to that of men. Maimonides, in the Moreh Netmchim demonstrates that the stars are animated.

According to some rabbis, there are mortal angels and immortal angels. When these spirits appear, they need a form, and if they remain If they remain in that form for too long, they materialize. That's what happened. to Asai and Azael. The good angels are opposed to the bad ones, who are nevertheless including in part the necessary organs of divine action; and the Kabbalah It is generally accepted that, among demons, some are created from God, while the others come from the good angels who have spread between themselves, or polluted with humans 1 (Cf. Zend Avesta.)

As an example of the vigor with which the Church attacked these waves and false doctrines, relating to the nature of the celestial spirits and to their Regarding its influence on the stars and on the inhabitants of the earth, we will mention Words from the provincial council of Bordeaux in 1683:

"Those who commit a heinous crime and are excommunicated are those who..." by the inspection of the stars, in the manner of the Chatdéans, and by the sacri- the rule of judicial astrology, stifling the freedom of the genie and the provision "the grace of God, etc., etc." Council, title 7.

NOTE III. – The clev of Salohok and the jec cab.clistique of the takot.

Let us not forget to recall, in connection with the cabal, that Martin of Arles, In his treatise De superstitione, and Deirio, he mentions a book of magic. which the Jews and Arabs made the greatest use of in Spain "to commit the most detestable acts." However, this book, which... formed of seven distinct parts, passed from father to son, and was preserved at title of precious inheritance. – It is thought that he descended in a direct line from a famous Kabbalistic Hebrew ritual entitled: The Key to Solomon, Clavicula Salomonis. The Jews did not hesitate to attribute to King Solomon himself this book (which we had in our hands) a copy). Perhaps, by reminding us of the shameful idolatry of this sou- verain, fallen from the heights of wisdom into an abyss of darkness, does not find- Will we see nothing improbable in the fact that he traced this impure code with his own ha Beyond magic. And, whether or not other Kabbalists have reworked it, always Is it that the occult methods then employed by the Jews took place there? to achieve their ultimate ends; honors, vengeance, the wealth, an easy, sensual and voluptuous life

If ever we doubted the extent to which magic, stemming from the cabal, and whose teachers, since Christ, were the Pharisees and Talmudists. and the great masters, is an impious science, it would suffice for us, concerning the a book bearing the name of Solomon, to lend an ear for a moment to the magician Eliphaa, to chase away every cloud from our minds, O Noos, we have said how The name Jehovah (God) is broken down into seventy-two explanatory names, which is called Scliemhamphoras. The art of using these seventy-two names, and to find there the keys to universal science, is that what the Kabbalists... They named them the Clavicles of Solomon. Indeed, following the collections Revocations and prayers bearing this title are usually found seventy-two magic circles forming thirty-six talismans. These talismans bear seventy-two names, with the emblematic sign of their number and that of the four letters of the name Jehovah k which They correspond. This is what gave rise to the four decades of the tarot.

'Bartoloccî, Bibliolhcca hebraica, I. 1, p. 703.

"With the help of these symbols, and at the heart of their infinite combinations" like those of names and letters, one can arrive at the natural revelation—r— and mathematical of all the secrets of nature, and enter by consequent in communication with the entire hierarchy of intelligences and "geniuses." (Éliphas Lévi, History of Magic, pp. 109–110, 1860.)

The instructions in this grimoire, called a ritual, are obviously related to the doctrines of the sect of the Pharisees, where Kabbalistic faith reigned the influence of the stars. Therefore, they gave each of them Hebrew names, who corresponded to the different names attributed to God by the prophets. And whether our gaze rests on learned magic or on crude magic—sensual and sabbatical, we see its doctrines and practices to derive, if not their origin, at least their "improvement," from the Synagogue." (V Church and the Synagogue, p. 325.)

The Kabbalah, that science of sciences, that religion of religions, as well as Eliphas defines it (Dogma et rit., p. 254, t. I, 1854.) as the science of the mage, Let's even say the sorcerer, the fortune teller. And the tarot, that game of oracular cards that were so deftly handled by the agile fingers of the Bohemian, it contains the revealing language. But refrain from laughing. wonders that the cabal reveals to us about this scientific treasure in the form of bizarre, and which hardly reveals itself to our eyes except beneath the grime of the gypsy because this deck of cabalistic cards, this book which he uses to conduct his spell, this is nothing less than • the monumental summary of all the revelations of the ancient world, the key to Egyptian hieroglyphs, Solomon's clavicles, The primitive writings of Enoch and Hermes. This key to initiations, (the gypsies) probably owed it to the infidelity or imprudence of some Jewish Kabbalist. The Romani people originated in India, and the tarot came from Egypt, passing through Judea. His keys relate to the letters of the Hebrew alphabet, and some of its reproduced figures They even dictated the shape of the characters in this sacred alphabet.

But who were these gypsies, so little known to the common people? "They were a sect of Indian Gnostics, that is to say, of Kabbalists, that their Communism was exiled from the whole earth*; for the last word of the cabal and of the occult initiations of which she is the soul, she is, in all things, the most The most radical and vile of communisms. The Sabbath that has no

The Gnostics, in particular, practiced it.

* Éliphai Lévi. We leave him full responsibility for his assertions when we do not discuss them. History of Magic, pp. 322–327, 1860. – See ci~des~sue, Bohemians, cbap. x, divided. v.

Digitized by Google

APPENDIX CHAPTER.

545

VERY IMPORTANT NOTE. IV. – Obicike caïsité or cbamite

OF THE CABAL.

The GnAs, this cabalistic doctrine of inconceivable abominable pines-nations, has as his father Simon the Magi, whom the Samaritans called from the time of the apostles, "the great power of God" (Acts of the Apostles, VIII, 10.) "A disciple of the Kabbalah, Simon was an heir to the doctrine of the Sabaeans, worshippers of spirits and of celestial and serpent gods. The first post-diluvian custodians of the cabal were the children of Cliam, and the scholars' opinion is that they derived their Kabbalistic traditions from descendants of Cain. We have written a few pages on this subject, but for the moment, we will limit ourselves to quoting a simple passage from Father Chesnel, after recalling these two facts: that, among the main sects of Gnostics, Gnase, include the Cainites and the Opliites. that is to say, the heretics who considered it an honor to bear the names of serpent and Cain; – and that Simon the Magi judged it necessary to give "to the Gnase has a scientific and philosophical foundation*."

The Gnase, we say, was only one of the mobile forms of Sabaism or of primitive idolatry, whose mysteries descended from tradition received from the sons of Cain, that is to say from the Cainic cabal, professed in the Cbaldée, its original seat, of which we still find some today remarkable traces (see below). This rich and magnificent region was originally ruled by princes descended from Ham, and their science traditional, that is to say cabalistic, seems to have been that of the first homicides and the first of the damned.

When Satan seduced the first men with this flattering promise: "You will be gods," he was laying the foundations, said a Church Father of idolatry. This lesson was not lost; and never since the world has constantly been divided into two enemy societies: the one of which God is the leader, and the one who acknowledges Satan as master. • The first consists of "the children of Cain before the flood, and of the Hamites since," that is to say children of Ham, whom many scholars regard as the names have represented, and other peoples have perpetuated this tradition cou-

"pable," in other words, this cursed cabal," so that the cult of evil has never ceased to have "adorers!" The caba-
The historical, or traditional, nature of demonic Catholicism is, and should be to be indeed, like that of divine Catholicism, without solace of continuity.

"Among the Hamites, one can already see all the general traits, all the forms, all the branches of idolatry as it developed more Late in the development of gentleness. These are Sabaism, and the worship of nature Earthly evil. It is moral evil, deified by liturgy and mythology; it is

'Saint Epiphanius, Hteresis prmeept, Simon ille magus extitit, Gilthis oriundus... jtdv. hoerts. p. 55, edil. 1622, io-t". Parii.

* M. l'abbé Darras, Hist. gëniraU de CÉglitse, t. VII, p. 50-51 , 1866, Paris.

* See also the remarkable and comprehensive work: Treatise on the Police, Dela-Marre, Paris, 1705 to 1738; 4 vols. in folio; t. !•', p. 520, etc. We squinted
This question is addressed in one of our books.

36

Digitized by Google

THE JEWS.

S4G

the almost absolute separation between what is preserved from the debris of the natural law and religion, which is nothing but a system of fables and ceremonies; it is the cruelty of politics inspired by shifting dogmas in their rorincs, but immutable in their essence. Such is idolatry.
primitive of the Cbamites", that is to say of the disciples and sons of Cliam, whose docirino lieredial, which was sooner or later called cabal, is that which the Jews partially appropriated under this name.

a The cooking of evil as evil, its symbol so frequently used of the serpent," which, in Sabianism, is conflated with the stars, the moon and the sun, and the worship of the organ of the holy multiplication of men, which has become the organ of debauchery, "this seems to characterize the cha-"mism," that is to say, religions and societies stemming from the Kabbalah, or of the tradition taught by the sons of Ham.

However, in light of this fact, a crucial observation arises, one that we never encounter-
We are weaving elsewhere, it presents itself to us; here it is; These two things, the serp the cause of the curse on the first men after the creation of the world, and the organ which, making the person of Noah the slain of his unworthy son, world by the flood, these two objects of fall, we say, identified with sidereal or Sabaeen gods, as evidenced by the history of stones divine beings called betyls, become the two principal objects of the cuisine cabalistic or demonic*. Had a word, » in all places, and to some The degree to which they are encountered, they betray the influence, whether direct or indirect of this ancient satanic civilization." (Ibid., Ah. Chesnel, p. 14.) They They are, from the origin of evil, the gods of mysteries and sabbaths; are the sacred symbols of all prestigious and political associations of occultism; they are the alpha and omega, the first and last word of the cabal; they are and will be the god, the emblem, the rallying symbol of all the higher initiates of the Temple, of the Rosicrucians, of high Freemasonry*. Quite naturally, then, the Jews, grand masters of this cabal, are who became the grand masters, the secret princes "of all the associations Masonic lodges, which, according to the adept Eliphas Lévi, owe their secrets to him and their symbols. (Dogmas and Rites, 2nd edition, 1861, vol. I, p. 95.)

If the cabal had its original seat in Chaldean; if, in Babylon its capital, the imposing Babel, dedicated to its gods, the serpent and the sun, stood on the high place which was called the abode of demons, These facts, which remind us of the origins of the cabal, will lend some interest in primordial and cabalistic associations of which Chaldea was the cradle, and of which we shall see that it has remained one of the centers I

* See chapters Serpent, Dracontia, Phallus, Betyles, Beili-el, etc., in our book God and Your Gods, 1853-4, appearing at the same time, as the accounts from the time, as well as the very remarkable book by Abbé Chesnel, of which we produce the passages that contradict our opinion: On paganism, in-12, pp. 142-145, 123, etc., etc. Douniol. - Id. Doctor Boudin, Cult of the Serpent and phal., 1864, 88-page booklet; and others already cited.

^ A discovery that we believe we have made and proven elsewhere.

Digitized by Google

APPENDIX CHAPTER.

547

NOTE V.

CLIAU)I^CNS, ASTnOLOCCES CABALISTKA OU 8AB^£4STEG ANCIENS ET HOBEHNES : PUBLIC SCHOOLS OF ASTROLOGY, NOSTRADAHUS, PARACEE, ETC.

We read in Dollinger: "Astrology, the most tenacious of insecurities" of the spirit liiimau, had acquired great popularity as a result of the contact where Alexander's conquest brought the Clialdaeans into contact with the western provinces. These men found support in Stoic philosophy, which, in came to regard the stars as eminently divine, and placed the divine government of the world in the immutable course of the celestial globes. The sky with its stars, and especially its planets, was a book where the initiated could... were going to faithfully read the destinies of men. The science of the Chaldeans which The deciphering of these divine characters was all the less doubted because they They claimed to have studied them for four hundred and seventy-three thousand years. In the time of Alexander, mathematicians, genethliacs, and astrologers Chaldean and Alexandrian-Egyptian schools were widespread in Asia. In Greece and Italy, they taught, in concert, that a secret virtue of- cend without interruption on earth; that an intimate sympathy exists between the planets, celestial bodies, and the earth; with the beings that live there. The Human affairs depend entirely on the stars. The planets, especially, president to the destinies of man and exercise over his birth, his life and His death, a decisive action. Some, Jupiter and Venus, are well- making, etc. Their properties are tempered, modified as a result of their positions and their diverse aspects. Hence this mixture of good and the evil they spread on earth, and the ability of man to increase good and averting evil through prayer and religious ceremonies (let's say magical.)

"The planets having in their respective domains a power that they They have no other power; one can act upon them through prayer, vows, and worship. religious (or rather magical). Hence the astrological prayers composed and used in favor of certain emperors, Antoninus Pius for example.

Augustus, who forbade the mathematicians, that is to say the Chaldeans, to speak of life and death, he consulted them... Tiberius and Otho had their private astrologers. These cabalistic soothsayers were plentiful in the capital. of the empire "despite the banishments. This was especially true under Domitian that their influence became disastrous. Their schemes fueled cruelty of the tyrant, and indicated to him the victims and the means of striking them down

He had the horoscopes drawn up for a large number of distinguished men, and delivered them torment when the astrologer claimed they were destined to Great things. Finally, Alexander Severus repealed the decrees of bygone ages. and allowed them to open schools in Rome itself. (Dollinger, Paganism) and Judaism, p. 286 to 289; 3 vol. in-8, Paris, 1858, trans. S. of P.)

And these Kabbalistic schools persisted within Christian societies. yours, where "the cabal, mother of the occult sciences", as we are told The adept Ragon (above) was "cultivated by the Jews with an undiminished ardor" similarly, and almost single-handedly eclipsed all other secret societies > (Lecanu, supra), having as "the most faithful custodians the Jews, who "They were almost always the great masters of magic in the Middle Ages!" (Éliphas Lévy, supra, ibid.) »

b48 THE JEWS.

'Religious wars, civil wars, Catholic unity' broken, famine, plague, and, amidst the misery and anarchy of almost all the Euro-Jewish states, a general trend of minds towards the study of Astrology: that's one of the faces of the sixteenth century! I say "study of astrology," because this cabalistic art was indeed viewed "as a science, and it was taught publicly with the support of the civil authority.

Thus Krakow, the former capital of Poland, had schools of Magic was renowned throughout Germany. Students flocked there from From all sides to attend the professors' lessons, who explained to them the astronomical figures and characters of the Arabs, the Greeks, the Persians and Chaldeans.

Few courses, at this time of renewed cabalistic activity, and, by Consequently, there were religious and social revolutions, and few characters They did without their astrologer. These charlatans, or, to put it bluntly More accurately, these sectarians were rampant in France at the time of the Renaissance; and, when we visited the picturesque castle of Che- ' nuns, we were shown a room which links the memory of Cathe- The Medici family condemned these sacrilegious practices. The ladies of her court called these cabalists, that is to say these Jews or these students of the Jews, their Barons, remarkable name! for this word, which had not yet become as if from a vain title, it hardly designated anything but the ancient and high nobility, the noble and primordial lineage of the kingdom, as well as We read it in du Cange. (Article Barones.)

Let us transcribe in this regard a passage from Delrio, too interesting for omit it; Hactenus patres, quorum adscripsi verba, quoniam, licet primo loco, et juxta contextus seriem, Apostolus loqueretur de supersticioso dierum, mensium and annorum cookedu Judeorum, quos Galatæ judaizantes haud diibiè imitabantur, utpotè cum Græcis Divus Hieronymus et Pri- masius arbitrati, fieri tamen potest, ut aliquid etiam simul irrepserit, ut vidi in France, tempore Catharinæ Mediceæ, qiiando inter nuiicas matronas adeo hæc vigeant, iitnibil inconsul fis astrology, quos Barones suos nuncupabant, conari auderint, etc. Disquis. mag. (Û III, p. 2, sect. VI.)

It is important to mention the famous Nostradamus among these astrologers, or, If we speak the language of Rome from the time of the emperors, between these Chaldeans, or those mathematicians. They were given this latter name because of the cabalistic use of numbers, and of the divinatory observation of stars, to which these diviners devoted themselves.

This distinguished cabalist, sought after by kings, protected by Catherine de Medici, born in 1503, died in 1566, of Jewish origin, and whose ancestors were mathematicians and physicians, as well as a considerable number of Learned Jews, wrote, under the title Centuries, predictions that would cross-published in 1867 (Paris, at Le Pelletier's, 40 rue d'Aboukir) an edition in two volumes in-g", based on the standard texts of the years 1558, 1566,

- Doctor of Eiauvilicz, Gnrdi'rn, t. X, p. 13; Paris, 1856. Historical note.

on M. de NoUra-Damus by U, de Matougiiei. — . Or I could see the need that one such a time for holding an ecumenical council!

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER APPENDIX. 549

1568, and we recommend reading it to those who laugh, who will repeat it in chorus, if they so choose, this well-known pun:

NoUra damut cum falta daniui, Dam fallere noairum «I,

El cum falu damna, nil niai nostra damut (Noilradamua).

But serious enthusiasts will seek out this remarkable work, and the
They will place them in their library. They will find the key to the characters.
designated, a translation of the quatrains alongside the text, a dictionary archaic or obsolete words, learned scholia, and very curious notes, Much science and singular interest. The predictions fulfilled.
are sometimes striking, or rather, disconcerting

The author, whom we did not have the honor of knowing, had the kindness, by offering us his work, to explain to us a number of quatrains, especially those that look to the future, and to which it would be imprudent-eager to give a public explanation. We admire his obligingness.
His modesty and his insight. Let us add to these praises, and to prove it sincerity, that we cannot share certain opinions that the author admits in another work of the same date, and of which our book Det Mediators and Means of Magic fought some of them in advance-passion.

A word from the Kabbalist Eliphas sums up, in a sad eulogy, the virtue of the Kabbalah and the power of Kabbalistic astrologers: "Paracelsus may have He was the last of the great practical astrologers. He healed the sick by talismans formed under astral influences, and recognized on all the bodies the mark of their dominant star. That, according to him, was the true universal medicine, the absolute science of nature, lost by the
"A fault of men, and rediscovered by a small number of initiates." {Dogma} and rit., vol. 1", p. 236, 185t.) Ah! » how wrong he was when he believed all religions originated solely from astronomy! It's con-milking astronomy, which was born from astrology, and primitive astrology (which is Sabaeen idolatry) is one of the branches of the holy Kabbalah, the

Unfortunately, there was no shortage of Christians as infatuated as the Jews, their masters, favored these means of performing miracles. These Naive cabalists were astonished to see us lose, through our carelessness and through the laziness of theologians, the great and marvelous lights that pours forth and lavishes their knowledge! Each of us, according to them, should... I'm eager to leave everything behind and sell everything to acquire this high-end gem. price. How quickly would the ungodly convert, if the cabal... discovered its infinite perfections; if, for example, the mysteries that re- close each word and each letter of the Lord's Prayer their revelation the seven periods of the Church, its fate, its revolutions, in a word all the Sephiroth, all the divine splendors contained within this same prayer which they recite every day without understanding either its meaning or the wonders! (Ibid-, suppl. to the hist., p. 351).

In support of this virtue of names, Rabbi Solomon Ben-Sevet deigns to tell us the following fact as positive. The rumor had spread long ago, in Spanish, that a Christian child had been killed in the house of a Jew, and that the Jews had taken the heart of the corpse to celebrate their Passover.

Digitized by Google

550

THE JEWS.

"This scheme," said the rabbi, "brought great misfortunes upon the Jews. However, Solomon Lerite, a very wise and highly skilled man in the cabalistic secrets, fortunately he managed to divert them by placing them under the The tongue of the corpse spoke the ineffable name of God. For thus he reminded the life of the young child, who revealed the true perpetrators of his death.

Although we are far from believing in the reality of resurrections through the occult arts, and which we have cited in our book of Media- The methods and techniques of magic: some examples of false and frightening magic. resurrections effected by this art, this story is of great importance for whoever seeks the ancient customs of the Jews; and the justification The rabbi's actions seem to us only suited to demonstrate his knowledge or his pretensions magical tions. (See Church and Synagogue, p. 330.)

This was done, in the past, by placing a blade under the tongue of a Terapim. of gold on which were written the evocative formulas and the questions to to solve, the consultants obtained a response from [mind] of the dead. And the scholar Kircher admits that the Terapim, which are made- born by turning off a child's TV, can have the very date of Ham, the custodian of the Cainite cabal, that is to say of the Ma- traditions the gics of the sons of Cain. (Read our book: God and the Gods, Paris, 1854, – Fourmonl, Réjlex. critiques, I. I, pp. 229–370, etc. See on Cain and his sons, inventors of mad crimes, the historian Josephus, ficfoire, 1. 1, chap. 2, and other learned authors.)

NOTE VI. – The CiULnée of “os jours; traces oe la cabale caïsité

or CDAMIC AND PRIMITIVE SECRET SOCIETIES.

"Chaldeel: Does this name awaken other memories in the minds of Europeans?" images like those of these conjurers of infernal spirits, so often anathe-
"Matized in the Bible," and other thought than that of the black cabal or of the traditional doctrine of demonic Catholicism, which, almost from the origin of time, walks alongside the holy cabal, traditional doctrine- the nature of divine Catholicism?

Chaldea! "The most reliable and ancient historical sources"

They place the cradle of humanity there twice. Created by God in the neighboring... swimming or in the bosom of Chaldea, man is reborn and multiplies there even after the flood destructions. Abraham was born there, and, Later, his glorious vocation," which tears him away from this land devoted to worship demons, in Niniis founded Nineveh there; conspiring impiety built Babel there and its sumptuous residences: the two great cities that will personify at "Never power, pride, and pomp." (p. 7)

"Poor Chaldea! Unfortunate country! What a fall from grace! After having been the home of the greatest empires, the birthplace of great saints, one of the most

'Chaldea, historical sketches followed by some reflections on the Orient,' by Father P. Martin, chapter of Saint-Louis des Français, in Rome, p. 3, 1867, Rome, printed by the Civiltà Cattolica, with a dedication to Baron Adolphe d'Airil: Study on Christian Chaldea, Paris, 1864. Benjamin Duprat.

Digitized by Google

APPENDIX CHAPTER.

654

beautiful jewels of the Catholic Church in the early centuries of its history, Elijah fell today under Muslim rule. What am I saying?

The demon himself has altars in her house, and his ignominious worship is not "A veiled point beneath the pomp and decadence of language." He has triumphed! God of the ancient cabal, he triumphs in this first center of his empire, remained, became once again for the East and strong beyond the East, one of the great, centers of cabalistic worship

Some details about the Yazidis, better known in Europe as Scba-Manites or Seroanites. No author has described the customs of these unfortunate peoples It is in the diocese of Akra that finds the center of these sectarians' cult, and it is also there that their patriarch and their supreme sheikh. » P. 34-JS.

"From a political point of view, the Yazidis are governed by an emir" supreme leader of their sect, who resides in Schiekau, northeast of Mossotil (Nineveh)... His power is absolute in everything, and he can use it as he pleases. of all the women of his subjects. His lawful wife is always chosen Nevertheless, among the princesses, daughters of other emirs. By means of emirs subordinates, he transmits his orders to all the Shamanites scattered throughout the Konrdistan, Media, Mesopotamia, and the Sinjar Mountains.

◀ It is even probable that, through mysterious ramifications, its orders reach the most remote extremities of Asia and psoT-êTaE EVEN OF THE eDROPE. » P, 37.

The Gnostics and the Manicheans piously preserved the traditions tions of this primitive Freemasonry, that is to say its cabal, of which a branch had grown deep roots from the Driises, in the mountains Tagnes of Lebanon; and when the crusaders of Europe named Asia, They infiltrated the ancestors of our Freemasons: the Templars, the Rosicrucians, the organs of Western occultism, the leaders and chiefs- locations of our demonic cabal.

Primitive Kabbalah was what these sectarians are, for they have remained They worship the sun, the stars, the spirits of the stars, the evil principle, or the principle, the prince of evil, whom the Persians named Ahriman. And this Ahriman, "what would be so blind as not to notice him to recognize the transparent veils of their doctrines, which "attached themselves" "It leans towards Manichaeism through still visible links," and which had permeated Gnosticism. A single sentence is enough to cast doubt on this. to faint; let's listen:

Among these sectarians, "all passions, even the most shameful, are regarded as sacred, and to want to stop their course would be to surrender Guilty towards the one who is the author and the executor. The words modesty and marital faith have no meaning in their language and do not awaken any idea in their minds'.

The prince of evil, however, "the devil, is for them after all only a fallen angel... God, they say, is infinitely good, incapable of doing evil to men. The devil, on the contrary, is infinitely wicked, and,

' Ibid., Dominant year. , p, 13S, May 1861; LaChaldée. p. 6i. – Don't believe it Read, while reading these lines, one of the Fathers of the Church, Saint Epiphanius, Adver

THE JEWS.

In his malice, he only delights in torturing them. He is therefore extremely cautious. If God wants to be happy here below, he must abandon the worship of God. who can do no harm... and to place oneself under the protection of the being who alone can exempt men from the evils of this life, since he alone has the power to— to see them inflict them upon them.” (16, p. 137, letter from Father Rose.)

“Satan, whom they worship under the name of sovereign or mighty king, Melek-el-Kout, therefore, is for them only the principle of evil, defeated by the principle of good. God must reign peacefully and happily for a thousand years, that is to say—to say for an indefinite period of years.” But ■ the war, reigniting Its fires will provide the devil with the opportunity to conquer or make peace; and, In both cases, his worshippers will find it advantageous. (p. 32)

- They have, each year, at least three days of fasting, and one night that they dedicate themselves to the king of the abyss. Men, women, children, old people, gather around a hole whose depth no one has measured (mundt/s); It lingers in their thoughts even into hell. When midnight arrives, They seize flaming torches and perform infernal dances. around the dark cave, into which they throw sheep living beings, pieces of burning wood, clothing, weapons, coins, all to pay homage to the king of the damned. Then, the delirious crowd enters a dark subterranean space, and there... "They engage in abominable orgies," a veritable magical sabbath.

This is what their cabal, formed from their traditional dogmas, dictates. Therefore, for the Yazidis or Scbamanites of Kurdistan and the countries in the— When freedom experiences no hindrance, you see them then resorting to "to the most extraordinary theurgic practices, and all that your magic and witchcraft have something even stranger, more frightening, and, let's say it, moreover, diabolical, constitutes in a way the foundation, the very essence of their worship" and their doctrine I [Ibid. , p. 44–45.)

However, we do not say of this doctrine: it is pure Sabaeen Kabbalah and primordial; it is there, the Cainic cabal transmitted by the descendants of Chain in its original purity; for nothing remains unchanged and pure in the realm of error, condemned to only take its developments ments than in the atmosphere of variations. But we say that this cabal preserves and propagates, in their essential part, the doctrines and the the cult of demonic Catholicism, including Chaldea, governed from the beginning by sovereigns descended from Ham, was the constant scene and cradle.

Let's listen: "Every year, all the sheikhs travel through the districts entrusted to their care to encourage and instruct their faithful.... But the writing—"For the Shamans, ture is an object of abomination..." The delivered writing In the hands of the public, this would be too compromising for such a doctrine. who, therefore, takes refuge in the cabal, that is to say in tradition. "Their beliefs, their rites, their customs, their practices, are trans— They put it (therefore) solely through oral tradition. Only one family has the the privilege of knowing how to read; but so far it is unknown in which book she exercises this prerogative.

'Pp. 38–41. 11 The same was true in the religious occultism of the Druids, of which the origin is also Chana–Chaldean.

Digitized by Google

APPENDIX CHAPTER.

553

Finally, the sectarians of this occultism which, under our sky, is reflected or extends into the cabalistic occultism of societies whose main name is, for the moment, that of the high-ranking Freemasons, who obey blindly. to the order of a grand master. The Yazidis are, in fact, "subject to the sheikh or venerable, their spiritual leader, who fulfills the functions of patriarch and pontiff of the sect. He resides in the village of Assoian and has under his authority particular sheikhs who receive, transmit and a very great influence. He is, in fact, the one who governs in a way all the Shamanites. He makes the laws, defines what is good, what is bad, what is allowed, what is not. A color, a fruit that it prohibited acts immediately become illicit, and so illicit that one cannot would not be able to use it without falling under a kind of excommunication. Such is the horror inspired by what is thus prohibited, that, To express an impossibility, the people need only compare it to custom of the object that has fallen under this supreme prohibition*.

They carry out his orders. The sheikh general exercises power, even politically.

This absolute despotism of the grand master of the Cthildean cabal was that of the Prince of the Assassins, in Lebanon, where the Druze keep the documents the customs and morals of the cabal, which we explain elsewhere. He is the one of the grand secret master of high Freemasonry, that is to say, of the mason—"Kabbalistic nonsense ruled by the Jews. Our fathers in science," he said.

The contempt and hatred that pursued them, even into the idolatrous world, those who evoke and worship evil spirits, and who persecuted the Jew Kabbalist in the Christian world despite the brilliant successes he achieved there, these same sectarians continue today. Therefore, there exists "between the Yazidis and Muslims share an implacable hatred. The law allowed it, there is no Not long after, it will be up to the Muslims to kill them wherever they find them. European consuls were also forced to stop it, not knowing how to stop it.

the bloodshed, they asked the Porte for the right of nationality for the Yazidis, and they obtained for themselves the same protection as for the others peoples of the Ottoman Empire. But, while the massacres became less Frequent, the hatred that divides the two peoples has lost none of its rage and his fury... They are, rightly so, more odious and more persecuted than Christians under Turkish rule were never so. >• (P. 35, 43, 44, ibid.)

If the number of this cabalistic population is thus limited in In Kurdistan and Mesopotamia, we observe that the sect is spreading elsewhere and far away. 11 It is even said "that they have temples in one of the larger capitals in northern Europe, and it is not unlikely that the shamanic population spread across these various regions reaches the figure of several million. (Ibid., p. 45.)

Now, if such are these fanatics of the city of evil, these subservient ones hereditary from the primordial cabal, if such is blind obedience that they lend to their grand masters, to their sheikh, to their emir, let us repeat what we said earlier about the latter:

"It is likely that, through mysterious channels, his orders reach the most remote extremities of Asia, and perhaps even

* P. 38. This is the Taboo of the islands of the South Sea, etc.

Digitized by CoogLe

65i

THE JDIFS.

of Europe, where the cabal, which produced the Gnostics, those brothers of Yazidis, is recognized as "the mother of the occult sciences"; where she "almost single-handedly crushed all the other secret societies"; where all Masonic associations admit to owing him their secrets and their symbols boles > ; and where the Jews, "who have been the most faithful custodians of his "Secrets, in magic, were the great masters." (See above for these quotations)

One fine evening, one of those great, one of those formidable events arrives, bursts forth crises that shake the earth, and which, for a long time, the societies of the occultism prepares for Christian society, and perhaps then we will see undergone—to appear and occur openly, throughout the world, all the militias, all the fraternal and unknown sects of the cabal. The ignorant—rancid, the carelessness with which we will have lived of their muted evidence, of their affinities, with their immense ramifications, will in no way prevent them from to recognize each other, to give oneself, under any banner of an alliance Universal, the kiss of peace. They will eagerly line up under a single leader. More than one voice from high-ranking Freemasonry, that is to say, from the Kabbalistic Freemasonry, perhaps, will remind us then of something rather brutal—the cabal, finally victorious across the board, is, in the words of its current ape, "the science of sciences and the religion of religions" (Éliphas Lévi, Jog. et rit., p. 244, t. II, 1854.)

And it is then, these followers will tell us, that the tree of the knowledge of good and evil will have borne its finest fruits

All these things will seem less strange to the astonished reader. perhaps at first glance, he will want to reread them after having encompassed by a first reading of all the documents and thoughts which are the body and soul of our work.

END.

Digitized by Google

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Let the du RP Voisin y

Review seen

Talk IX

PART ONE.

CHAPTER ONE.

TRADITIONS.

The Jew is the lowest of men. — On the contrary, the Jew is the pre-

Pharisees of the

Rabbis; they are the source of the Talmud. – 1

Juelles are the

beliefs, and consequently what are the customs of the Jews?

The Jewish people, distinct from all other peoples. – The characteristic that defines it
The distinction varies as soon as the obsolescence of its religious law manifests itself.
This law was that of Moses. – It was attacked by ITdoiatric, whose doctrines are those of the primitive grasp of the Kabbalah (see at the end of this book), and by the rabbinical traditions from which the laltud. – So there is an abyss between these Talmudic traditions and the law of Moses, which, since Christ, the Jew cannot call his religious law without lying to history and to his faith. < to lt>

CHAPTER TWO.

THE ANCIENT PHARAISI, FATHER AND TYPE OF THE MODERN PHARAISI.

What the Pharisees are. – Devotions, maedrations, hypocrisy, popular washing, pride, prodigy of their power, example. – – Their eulogy in the mouth of the modern rabbi. – Their por- a hideous trait in the Gospel, which tells us: what they say is useless, And do not do what they do! – Why? – Strange virtue of The pulpit of truth. – For the Jew, the Gospel is nothing but legend unhealthy, and it is a glory for the Pharisee to be illetn in his pages. – The founder of the law of love and brotherhood, after the disciples. – Their portrait

Mr. two kids. – Prodigies of their blindness. – Puiwue the P

Harisien rejects the Gospel, let's leave

In order to generalize such a statement, is able to pull it

■ Conclusion: the reader

16 to.Ti

CHAPTER THREE.

FIRST DIVISION. – THE RABBINS, THE GREAT SANHEDRIN, THE CONSISTORIES.

What is a rabbi? Is he a pastor, a priest, or...? said the Jew today? – He's a doctor, most often a doctor of ignorance, and sometimes filling rather singular lengths-tions. – It does nothing that a layperson could not do in his place I – Rabbis practice a wide variety of professions; they can be butchers, shoemakers, retailers, etc. – Their education. – Elogestures that the rabbis give each other. – Cruel severity with which

Digitized by Google

556

TABLE OF CONTENTS

They are judged by the very principles of Judaism. – However the Jews, in order to give themselves the appearance of a serious cult, and to obtain-
The state's decree that this religion be salaried gives these rabbis the title of priests, pontiffs, pastors. – And these Jewish priests are
of secular institution; they owe their status as ministers of religion Jewish to Christian princes. – Phases of legal authority of Rabbis in France. – Napoleon used them for his recruitment.
military and its political police. – In short, the rabbi is just a doctor; and the Talmud tells us that, since the dispersion, there is no more doctors in Israel I – And yet, once upon a time, the Moses of Judaism Talmudic law decreed death without trial against anyone who denied the tradition of the rabbis ■ ■ 33 à 5-i dbl'xièhe ditision.

The Great Jewish Assembly of 1806, and the Great Sanhedrin of 1807, which is a false Sanhedrin. Jewish Concordat, falsifying the both the Law of Moses and the Talmud. – False statement of this as-seemed. – What the true Sanhedrin was. – A word from Mr. de Bonald on the Jews 54 to CI

TKOISIÈME DIVISION. I. – THE CONSISTORIES.

ibnetions i

political and police matters concerning consistories and rabbis.

1", a new Moses in the eyes of the Jews, and their intoxication. – killed as a distinct people by the very law that claims to merge them.

– Cruel paintings of the consistories, made by the hand of the Jews, –

This religious institution oversees the laity, that is to say the flock,

5. The direction of the pontiffs or the so-called priesthood of Judah. –

Grievances. – Fruit of these grievances; scandals. – a The scepter of

"Judas gave us a club." – The Christian government of the France has become the regulator of the Jewish faith. – A minister and a General governing the Synagogue. – Conclusion 658 a 76

CHAPTER FOUR.

THE TALMUD.

The cause of the hatred and contempt of peoples for the Jew lies in the Talmud. – The Talmud is the religious code of the Jew. – What is it?

What is this code? – He who does not have the key to the Talmud cannot decipher the

The mystery of Judaism. – Before the Talmud, or the oral and traditional law–

Traditionally, the law of Moses is abolished. – Whoever violates this law,

This pharisaical work of the rabbis deserves death without trial.

– The orthodoxy of Israel shaken; revolt against the Talmud. – Jews who have never Talmudicized: discovery; Jew who despises the Talmud– mud. – Mr. Renan's work. – The Talmud, condemned and burned by kings and popes, guardians of civilization. – The

The Talmud studied in itself and revealed by Jewish voices.

– The villainy, cynicism, and depravity of this code so dear to Judah.

His absurdities. – He places God below the rabbis. – Obligated to remove passages that offend Christians and Jews leave them blank and teach them by word of mouth – Disloyalty of these Orthodox. – They are "the indestructible core of the nation."

A duel to the death between Talmudic doctrines and civilization, which does not will be saved only when the conscience of the Jew is rebuilt on

Digitized by Google

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

557

another plan, because the Talmud is the very expression of the Synagogue;

It contains the Kabbalistic doctrine "which is the dogma of the high magic» 76 to <0t

PART TWO.

CHAPTER FIVE.

FIRST MISSION. – THE ORAL OF THE TILLUD IN ACTION.

The first man and the first woman; dignity of the human race
offspring of these two monsters. – Let us judge the tree by its fruit. – We Let us know the morality which originates in Christian dogmas:
Is there any connection between this one, which comes from Talmudic traditions?

– Saint Chrysostom, Father of the Elijah, on the customs of the Jew: pain-
prodigious ture. – Same description by the famous Simon Maiol to the Renaissance period. – Nothing had changed when Delamarre wrote wn monumental TraUéde ta poHce (1705.) Let us cease judging for a moment of Jewish doctrine by the customs of the Jew, and let us judge the Tainiud
through its text. – God creates Adam, who seeks a companion;
Finding no other thing suitable, he asked for one that was similar to him.

– Eve is worthy of Adam, and transmits to us the venom of the serpent.
The Talmud being the supreme law and belief of the Orthodox, and

The Talmud makes man regulate his actions according to his beliefs.
Jewish as he is. – An example of paternal sentiment tamed in France.

and in the nineteenth century, by the Talmud. – Proscription of the pre-varicator ■ . i0üâ M2

SECOND DIVISION. – MORALITY OF THE TALMUD IN ACTION. WOMAN AMONG THE JEW.

The young girl in her father's house next to her brothers, at odds to the explanations of Talmudic turpitudes I – The rabbi and the ele-

the status of women among the Jews; beautiful

Dense. – Reply to history. – Mr. Urémieux speaks as

History. – The Talmud

It equates women with slaves. – No law, not even in marriage.

simpler respect from her husband, for which she is oc

"The meat of the oushenes..." – She must tolerate it

his concubine even under the marital roof. – It suffices that
This concubine must not be unfaithful, for then she would not be than a brute in the eyes of the law. – A strange quirk of Jewish modesty.

– Right of manual correction of the woman and right of divorce.

– Before God and in religious gatherings, a woman counts

for nothing. – Teaching him the holy law is as guilty as he is.
learning obscenities. – Portrait of the Jewish woman by a painter of Ludarch blood. – Defects and qualities. – Proportion of women of A much worse life is lived among Jews than among Christians.
(Jewish confession). – The Jew owes it to the Talmud to provide for the proletariat its froth. – But the profession of Judaism redeems, in the eyes of the Talmudic scholars, all weakness of women 413 to 126

THIRD DIVISION. – THE MORALITY OF THE TALMUD IN ACTION. THE PROCEDURE OF THE JEW.

Is there a man without a neighbor? – Yes, the Orthodox Jew.
Apart from the Jew, every other man must be nothing but a brute in his eyes.
If he kills it, he kills nothing but an animal. – Words of Saint Epiphanius, Father of the Church, and of Mr. Michelet. – Explanation of this word: Defense to the Jews and the pigs to enter here. – Weaknesses and passions of the Jewish beliefs provoked against anyone foreign to their faith by their beliefs.

558

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

musical. – Examples. – Where does this hatred of the Jew go, and sur-everything against the Christian. – So robbing and killing the Christian is not an evil ; on the contrary. – A much greater number of wrongdoers rable among Jews as among Christians. – Uihercnts pays, ditt'A-
examples. – Power and universality of their means of evildoing! – Their alluring and murderous intent towards
The French army in the disastrous Russian campaign. – Re-implicit knowledge of the Jew's moral superiority, in pu-

since the reign of rabbi traditions

"the dregs of the people" from the reign of t

the Vospasian. – CmVelusion.

Ql'ATRIÈME DIVISIO.'I. – LE KOL MDHAI. TALMIRIQUE MORALITY.

Kol Nidrai, or perjury in religion. – Sacramental word;
Three Jews, the first to arrive, form a tribunal that can deto bind every Jew from his oaths and from any and all his pledges.
– That was denied. – That negation destroyed. – All three have the same authority like that of the tribunal of Moses, but they have it against the law.
Does the Talmud make a moral man a man in the wrong? – No
A social bond of promise or contract cannot therefore bind towards the clirélien the Juil with whom the clirétien makes a commitment*/ – A ceremony

nun unties each

one year, for the future and for the past, everything

Thunderous July or before committing to an engagement. – Grotesque formula employed by the July

who is rising from his commitments. – Tours and formulas which, in the espnl of July, have all validity to its pro-

masses and leave his conscience at peace. – These Talmudic customs-

what explains the hatred of the people, and the rigors of power

social against these po

rolling and antisocial lulalions. – a ser-

ment whose forma

The links and the text seem to strike bawdily

The Jew of superstitious terrors is imposed on the Jews in the most-art (the Christian states, and still survives in some of them. –
France. – The court of Colmar (February 10, 1809) and this oath. –
Kéllexions 4:48 to 4:18

FIFTH DIVISION. – TALMIDIQI MORALITY. the bone.

laire. – The Jew as usurer? – Paradox, for he cannot be one! – Trick and contradictions. – The Jews are devouring France. – Driven out for the crime of usury; they accept servitude and con-
 The most degrading editions to obtain the right to return. – In A few years ago, most of the Christian assets were...
 "Within their dependence." – Christians become the property of those whom they made their serfs. – The famous petition of Pierre de Clugny against these excesses. – The Jew, despite the persecutions he laments, He wants no other paradise than the land of his persecutors. – Letter ce- famous and magnificent of Innocent III denouncing their crimes, and engaging- gearth the princes to make them disgorge their ill-gotten gains. – These princes often accused without justice of greed. – Protection of the pontiffs extending on the Jew who seeks their justice, and on his property, as well as on The Christian. – The Archives of Champagne. – Example: the Jews of Troyes, etc. – Rates of their usury. – It was considered good, however- dWoirdans the Jews "a damned corporation from the outset, which Fit the profession of the reprobate." – A council condemns them to wear a

TABLE OF CONTENTS. B59

A mark that distinguishes them. – Definitive banishment under Charles VII. "for the crimes they commit every day." – Louis XIII re- new this decree. – Lorraine and Alsace, which are excepted, are consumed by their wear and tear. – Leopold's edict against him in Lor- Raine, in 1728. – The Attorney General of the Regent, in France, where Many Jews returned, calling them "the monsters of the so- civil society. – What the Jews are doing to Alsace. – Napoleon and the Jewish moneylenders. – The Jews in Alsace, and Mr. de Bonuld. – Sentence against the Jews by IM. Michelet, with this ending: "Of With each step, they are now on the throne of the world. – Effravanto excuse of the error. – In the Jew, it is the fruit of his belief religious. – Mr. Tüübsenel and the Jews. – King Louis- Philip and the Jews. – Mural for this chapter. . , , . 159 to 184

CHAPTER SIX.

L*ASSÀSStSXT TALMCDIQEE.

Murder, or sacrifices of Christians, ordered in some cases by the Talmud, which is the reversal of the Decalogue. – This crime of magical idolatry and cannibalism, mentioned in the Bible, is it? traditional. – These crimes disappear in the centers of civilization- sation; They have been at all times and in all places among the Talmudists saints. – Le Juil' denies them with his characteristic aplomb. – Examples and authorities. – The highest magistracy of Christians is not com- posed, according to the Jew, by ignorant people and executioners. – Document An authentic film that shows us the Jews committing this crime in broad daylight open, because they imagine they have a legal guarantee. – The princes constantly forced to take action against them. – One of these crimes. Committed four centuries ago, wmbable in all its details. To that on these sacred crimes, like the secular magistracy, –the Jews

 They call themselves a people with tender hearts! – Parallel story to the previous one; as The religious menu of Father Thomas and his servant. – Menus Details. Interrogations, official reports, unspeakable horrors.
 Jewish intrigues against justice and against the French consul.
 The pressure exerted by European Jews on the ruler of Egypt.
 – Gold. – Justice halted: its retreat after the condemnation of assassins. – Denial of the crime by all the Jews of the earth, evil-despite the abundance and precision of the details. – Words of the so-Dain of Egypt and Tiirôan. – Silence of justice obtained. –
 The Jew's fury and resentment against Mr. Thiers, because this minister Louis-Philippe dared to praise the conduct of the consul from the tribune.
 France against the assassins. – This worthy representative of France
 He is stopped neither by millions nor by threats. – The coins from the trial, where we draw, deposited at the Ministry of Justice manages. – These religious crimes bear such a striking resemblance, ^peront, that the thought of distmctes dates
 8 fades before the nature of the facts.– Conclusion.– Note. <81 to 219

CHAPTER SEVEN.

PSENÈRE Dinsicm. – Talmodic horale. Biblical antiquities.

SACRED ANTUROPOPACIA.

Always drawn towards polytheism, the Jew, from the earliest times ancients, indulges in the vile and atrocious practices of the Kabbalists

560

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

Sabaeans, that is to say, the first worshippers of the stars. – This
 What are these idolaters? – The Bible lists their crimes, which neither the
 The law of the prophets will not be able to stop. – This dreadful idol-
 The temple was established with its staff and furnishings even in the palace.
 lays of kings, even in the temple. – His supreme acts are the human sacrifices, and sacred ranlliropophagy, the eating of the Human flesh. – The Bible gives us the story and the cnf Re r.es
 superstitions, which the Talmudic tradition passed down to descendants of these prevaricating Jews 219 to 226

PEXIÉME DIVISION. – CD 3AWC , ET POOHQPOL.

True Talmudic scholars only sacrifice Christians in order to collect their blood; authentic examples. – Sacred uses of this blood, and which vary, like error, according to time and place; but necessilo to eat this blood which represents honor, and which is ap-Peeled his life. – His virtues, his inestimable value. – He heals, he Ordinary secrets of the Jew, – Confessions of one of the most famous rabbis in ^ full exercise of functions. – ■ Anger of Jewish reviews against This national celebrity was called a false priest. – Legitimate individualnation of the Juils dëlalniudisés. – Conclusion 226 to

PART THREE.

CHAPTER EIGHT.

FIRST DIVISION. – THE MARCH OF JEIF. WESTERN ORTHODOXY.

Everywhere it is being proclaimed that the Jew is on the march, that his morals are changing.
What a greater wonder! – So his belief has changed?
This is the shining sign of a new era. – The Indestructible
The core of Judaism remains formed by the Talmudic Orthodox; but, Below these are the new orthodox, the reformmists and the Jewish freethinker. – Furies of the new orthodoxes against the opponents of fanaticism and immutability tal-musical. – Attacks on Israeli fanaticism by the illustrious rabbi Jellinek. – Bitter Replicas of the Israelite Universe, organ of the ortbodoxy. – Judaism is no longer a religion, it is a thing death, etc. – A great schism thus separates Judah into various parts ties, but, oh wonder! without separating them if necessary. – Example. – Reason and cunning of reforms; it fails. – Grievances. – Wounds of Judaism. – Hypocrisy of the elders who tear each other apart; it They are reproached for it by their younger siblings. – Proselytism and change of role between the two parties. – How is orthodoxy judged? by the Jews of our lands? – The facts. – The illustrious Grand Rabbi-bin Klein el M. Isidor. – The latter is elected chief rabbi of France. – Curious and conclusive debates. – The Israelite family degenerates morality, and falls into complete decadence; such is the cry of the Jewish newspaper Neuzeit 242 to 254

SECOND DIVISION. – THE REFORMERS.

What do the reformers want? – To unite the present with the past; but com-
What? – They reject the Talmud, and the Bible is just a book to them.
of myths. – A religion [reliyare] is, especially for them, a something that should not bind man. – Folly to attribute to Moses and to Jesus what belongs to those who preceded them or followed them.

TABLE OF CONTENTS. 661

rent.

to the progress of time

P.S., to humanity. – Can call oneself an Israelite

whoever adopts unity

God, the immortality of God and of the soul, and inier

^reie louie ciiosü has its meaning. – lw i auipieur ue ceie uerie iiaara

the re

The universal legion, without disturbing any society. – Three curious examples of this practical tolerance. – The Third is from Dr. Sée, a professor at the Eans School of Medicine, accused of materialism and atheism. – The central consistory, supreme council–preme of the religious and social interests of Judaism, I don't believe less having to admit it into its fold. – Curious revelations. – A large number of Israelites seek to conceal their beliefs. – This sort of homage they pay to their faith is more convenient than that of martyrdom... 851 to 262

THIRD DIVISION. – THE FREE-THINKER JDIF.

Transition from the reformist Jew to the freethinking Jew. – Lamourette between the three pillars of the Bible placed face to face by the Israelite Hippolyte Rodrigue. – A single temple will contain all cults merged, under the banners of Reason and Philosophy of eighteenth century. – This temple is the Universal Israelite Alliance, open to all humankind, under the supreme leadership of Israel.

– Deed accomplished; she annihilated fanaticism and founded the great fraternity–nity.–What this alliance is.– Words of Mr. Crémieux, his pre–resident, one of the illustrations of Freemasonry and Judaism.

– She is preparing the Messianism of the new days; a “Jerusalem” of a new order substituted for the dual city of the Caesars and the Popes;” For “Israel is the greatness of God.” She is the protector of all. the cults, even if “against the laws still in force.” – The people extend their hands to Israel, and ask for forgiveness for the past. – He has not– There's no longer a center, but everything has changed! – Episode. – Example striking and almost unbelievable religious liberalism among the Jews.

– A great rabbi, a fearless defender of free thought. – A story.

– ün ^ut “to become a free thinker and remain an Israelite.” –Memo faith, the same aspirations animating the Jew, the Freemason and the freethinker sister or the one in solidarity. – Anyone who joins occult societies is mocked by the Jew. – lion love newly born for liberty does not me– knows only the Catholic faith. – Eckert's note. . . . 868 to 871

CHAPTER NINTH.

FIRST DIVISION. — WOCVELLE MORALE, HOCVELLE8 MOf.t'R8.

Social qualities of the Jew, half-freed from the Talmud, and judged according to Representatives of the Jewish press. — Observations limited to These two points: truthfulness, benevolence towards the Christian. — The Is the mere destruction of Talmudic orthodoxy sufficient for regeneration? Social status of the Jew? — What are the feelings of today? Jews for the Christian? — Protection granted to them by the emperors The Popes and the upper classes. — Universal ingratitude. — Would this ingratitude still be the same, and although the Jew Detalmudise? — Example. — Death cry of the Jew against Rome, Yes, it had always been his most inviolable refuge. — Pretext and word The universal order. — The Mortara affair. — A word on this affair and comparisons. — Reason for the feigned fury of the Jews. Their pro- pre example. — Excessive intolerance, hateful lies and slander- accusations against the Archbishop of Algiers. — The admirable letter of this pre-

36

562

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

Latin, and Jewish. — Enormous deeds. — Luke texts. — Deep traces * (le la croyanco dans les actes, après m0ine que la cropnee a disparu.

— ISotes. — Is there and curioiCcnnc diplomacy working in favor (The Jew. — Mr. Mirès to the Israelites and their coreligionists. — Russia) and the Jews 272 to 292

SECOND DIVISION. — NEW MOLLALeI NEW "QEUBS.

Continued. — Social qualities of the Jew. — Recognition. — Mr. Mirès j his advice to the Jews not to touch the gold of Relisc, and to him to show some gratitude—A clever reply, and fury.
Bitter reproaches about the appalling tyranny that subjected them to... tyrisii in the fl/ieUos. — Work intended to convey all Jews outside (the 1st ubominable city of Rofne; resullals. — yu'est-w donc (juo le (jliettoV — Refutation of the Jew by the descriptions or the words of Mr. Tliiers, former minister; — from Mr. Sauzet, former president of the Cliaiiibre of deputies; — of the anti-Catholic

..... t

Refutation of the Jew by the most remarkable declaration of their most large assembly (lais modern times. – This (iim the Jew owes to Church; a curious and admirable piece. – The Jew's ease, even frees itself from the constraints of the Talmud, from denying the word of its representatives. – Uctto parole n'était pour lui (lu'une ruse de guerre, il owes nothing but hatred to the Church and the papacy. – Acts of the Popes and of the Roman clergy, selfless defenders and protectors of the Jew;

They assure him for his worship a freedom of so much governance. ments refuse aujourd'tiui même au callioliôue. – The most iinula-_ • . j ■ ■ ■ ■ ■ ^ ■

Will the enemy cable of the Jew allow us to do better (|than he does himself–

Even today, his horror of all truth hurts him, his pages, the ones we quote, is he a man < civilization

can confess? – Exceptions. – Notes. – Lo Ghel

Avignon.

TBOISTH DIVISION. – NEW MOBALK, NEWTXI Eg M(KCBg.

Continued. – Tolerance of the Jew; his claims, his presumption arising from failures of the Christian faith and the Almudic faith. – Gran- the blows to his pride when he compares what he has been like since he stopped to believe, in what has become of Christian peoples since they lose faith. – He considers himself insulted by the freedoms of worship. Christian. – Curious examples. – Appeals to the principles of our Revolution. – Its weights and measures are always different for him (luo for others. – His atrocious way of understanding freedom of religion. – His mission. – For him, freedom of worship is the destruction of Christian worship. – Loyal protests of some Israelites against this fanaticism. – Cry from Germany against savage despotism of the Jew. – Equality is no longer enough for him; he dominates, and demands respect. exceptional. – A curious and unheard-of example! – Another example: Israel's insolence against the Emperor himself, which a moment before He called upon his angel, and why? – Another example: Christians threatened even in the heart of their ancient solemnities. – The The same right would allow him to demand the closure of churches, and the The suppression of the Christian name. – What the Jew is, and what he was Yesterday; immense progress, a word from Mr. Crémieux. – Duty of the Israelite to turn the very study of theology against the Church, and of the

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

to agree with Jewish philosophy, which is that of the ten-Third century. – Man or idea, the Judar Messiah is near.
 The peoples must fall at his feet. – "Jerusalem, city of "The future!" – The rationalist Kluber on the Jew, in his book Dit
 German Confederation right. – The theologians of Germany
 Magne on the Jew. – Summary of the chapter, and conclusion. 310 to 333

CHAPTER TWENTY.

PRF.iii(:nr division. – action do joif stm la mabciie des choses, orca.msation

DO LODAISM IN THE WORLD, ITS EFFECTS.

The minutes of the Jewish council or synod of 1869. – The constitution
 The natural history of Judaism. – What the Jew can, wants, and dares. –
 Thanks to the secret societies formed in his image, of which he is the soul, Each of his own is a living link in the immense network that encircles the world. – Role of the cronies of their trade who enstirs the globe. – This self-generated organization. – Necessthe ability to supplement it later with artificial associations. – Soa semi-licensed company, the Universal Israelite Alliance offers Jews a The link that unites them everywhere; a secret society, Freemasonry plays the same role in parallel – Nothing escapes, in the world social, to this multiple network including the high cabals of Judaism are the masters. – A small core of true initiates. – The the Jewish constitution of Freemasonry places the majority in his high councils of initiated and initiating Jews. – These societies have no other aim than the triumph of Jewish ideas, which are the Modern ideas. – Seductive aspects of these societies. – Betrayals and indiscretions that unmask the Jew. – The Jew and the lodges. – Jewish lodges; it is there that all the sons of all the revolutionary events brewing in Christian lodges.
 – Instructions. – Precious confession. – Same Judaico-maçonni<iuc in the new world. – The Masonic mystery is indispensable to the Synagogue within the very heart of the republics free. – Word of Kluber. – Inevitable antagonism between the Judaism and Christian States. – The triumph of the Jew over civilization
 Christianization is the inevitable result of this struggle. 333–349

DF.UXltsiE division. – MEANS OF INFLCENCE, ACXIII AIIIES: the OII.

Gold is the master of the world; gold possesses us, and the Jew possesses–
 The Jew owes his gold. – The enormity of the power that the Jew owes to his gold,

Gold was not the sinews of war and peace, the desired thing for families, the seasoning of all honor, the crowning of all glory and of all nobility. – The statesmen of Europe on their knees before the Jew. – Nothing without the Jew's consent; how he reigns under the species or appearances of Christian kings. – – Through gold, he governs The occult societies that govern the world. – Puksance without limits of your finances in a world where all religious belief She dies, jeered by the Jew and his auxiliaries. – Only one remedy to this immense evil. – These facts, this power, astonish us: astonishment that one experiences one of the prime ministers of the Great-Brittany, and its saying that it would be madness to forget it. – Final note on one of the potentates of Judaism. 349 to 357

36.

564

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

THIRD EDITION. – THE PEBLICAL AND ERGERT WORD, THE PRESS.

Another power of which the Jew makes himself an auxiliary; his representatives Honorable, and not. – Services that the Jew admits to owing him. – She has not yet finished Judaizing the world, but patience – The various categories of men in the press. – Despotism without limits of the master of a newspaper. ■– In many newspapers, what Is he a despot? – Mystery It– Characteristics of his position. – His merit lies in the safety of his niece in the choice of his stewards or of his literary workers. – Places teeming with these people of high and low pay. – Like all property, every newspaper constantly changing owners, tenants, and consequently of es-taken.– The Jew buys, exploits, or has exploited most of the took, – The Jmr aenête, exploits or makes < important sheets. – Their influence on Their important role. – Their influence on opinion, on ideas religious, commercial, industrial, and political enterprises tics: the Jew, through them, deceives and leads governments and gu-Vernés. – Despite the large number of honest writers7~Ta

The Jew is interested in buying it, and no one has any more gold to pay for it.

But does the press have any real value? – üxem magpie too

brilliant as it is sharp. – A government and a great journal

organ of financial feudalism. – Whatever the power

newspapers, the Jew almost everywhere is or becomes one the master.

but without appearing. – More than any other country, Germany...

shows that power in July. – The events in Europe

depend on about ten men, Jews or auxiliaries of the Jew.

A frightening and prodigious word from the former Prime Minister of Great Britain on Judah ^ ^ ■

Brittany, of Judah's blood, Disraeli. – This word and that of Mr. the Prince of Metternich confirms our pages. – Appendix. – Pro-

the digious depravity of the Austrian clergy in the past: it was the work-re of Jansenism and the Jew. – Prodigious depravity of the senses moments of honor and patriotism, and by whom... 357 to 382

FOURTH DIVISION. – INTELLECTUAL SUPERIORITY OF THE JEW OVER THE BREAN;

A WORD ON MORAL SUPERIORITY.

The Jew, armed with his means of influence, is today the man who prime and which directs; an irresistible force, and which he adds to the forces that we already know of him, is the incomparable superiority of his intelligence: – Enception. – Relentless cultivation of this superior-priority; why and how it asserts itself in all careers.
– It is proof of its imperishable vitality. – This superior-

The nature of this thing bursts forth even within the inner circles of the classes; des-picturesque description. – The Jew, so quick to grow, is nevertheless not-not an upstart; he is a gentleman (

his rights of nobility. – Another painting, flattering and true,

Great Britain, Mr. Disraeli. – How did this superiority pre-
He compares the Jew to the empire of the world, which he covets, and which he already exer in part. – The intellectual superiority of the Jew over the Christian is-

Is it accompanied by moral superiority? 382 to 393

FIFTH DIVISION. – PHYSICAL SUPERIORITY OF THE JEW, HIS CONSTITUTION.

Its entirely exceptional and privileged constitution; immunity from infirmmites and diseases that afflict every other human family.

TABLE OF CONTENTS. 565

Consequently, the Jew, the people of the Diaspora, is the only people truly cosmopolitan, that is to say, where each individual can ha-to bite with impunity into any place on earth. – Causes of this an exceptional privilege, according to certain unflappable commentators.

"privilege; the Jew has no]

Seconi

never cultivated the arts that Primarily hail and Taieili

ui foriifieni le

body*, its members are generally es; and for-

so much so that its vital strength, its longevity, prevails over that of others three peoples. – Examples, statistics, various authorities. – But, to hear the phenomenon of this mocking vitality which occurs in the sense inverse of the vigor of the body, and that of its immunities, a new-

This phenomenon signals this unique cosmopolitan. – Is it?
"fertility ^ ^ ^

DnA

sudden.

[jue la sclepce ne peut exp iquer, et ^ is reminiscent of that of Israel in Egypt at the time of the miracles of the Exodus.

– ■ Examples. – This constitution, which made the Wandering Jew and disilus tenacious missionary of the or not mis*

Perseus, the most indestructible man, the most tenacious missionary

Does evil, the apostle of occultism, predispose him?

to the most universal, the most tenacious and the best endowed

Gospel ZionistsT..... – Statistical tables of the element

Judaism, widespread throughout the world, and a summary of the superiorities of this people; what they might dare and do at a given moment.

Example in the following chapter 394 to 40

CHAPTER ELEVEN.

CNE POPULATIOK JDIVF. PU MOYE.N ACE iC PL.EIN MILini DU Dll-NEUVIÈME SLCCLE.

A word to pose the question. – The Jewish wave, we said, can, on a certain day, cover a point in Europe and approach it pray. – Who would these Jews be? Medieval Jews, and here they are.

– Their sudden demands, supported by all their compatriots from outside and from some of the powers of Eurofie. – How

And why. – Kumania, the scene of their invasion. – Struggle of the Romanians, similar to that of the Christians against the Jew in the Middle Ages.

– Reaction against the Jew.. 40 to 447

The PERSECUTIONS, details. – Account and grievances of the Jew. – Cries distress call, appeal for intervention from Jews abroad and from the powerful

sessions. – Raids on Jews, imprisonments, brutal expulsions.

– Desolate scenes. – A few months of respite, and the fury of The population reignites; looting, violence, synagogues overturned, horrific abuses 417 to ii0

InSTIGATEUBS oc ADTEPBSDE ces PEBSECOTIONS ; ACCC8ATION8 HAHDIES

OF THE JEW. – Denial of justice by the prince, elected by Mr. de Bismarck. –

Aon's powerful minister is Bratiano; this leader of the democrats is

The great persecutor. – The enormities he commits, his denials

In short, the great culprit, in the sense of the Jew, is, as in the means age, the prince who dares to protect his subjects from him. 480 to 428

OH YES, THE TOBS? – The enouéte denotes that the provocateurs of excesses Those who committed these acts were the Jews. – The Jews of the West, after having made the echoes of the Romanian Jew, admit to not knowing how to reconcile the deposits-tions. – The Jew opposes freedom of the press and of the tri-bune, of which he is a late champion in the Christian states where his influence dominates. – If the government declares itself against the Jew, He merely yields to the pressure of the national will. – This

S66

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

Romanian nation, ost-cllo barbarian? – Romania has always been key the refuge of the persecuted; its people are, according to the memorandum of Jews, a model of religious tolerance, kindness, and hospitality. Words by Messrs. Lrémieux and Monidiore. – If the Romanian has not chanKÔ do niæur.s in the blink of an eye, and without motive, the wrong would be Therefore, as in the Middle Ages, in the exactions and iniquities of the Jew? – A word from Mr. de Metiernicli on Germany, applicable perhaps-to be in that country tomorrow. – Is what is happening there for Europe, which has ignored the winds of its old history, a pro- warning evidential? 422 to 4fl8

Ton- nTCTATOKiAL PC JniF s'adbessakt aux souvkbaiks. – The Romanians reduced to resorting to cunning against the Jew and against foreign powers reduced to intervening as Jew-washers. – With what ink the citizens beyond the Jewish nation, worthy emulators of the citizens of the sovereign people, write Wind to the potentates. – Outstanding example and patience of princes. The Jew, "faced with the atrocities" being committed, laments "do Hypocrisy (which reigns above and below. 428 to 431)

I.VTERVEWTIO.N DES PIIISSARKS PANS lTnTÉRKT DU JclF, ET MALGENRÉ LE PRINCIPLE OF NON-MERVKMIOX ADOPTED BY the El-

LIBERAL NOPE. – The Jew affirms that this Itypocrisio of the Rou-hands is caused by the fear of the powers, whom he summons to intervene come. – Insistence of the head of the VALhance tsraéliie tmverseUe with governments. – Notable examples, condescension and Eagerness of ccutt.-ci. – Letter from Mr. de Bismarck. 432 to 437

Immense IMPOSTER. ARTISTIC m; Jlif. – The Jews treated by the nation like leprosy and the filth of the earth. – Lo pavs c

[their is delivered, and what they cover, takes on a sinister air. – d declare

For the Jews, it means renouncing all influence. A37 to 442

The cause of the unpopularity of the Jew and persecutions that he endures is the same as in the Middle Ages. His expectation and his

EXPECTATIONS FOR DOMINATION ARE THE SAME. – The concert of me-Caught and driven by the fury that pursues the Jew, it remains unchanged only because that the Jew has not changed. – Overwhelming documents, and a manifesto admirable state bombs of the country against the Jew. – In this lam-Beautiful in its current history, we find the Jew of the centuries still alive and well.
ancients. – Terrors he inspires by his unsociable habits, by rinsing, the illuminating increase in its number. – Action ca-pitiful situation regarding the country's vital forces: rampant usury, monopoly.
adulteration of foodstuffs. – The Jews are diametrically opposed-their opposites in all things to other men; their tendency is to rise up upon the ruins of others. – They hope to rebuild themselves into a distinct, then dominant nation. – They are trying to steer in Romania, this Jewish state, which would be the first realization of their wishes... – Bill formulated to ward off the danger social issues exposed by this authentic document. – Cries of the Jews; Europe s'emciit. – • Letter from Mr. de Dismark reassuring these Jews against the Intentions of Romanian statesmen. – Conclusion. Ui to iü9

CHAPTER TWELFTH.

FIRST DIVISION. – THE JUDAIAN MESSIAH.

The Orthodox Jew never ceases to hope for a universal revolution which will raise him, through his Messiah, above all peoples. – Israel

567

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

Has he or she retained his naive and robust faith in Mosgie? Yes, but
The Jew, for some years now, is no longer, here and there, a shadow.
Iui-m6me. – Rabbi Lazard announced that the restoration of Jerusalem Salem is merely an ideal thing, which does not, therefore, harm their national patriotism. – The German reformers held the same language, because talking about realization would be a obstacle to their emancipation. – The English Jews are more frank, and the vast majority of Jews believe in the Me^ie. but defense is done (set the date). – The Messiah of the Talniudiants remains the pivot

a work of clarity. – The unification of the groups must be carried out, all that Israel may be, above them all, the perfect-Eap. – The tre, au-aessus a eux tous, le pcupie-rape. – Le – the homeland of the heart and the ultimate goal of every Jew, it is united toast erSel. – ic uu v:u;ui Cl uf minn U ui; luui rfuii, u üai.

So, Judea again. – The Messiah will not be of this nature
M , – -r- ^ ' 'iSt'”- ■

diviio. ^ – He will rebuild Jerusalem and bring back the redeemed Jews. –
The Talmudic Jew is nourished by the hope of conquest and the 6|)Oliation of the (peoples who grant him citizenship. – Proof, anecdotes. – For the progressive Jew, the Messiah is the philosophical epo-current sophistry, which overturns Isaiah and the Talmud; for the or- Jew Iliodexe, this era is one of the stages that prepare for the Messiah real. – superstitions. M^sianic families, des-Descriptions. 460 to 488

DtLXlèXE DIVISION'. – THE MESSIAH JDDAIJL'E, SLITE , ILÉALITÉS E'i CONJECTURES.

The expectation of a Messiah, future ruler of the peoples, is the "autent of the "core of the nation." – Despite differing opinions
The reformists' teeth, an obvious choice, would rally them to the believers.
If some seducer were to claim to be the Messiah, the Jews would be inclined to
Are they fighting on their side or on the side of the states that granted them citizenship – Clear connections between the Messiah whom the Jew awaits, and the Ionime whom the Christian calls the Antichrist. – Everything is pre-prepared for the great cosmopolitan unity to which this man must belong.
the expression. – When the work of dechristianizing the world, will the world not accept as master a fascina-
'of Jewish race'/ – Examples of dominant figures, then unanimously agreed. – Examples of sudden occurrences from nothingness to rise to the pinnacle in times of turmoil.

From the steam train that carries ideas and things, how to be astonished that from the bosom of Judah should arise the one who will realize the ic of cosmopolitan sovereignty, of which the Jews are the apostles –

Will not Moses place himself at the head of some forniidable
Exodus? – Can't the Jews at least make themselves second best?
And the additional forces of some conqueror? – Examples of resources or Israel knows how to accumulate in one place; possible ites. – A glance cast from the heights of history on the have,

48Ü to m

CIIAL'ITL'.E APPENDIX.

THE TWO CABALS OR THE SCIENCE OF TRADITIONS.

FIRST DIVISION. – IA C.VBALE DIVINE.

Kabbalah, or oral traditions of the Synagogue prior to the biblical books bliquies. – The two branches of this cabal of divine order. – The 568

TABLE OF MATlfiles.

pbale is entrusted to a special dodocleure corps. – Corruption do the cabal, which became a receptacle of magical superstitions and...
Roélie. u09 to 5U

SECOND DIVISION. – THE MAGIC OR LEFT-WING CABAL, THAT IS TO SAY THE PBARISAIC CABAL.

It is the dogma of magic, the key to secret societies or to Occugliam. – The sovereign power it gives to men who possess it. – The Jews, our masters in ma

ouch, were the

the most faithful custodians. – Its origins. – El the one is "born"

"By the need for independence," that is to say, for revolt. – She gives knowledge of the

the gods of this world, and governs all to be by virtue of letters, c

Words and Numbers – The World

Key to the invisible world, the secret of ancient spiritualism. – The caballista must unite body and soul with the Angels who exert their influence on the stars; and it is by their name that one masters them. – This Mary Sidereal is that of the mathematicians of Home, that is to say Chaldeans or astrologers, who, after having been the oracles of the In the world of payees, oracles were almost always present. in the Christian world. 5<i to 515

All dogmatic religions, a learned Kabbalist tells us, are stemming from the cabal. – a All the mafia associations "They owe their secrets and symbols." – These traditions are ja-loosely preserved by the priesthood; and, according to him, the Clavicles The üalomon are the ritual, let's say the grimoire, of a Pope. – The The principal receptacles of Jewish Kabbalah are the Zohar and the Talmud. – It is found among all peoples, in everything that It is a mystery, and this mystical tradition descends from the Chaldeans. of Ham. – Abraham is a magician and cabalist, because he Chaidéen. – Magic and goëtio inseparable from the Kabbalah. – The Jews, who are the most faithful keepers of the secrets of the cabal, are In magic, the great Moors of the Middle Ages. – Representing the spirit of darkness, or of occultism, they were the missionaries and the major threads of occultism. – The Kabbalistic traditions gliding-sends their venom into the various branches of human knowledge Maines because of the role played by the Jews. – Example: Medicine is being developed by the Jews; it is surrounded by nature. – They mix medicine with astrology. – The councils and the Fathers of The Church against these practices. – To complete the perversion of science social, the abbeys, whose princes are Jews, force penalization the Kabbalistic doctrine among the Templars, which the Freemasons... nent for ancestors. – Their purpose. – Kevelations of their successors-sisters 585 to 544

Digitized by Google

French

English

Full text of " The reign of Israel among the Anglo-Saxons "

See other formats

ROGER LAMBELIN

THE JEWISH PERIL

THE REIGN OF ISRAEL

AT THE HOUSE OF

THE ANGLO-SAXONS

PARIS

BERNARD GRASSET

EDITOR

61, RUE DES SAINTS-PÈRES, C1

MCMXXI

Your reproduction, translation and adaptation rights reserved for all countries.

Copyright by Bernard Grasset 192 1

THE REIGN OF ISRAEL

AT THE HOUSE OF

THE ANGLO-SAXONS

FROM THE SAME AUTHOR

Sicily, Noies et Souvenirs (Desclée and de Brouwer.) Fila de Chouan, contemporary novel (Plon-Nourrit).
Our merchant navy (Ohelemel) nale).

CHARLES MAURRAS

APOSTLE

of Integral nationalism

as a testimony of high esteem

and cordial devotion

THIS BOOK

where are exposed various aspects

of imperialism

of the International Race

IS DEDICATED

FOREWORD

There is more than a year of danger:
A Jewish reign.

Charles Maurras.

(French action of October 4, 1920.)

Thirty-five years ago La France appeared Jewish. A Veæample tfHippolyte Taine, historian of the € Jacobin Conquest”, Edouard Drumont had wanted to make a presentation of the “Con-

Without doubt the great writer did not bring, in his works, the same serenity, in his seeks the same scrupulous criticism of texts and documents, that the Author of the Origins of contemporary France. The passion of his

5 FOREWORD

temperament, Yardeur of his indignations generous sometimes took him a little beyond borders of controlled truths; its nice-' thies and his personal antipathies show through also appeared in his judgments and a tendency dance/taunted to the generalisa lions could Lead to formulate on certain subjects random assertions.

But we must pay tribute to his memory as a Frenchman informed and a great patriot, a grateful tribute. He reported an agonizing political danger.
political and social in an era with little per-
Some people suspected its existence; it showed how were carried out, from pins OHun century, Jewish penetrations into the various environments ; how Israel, marvelously grasping the psychology of democracies, had succeeded seized by the high banks, the press, theater; how he had maneuvered to exercise a preponderant influence on V public opinion, parliaments and governments verments.

The books of Edouard Drumont, his lessons great campaigns of La Libre Parole, corro-Bored by scandals such as Panama and the Dreyfus affair, unleashed a blast of anti-Semitism. This agitation is quite: violent, but more superficial than deep – except in Algeria – calmed down when they were forgotten the causes which had contributed powerfully to develop it.

FOREWORD

The time had not come to make com-take from the masses the mortal perils that ^accession to power of the Jews and their creatures could make France run.
So the prophetic calls of Dr. Amont ended come to wake up only echoes far away tainted and assimilated. His powerful voice became veiled; the circulation of his newspaper jtechis and, as he had to ensure its e.cistenre, its administration gradually accepted announcements, information mations, financial claims emanating from Jewish sources. The Free Word becomes a leaf of the boulevard, like so many dens, and Edouard Drumont, in the. last years of his life, no longer had the same freedom of movement, the same combative independence, the same spirit leresque than in the days when, paladin without fear in service of a great cause, he did not fear nothing, except that the sky did not fall,...

The great war came. Anyone who was a little aware of diplomatic life and

FOREWORD

military of Germany as well as questions Balkan nations, sensed it coming soon the spring of igi2. The Israelites were,

r

in all States, too well informed to not having foreseen the world conflict. had it they desired? Had they through occult schemes worked on its triggering: } Doubt is permitted, but what is indisputable is that they had admirably prepared to, draw, from your war and po.r. who would put Jin, considerable advantages and additional jmiswhich we have. instead of being afraid.

Israel's upward march towards conquest for the Universe which, until then, had been careful, discreet, slow, marked with time stopping, would suddenly take cadences rapid, the pace of a triumphal march.

strength and also with a disconcerting candor.
Next to him, German imperialism, British imperialism, American pride are a few things. Complicity is blindness of the belligerent States favored the designs of Israel; international socialism and the international finance have powerfully facilitated their achievement. From President Woodrow Wilson and he/. Lloyd George, the Jews have reached to make their agents the most docile and the most dedicated and } maneuvering the rulers of United States and Great Britain, the representatives sentiments of a race of thirteen or fourteen thousand millions of individuals, scattered throughout all your countries of the globe, have succeeded in imposing on the world a special peace which is truly a pax judaica and a supergovernment, called League or League of Nations, of which they are the masters.

FOREWORD 5

As a sign of victory, they obtained land in Palestine for their people, without territory since the Dispersion, a "national home"
and, under the aegis of the British Empire,
the flag of Israel already flies over Jerusalem,
the Holy City of the Christian world, the metropolis incomparable religious idea and civility reading.

How could this have happened in just a few years?
this Jewish conquest? The sacred union observed during the war It will certainly be made easier;
but, for a long time now, the Israelites had occupied positions in all countries solid, giving them the means to trigger rapid offensives, when there arise favorable circumstances.

6 FOREWORD

In Russia, they had many of their co-religionists in the party, Cadets; they were the masters of secret organizations and socialist groups.

the intrigues, the failures* the betrayals which demoralized the Court, the nobility, trained and led to the fall of Czarism. The Empire* that alone kept its frame upright government, was driven by anarchy when Tzar Nicholas was deposed from his throne.

Jewish socialists imposed by force to Russia, decapitated and discrediting the regime pi ns or less communist of the Soviets and he just consult the fairly consistent statistics data, emanating from various sources, to con- birth the composition of the tyrant government fucking and bloody*, of which risraétitr Trot sic g and Lenin are the leaders. Of the 22 members for- manting the Superior Council of Commissioners of the people, jj are Jews; and, if we total the senior officials managing ministries and major published services, we see that /f5S among cu,r, out of 55(1, are Jews.

In Germany* it is in the field of great industry that the Israelites had conquered capital positions. They were the tycoons. The most powerful company in navigation of the world, before the war, the "Hamburgh eoise-American" hadn't she at its head is Doctor Bail in? But they would send also a preponderant action in the circles socialists and it is good to remember that the August 4 you//, aa Keiehstag, it's by Vorgan of the Jewish Haase that the party of social democracy democracy promised its full support to the government imperially.

À.V'ANI-1'ft0POS i

After the defeat of the Central Powers and Abdication or deposition of sovereigns rulers of Austria-Hungary and the States Germans^ everywhere Jews are brought to power by socialist organizations. Thanks to them, a democratic camouflage takes place tick and republican, which will be worth to Germany Protestant, especially during the Inter-Conferences allies of Paris, your benevolence from the president Wilson and Mr. Lloyd George.

strong forward in the regions of power, and if reactions begin to occur against their invasive activities on the other side of the Rhine^ they no less conquered a political power infinitely greater than the one they had before the conflict my* diall

8 FOREWORD

But it is above all citing the winners that their rise to the heights deserves to be studied die in its causes and in its processes. There he there were no political cataclysms, no shortcomings to be able to. It is by you Natural play of the institutions, through the personal action of politicians and Israelite financiers, through the press to their devotion, thanks also to the intelligences and complicity found among those in power and the heads of state, that the con-Jewish quests. In the United States and England, this conquest was also facilitated by displays nities of a philosophical and religious order, because Puritanism proceeds, to a large extent > of the Jewish spirit.

The documents consulted, the results o/ired in your newspapers and periodicals an-English, American and Jewish, the observations made yours and the testimonies collected in Egypt and in Palestine, the information provided by correspondents well placed to be exactly informed about certain activities from Israel, allowed me to follow quite closely the stages of reestablishment of Jewish rule in the Anglo-Saxons (i).

FOREWORD

No doubt new facts will be discovered green and revealed which will later allow to base on definitive foundations the history of this astonishing conquest; but it seemed to me that, planted and which it was important to report to the patriots of all countries the dangers of Imperial Jewishism,

The tide that overwhelmed Russia, which encircles the Anglo-Saxon countries, rises further towards new conquests.

To safeguard Christian civilization and the independence of peoples, it is urgent to build powerful dikes, capable of to stop and push back its waves.

R.L.

(i) I would like to express my gratitude to the correspondents who wanted to help me document this study. and very particularly to MG Champanhac who, from London, sent me valuable information as well as a series of Anglo-Jewish plays and publications of the greatest interest.

FIRST CHAPTER

Xa Jewish conquest of England*

The Israelites successively acquired all the civil and political rights of British citizens. — A Rothschild in the Chamber of Commerce. — Benjamin Disraeli created Lord Beaconsfield Prime Minister of the United Kingdom, — The Jews in South Africa. — Jewish friendships of Edward VII. — Israel's hold on government during and after the World War.

About twenty years ago appeared under the title: The Englishman is isvaëllte (i) a curious brochure summarizing the work of British Israelite Association on the origin of the race English. It is admitted that only two of the twelve tribes of Israel, returned from the captivity of

(i) Jouve, publisher.

12 THE REIGN OF ISRAEL AMONG THE ANGLO-SAXONS

Babylon, populated Palestine during the birth of Jesus Christ. The others had emigrated to the northwest of Europe and settled would be established in the British Isles. Of the biblical and historical connections, linguistic considerations are invoked to support of this thesis. I am content with report to scholars, ethno-specialists graphy, leaving them the care and responsibility ability to establish its degree of veracity or truth semblance.

What is beyond dispute is the thrust Jewish who, for several years, has manifested herself celebrated in the United Kingdom, with an energy increasing.

Troubled periods in people's lives have always been favorable to the children of Israel. The agony of the former linked "one, the Revolution and the Empire facilitated their emancipation and the rise of their fortune in France and in Europe continues mental.

In England, the Jews took a long time to conquer the civil and political rights of citizens, and this because of their religion and not of their race.

To occupy certain municipal offices and to sit in Parliament, it was necessary to pronounce a oath formula including these months: "I swear 'upon the true faith of a Christian'. The Israelis-scrupulous people could not take this oath solemn without renouncing their religion; and like many of them had acquired in the commerce and finance important situations ensuring them real influence, they strive to modify the terms of the service is lying.

THE JEWISH CONQUEST OF ENGLAND 13

In April 1830 a representative from Norwich, Mr. Robert Grant, took the initiative of a bill in this goal. After a long debate, in which Macaulay, the bill was rejected. Three years later, Mr. Grant returned to the charge and succeeded in making accept the bill by the House of Commons, but the Lords rejected him.;

However, in 1844, under the government of Sir Robert Peel, the law which excluded the Israelites of municipal functions. It was abnormal and illogical that a Jew, who nothing can sin of becoming sheriff of a county or magistrate that, was unfit, because of his religion, to be elected mayor, alderman or even member of a Common Council. Lord Lyndhurst then luck-bound, introduced a bill, repealing in this case the Christian formula of the oath, which passed without difficulty in the House of Lords.

THE ILLEGIBILITY OF ISRAELI OATHS LKS ANGLO-SAXONS

The question of the parliamentary oath was new raised in 1847 when Baron Lionel Rothschild fled. elected deputy by the city of London. A Jewish bill, introduced once again more, having been rejected, Lionel Rothschild resigned his seat, but to immediately represent himself before the electoral college, which re-elects him. So he came to Westminster and advanced before you "speaker" asking to take an oath. He pronounced the words relating to the lance and to the Jew, but omitted the "nor in law bankrupt of conscience". Invited to withdraw, he obeyed and went to sit on one of the gentlemen overlooking the gallery and where the spectators are admitted. Of the he could follow the proceedings without taking any bets.

Another Israelite, Mr. David Salomons, elected Member of Parliament for Greenwich, in 1847, had more audacity than a co-religionist. He introduced himself as him in front of the table where the members of the Crown and omitted the words constituting, for an Israeli, an abjuration; but, invited to withdraw, he took his place among the members of the Parliament and refused to comply with the injunctions of the speaker.

THE JEWISH CONQUEST OF ENGLAND 15

Insulted by the Tories, encouraged by the Whigs, Mr. David Salomons sat in his chair. It took the intervention of the serfeant-at-arms to get it out of the enclosure vee.

But this scandal led the Commons to bring before the Exchequer Court a claim request for interpretation of the terms of the oath. By three votes to one, the Court held that, only Christians were qualified to pro-recite the sacramental words opening the gates of Westminster.

New efforts were still made to Communes to allow the admission of Jews, but the House of Lords rejected all the bills voted for this purpose until 1853. This year, thanks to the efforts of Lord John Russell, a law was passed which did not repeal the formula transversion of the oath, but which authorized the Israelites to omit contradictory words with their religious faith.

The emancipation of the Jews was thus completed. The leader of the House of Commons was then a young purebred Israelite, Benjamin Disraeli, who "was expected to play a leading role plan in the history of his adopted country.

16 THE REIGN OF ISRAEL AMONG THE ANGLO-SAXONS

Entered early into the fold of the Church Anglican, following the example of Ricardo and Goschen, he only served the aspirations and interests of Israel. When he soothsayer! minister, we can! say without exaggeration (pie it was the Jewish idea that came to power. Already, as a writer, as a novelist, he had become the advocate, the champion of his race, with a talent, a skill, to which we are obliged to pay homage. In the Biographical political phy of George Bentinck, he consacred to the Jews a chapter full of eloquence and of emotion; and, in Coningsby by the organ of banker Sidonia, one of the most vigorous per-recounted their misfortunes, provoked in their favor sympathy and pity.

Disraeli did even better. At the time when the Count Arthur de Gobineau claimed, through ethnic and historical considerations, establish the superiority of the Germans over others peoples, he imagined a theory of races, which he called "the key to history" and which tended to demonstrate the preeminence of the Israelites over all other humans.

Mr. Alexandre de Haye summed it up exactly in a few sentences: "The peoples do not rent their vigor, their morality, their aptitude to great things only on the condition of keeping their pure blood of all mixtures. If they leave a foreign blood mingling with theirs, the virtues which constituted their originality and their distinct strengths appear soon... There is no superiority real than in intact breeds, which have passed down from generation to generation, not just a language or a religion, but blood, the original sap (i)". The conclusion can be guessed. Among the privileged races, the most pure of all is that of the Semites, where the group of Jews shines with the most sparkling brilliance.

THE JEWISH CONQUEST OF ENGLAND 17

This cult of his race inspired all the acts of the public life of Lord Bcaconsfield, and, thing strange, few people in England and Europe understood this and anticipated the consequences quences.

Its eastern policy is fundamentally Jewish. Already, in Coningsby, the novelist had somehow predicted the Russian Revolution and reported the mysterious diplomacy, organized by (ij Letters from Lord Bcaconsfield to his sister. Paris, Perrin, 1889.

18 THE 1MWXE OF ISRAEL AMONG THE ANGLO-SAXONS

the Jews who would settle in the Empire of Tsars; later, as prime minister, he had directed towards the Orient the ambitious aims from England. He wanted to raise up the Jewish East only to bring out the future masters of world.

A Zionist before the letter, he had the prescience that British imperialism, of which he made himself the fiery champion, will prepare! one day the paths to Israeli imperialism.

This is how this languid-eyed Semite—red, dark complexion, long curly hair, whose nervous voice knew how to mock in turn and flatter, romantic in appearance, dressing like Brummel or Barbey d'Aurevilly, dreaming of glory literary and political conquests, more often heavens to frequent among the duchesses than to live in the privacy of his co-religionists, became the leader of the Tories, the happy rival of Gladstone and won the good graces of his wife. veraine. His career was at its peak when the Queen Victoria accepted the crown from his hands Imperial India and the Berlin Congress con«» crowned his reputation as a great statesman.

The purpose of this Congress was to resolve the .delicols and many problems posed by the

THE JEWISH CONQUEST OF ENGLAND IQ

Russo-Balkan War. Lord Beaconsfield did not fail to impose on the Romanians, whose territory was amputated from Bessarabia, special protection measures for Jews.

Despite the presence at the Berlin Congress of prince of Bismarck, Lord BeaconsQeld appeared there to play the leading role and the prestige it con- quit was not without impressing quite a bit the Israelites of Germany and Austria. Number of Jews from Frankfurt, Hanover, Ham- town and Vienna said to each other that England, where one of their number could rise to such heights

a chosen kingdom. Crossing the sea of North, they came to seek their fortune in London and in major British centers. They received there—received a warm welcome, found early support heavens, conquer enviable situations in banking, industry or commerce and several of them or their descendants are proud to be included in the red book today of Peerage.

The gold and diamond mines of South Africa South, the speculations to which they gave place, exercised at Stock E.Tphanrje an irre—

20 THE REIGN OF ISRAEL AMONG THE ANGLO-SAXONS

sisfible attraction. Bankers, financiers, com—from the City, enticed by the news, learning the daily discovery of deposits ments and veins, embarked on the steamships bots of the Union and Castie lines which served the Cape Colony and hastily caned the Transvaal.

Jews dominated among these adventurers of finance and their desire for profit, their aptitude study to create banks, counters, found companies, quickly placed them in front ranks of these Ci tlanders who threatened to overwhelm the Rand's sparse population.

For political, moral and reli—gieuses, the farmers of the Transvaal, descendants of Dutch settlers, nourished by strong reading of the Bible, could not attend without sadness and even without indignation at the invasion of their territory by these thousands of adventurers who, not content to live as they please, to install in Johannesburg bars, gambling dens, music halls, were quick to demand a significant participation in administrative life tive of the country.

President Kruger and legislative gathering did not want to grant the Uillanders rights civilians only after a training period of several years;

They imposed a fairly high tax on exports.
tations of Por and precious stones.

The quasi-official historian of the Southern War
African, Conan Doyle, in The Great Boer War (1899–1901) (1) was sober in details on the origins of the conflict. He doesn't blame not the pretensions of the Uitlanders and incriminates rather the stubbornness of the Boers; and yet these here, after abandoning the Cape Colony to escape British domination and cleared new territories, did not aspire than to live in peace with all their neighbors.

These are the Jewish financiers of Johannesburg* who took the initiative of the provocations and revolts against the burghers. To bully the authorities, we flew the English flag on all banks; foreign newspapers cover insults the president, the Volksraad and announced the imminent fall of the government
ment, the annexation of the country to the Cape Colony.
The president of the Chartered, Cecil Rhodes, openly organized the Jameson raid,
even if it means disavowing his lieutenant after the failure

(1) London. Smith, Elder and Co.

32 THE RKGNE OF ISRAEL AMONG THE ATV'GLO-SAXONS

these are adventures, and this is the Eckstein house, representing the large firm of Wernher Beit, (l)iii paid for the volunteers and kept in store
the rifles intended to be distributed to the conspirators
the day Jameson and his gang arrived.

Behind the scenes, Sir Alfred Milner, on behalf of British government, was ready to take advantage circumstances e! of the war that has become inevitable table to add a new flourish to the imperial crown.

If (ionuii J)oyle did not understand the action of Jews in the determining causes of the war South African, which was to cost the Angleterre, others easily discerned it.

Jean Carrèie, who made a study trip to struggle, recounted in Au pays d*; For gnaws them impressions he gathered on this subject. When, in a group of officers and correspondents war, he announced his next departure for Johannesburg, Mr. Gwynne, from the Reuters agency – the current editor of the Morning Post – the interpellata:

So, I hope that the day you visit connects town, you will not spare in your articles these ignoble capitalists who, after having been the cause of the war, hid while the soldiers died, some in their homes, others beyond the borders third parties, and who are now complaining because the war lasts too long... The officers chorused in rinforzando.

THE JEWISH CONQUEST OF ENGLAND at 3

“The dirty Jews,” added one.

– All the rejects from the ghettos of Europe.

– All the old goods dealers in Whitchapel 1

–The Klmberley diamond thieves!

– And that’s why we come to have our people killed men (i)!

When the English army attacked Johannesburg a triumphal entry, after a long cam-loincloth which had not deserved this epithet, a soldai bocra, prisoner on parole, kept his hat on the tetc, when Lord Roberts passed, followed by a brilliant General Staff.

A Jew from the mines, whose enthusiasm bordered, the defeated patriot reported to a soldier English :

– Isn't that unworthy? Here is a Boer who do not salute the general in chief.

“Shut up,” replied Tommy, looking with contempt the Jew. He fought for his country that one, while you were trembling in your cellar!

U) In the Land of Red Gold, p. 200.

24 THE REIGN OF ISRAEL CUE THE ANGLO-SAXONS

And the overzealous "reformist" was booed by the crowd (i).

Queen Victoria did not survive the war South African. The unforeseen extension of the struggle, the enormous sacrifices it had demanded in men and money had deeply affected her. She was too intelligent not to have not discerned those truly responsible for the conflict and did not forgive the Israelites the role of provocators and excitors that they had played at Johannesburg.

His successor, King Edward, did not share no such scruples. He didn't blame the bankers and speculators who had unleashed the Transvaal War, since it resulted a notable expansion of the domain of Empire, and close relationships attached him to other leaders to certain Israelite personalities.

It is a well-known fact that, during the lifetime of Queen Victoria, the Prince of Wales did not have no resources corresponding to his tastes, his needs, to his way of life. The Jews do not miss did not hesitate to offer their good offices to the future ruler of Great Britain. Such a big breast

(i) Ibid., p. 232.

THE JEWISH CONQUEST OF ENGLAND 25

Lord of Israel, to establish its monstrous situation, offered a large sum to the Prince of Wales when he agreed to honor with his presence a hunting or a dinner. Banked financiers met with loan requests and offered to lend the prince sums important without requiring interest, sometimes even without asking for receipts. However, these services had to be paid for one day. Therefore, in 1903 Lord Lawson became Lord Burnham, named after a property famous for its beautiful

The son of this Israelite who came from Germany, the Viscount Burnham, runs the great daily newspaper of London, The Dailtj Telegraph. Another Hebrew, Alfred Cassel, originally from Germany, like its name indicates, was not only the ban- quier of the heir to the throne, he became his intimate friend. In the history of international finance over the last thirty years, he has held a place cozisiderable. If he is not raised to the peerage, it is doubtless that he did not care much about it; the title of baronet is enough for him. Sir Alfred created or developed land companies in Egypt and Argentina, acquired influences in the great banks of Europe and America, created between they agreements and combinations of interests, whose sons he held. At the Paris Stock Exchange, we "still cherishes the memory of mastery with which the skillful financier saved, not without to make some profits, one of our great so- credit companies that were on the verge of collapse.

26 THE REIGN OF ISRAEL AMONG THE ANGLO-SAXONS

I know on the banks of the Nile, not far from Louqsor, a delicious villa, located in the middle of a domain of the former Daira Sanieh. Lau- pink trees, groves of lemon and orange trees gers border and surround it. This is where Sir Alfred Casse! came every winter to take a few weeks of rest, and the Prince of Wales received hospitality there on several occasions. Built in the bungalow style of India, ground floor with large verandas, the villa had in its center a floor forming a pavilion lon: Royal parliament, from which we had a view wonderful on the sacred river.

If he had disdained personal honors, the great financier, however, married his daughter to a lord, and his intimacy with his sovereign was such that it was in his arms that Edward VII breathed his last.

II

The Israelite professor SombarL once for-made this confession: "Wars are the harvests Jews and revolutions too. Like him there has never been a war comparable to the conflict world unleashed in August 1914? nor revolution similar to that which, in 19 17, caused the collapse the Russian Empire, it is not surprising that these unprecedented disasters have activated the ambitions conquerors of the race.

His conquests, his rise to the summits of power in the various States were so prodigious, that we experience some difficulty in explain, follow its development.

There were Jews incorporated into the armies of all the belligerents. Losses due to terrible weaponry which was used in this war, were such that one counted fairly high number of killed and injured among the Israelites, although a good proportion of them served in the stewardship, hospitals rates and formations from the rear. Having participated in the war nationalized them, sacked them patriots. It would have been bad grace to treat ter as foreigners, as newly naturalized or second rate, soldiers before paying their blood or risked shedding it in defense of country.

28 THE REIGN OF iSRAKL AMONG THE ANGLO-SAXONS

From this point of view, the Israelis have therefore gained in consideration during the war; but they have derived other benefits from this war material, such as bankers, industrialists, com-merchants, army suppliers, hoarders of oils, flours, durations of all kinds. The tremendous increase in their power financial health made it easier for them to penetrate very deep into the governing spheres mental^ and the predominant influence by them acquired has, in turn, become a producer of big interest.

Conservatives in England, Bolsheviks in Russia, republicans of various shades in France, socialists in Germany and Austria, they took wonderful advantage of the circumstances, movements of opinion, swings from Fri. In each State, as we become was getting closer to the end of hostilities and that painfully bore the peace clauses, they maneuvered, using different methods ferent, to make prevail the aspirations and the aims of their race. This is how, united by international links, they followed directions mysterious tives which, despite guidance divergent in appearance, ended up con-orchard towards the same goals.

THERE. JEWISH CONQUEST OF ENGLAND 20

If you except Russia, where the government of the Soviets suddenly fell into the in the hands of the Jews, nowhere more than in England, the conquest of Power was not rapid and complete. The ground was carefully prepared and and the Israelites occupied strong positions there, conducive to a methodical offensive, soon pushed all the way.

During the war, it was easy to see the influence enjoyed by the Jews in the various General Staffs of the British Army. A was a French officer willing to serve with our allies as interpreter or liaison officer his, we made sure he spoke a little English, but he was certain of being admitted, if his request was supported by a Rothschild or an Israelite brand. Mr. Joseph Reinach had his great entries to British GHQ. The field marshal

30 THE REIGN OF iSHAEL AMONG THE ANGLO-SAXONS

Sir John Haig had as private secretary bind Ycomanry Lieutenant Sir Philip Sassoon. Did the young MP for Mythe owe this post of confidence in one's personal military valor or to the fact that his mother was the daughter of Baron Gustave of Rothschild? The doubt is all the more per-

Mr. Lloyd George, whose great friends the Rothschilds and Sir Ru were Isaacs, who became Lord Reading.

For several years, and particularly under the Asquith ministry, the Israelites had infiltrated more and more into government circles, at Court and in the press. HAS the House of Lords for a long time please only one Israelite: Lord Rothschild; they are now quite a little phalanx; and, as they changed their name becoming peers of the kingdom, it is difficult to discern them. In the House of Commons, there are a dozen more and two of them are part of the government: the Right Honorable Edwin Montagu, Secretary of State for India, and the right honorable Sir Alfred Mond, Commissioner of Works, i.e. Minister of Public Works. Sign—
Let us pass on the appointment of Sir Matthew

THE JEWISH CONQUEST OF ENGLAND 31

Nathan as Governor of Queensland, that of Sir Herbert Samuel to the functions of British Lieutenant Commissioner in Palestine and that, very recent, of Lord Reading at the viceroyship of India. I will be given the opportunity to talk again about these two great characters whose action was crucial in various circumstances. First Israelites are baronets, then six are knights. Six are private advisors to the Court and six members of the County Council of London. Crémieux's advice: "Have press and you will have everything", was followed by the Hebrews with remarkable tenacity. In England, the most widespread of the major newspapers If you live in London, the Daily Telegraph belongs to Viscount Burnham, who was called Levy Lawson, his original name; Sir Alfred Mond is all powerful at the Westminster Gazette; THE Daily Express is headed by MRD Hulton-Deutsch. In the newspapers of which it is not master, Israel arranges to have tribunes. Daily News Foreign Policy is entrusted to Mr. Theodor Rothstein; that of Graphic and Daily Graphic is oriented by Mr. Lucien Wolf, who was, from 1894 to 1898, correspondent of the French daily newspaper Le Journal. As to

32 THE REIGN OF ISRAEL AMONG THE ANGLO-SAXONS

to the press of Lord Northcliff, powerful trust encompassing the Times, the Daily Mail, the Sunday Pictorial, the Evening Standard and fifty of various publications, there is a figure appreciable from Israelite collaborators.

The Hebrews of the United Kingdom also have, for the use of their co-religionists, of a press special called Anglo-Jewish which does not include takes no less than sixteen newspapers and magazines. Six are daily. Of these publications, seven are written in English, one in Hebrew and the others in Yiddish, spoken Judeo-German patois by the Semites of Russia and Central Europe.

The founders of the "universal Israelite Alliance" had strongly encouraged their members to affiliate with Masonic lodges, to do penetrate their minds and their actions all the more efficient as it was discreet and even mysterious-looking. Inspired by these views, the Protocols of Wise Men of Zion, whose text later, formulate the prescriptions following: "Until the time when we possessed we gain power, we will strive to create and to multiply the Masonic lodges on the surface of the globe. We will attract all those who exercise or can exercise action on opinion. These lodges will be both sources information and propaganda centers. »

LX JEWISH CONQUEST OF ENGLAND 33

The Jewish upsurge, which we can see everywhere, has taken a special development in England—land where she was assisted by men politicians of all parties. Radicals like David Lloyd George, advanced liberals like Asquith, socialists like Smillie, conservative totors like Arthur James Balfour and Lord Robert Cecil met to promote all their power, aims and ambitions of Israel.

greatness tightened the bonds and revived the religious zeal gods of the Israelites. Synagogues, schools Jews multiplied at the same time as the lodges. The directory of Jews in England, the Jewish Yearbook, provides on these different Points of very suggestive statistics.

In the industrial city of Leeds alone there has sixteen "Jewish Masonic" lodges, eight of which belong to the "great order of Israel". One of the latter is placed under the high patronage of the Duke of Con nanti ht: one in the I claims to Baron de Hirsch, a third of Lord Readin*''.

Israelite schools are attended by approximately 3

.Vf JC XlKffSK OF ISRAEL VAUVfi LKS A\<.LO-SA\GXS

ron H0.oot) children; 1st societies and institutes of crowds sort;*: theoretical, literary, seicnli-fifjiirs, athletes, hospitals, orphanages, libraries libraries, (works of charity faith ring, even in areas where there are few Jews many. In Swansea, for example, where Ton has barely a thousand Israelis, there is a syine/o^ue served by several rabbis and nine companies and various works.

i! should also be noted the high number of associations foundations for women and young people girls. È*ne f'm'on nf Jewi&h Woinen works
i\ London, upper (i rented! this place; a Jewisk Lvmjue nf flanoir and Service established in 19 m"", group, under the chairmanship of the honorable Mrs Franklin, women and girls of your i are the social classes, with the aim of understanding complete their religious education and strengthen fled from them. Mrs Monlefioire chairs a Certifiai
S\ hoot for Jewish Ciris and Lady Rothschild V Associai ion for ihe Protection of G iris and Womvn.

Israel's leaders may have better understood that. Christian peoples influence cpie could exercise women in their respective environments and their ability to propagate

big. Didn't Maurice Donnay eloquently recount what in the Return from Jerusalem degradation that a "dirty Jew" could inflict to a "proper Aryan"?

The resurgence of faith and practices Israelites is attested by the development of Kosher meat butchers. Formerly confined in the EastEnd neighborhoods, these establishments today have overflowed into the other parts of the metropolis. The Shechita Board gave the following statistics of the animals killed in London following the Hebrew rite, from November 1919 to May 1920, that is to say during in six months: 19,864 oxen, 3,406 sheep, 11,620 calves, 614*051 poultry. It is however possible that, without suspecting it, Christians eat Kosher meat, as many of them unconsciously favor intrigues Jews.

Let the Jews faithfully observe their laws religious, that they support each other fraternally between them, no one can blame them and blame them, but for their actions, for their words, of their international activities gives off the very clear idea that, since the war, they claim to govern the world, to make it

36 THE REIGN OF ISRAEL AMONG THE ANGLO-SAXONS

triumph over what they call "the ideal" of their breed. And these formidable ambitions, this impetus outrageous rialism have taken definitive shape—lies the day when, in a famous letter, Mr. Arthur Balfour, on behalf of the government British, is committed to promoting all his power the establishment in Palestine conquered from the Turks a Jewish national home. That day marked the beginning for the Israelites of a new era, where they would find full satisfaction faction their mystical atavism, their hatreds unsatisfied, their thirst for revenge against the persecuting nations of the past. Zionism is both a doctrine and a symbol: doctrinopolitical trinity tending to bring together in Jerusalem the communities of Israel which will constitute a Higher Council of World Government; symbol of the power of the chosen race, which, despite persecutions and dispersions, knew retain enough vitality to remain one and national, enough skill and strength to impose on the human race, from the top of the Temple of Solomon rebuilt his supreme dominion. Zionism must therefore be studied thoroughly, in its principles, its causes, its organization and its aspirations by anyone who wants to understand the Jewish question as it was posed by the world war and peace treaties.

THERE. JEWISH CONQUEST OF ENGLAND 37

It is possible that the British government fuck didn't foresee all the consequences of the Balfour Declaration which were to confirm the San Remo Accords and the Treaty of Sèvres. In his short views, he did not understand everything firstly the affinities existing between the Jews, the Bolsheviks, the Germans and the dangers will result. One of his major concerns pations was to avoid the neighborhood of France on the Egyptian border. The best way to prevent the organization of a French Palestine Wasn't it nice to encourage the founding of a Jewish State, of which England would exercise control shit? And, to facilitate the realization of the program, from 1916, while Sir Henry Mac Mahon led Egyptian politics in quality of high commissioner, an agreement spent with Emir Hussein, promoted to king of Hedjaz, prepared the creation of a kingdom Arab, also under British control fuck, that we would attach to the side of the gang coastal forming Syria abandoned to the influence French...

38 THE REIGN OF ISRAEL AMONG THE ANGLO-SAXONS

The Jews, aware of the community of interests which linked them to England in these circumstances, did not fail to draw heavily profit. Their penetration into our political spheres colonies, has become more pronounced. How many facts provide the demonstration? The Indian Empire is in turmoil. Revolts and Riots broke out there when a Prince of the Blood had just presided over the inauguration of a kind representative regime. These are three Israelites who are responsible for governing India in these serious circumstances: in London, Mr. Moitagu, Secretary of State; in Delhi; Sir William Mcyer, lieutenant commissioner and the viceroy, taking office tions, is none other than Rufus Isaacs who became Count by Reading. Another Jew, Mr. Philip Harlog, been appointed as vice-chancellor of the new velle University of Dhaka (Bengal).

We highlight the capital role that will play in the future wars air squadrons. The construction of aircraft of all categories, the technical improvement of engines, research of new fuselage processes, the examination of inventions likely to increase increase the power, stability, and range of the Jewish coanuiVrs of a^gleterhh 3o operation of the devices: all this requires a professional technical staff of choice, knowledgeable, conscientious and above all scrupulously honest and absolute discretion.

There is, among our allies, a <r ministry of Pair" with real autonomy and a big budget. However, in his General Staff and his services, the Israelites seem to have given themselves appointment.

The Britons Patriotic League explains, in one of her bulletins that she found ten neui', and cites the following, mentioning the occupied foundations: MM. A. -13. Wilbrom and J.-B. Abraham have important positions in Y Establishment and Parliamenlarij Dioiion; Major Nathan is director of training; Lieutenant Colonel Lvons heads the service of oils and essences; Captain Cohen is at the sheet metal of the telephone and TSF section It is an Israeli, Mrs Sleiuherg, who is secret-special note of Major Baird, Under-Secretary of State, and the Air Ministry still has tone (Lcewenstein), majors Myers and Blumcnfels, Captain Kilimayer, the. lieutenants Simon and Marks. We can ask ourselves

40, THE REIGN OF ISRAEL GHEZ f.ES ANGLO-SAXONS

if the secrets of English aeronautics will be well guarded by all members of this tribe.

To the League of Nations, a Jewish organization maronnique came out of the president's brain Woodrow Wilson, the Hilannic delegation is entirely composed of Jews and Judaeans health. The general secretary of the Company, Sir Eric Drummond, the very day he arrived lived in Geneva, visited the chief rabbi of the city to assure him of his admiration for the Hebrews and his complete dedication to their cause and their interests.

I am only giving summary indications here. mayors, but they are enough to show up to to what extent Israel has succeeded in conquering positions tions, to ensure assistance enabling it to operate and direct the wheels of government British ment.

A caricature published in April 1920, by the or-gane of the "Britons": the Jetnri/ ueber Ailes, represents two English Jews enriched by war and conversing at the linen of a succulent dinner, washed down with numerous bottles. One of them stands up and toasts England: Bri-(annia mies ilie waves! (Britain order to the Oceans). The other responds with snide look: Yeth, but 10th rule Britannia (Yes, but we are the ones who govern Great Brittany).

THE JEWISH CONQUEST OF ENGLAND ^i

And this is not a boasting word, illusion of the upstart: it is the expression of a poignant reality.

CHAPTER II

X Jewish influences in the United States.

The first Jews brought to America by Christopher Columbus. – Population growth Jewish for fifty years. – The attitude of the Israelites during the war. – Otto H. Kahn and Jacob Schiff. – The Zionist entourage of President Wilher.

The history of Jews in America dates back to Christopher Columbus. In August 1492, were expelled from Spain 300,000 Israelites. The day after, the caravels of the great navigator made sail towards the West, carrying with the crews a small group of Jews. It is even claimed that Queen Isabella's jewelry did not have enough to pay the shipping costs and that more several rich Israelites, including Luis de

44 THE REIGN OF ISRAEL AMONG THE ANGLO-SAXONS

Sanlagel, farmer of the royal taxes, had financially interested in discovering a dreamland, where gold and precious stones should be found in abundance.

It is, in any case, certain that the pious Christopher took with him at least five Jews: Luis de Tonys, who claimed to know the Indian languages and serving as interpreter; Marco, surgeon; Bernai, doctor; Alonzo Galle and Gabriel Sanchez. It's Luis de Torres who discovered the use of tobacco and became rich in exploiting the precious plant on the island of Cuba.

Christopher Columbus had been misguided in accepting these traveling companions. Victim of the doctor Bernai, who plotted against him a miserable plot, on his return to Spain he was disgraced and thrown into prison, a strange reward discovery!

From then on, the Jews considered America as a field of exploitation worthy of interest and emigration, quite slow indeed, in brought certain groups to America of the South and especially in Brazil.

A conflict between the Netherlands and Brazil decided the Jews to come and seek their fortune in

JEWISH INFLUENCES IN THE UNITED STATES 45

North America, among the Dutch settlers fixed on the territory which is today the State from New York.

The governor, Peter Stuyvesant, had them quite poorly received; he even gave them the order to go and establish their homes outside the colony; but this order was canceled at the request from the Directors. Many actions of the Colonial Company were in the hands of Jews of Amsterdam, which explains this cancellation.

However, the emigrants were the object of special measures. They are prohibited from selling to retail in stores; they were refused access public functions. They then indulged in trade with foreigners, that their relations with their co-religionists from the States of Europe singularly facilitated, and, for a time, had a monopoly on it.

When the Dutch were overwhelmed by the flow of British settlers, the restrictions originally imposed fell into disuse; and, when after the War of Independence, the United States drew up its constitution civil and political union, the Jews enjoyed in all their full rights as American citizens Yanks.

4G THE 1ST GENDER OF ISRAEL AMONG THE ANGLO-SAXONii

As a result, the Israelites, having a lineage ancestors born on the other side of the Atlantic, hinder is. Far from being shy and obsequious, they have an energetic and resolute appearance. They defend tenaciously hold their ideas, are often quarrelsome, sometimes brave and their appearance exterior differs significantly from that of their co-religionists of old Europe, for a long time treated as pariahs.

*

It is especially for half a century that the Jewish population in the United States has increased in (considerable proportions. A statistical policy established by the Board of Delegates of American Israelites, estimated it at 2,10,000 in 1877, but the document from religious authorities only took into account Jews attending the synagogues. The Catholic World of June 1877, in an in-depth study of the question door to /|r>0,000 souls. From this time, the Israelites formed compact groups

MIS JEWISH INFLUENCES IN THE UNITED STATES 47

in New York (approximately 75,000) and in the cities following: Baltimore, Philadelphia, San Francisco and Chicago. The fertility of their families, and above all the immigration of poor Jews, coming from Russia and Germany, increased quickly their number. In the United States contemporaries, remarkable work of Claudio Jannet, of which Frédéric Le Play had written the preface, tribute is paid to the mutual aid that the Israelites lent themselves. They were, however, New York, the object of a certain antipathy, because those of the lower classes were dressed in costumes—they were filthy and they braved the feeling public by leaving their boulevards and stores.

Claudio Jannet thought that Jews do not practice would never experience the same pressure in the United States economically than in Eastern Europe, because they would meet among the Yankees, of trip redou—competitor tables. However, in. 1880, a celebrated its influence in the press, in the finance and had even exercised a certain action on Congressional resolutions. These Jews had become Americanized – at least in appearance – and had stripped themselves of ancestral traditions– milking. Few of them remained loyal to Talmud practices; they abandoned the messianic beliefs and accepted the idea of a reform Judaism for which the Messiah was nothing more than a symbol.

48 THE REIGN OF ISRAEL AMONG THE ANGLO-SAXONS

The Israelites of this school passed easily– from deism to pantheism, raised their children in the Common schools, mingle belonged to the Anglo-Saxon population and sometimes known by Protestants. However they jealously preserved their pro-organization pre and an article by Rabbi II. Pereira Mendes, published in the June 1887 issue of the North American Review, shows that despite of certain failures and apostasies, the idea of religious domination of the race has never been abandoned by American Jews. They have cultivated their intelligence, studied letters, in this new country where the Anglo-Saxons were absorbed born by concerns and ambitions material, and this allowed them to exercise certain intellectual action on civilization the United States.

Already, in 1886, the newspaper The Nation¹) signed–

(1) September issue.

JEWISH INFLUENCES IN THE UNITED STATES 1\ 9

mark the multiplication of publications and newspapers Israelites as evidence of influence growing of the race and its infiltration in the currents of American thought, also both religious and social.

Claudio Jannet very precisely defined the place they have taken in the group of Associations of their policy:

Freemasonry offers them a way to rose grouped even better than the organization in synagogues, which the "reformed" find outdated without doubt. For this purpose, they formed four special orders, but which communicate with all the other lodges: VIndependent Order of Béni Beriih, YIndependent of free Sons of Israel, VOrder Kesiiier shel Barzel, the Improved Order of Free Sons of Israel and several orders of affiliated women.

Seen fact not materially important but note- quable as a sign of the times, performed at the exhibition location of Philadelphia. The order of Blessed Berith wanted make its existence known by erecting a statue monumental to religious freedom. This indicates enough the tactics followed by Jewish organizations "reformed". They seek to get closer in addition to Unitarians, Universalists. They give to their religious ceremonies a similar aspect. We recently read the story of a "confirmation" celebrated in a synagogue in New York! The wave sentimentalism to which Christianity is reduced in many Protestant pulpits, favors too well this sort of syncretism (i).

4

00 THE UtGiNE DJSRAKL AMONG THE AN<iL0-SAXONS

There is no need to look elsewhere for the reasons for Jewish penetration into the various environments, penetration which did not encounter any obstacles on his way. In high banking, in commerce and industry, the conquered Jews each year would see more advantageous situations geuses; they put large amounts of capital into press and advertising companies, are pressing know to the big trusts in the hope of control, and they did not fail to interfere cer in workers' associations. Is not it a Jew, named Jiiellbronnecr, who lived in Montreal, organized in Canada the "Knights of the Federal government appointed to represent the French element in a Commission of quest on working conditions, established in 1857.

(n Contemporary Étnts-l'nis, volume II, p. 372.

JEWISH INFLUENCES IN THE UK

II

What would it be like, during the World War, the attitude of the Israelites in the United States and determined which belligerents would exercise their power power they held?

There were then around 3.300.000 on the union territory, and among them were number of well-known billionaires, not only ly in New York, but also in London and Paris.

Two of them are well representative of their race; their relationship with the president Wilson and the leaders of the Democratic Party and the Republican Party earned them such relief that it is not useless to indicate their roles respective parties during the conflict.

Jacob Sehifî, who died in 1«)^o, was, according to the Times, "a great banker and a great phi- the anthrope". The fortune he left was valued at twenty million pounds sterling, i.e. at the exchange currently, at one billion and eighty million. THE good works of this benefactor of humanity

52 THE REIGN OF XSRAEL AMONG THE ANGLO-SAXONS

